

0 2007 1213128 9
California State Library

LA

RARY.

Accessions No. 132976 Received FEB 1906

Class qc 051 T7

HOUSEHOLD NUMBER

TOWN TALK

VOL. XII. No. 618

SAN FRANCISCO, JULY 2, 1904.

PRICE 10 CENTS.

United Crafts
and Arts

ORLOF N. ORLOW
FOUNDER

"In the elder days of art, Builders wrought with greatest care
Each minute and unseen part;
For the gods see everywhere."

2203 Central Avenue
San Francisco
California

ALL ABOARD!

CALIFORNIA NORTHWESTERN R'Y

The Picturesque Route of California

Round Trip Tickets

FOR THE

Fourth of July

Will be sold from SAN FRANCISCO to the Points named,

AT GREATLY REDUCED RATES, as Follows:

FRIDAY

SATURDAY

SUNDAY

MONDAY

July 1

July 2

July 3

July 4

ROUND TRIP

Brickyard .....	$ .75
Millers .....	.75
St. Vincent .....	.75
Ignacio .....	.90
Novato .....	1.05
Burdell .....	1.20
Petaluma .....	1.50
Penn Grove .....	1.50

ROUND TRIP

Cotati .....	$1.50
Santa Rosa .....	2.00
Sebastopol .....	2.40
Fulton .....	2.50
Windsor .....	2.95
Healdsburg .....	3.40
Lytton .....	3.60
Geyserville .....	3.85
Preston .....	5.00

ROUND TRIP

Fountain .....	$5.00
Hopland .....	5.00
Ukiah .....	5.00
Calpella .....	5.50
Redwood Valley .....	5.80
Laughlin .....	6.00
Ridgewood .....	6.00
Willits .....	6.00
Sherwood .....	8.00

Return Limit, Tuesday, July 5, 1904

FOR THE SUMMER SEASON—Special Rates

ROUND TRIP

Cloverdale .....	$5.00
Preston .....	5.20
Echo .....	5.50
Cummiskey .....	5.70
Pieta .....	6.20
Fountain .....	6.20
Hopland .....	6.60
Largo .....	7.00
El Robles .....	7.50
Ukiah .....	8.00
Calpella .....	8.50
Redwood Valley .....	8.80

ROUND TRIP

Laughlin .....	$9.00
Ridgewood .....	10.00
Willits .....	10.00
Sherwood .....	12.00
Schellville .....	1.35
Vineyard .....	1.35
Buena Vista .....	1.45
Sonoma .....	1.50
Verano .....	1.60
Boyes .....	1.65
Agua Caliente .....	1.65
Watriss .....	1.65
Madrone .....	1.65

ROUND TRIP

Eldridge .....	$1.75
Glen Ellen .....	1.80
Meacham .....	2.50
Olivet .....	2.50
Trenton .....	2.50
Forestville .....	2.50
Mirabel Park .....	2.50
Green Valley .....	2.50
Hilton .....	2.50
Korbel .....	2.50
Guerneville .....	2.50
Camp Vacation .....	2.50

Return Limit, September 30, 1904

TAKE BOAT AT TIBURON FERRY

Ticket Offices, 650 Market Street (Chronicle Building), and Tiburon Ferry, foot of Market Street.
General Office, Mutual Life Building, Sansome and California Streets, San Francisco.

JAS. L. FRAZIER, Gen. Manager

R. X. RYAN, Gen. Pass. Agent

The Independence Day Girl

Here's Your Chance for a Fourth o' July
 Outing at HOTEL DEL MONTE

The Fourth of July falls on Monday, so why not spend two or three days at this Famous Resort?

Del Monte and Its Joys are for Everyone---Bear that in mind. You can dress as you please and do as you please. Under the New Management this Resort has become the Most Popular of California Resorts.

Golf, Boating, Bowling, Salmon Fishing, Surf and Pool Bathing. Golf Links Never Were Greener.

$10 Round Trip to Del Monte and Two Days' Board at the Hotel

Tickets good going on any Train Saturday or Sunday Morning; returning Monday or Tuesday

TOWN TALK

SAN FRANCISCO, JULY 2, 1904.

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

THEODORE F. BONNET - - - Editor
CHARLES S. SMITH - - - Manager

609 MISSION ST. FOURTH FLOOR Telephone BUSH 713

SUBSCRIPTION.—One Year, in advance, $3.00; six months, $1.75; three months, $1.00; one month, 40 cents; single copies, 10 cents. Foreign subscriptions (countries in postal union), $4.00 per year. Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application. For Sale by all Newsdealers.

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.
RALPH A. GROVER Manager of Advertising
New York Representative, FREDERIC M. KRUGLER, Room 918,
150 Nassau Street.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N. Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 200 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

No attention is paid to anonymous communications, but the wishes of contributors as to the use of their names will be scrupulously regarded. We cannot undertake to preserve or return manuscripts.

TOWN TALK is mailed to subscribers every Thursday and should be received in this city and vicinity every Friday. Please notify us of tardy delivery.

Our Political System

Dr. Goldwin Smith, a profound thinker, and a clever and sympathetic observer of our political life, has written an article for the Monthly Review of London in which he argues that our political system is deteriorating. He is confident that the American people have the political wisdom and force to deal with the crisis of their destinies, but he thinks that the leadership of a great man is almost indispensable. But how the necessary great man is to be secured Dr. Smith does not know. Among the things that he deplores is the "pest of partyism" and he says that there is no longer a vital issue on which a rational party opposition can be based. In the absence of such an issue the party contests are inspired by patronage. Undoubtedly there is some foundation for this view of the condition of American politics, but Dr. Smith has not observed the most serious of the evils with which we are now confronted—the subservience of the legislative department of the Government to the Executive. Under the present Administration we have seen the Executive invade the halls of Congress and compel legislation in furtherance of his ends. President Roosevelt has exercised an influence in Washington more autocratic than any monarch in Europe is capable of exerting. He has dominated the Senate throughout his Administration, not through force of character or Constitutional privilege, but by virtue of the patronage which he controls. He has perfected a powerful political machine which was operated with remarkable smoothness in Chicago last week. The President dictated his own nomination. The program that was carried through without a hitch was of his own making. The rank and file of the Republican party were no doubt in favor of that nomination, for they regard Roosevelt as a winner, but they were not permitted to express their choice. The several delegations went to Chicago to execute the orders of the party machines in their respective States, machines connected by wire with the Senate chamber at Washington. The result might have been the same without machine guidance, for Roosevelt's party prestige has not been seriously dimmed, but the precedent established is one that seriously concerns the people.

Cupid Barred

While the attention of the world is centred on the war in the Far East, there is a little contest in progress in this country, involving military men, which is not without interest. It is a contest between Mars and Cupid. Of late our War Department has been frowning ominously on the little god of love. Though it has assumed to coerce unwilling officials into matrimony, the department is, in reality, dominated by an anti-matrimonial spirit. Its bluff in the Pitcher case was merely in terrorem to warn younger officers against entangling alliances. Not long ago an official pronouncement was made discouraging the marriage of young officers, and the other day some crusty old woman-hater in brief authority at West Point decreed that cadets visiting St. Louis, "dancing with ladies must dance with the left arm extended, and under no circumstances will they be allowed to bend the right elbow so as to bring their partners close to them." This is a regulation that is bound to prove irksome. It is in conflict with social custom, and will be resented by young women as indignantly as by the cadets, but what are they going to do about it? Evidently the War Department has come to the conclusion that Cupid, frisky youth, must be restrained, and that his insidious influence in the regular army must be discouraged. Uncle Sam is probably of the opinion that bachelors are the best fighters. At any rate, Cupid appears to be on the blacklist.

"Peaching On His Pals"

The publishers of Everybody's magazine believe that the best available remedy for the evils that exist in the financial world is publicity, and judging from the initial article of Mr. Thomas W. Lawson, the Boston millionaire, on the subject of the Amalgamated Copper Combine, the white light will soon be beating with a fierce glare on Wall street methods. Publicity is what the speculative promoters of legerdemain finance dread. A bas publicity, has been their cry for many a day. The confidence of the public is essential to the success of their plundering schemes, and they would soon lose it if they conducted their affairs in the open air. Speculative developments of the past few years have demonstrated the urgency of the introduction of publicity as a feature of the organization of giant combines by the Whittaker Wrights of Wall street. Within a recent period the public conscience has been aroused by the unprecedented accumulation of wealth by unscrupulous and favored individuals, and it is likely to become more alert after Lawson has made the disclosures which he has promised. It will of course be said of him that he has been inspired by motives of revenge, but what care we as to the purpose of the narrator providing his narrative subserve the public interests? The law encourages the turning of State's evidence, and as Mr. Lawson has asked us to give ear while he "peaches on his pals" we should have no compunction in heeding the request. "When thieves fall out," etc., is an old adage that appeals to us quite forcibly in the circumstances. Mr. Lawson may be inclined to color his story, but intelligent men will be able to weigh the testimony and judge pretty accurately of its worth. Besides, we know that the law of libel affords redress to the innocent. Lawson, by the way, is the man who engaged in a very bitter controversy with the New York Yacht Club over his right to sail his own cup defender against the Lipton boat. It was said at the time that he was sore on the New Yorkers because he had attempted to join the club and had been blackballed. However, public sympathy was with him in that controversy. New York society regards him as bourgeois, probably because he began life as an office boy. The world may yet regard him as a public benefactor.

Latest London and New York styles in Hats. Tom Dillon and Co., opp. Palace.

Perhaps It's No Fairy Tale

In view of Lawson's promised disclosures, probably the formation of that two billion dollar mining trust by the Standard Oil interests will be postponed. The story of this impending venture seems somewhat romantic. It is said that the trust will include every branch of metal production and will embrace within its territorial limits not only the whole of the United States, but Mexico and the Dominion of Canada. Color is given to the story by the circumstance of certain Standard Oil magnates being already identified with copper, lead, gold and silver mining, and the smelting, refining and sale of metal products. They are in control of Amalgamated Copper (the trust whose methods Lawson is soon to expose), with Senator Clark and others to regulate the output of copper. They are the dominating power in the new lead trust which is now about completed, and they are large stockholders in the various metal selling companies which carry and market the products of the smelters and refiners. Unquestionably they exercise a tremendous influence in the metal industries, but to attempt the control of the entire production is a feat of such magnitude as to seem purely visionary. Gold is a commodity of universal sale, and an ounce of it is worth as much to a placer miner as to Rockefeller. But the Standard Oil magnates are unusual men. They are doing things now that expert financiers would have regarded as utterly impracticable ten years ago. There are individual members of the group, almost unknown to the public, whose fortunes are colossal. Take for instance the Harkness brothers of Cleveland, one of whom presented his alma mater, a few weeks ago, with five hundred thousand dollars, and who had previously given over a million to the same institution; it is estimated that their fortune is worth one hundred million, but they are comparatively obscure citizens. Henry M. Flagler is another member of the group worth more than one hundred million. Then there are such multi-millionaires as the O'Days and the Wheelers, who are seldom heard of. The combined wealth of the Standard Oil group is estimated at over three billion. Surely they have enough money to control anything.

Republican Paternalism

The Republicans are committed in their platform to the ship subsidy policy which was so completely riddled in Congress a few months ago by Mr. Bourke Cockran. The advocates of ship subsidies contend that our merchant marine has faded away because our Government does not support it. In other words, they consider it an unprofitable industry which needs nursing at the expense of the profitable industries of the country. It is a singular fallacy into which these fanatical protectionists have fallen. It is a well known fact that Germany has far outstripped England in the construction of high-speed vessels, though it pays considerably less in subsidies. It is also a fact that the French merchant marine, in spite of its being heavily subsidized, ranks neither with the German nor English merchant marine. The superiority of the German marine and its flourishing condition are easily accounted for: the Germans furnish the best service, and avail themselves of the highest modern engineering skill in constructing and running their vessels. They attend strictly to business and do not attempt to sandbag the Government.

Elastic Legal Ethics

In an address to the graduating class of the law school of the Maryland University, Mr. John Brooks Leavitt said, "No lawyer is justified in devising schemes by which, under the guise of evasions, his clients may really commit breaches of the law." Mr. John Brooks Leavitt has a higher conception of the ethics of his profession than obtains among the most successful lawyers. However, at first blush his proposition appears to be self-evident. Lawyers are sworn to uphold the law, and consequently they are inhibited from encouraging evasions. But the law is a very uncertain science, and lawyers have a way of differentiating good law from bad law. They conceive it to be their duty to uphold nothing but good law, and they are constantly engaged in questioning the law of the land as made by the legislature and interpreted by the judiciary. They know that a law which is sustained today may be pronounced unconstitutional tomorrow. So elastic is the law that some lawyers contend that judges may always decide in favor of their friends without violating legal principles. In the circumstances it is plain that the ethics of the legal profession permit of great liberty of action. Sometimes when a law is proof against the ordinary technical objections, and its evasion is of great importance to a powerful corporation, its attorney will determine that it is against public policy and void. The most successful lawyers are the men who are always ready to point the way by which the law may be circumvented. Not long ago a shrewd attorney in this city led an opposing counsel at a merry pace through the judicial labyrinths, to frustrate his efforts to enforce the law. At every turn a decision was rendered against the pace-maker, but he kept on, intent upon wearying his pursuer, until finally the latter filed charges of unprofessional conduct against the shifty practitioner. Thereupon a broad grin spread over the bar of the city. The spectacle of a leading attorney complaining of a practice that he had himself indulged, and to which every lawyer in town would resort if the fee were large enough, evoked the ribald jeers of the whole profession.

The Hub
 CHAS. KEILUS & CO.
 EXCLUSIVES
 HIGH GRADE CLOTHIERS

Suggestions of money saving are not the incentives we offer to purchase clothes here. It's the creations we show that emanate from premier designers, whose talents with shears, needle and brain are of the highest class. Correct dressers say, "Immediate Service Clothes" for theirs.

132
 KEARNY STREET
 Churlow Block

Engraved
 Wedding Announcements
 and Invitations

ROBERTSON. 126 Post Street
 San Francisco

Californian Names

Out West has made a forcible protest against the manner in which our Californian names are being misused. The objection is timely—timely at any time—and some of the patriotic societies which are giving their attention to the preservation and restoration of landmarks might turn their attention with profit to the restoration and preservation of names as well. A few years ago some ignoramus connected with the post office department sent forth an edict to the effect that names of post offices generally should be run together into one word. So we have Dos palos, Larosa, Mineralking, Paloalto, Paloverde, Pineridge, Lomapieta, and small wonder that You Bet gave up the honor of figuring in the Post Office Guide when it was reduced to Youbet. Infinitely worse is the foreshortening of San Bernardo to Sanardo, and San Bernardino to San Berdoon, which latter is a crime on a par with the whitening off of our own dignified San Francisco to the unspeakable Frisco. It used to be almost an article of faith with the late arrival that all Spanish names needed a prefatory "San" to complete them, and there is a fairly well authenticated story that when Mount Diablo was undergoing the rite of baptism one of the officiating delegation stood out stoutly for what he considered the full right and title. Certain it is that one of the foremost monthly magazines once printed a lengthy article in which the Mission of St. Francis, here at Sixteenth street, was designated, every time it was mentioned, as "San Dolores." But the Post Office Department is no respecter of sanctity, and in consequence many of the towns which were placed under the guardianship of the saints by their pious founders were deprived of their patrons. It has always seemed to be taken for granted by Eastern immigrants and tourists that they had a natural right to regulate pronunciations to suit the provincialism of their own tongues, and in consequence, Pajaro, Suisun, Santa Fe, Los Angeles and a host of others have become so transformed that the natives do not recognize them. It would be conceding altogether too much to adopt the Joaquin Millerism of "San Hosay," in order to smooth the path of the temporary sojourner and the one-lunger, who should feel bound, in ordinary courtesy, to make some staggering effort towards correct pronunciation. We have now the California Pioneers, the Territorial Pioneers, the Pioneer Daughters, the Pioneer Ladies, the Native Sons and the Native Daughters, not to speak of the Junior Pioneers, the Landmarks Club, the Camino Real Association, and the local societies, all professing to take a special interest in the preservation of the history of the State. Why cannot they, each and all of them, take the hint that Out West has furnished and make the preservation and proper pronunciation of names a part of their work?

A Trite Theme

The Woman's Congress decided to try to stem the tide of divorce, and if it can be done at all it must be by women, though not necessarily in Congress assembled. The leaders of the anti-divorce movement have come to the conclusion that the proper mode of procedure is to begin at home and with the children, who are to be duly impressed with the sacredness of the marriage bond and the duty of making the best of things. So far, well and good. It is only through an educated public opinion that any social reform is ever accomplished. But here's the rub. It is not a theory but a condition that we are facing. It is not a question of what might be the best course if there were danger of the disruption of family life, but what is to be done here and now, with families going to pieces every day in the week. It is easy to say that mothers shall teach their children thus and so, and that it will be an easy matter for them to enforce their teaching by both precept and example, but today, in these United States, there are upwards of fifty-five thousand divorced persons. Fifty-five thousand, not to mention their immediate relatives and intimate friends, constitute a sizable army who cannot, in the nature of things, make a stand on the subject of divorce. How can a divorced mother preach the sacramental inviolability of marriage to her children? How can she impress it upon them that their aunts, grandmothers and intimate family friends are without the pale? Divorce is not confined to any one class or geographical section of the community. It is just as common among the poor and the middle classes as among the wealthy; just as frequent along the sea-coast as in the interior, and just as often granted to people in professional life as to the unskilled laborer. How is there to be established a public opinion, or even a class antipathy? Should the anti-divorcites set their faces rigidly against the recognition of the divorced, the fifty-five thousand and immediately affected, with their relatives and sympathizers, would make a society of their own sufficiently numerous and powerful to be both independent and defiant of their opponents. Only a few weeks ago a reform society in the East went to pieces over this very matter. One of the objects with which it was brought together was to oppose marital separations, but when it came out that the members were expected to refrain from receiving, inviting, or otherwise recognizing the divorced, there was a hasty withdrawal. It was all very nice to pass resolutions, but quite another matter to live up to them. Divorce in the abstract might be deplorable, but any particular divorce might be right enough. In a word, it was practically to cut relatives and intimates for no other reason, and the end of the scheme came with its beginning. The crusaders against the legal separation of wives and husbands would make better progress today if, instead of anathematizing divorce, they would direct their attention to the frivolous and ridiculous grounds upon which such separations are sought, and the often perjured testimony which is glibly recited, as well as to the preponderance of cases in which no opposition is made and only one side heard. There is much palpable fraud and dishonesty about the whole divorce business that is behooves those who have been honestly separated from impossible mates on genuine grounds, as well as the undivorced, to use their energies towards a purification of methods, for under present conditions all suffer alike from the infamous reputation of the mill which grinds such enormous grists.

CHAS. LYONS

LONDON TAILOR

721 MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO
Branch
122 KEARNY ST.

SUITS from $17.50 up

LARGEST
TAILORING
ESTABLISHMENT
on the Pacific Coast

M. H. RICHARDSON, Opposite Phelan Building
Importer of Precious, Semi-Precious and Superior Imitation Stones
769 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO

A Plea for the Passions

BY HARRY COWELL.

Great passions make great men—men given to much living; and much living, with its almost inevitable admixture of sin, is to be preferred before mere sinlessness by means of living but little or not at all. Hands that have never dared reach out and up to gather the red rose of life may be immaculate; admirable they cannot be. To live is man's privilege; to live without spot the prerogative of divinity; nay, to live as best he may, but, however mistakenly, to live, is man's duty. Motherhood as such is a higher estate than maidenhood as such. Less worshipful is a celibate in a cloister true to his vows than is a fine father free of the world. Indeed, to do but half nobly is more noble than the noblest not doing. To kill a passion in despair of purifying it or of keeping it pure is a species of self-murder which I commend to cowards.

Noting, or seeming to note, the passing of all kinds of enthusiasms, I cannot but weep. As for me, I had liefer be a fanatic than an indifferentist. But so worldly wise has the world of late become that to own to an unshattered ideal after the last teen is to confess oneself countrified and altogether unfashionable.

Apathetically the merchant prince makes a million or loses one; even the grand passion itself has degenerated into a petty preference for this peach rather than for that, to make use of Stevenson's happy putting of the sad fact. Wisdom at one and twenty asks of Beauty that has seen but twice nine snows: "Is life, think you, worth the living?" and lips that were meant for kissing answer, "No, friend; but suicide is so vulgar—and to think that I haven't a single hopeful pain or ache!" The lover of today is so insufferably sane that murder or suicide for the sake of love should be a matter for general rejoicing.

In place of the indiscretions of hot-blooded youth which our forefathers were wont to forgive, we find cold sins of the sophisticated. The thou-shalt-nots set imperiously aside by a magnificent passion back out of the way, bowing acquiescently. The very setting aside is a sin so venial that in certain favorable lights it looks for all the world like a virtue. But bloodless vice is an abomination in the sight of gods and men forever unpardonable. One dirty deed of malice aforethought is more corrupting to the soul than are ten thousand passionate sins. Not strong passions, but weak wills, mark the degenerate. The better sort of badness incident to virility a wise Providence winks at; but goodness with the dry rot is its despair; not Omniscience itself knows what to do with it; it makes neither fit furniture for heaven nor fuel for hell. Mind you, I am not complaining that we moderns do not sin enough; my plaint is that our sins have not the saving grace of being due to superabundance of life.

How any one can sit an indifferent spectator at so commoving a spectacle as life, passionate or pulseless, daily offers for our divertisement, is beyond my comprehension; how flesh and blood can content itself to play the part of a wooden man, I can in no wise understand.

In Greece of old men had great passions. The ancient Greeks were a nation of enthusiasts, living the life of the feelings which is the life of the high gods; and the overflow of their feelings they caught in various forms of beauty; they preserved their master passions in long-lived marble, in deathless written word. What little is left of their life, the life above ground they loved so well, quickens as by magic the dead men of today. Their serene white stone is more passionately alive than is modern flesh.

By putting one's ear to the Bible one may still hear echoes of the mighty heart-beats of God's once chosen children of light; likewise a passionate people, living much, loving much, sinning much. Compare with anæmic imitations its palpitant pages. Herein also is undying fire whereat our ash-gray modern existence may rekindle itself on occasion and for a glorious moment take on again the royal red color of life.

We of today upon whom the sun so wonderfully wastes itself are right proud of our surpassing civilization; and we have reason; we know everything except how to live; we have everything except happiness.

War among us is carried on with passionless precision, the opposing armies at incredible distances the one from the other, man killing man in blood incredibly cold. Even a noble hate is now a thing unknown. How different it was when Agamemnon, king of men, went down to war in brazen armor among the well-greaved Greeks! By Homer's ghost, but it is a spectacle for the Olympians to see those excellent mechanics, our characteristic poets, doing their day's work of eight hours; and by the aid of the most approved machinery turning out no end of stuff calculated to fit to a nicety the various spaces left vacant in the make-up of the magazines!

That this is a day of little loves and lesser hates is not due to any preaching of Christian asceticism; nor to any insidious quietism come out of the effete East to rob us of our red corpuscles. For that matter, in the hidden heart of the sun-loved Orient the fires of life are red hot; and ecstasy, elsewhere extinct, is still to be found among the religious recluses of the West. The causes of the decay of passion among us are far to seek; the fact, however, strikes me continually in the face; that which I love lies sick unto death; hence these tears.

No wise man, to whom a word is sufficient, needs to be told that a truth is never really once uttered until it has been reiterated; nor that to accept a truth is not necessarily to live it. The foregoing to explain why I make no apology for saying a pet thing a second time or a third, as, for instance, this: The soul of man has need of enthusiasm for the daily lavation of itself; a great passion is as a bath of fire; he who is passionless is not possibly pure. There is no overcoming my distaste for the indifferentist: he is dirty.

IMPERIAL
STUDIO
744 Market St.
San Francisco - Cal.

THE IMPERIAL STUDIO'S PARCHMENT PROOFS

Are the swellest thing the Photographer's art has yet produced. There are plenty of imitations. The real thing is a little more expensive, but it's worth the difference.

HAVE YOU HAD LUNCH AT THE RED LION?

New Grill for Ladies and Gentlemen

WILL BE OPEN ONLY FOR LUNCHEON, FROM 10 A. M. TO 3 P. M.
DURING SUMMER MONTHS

Any Evening the Whole or Any Part of the Dining Room may be Reserved for Banquets.

"The Red Lion" is in the San Francisco Stock Exchange Bldg. It has two entrances from Pine St., just below Montgomery, and is also readily accessible from Montgomery and Bush Sts. through the Mills Bldg.

An Annapolis Training

BY A. H. DUTTON.

If a graduate of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., be asked what is the underlying principle of the course of education at that school, he is almost sure to answer that it is embodied in the single monosyllable, "Why?" That little word is the key-note of the whole course. From the moment that the midshipman enters as a hapless "plebe" until the momentous day when he receives his sheepskin from the hands of the Secretary of the Navy and dons an officer's cap, frock coat and sword, he has the "why and the wherefore" of every statement, explanation and solution demanded of him. If he solves a problem in mathematics, he must explain how he gets his result. If he tells what he would do with a ship under certain conditions, he must tell his reason. If he answers a question as to a chemical reaction, an electric phenomenon, the working of a steam valve, or the evolution of a European state, he must explain "Why?"

The Naval Academy is not a memory school. Few things are learned by rote. For convenience, it is customary to memorize certain formulae—after their derivation has been mastered—but the chief exercises for the memory are in an intimate acquaintance with the articles of war, the naval regulations and the official orders. These must never be forgotten. To say, in excuse for a dereliction, "I forgot," avails nothing, and is apt to elicit the response, "You have no right to forget. Your forgetfulness magnifies your offence, sir."

Mathematics and mathematical methods of reasoning underlie the entire system of training at Annapolis. Cold, hard facts, the logic of mathematics from which there is no escape, are the basic principles. Fundamental causes are sought, the significance of events, the elimination of the unessential, and the practical application of theory are persistently demanded. Annapolis is no place for dreamers.

The course covers four years, one year being spent in each of the four classes, the fourth class being the lowest, the first classmen being those in their last year at the Academy. There are daily oral recitations, with written examinations every month, and more thorough examinations semi-annually and annually. The marking is close, and satisfactory averages are required for each half-year, in each branch of study. A midshipman who is unsatisfactory in even one of the several branches must leave the school. No matter, for instance, how proficient he may be in languages, English studies, or seamanship, if he fail in physics, or in ordnance, or in mathematics, particularly mathematics, he must resign or be dropped from the rolls.

No Latin, Greek or other classics are taught. The curriculum includes mathematics, beginning with the higher algebra and extending through geometry, trigonometry, and calculus to the theory of mechanics, method of least squares and elliptic functions; electricity and magnetism, physics and chemistry, steam engineering, modern languages, consisting of French and Spanish, ancient, modern, English and American history, rhetoric, literature, international law, seamanship and naval architecture, ordnance and gunnery, astronomy and navigation, and several other technical subjects, all embracing a multitude of sub-divisions.

But these are only the strictly mental studies. They are the "book learning," the theory, although all of them are accompanied by extensive practical application and practice. In addition there is careful instruction of a physical nature, well calculated to develop quickness of eye and judgment as well as coolness, endurance and vigorous constitution. Naturally, the midshipman must with his own hands rig and unrig a ship, make and take in sail, perform a multitude of nautical and military drills, such as great gun drill, infantry and light artillery drills, boat exercises, torpedo practice, steering, running marine engines and dynamos. Furthermore, each midshipman must, during his course at the Academy, go into the tool and machine shops and work at blacksmithing, carpentering, boilermaking, filing and chiseling, as well as running lathes, drills and planers. He must be a practical riveter and mechanic as well as a helmsman and sailorman. While few are able, in the relatively short time devoted to these handicrafts, to become expert mechanics, they are taught how things should be done, the capabilities of tools and the distinctions between good and bad work.

Nor are these all the practical exercises. The course includes extensive gymnastic work in a well-equipped gymnasium, boxing, fencing and broad-sword exercise, swimming, dancing and rowing. All of these are obligatory, and the individual's proficiency regularly marked up.

An interesting feature of the course is the never-ending cultivation of the "habit of command." From the very first, the midshipman is impressed with the fact that he is destined to command men and he is given opportunity to develop executive ability. Each class is divided each month into a number of "sections," each with its leader and second leader, who are responsible for its discipline in going to and from recitation and examination. The section leader, assisted by his second leader, gives the words of command, and performs the duties of a minor officer, even in the fourth class. Later, midshipmen are singled out as cadet petty officers and cadet commissioned officers who handle the rest of the brigade, their orders being as lawful and as strictly obeyed as those from a regular officer of the Navy. On the practice cruises, which take place during the summer months, at the end of the academic year, the older midshipmen are placed in positions of authority not only over the junior midshipmen but also over enlisted men of the Navy, a large number of whom are drafted to the practice ships. Thus is the "habit of command" taught and maintained.

The discipline is strict throughout the four years. Everything is run on thorough military principles; regular hours are set for everything and woe betide the unlawfully absent or tardy. Appearance is also important, and the midshipman must be well groomed. Such sins of omission as a missing button, unblacked shoes, an unshaven face, an untidy collar, are quickly noted and demerits and even punishments are imposed for them.

Last, but by no means least, is the traditional cultivation of a high sense of honor among the midshipmen. Falsehood is punishable by instant dismissal, but it is exceedingly rare. A midshipman's personal denial or affirmation is taken without question, even in the face of contrary evidence, and this practice is so seldom abused that its effect is a characteristic of the institution. Indeed, the regulation of personal honor at Annapolis is left almost entirely to the spirit of the midshipmen themselves. If one of them is guilty of a falsehood or other disgraceful act, his fellows are the first to discipline him, either putting him in Coventry or reporting him to the authorities. However the embryo officers may indulge in pranks, dissipation or other breaches of discipline, they hold a lie or dishonesty to be the unpardonable sin.

Essentially practical and scientific, the Annapolis training is especially valuable in developing character and self-reliance.

Knowledge is not happiness, and science
But an exchange of ignorance for that Which is another kind of ignorance.

—Byron.

"White Horse Cellar"

Scotch Whisky

FROM

MACKIE & CO., Islay, Scotland

Never in Bulk

CHARLES MEINECKE & CO.,

AGENTS P. C.

SAN FRANCISCO

DO YOU WANT AN INCOME?

DIVIDENDS monthly at rate of $60.00 per year on each 100 shares. Will sell limited number shares. Oil lands and mines for sale. Also best Cuban fruit and farm lands at special prices. Printed matter free. Bank references.

DEBENTURE SURETY COMPANY (Inc.), Suit B., Rialto Bldg., San Francisco

The Saunterer

George Bruce Cortelyou

From private secretary of President Lincoln to Secretary of State under President McKinley and Roosevelt was the giant stride of John Hay, now pretty generally acknowledged to be the greatest living diplomatist, a man qualified for the Chief Executiveship of the nation. In that same technical school of experience to which the country is indebted for John Hay, the well-equipped statesman, another distinguished citizen, George Bruce Cortelyou, received his training. Mr. Cortelyou is to be very much in the public eye in the next few months, having been selected by President Roosevelt to manage his campaign, but if I am not very much mistaken he will yet render far more distinguished service to his country. Cortelyou has in him the stuff of which great men are fashioned. A text-book of great value could be made out of the interesting story of his career, for it abounds in lessons which even a dullard could study to advantage. From stenographer in the Post Office Department to Cabinet officer in seven years is unparalleled promotion in the public service, but Cortelyou achieved the transition before he was forty. Such an extraordinary career would attract attention under any circumstances, but it is all the more remarkable in Cortelyou's case, for he is not a politician with a pull, but has made his own way solely on his own merits, and without even solicitation. He is distinctly an example of worth recognized. So little has he had to do with practical politics that when President Roosevelt named him for chairman of the National Committee a roar went up from the machine representatives all over the country. It was the consensus of opinion among them that none but an experienced political strategist, skilled in the handling of the sack, should be elevated to the throne formerly occupied by Mark Hanna and once ornamented by the astute Matt Quay. They have yet to learn of the versatility of George B. Cortelyou.

The Keynote of His Success

It was during the visit of President McKinley to this city that I first became interested in Mr. Cortelyou, who was then his private secretary. I had heard some of my confreres of the newspaper profession singing his praises. They agreed that he was the most suave and tactful man they had ever met, and upon meeting him I found that he had not been misrepresented. I have met newspaper men who have had dealings with him in his official capacity in Washington, and I have yet to find one who is not his friend and eulogist. From all that I have learned of him I have concluded that he is blessed with an unusual personality. He is a genius for thoroughness, he is a glutton for work and he is a gentleman at all times and under all circumstances. When asked one day why he was devoting so much attention to the details of a trivial task he replied, "Oh, well, one may as well do it right as otherwise." In that terse sentence is to be found the keynote of his success. According to his philosophy, to be right one should take precautions against being wrong. At twenty-one Cortelyou was a court stenographer in New York. After two years he became a preparatory school principal, and in 1889 entered the civil service as a stenographer. He soon became private secretary to the Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General under President Cleveland. During his service in Washington he attended the night law schools, and obtained the degree of bachelor of laws from the Georgetown University. In November, 1895, as the story is told, President Cleveland announced at a Cabinet meeting that he wanted a first-class shorthand man. Postmaster-General Bissell spoke up, saying: "I believe I have one in my department. He's a handsome young fellow, as smart as lightning, and as methodical as a machine, and above everything, a gentleman." He referred to Cortelyou and on his recommendation the young stenographer went into the White House.

His Suavity and Tact

President Cleveland liked Cortelyou from the first, and promoted him to be executive clerk. This position he held until the Spanish war, when President McKinley appointed him private secretary. When McKinley died President Roosevelt reappointed Cortelyou. It would be hard to find three men so vastly different of temperament as Cleveland, McKinley and Roosevelt, yet each of them found Cortelyou perfectly suited to his needs. The duties of the secretary to the President are many and onerous. To many people he is the President's alter ego. His relations with McKinley were those of tender regard and affectionate friendship, and evidently a similar relationship has sprung up between Roosevelt and the man chosen to manage his campaign. Cortelyou has proved himself a man of wonderful executive ability. In addition to being the perfection of suavity and ease of manner he is, in the language of President Garfield, "unstampedable." Nobody ever saw him "rattled," and nobody ever heard of his making a faux pas. Firm, manly and polite at all times, it has been said of him that he can come nearer, figuratively, to kicking a man down stairs and then have the victim turn and thank him for his courtesy, than any man who ever occupied his position in the White House. One word—graciousness—expresses the secret of the Cortelyou charm. He is the gentilhomme by nature. Witness, for example, his conduct on this occasion. He is engaged in conversation with the representative of an obscure newspaper who has traveled several hundred miles to see the President. Enter, a distinguished Admiral. Mr. Cortelyou bows pleasantly, says a few words to the newspaper man, excuses himself, steps over to the naval man and addresses him. "You have come at a most opportune moment, Mr. Admiral, for the

For Breakfast

For Breakfast

For Breakfast

President wishes to see you, and the only one ahead of you is this young gentleman who has come a long distance and is anxious to catch a train home. We shall therefore not keep you waiting more than a few minutes." Could the situation have been handled more tactfully?

Metcalf's "Arrival"

Now that Victor Metcalf is a member of the President's Cabinet and Mrs. Metcalf is to become one of the Cabinet ladies, Oakland is beginning to preen itself for all the world like a peacock. The "arrival" of Mr. Metcalf affords another illustration of our inability to appraise at their true value people and things that are most familiar to us. The illusions that distance lends are not more certain than the short-sightedness of propinquity. Genius has ever been without appreciation in its home until discovered abroad. Mr. Metcalf has been rated in Oakland as an ordinary Congressman, a lawyer who needed the job. Oaklanders did not even stop to think that he might be equal to the part he looked. If they had done so they would not have underrated him, for Victor Metcalf is one of the most distinguished looking men I ever saw. Now that he is in the President's Cabinet people that meet him will say, "Well, he looks the part." And he surely does. His is a face eloquent of character, dignity, intellect and polish. In Washington he is regarded as one of the brainiest of statesmen. By the way, it was not so many years ago that, when a Californian was mentioned as available for the Cabinet, the wise men of the State were greatly amused. The proposition was so absurd, California being such a small speck on the political map. Now we may boast of having had a Cabinet officer in two successive Administrations. California is growing.

Her Mot Rattled Him

The Metcalfs gave a dinner last week in honor of Paymaster Richworth Nicholson, who will leave in a few days for Bremerton where he has been ordered to report for duty on the Philadelphia. The decorations were couleur de rose, suggestive, it was remarked, of the host's future. During the dinner a gentleman arose to drink to the hostess of the occasion. "What so rare as a day in June," he began, and hesitated as if for a reply. A young woman, sotto voce, thus: "Well, this one is more than rare; it is positively raw." The table was convulsed and the gentleman, very much embarrassed, dropped into his chair. He was begged to resume, but confessed that he had lost his continuity of thought.

Chinatown to Be Wiped Out

If certain enterprising individuals are successful in the execution of their plans, San Francisco's far-famed plague-spot in the picturesque Chinese quarter will be wiped out in the course of a few years. In the last quarter of a century the question of the removal of Chinatown has been the subject of numerous agitations. Municipal authorities have discussed it, and public-spirited citizens have suggested ways and means, but the problem has invariably stumped the advocates of obliteration. The rich property owners of Chinatown have always been prepared to give battle to the authorities, for they have been drawing down big rentals from the heathens, and regarded the Chinese quarter with affection. Now the solution of the puzzling problem is in a fair way to be reached, and in a manner satisfactory to all concerned. It is proposed to buy all the property along Dupont from Bush to Broadway, and in blocks contiguous to Dupont now included in what is known as Chinatown. To that end a company has been organized, and options are now being secured on property in the district. The promoters of the scheme have secured an option on a tract of land near the bay shore somewhere in the neighborhood of the old Bay View district, where they expect to locate the new Chinatown.

How They Expect to Profit

The promoters of this big scheme have already perfected plans for the improvement of the whole district of which they expect to become possessed. And they are confident that the property, which is now comparatively cheap, will be so enhanced in value that their profits will be enormous. Among other things it is proposed to widen Dupont street from Bush to Broadway, and make it the main artery leading from Market street to the North Beach section. To facilitate the execution of their plans they have avoided publicity as much as possible, but I hear they have been assured that they will have no difficulty in persuading the Chinese to move to the new Oriental city which is to spring up on the southerly shore of the bay, and which will have none of the unsanitary features of the present plague-spot.

Genthe Geyed

Arnold Genthe was banqueted at the Bohemian Club on the eve of his departure for Europe, and the smart set photographer was geyed unmercifully but good-naturedly by his confreres of the art world. Among the features of the jollification were a series of caricatures of the Genthe type of photography. The point accentuated by the cartoonists was the vagueness of the products of the Genthe camera. One of the cartoons purported to be the photograph of a fictitious Mrs. Rosenbaum. The subject wore her jewelry for the occasion. Indeed she reeked of jewelry. So bedizened was she that her gems were all that could be

EMIL W. HAGBOM

C. H. REHNSTROM

REHNSTROM & HAGBOM

FORMERLY SANDERS &amp; JOHNSON

..TAILORS..

PHELAN BUILDING, Rooms 1, 2, 3 Telephone Main 5387
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

John Dewar & Sons

Distillers to His Majesty

53 Gold and Prize Medals

Old Highland Whisky

Sherwood & Sherwood, Pacific Coast Agents

distinguished. There being more character in her jewels than in her face, the lines of her countenance were completely obliterated.

The Vagueness of Whistler

Apropos of the vagueness of the Genthe photos I am reminded of a story touching the same characteristic of the Whistler etchings. It was told by Sir Henry Irving. He was once presented with a Whistler etching, and when he started to hang it he was puzzled. He could not tell which was the top and which was the bottom. Finally, after reversing the picture several times and finding it looked equally well either way, he decided to take a chance on being right. After hanging the picture he invited Whistler to dine with him and seated him opposite his etching. During the dinner Whistler glanced at the picture from time to time. Between the soup and the fish he put on his eyeglass and squinted at it. Between the roast and the dessert he got up and walked over to take a close view, and then he discovered what the trouble was.

"Why, Henry," he said reproachfully, "you've hung my etching upside down."

"Well," said Irving, "if it took you an hour to discover it surely there is some excuse for my ignorance."

Why Bard?

As the Senatorial contest seems to have resolved itself into a Bard-Oxnard affair, I cannot understand why certain newspapers are so industriously engaged in engendering heat over it. Both candidates are very rich, and one has been tried and found wanting. That one is such a negative character, and so frigid of temperament that even his friends cannot simulate enthusiasm when espousing his cause. He has proved his virtue to their satisfaction by declining to supply the customary sinews of war. But I know hundreds of men ready to serve the people in the Senate providing they would not be required to pay for the honor. And they are better qualified than Bard for the job, too. Moreover some of them would have a chance of being elected by the people if the matter were submitted to popular vote. I do not believe that Bard has a friend in the State who would assert that the Hueneme statesman could win out in an election by the people. Nor do I think it will be disputed that Bard is being urged for re-election solely in the interest of politicians who expect to get some Federal patronage with his assistance. That he will not be able to do the State any good is the belief of everybody who knows anything about his standing in Washington. So why Bard?

Oxnard's Strategy

Some very sincere newspaper men are in sympathy with Bard's candidacy, not because they consider him a statesman of force or a representative Californian Republican, but because they know that Oxnard is the machine candidate. Incidentally they assume that the latter is going to buy his way into the Senate. In that assumption I think they are mistaken, but not because I feel that Mr.

Oxnard has any conscientious scruples on the subject. As he is a stranger to me I am not qualified to discuss his views of the ethics of politics. Knowing, however, that before announcing himself as a candidate he took the precaution to get assurance of the machine's support, I feel quite certain that he is not going to parade Colonel Mazuma through the State. It was demonstrated by Ulysses Grant and Irving M. Scott that a great deal of money may be wasted in an attempt to buck the machine in a Senatorial contest. By Senator Perkins it was demonstrated that it is possible to secure the toga on a very cheap basis with the support of the machine. Oxnard appears to have taken his tip from Perkins. Of course he cannot expect to win with as little expense as did Bard when the enemies of Dan Burns turned the tables by buying votes the other way. And in the course of time Bard will discover, too, that it is not a moneyless fight. When he does make the discovery, will he hold his purse-strings tight if he thinks it possible to win by loosening up?

As between Bard and Oxnard there is really no reason why anybody not personally interested in Republican politics should become feverish in discussing the contest. As Republican politicians do not concern themselves about ideal statesmen, and as they are not likely to trot out a Steve White for the job, I have no hesitation in expressing the hope that the State will not be represented six years longer by such an innocuous, cold-water champion as Thomas R. Bard. I prefer a man of magnetic personality, who knows how to get things for his State, even though he achieves his election by doing practical politics. At the same time I am not so sure that Mr. Bard has such a holy horror of doing practical politics as his friends south of Tehachapi would have us believe. For a man who has done nothing to inspire pulpit panegyrists, or attempted to grapple friends with hooks of steel, he has been remarkably fortunate.

Footlights Lure a Crocker

One of the Crockers is going on the stage. The news comes in a roundabout way from Basel, Switzerland, where that unique menage consisting of Jackson and Powers Gou-

FAIRCHILD

TO ORDER

SHIRT WAIST SUITS FRENCH CORSETS
PLAIN AND FANCY WAISTS

Phone Larkin 862

1211 SUTTER ST.

ED. PINAUD'S EAU DE QUININE

ED. PINAUD'S Eau de Quinine is the best Hair Restorative known. It preserves the hair from parasitic attacks, tones up the hair bulbs, cleanses the scalp and positively removes dandruff.

ED. PINAUD'S Eau de Quinine is also a most excellent hair dressing. The sweet and refined odor which it leaves in the hair makes it a toilet luxury.

Sold Everywhere.

4 oz. bottles, 50c. 8 oz. bottles, $1.00

raud and their wives, mother and daughters, are located. The story as it comes to me is that the Gouraud brothers are writing a comic opera, that Mrs. "Jack," the moneybags of the family, who was formerly Mrs. Gillig, previously Mrs. Porter Ashe, and more remotely, Amy Crocker, is going to finance the production, and her daughter, Mrs. Powers Gouraud, is going to play the prima donna role. Jackson Gouraud has already composed some successful topical songs. One of them, a catchy jingle, "When We Go to Paris in the Spring," made a hit in a New York musical production last season. In his salad days Powers Gouraud appeared on the stage where he won fleeting fame as a comedian. When his brother married the wealthy Mrs. Amy Crocker-Ashe-Gillig, he abandoned the stage and was soon paying court to the daughter of his brother's wife.

An Unconventional Family

Unlike their numerous relatives, the Mesdames Gouraud care nothing for organized society. In their New York home they entertain a lively Bohemian set consisting of stage and literary folks. Mrs. Edna Wallace Hopper, who was dangling her family skeleton in court not long ago, is one of the star guests at the famous Gouraud Sunday evening suppers. Mrs. Jackson Gouraud, who is now fair, fat and forty-odd, has become one of the unique figures in New York life. The Gouraud boys have always been interesting. And so was their father, Colonel Gouraud, who was the Grand Vizier of the Emperor of Sahara when that rich and eccentric Parisian boulevardier, Jean Lebaudy, tried to found an empire in the sandy interior of Africa. Of late the Mesdames Gouraud have turned their talents to charitable pursuits. In Switzerland they give weekly musicales which include cakewalks, and the proceeds of these entertainments are given to the poor of the neighborhood. Young Mrs. Powers Gouraud has been highly praised for her singing on those occasions, and some time ago when some critic applauded her work she felt the biting of the theatrical microbe.

Return of Miss Jennie Crocker

One of the prettiest and richest of the numerous Crocker clan is expected to come out next winter. I refer to Miss Jennie Crocker. She recently returned from New York where she finished at one of the fashionable schools. She has traveled a great deal, and is a most interesting and charming girl, resembling very much her sister, Mrs. Francis Burton Harrison. She is an heiress to ten million.

The Girls of Yesterday

By-the-bye, the batch of girls now just browning for next winter is so attractive that the outlook for last winter's galaxy is not promising, especially as so few of them have succeeded in casting a net in the right direction. Somebody will soon be recalling the lines in "If I Were King":

"Where are the girls of yesterday?

If the wind would only blow them all away."

But it won't, and they will all be in the market, a little shop-worn and marked down.

Will He Affirm or Deny?

When Santos-Dumont comes out here this summer he will probably be sharply interrogated in regard to his rumored engagement with Lurline Spreckels. But it is not likely that the dirigible balloon genius will be otherwise than non-committal on the subject. He is sure to be lionized by society, if he permits himself to be made a victim. The Parisian is to be the guest of Joe Redding, who is bringing him out to attend the Bohemian Club's jinks in the grove.

When Ethel Comes

The coming of Ethel Barrymore to us as a star brings back a tide of memories of her brilliant parents, the late Georgie Drew and poor Maurice Barrymore. The young girl, who was their only daughter, is said by some to be a duplicate of her wonderful mother; by others, to possess the temperament of her father. She is very popular on and off the stage, just as were her parents. When abroad, Miss Barrymore was entertained more than any other American actress, and she is a great favorite with New York society people. She receives invitations to Lenox and Newport, and to more country-places than she could possibly visit in a season. The Burlingame people are making plans to enfold her within their hospitable arms, as they always enfold her uncle, John Drew, and cousin Louise, when they come this way. But perhaps Miss Barrymore will prefer to see California after a program laid down by herself. Her gowns, I am told, are stunning. She is very slender, thin in fact, and some attribute her exceeding slinness to the fact that she is an inveterate cigarette smoker. Her first decided hit on the stage was in "His Excellency the Governor," and ever since she has been the idol of Broadway.

Our New Goods Now Arriving

WE CAN SHOW YOU
THE FINEST LINE OF VEHICLES EVER SHOWN
IN SAN FRANCISCO

All Old Goods Destroyed by Fire
Not an Old Vehicle in Our Present Stock

STUDEBAKER
BROS. COMPANY

MARKET AND TENTH STS.

Go to the Factory to Buy Phone Folsom 2812

TRUNKS VALISES AND SUIT CASES

You Get Your Money's Worth

J. MARTY CO.

Repairing 22 TURK STREET Manufacturers
Sample Trunks and Bags to order

Mrs. Eleanor Martin is going to entertain Miss Barrymore. She has the right of way, by reason of letters she has received from the Peter Martins' Newport friends asking her to "be kind to the little daughter of Maurice while she is in San Francisco."

Native Daughter Controversies

Although the late session of the Grand Parlor of Native Daughters held at Pacific Grove was not so exciting as the two preceding ones, it was by no means dull, and several controversies arose which may have an interest outside of the Order. One of these relates to the ethics of the medical profession. A petition came in from one of the Sacramento parlors requesting permission to have an osteopath as its examining physician. After much debate permission was granted. The three representatives of the medical fraternity who were present made rather a weak protest, assigning no reasons but simply threatening that the Grand Parlor would regret its action. The other delegates seemed to think it was merely a fight between rival schools, and as one of the lady doctors had just been urging the claims of fraternity even if other interests had to be sacrificed, they thought it a good opportunity to let her prove her disinterestedness. When the Grand Parlor broke up, a meeting of the examining physicians of the subordinate parlors was called in San Francisco, and the Grand President, Mrs. Caminetti, invited to be present. The doctors threatened to withdraw from the Native Daughters if the osteopath was not compelled to retire, and Mrs. Caminetti was called upon to set aside the action of the Grand Parlor. This she refused to do, and insisted that it was her duty to enforce and not to nullify the decisions of the governing body of the Order. What action the physicians will take remains to be seen.

The Ring Fund

Another subject of controversy was furnished by the Grand President's ring. It is the custom of the Grand Parlor to present the retiring president with a ring. As funds have been running short this year the committee on supplies made a requisition as early as January last for funds to secure the Grand President's ring. The Grand Secretary refused to draw the requisition, as the ring would not be needed before June. The Grand Parlor endorsed the Secretary's action by fixing the time of the requisition in future as two weeks before the annual session of the Grand Parlor. The debate however proved very embarrassing to the lady who occupied the chair and who was to be the recipient of the trinket.

Feminine Inconsistency

Alta Parlor has been making a loud outcry for a year past over the impending bankruptcy of the Grand Parlor. It is true that funds have been short, but with charming feminine inconsistency Alta Parlor offered a loan out of its own funds to cover the shortage, thus showing its confidence in the solvency of the Order. The offer was made in good faith and the proposition was only defeated because the loan had not been negotiated as the rules of the Order prescribe. One of the business women of the Native Daughters who is both public spirited and well endowed with this world's goods, came forward and put up the nine hundred and fifty dollars necessary to cover the shortage. The stringency of funds did not hinder the Daughters from doubling the pay of the Grand Secretary, who now receives one hundred dollars per month.

Amenities

The usual amenities of the mannerless sex were indulged in, and allusions to personal peculiarities were not wanting. In the heat of debate one of the members clinched her argument by saying, "I know more about that matter than you do even if my hair is not gray." When one member who has been under fire was submitting a statement in her own behalf, cries of "Throw her out" were heard. And yet there are people who think that political conventions would be places of sweetness and light if women had a hand in them.

"She gets a divorce every little while."
"Just for relaxation, I suppose."

Hubbard's Visit to Miller

In writing his "Little Journeys" to the homes of famous people, Mr. Elbert Hubbard, of East Aurora, would do well were he to confine himself to the journeys and say nothing of what he thinks he finds at the ends of them. To Westerners who are familiar with the personality of Joaquin Miller, and with his home, "The Heights," a recently published volume from Hubbard's Roycroft "shop" will go to show what unmitigated trash most of these "Little Journeys" consist of. The book in question purports to be a description of a visit which Hubbard made not long ago to Miller's hill-side ranch—and I am sorry that I cannot say that it is given to the public as only "purporting" to be this, and no more. In that light, we might accept it as another contribution to the Unbelievable; but as a thing offered to the public as even "more-or-less" true, it is DECORATIONS For Weddings, Dinners, Lunches, Receptions and Stores. Flower gifts attractively arranged. Bridal bouquets artistically specialized.

Original Designs in Favors, Name Cards, Menus, Almond Dishes and Candle Shades

MISS CHARLOTTE F. WILLIAMS
121 Post Street Tel. John 1911 San Francisco
Out of Town Correspondence Solicited

I HAVE A
BEER OF QUALITY

IT'S Rainier
BEER

JOHN RAPP & SON, Agts., S. F.
Distributors in every town on the coast

simply absurd. There is scarcely a statement in this "Little Journey" that is not a lie, or an exaggeration so great that it borders closely upon one.

A Singular Phenomenon

Many people have made journeys to Joaquin Miller's "Heights." A number of them are literary folk who have returned and written descriptions of their visits. But if Hubbard's book is a fair sample of his literature he is not to be classed among even the poorest of writers, despite his "Message to Garcia." Of all the "descriptions" which it has been my ill-fortune to read, however, not one has been within seventeen miles of a shadow of the truth. Just why the people who visit Miller cannot tell the truth about their visits is rather more than my limited intelligence can understand. Joaquin Miller and his "Heights" are interesting just as they are, without exaggerating them in the least. In dress, manner and speech, Miller is characteristic to the limit; and his home on the hill-side above Fruitvale is a romantic place without the necessity of trying to make it so. Both may be described with absolute truth, as far as one may know it, and the description be mighty good reading to even the illiterate—if they be not so illiterate but that they can read. It is true—and a blessing 'tis 'tis true—that we do not all see a thing exactly alike. But certainly men and women of wit and understanding must see things with some degree of similarity, and therefore should be able to tell of what they see with some degree of uniformity. Yes, they should—but by the beard of the prophet, they don't—when it comes to the telling of a little journey to Joaquin Miller, whether they tell it on "hand-made" paper, bound into a freak book, or in the columns of a news journal.

The Nuttalls To Entertain

The J. R. K. Nuttalls, who have been in mourning over a year for Mrs. Nuttall's father, Mr. Rosenstock, are soon to devote themselves to the entertainment of their friends on a lavish scale. Mr. Rosenstock left his daughter over half a million, which is adequate in this city for the maintenance of a luxurious establishment, and for sumptuous entertainment. Mrs. Nuttall, like Mrs. Will Crocker, has become something of a bibliophile, and her library contains many rare volumes. She is also a connoisseur in jewels, and has a collection unsurpassed by that of any other woman in Burlingame. She is especially proud of her collection of pearls.

They Must Have a Hostess

I hear that when the Sequoia Club secures a home Ednah Robinson will be expected to occupy it as her residence. The sentiment of some of the members is in favor of establishing a salon approximating the institution as it has flourished in France, and to that end it is considered important to have a hostess. As Miss Robinson was the founder of the club she is of course entitled to the honor. She retired gracefully into the background when the club was organized, and did not become one of the officers, but the charter roll was instituted by her and she could have had anything she wanted. She no doubt prefers the role of hostess in a home full of atmosphere:

When Miss Margaret Comes Out

Another Hyde-Smith cotillion is to be pulled off in the fall. And already society is agitated over the prospect, for the Hyde-Smiths have established a reputation for cotillions. The coming one is to be the occasion of the introduction of Miss Margaret Hyde-Smith to society. The younger set is elated, for the favors given at the Hyde-Smith german last year were the handsomest ever seen at a local function. Most of the souvenirs were made in Paris and imported by the Hyde-Smiths. The most exciting figure of that evening was the bird figure when live linets, in cages, were brought in and distributed among the young ladies. Only one bird has lived to tell the tale, I hear.

A Romance Suspected

Marie Voorhies has had so much to tell about social life in Manila that some of her friends think the metropolis of the Philippines is one of the gayest cities in the world. Incidentally some of them have gathered the notion that she did not return fancy free, and they suspect that a gallant army officer has assumed heroic proportions in her eyes. But Miss Voorhies has not taken anybody into her confidence on the subject of a personal romance.

Addie's Inheritance

Addison Mizner was discussing heredity with a group of friends shortly before his departure on his round-the-world trip. "I am convinced that there is a great deal in it," he said. "Take me, for example; I am a direct descendant of Sir Joshua Reynolds, and I both paint and josh." Those who have seen Addie's miniatures say that his joshing is much better than his painting.

"Deacon" Bootes

When the new battleship Ohio, now nearly completed at the Union Works in this city, goes into commission next month, she will have for the commander of her marine guard the tallest officer in either the Marine Corps or the Navy, Captain John T. Bootes, familiarly known in the service as "Deacon" Bootes. He is a man of exceptional ability and one of the most popular in the service. "Deacon" Bootes stands six feet four inches and is broad-shouldered and deep-chested in proportion. He has a deep resonant voice and acts as well as he looks the part of the orthodox commander. At the Naval Academy, whence he graduated in 1885, he was often called "Major Wellington de Bootes," but the name did not take hold with the faculty that "Deacon" did. Bootes left the service in 1887 and went into railroading, but returned for the Spanish war, at the close of which he entered the permanent Marine Corps. He has seen arduous service since in the Philippines, on the Isthmus of Panama and elsewhere. Appropriately enough, he is from the State of Ohio.

"Jonah" Cowles Again

"Jonah" Cowles has been at it again. Hardly had the gallant Captain, who is brother-in-law of President Roosevelt, recovered from the two disasters of recent date to the Missouri, which he commands, than he became associated with another unfortunate mishap. This time, Cowles was president of a board supervising the trial of a new torpedo-boat, the Biddle, commanded by Lieutenant Marshall, when, at the height of a burst of speed, a valve blew out, seriously injuring the machinery and perhaps fatally scalding two of the engine-room force. It certainly does seem that ill fortune pursues any craft upon which Cowles casts the blight of his presence.

He Drew The Color Line

Commander Augustus G. Kellogg, who was killed last week by a fall from a fourth-story window in Portsmouth, Va., while suffering, as it was said, from an attack of "vertigo," was a notable figure in the Navy many years ago. One of his most conspicuous acts while in active service was his refusal, while in command of the sloop-of-war Ossipee, to carry as a passenger to the West Indies, Fred Douglass, the negro politician, who was appointed United States Minister to Hayti. Kellogg drew the color line to the extent of declining to share his quarters with Douglass, despite the latter's official rank, and Kellogg was never made to suffer for his recalcitrancy.

The Triumphant Naval Ring

The Navy ring has triumphed again in the selection of Paul Morton as Secretary of the Navy. The new Secretary, while a man of force and backbone, is nevertheless so ignorant of naval science that he must perforce be at the mercy of the ring, which controls the Department. Unable to get along without a flock of technical advisers, and more dependent upon them than many other secretaries have been, Morton must, for a time at least, continue the ring in all its autocratic power. I have been asked for the names of some of those who compose this all-powerful ring. I can answer without hesitation. This coterie, which may be likened to the Russian bureaucracy which surrounds the unhappy Czar, has for its ringleaders Rear-Admirals H. S. Taylor, F. E. Chadwick, Robley D. Evans, A. S. Barker, F. J. Higginson, R. B. Bradford, George Converse, P. H. Cooper, and Captain W. S. Cowles. Every one of them is or recently has been a bureau chief, and three of them command, as a reward for their fidelity to the ring, the three most important fleets, the Asiatic, North Atlantic and European.

Johnson is Going Away

Captain Johnson, that gallant son of Mars, who is not less gallant on parade than in the drawing-rooms of the elect, is soon to leave for the East, and some of our society folks are preparing to shed tears. Captain Johnson is one of the bravest of our social beaux. A picturesque hero of the ball-room is he, skilled in all the regulation manoeuvres of the cotillion and the two-step, an industrious contributor to the gayety of the fashionable herd. It is cruel of the War Department to tear him away from the scenes of his social triumphs. Captain Johnson is the protege of Mrs. Eleanor Martin and other influential matrons of the swim, and were he allowed to tarry a little longer would surely succeed to the throne of Ned Greenway. No other man in society was so well qualified to differentiate who's who from who's not. He can detect the ear-marks of the climber from afar off. He is an authority on pedigree, financial rating and social position, and whenever the list for a Presidio hop was submitted to him he never hesitated in giving the King Edward ruling. He will surely be missed.

The Philosophy of War

War is perhaps the only industry in which the consideration of cost does not enter. It is a singular fact that, if you ask an army or a navy officer how much it costs to run a ship or maintain a fort, to fire a gun, to build a battery or equip a boat, he will rarely be able to tell you.

S. KRAMER*Suits, Jackets and Outer GarmentsMade to OrderLADIES' ARTISTIC TAILORING*Phone Black 3831 218 Powell St., San Francisco

Strathmill
Scotch Whisky

an aged whisky distilled
from barley malt—not corn

CROWN DISTILLERIES CO.

GENERAL AGENTS

It is no part of his instruction. The one idea instilled into every military officer's mind is to get the best weapon, the best stores and the best men; to use them to the best advantage, and expend them as freely as is necessary for success. The only costs considered by military men are those of men and material. The soldier counts his losses and expenditures, not in dollars and cents, but in lives, ammunition, stores and equipment. The unit of life lost is the individual, of material, the gun or ship. It is cardinal military doctrine that the commodity which is sought is success for your own arms and defeat for the enemy's. Expend as much money as may be needed to achieve this end, for you may get it out of the enemy in the form of indemnity or other advantage if you defeat him. Be as economical of lives and material as you reasonably can, for these are the means of defeating your foe, but do not hesitate to incur loss, provided a corresponding military advantage may be reaped in compensation.

She Tickled Him

The narrow waist is being assiduously cultivated by military men nowadays; and to such a degree by some of them that they are suspected of lacing. One of the popular young officers at the Presidio who affects an ultra-military carriage, and who is a frequent visitor at country homes in San Rafael, having excited the envy of less favored men became, not long ago, the subject of discussion. Somebody having hinted that he wore corsets a young lady just emerging from her teens had her curiosity aroused. She resolved to investigate. On the occasion of a yachting party a little while ago, when all hands were lunching on deck, the girl seized the opportunity. She gave the young officer a gentle thrust in the ribs at the same time exploring the ribs for stays. The officer, being ticklish, gave vent to a scream. Everybody was startled, the girl apologized, but gave a look of triumph at the suspicious civilians. The officer was not corseted.

That Fair Baby

The Fair Heirs—Mrs. Oelrichs and Mrs. Vanderbilt—are said to be rejoicing that the protracted litigation involving their inheritance is at an end. But is it ended? I have a faint recollection of the report of the existence of a Charley Fair baby. I believe it was one William M. Cannon, attorney-at-law, who called one day some months ago, on Mr. Oelrichs and the legal representatives of Charles L. Fair, to impart to them the information that the deceased had a child. If I am not mistaken Mr. Cannon said that he was the child's attorney, and that he had come to demand that the rights of his client be acknowledged. The supposition was that if the rights of the child were not conceded, Mr. Cannon would take steps to enforce them. Since then Mr. Cannon appears to have been sleeping on his client's rights. He has permitted the estate to be distributed, and he would find it very difficult now to recover the share to which a child of Charles Fair would be entitled. If the child exists the little one is being seriously wronged. It is to be presumed that, as Mr. Cannon is a lawyer in good standing, he knew what he was talking about on the occasion of that memorable visit.

Mrs. Gilman-Brown To Play Again

Mrs. Gilman-Brown is at Monterey and intends to begin golf practice shortly, for she is to match her skill against that of the best American and English players. It was Mrs. Brown who turned so many of our local golf experts into girls with green eyes when she played against them in the championship games, and who was treated in such an unsportsmanlike way by the envious that the spectators grew indignant. She is a very clever woman aside from her golf, reads a great deal and has mastered the art of bookbinding.

The King Sisters

Genevieve King has written to friends to tell them about the gay times she is having in Florence. She has been mingling in both the smart English and American colonies of the fashionable Italian town, and she has decided not to start on her homeward journey until next spring. Hazel King will join the Herrick party in a few weeks. She spiritedly denies the rumor that she is engaged.

The Chesebrough Aigrette

Those sturdy, athletic belles, Edith and Helen Chesebrough, are swinging round the summer resort circle these days. They are very interesting girls. Miss Edith is one of the best golf players in the country, and she is also an expert book-binder. Both girls do a great deal for local charities, and realize considerable money for charitable purposes by the sale of aigrettes. The Chesebrough aigrette has a chic that professionals have in vain tried to imitate.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Camm (Dorothy Goodsell) have gone to St. Louis for their honeymoon trip. The marriage of Miss Goodsell and Mr. Camm was one of last week's events, celebrated at the home of the bride in Van Ness avenue.

Hotel Richelieu

The Leading and Finest Private Family Hotel on the Pacific Coast

1012 VAN NESS AVENUE

Bet. Geary and O'Farrell Sts., San Francisco

HOTEL GRANADA

1000 SUTTER ST.

The management of the Hotel Richelieu wishes to announce to its friends and patrons that it has purchased the property of the Hotel Granada, and will run the latter on the same plan that has made the Richelieu the finest family hotel in San Francisco.

HOTEL RICHELIEU CO.

ALASKA REFRIGERATORS

FOR GROCERS BUTCHERS FLORISTS AND HOUSEHOLD -

TILE, OPAL OR
ZINC LINED -
PACIFIC COAST AGENTS

W. W. MONTAGUE & CO.

309-317 MARKET ST.

Premature indeed, if not altogether misleading, was the report of the engagement of Miss Lillie McCalla and Paymaster Kerr, which has been denied by both families. But such announcements have been known to precipitate engagements; probably because they direct the attention of Dan Cupid to the possibilities of a match.

Miss Fern Going East

One by one our clever writers, men and women, leave us for the East, where fame and fortune seem to smile continually upon the scribblers hailing from California. The California colony of writers in New York is now a large one, and it steadily increases. Miss Grace Fern is the latest to leave us for the larger field of magazine work in the East. Miss Fern came to San Francisco about four years ago, and her special articles written for the Call at once attracted attention. But local journalism is a poor field for the literary worker.

The Livermore girls are spending the summer at the family's country home near Napa, and have the Pringle girls as their guests. The Livermores never entertain in an elaborate way, elegant simplicity characterizing their affairs, but the guests always have a rollicking good time. Beth Livermore was one of the most popular of last winter's debutantes. Her society season was cut short, however, by the death of her aunt, Mrs. Eels. She is a graduate of Vassar, and goes in for athletic sports of all kinds.

"She told me she was going to quit flirting with married men as soon as she secured a husband."

"And did she?"

"Yes; she only flirts with young bachelors now."

Those Fun-Loving Blingumites

The Paul Clagstones are still loitering in this vicinity, and have been enjoying the hospitality of Mrs. Carolan at Burlingame. They are very fond of the Burlingame folks and their unconventional ways, and are looking for a house down there. Mrs. Kirk, the mother of Mrs. Clagstone, wishes that the young people would take up their residence in murky Chicago, but they prefer Burlingame. By the way, the Clagstone wedding at Burlingame was a most unconventional function. It was in the nature of a frolic, and an English friend of the groom, I am told, was annoyed at the antics of some of the leaders of our smart set. But the Blingumites have no taste for a wedding that smacks of the solemnity of a funeral. Joy must be unconfined when the trothplight ceremony is in progress at Burlingame.

Cakewalking In Church

Weddings at Burlingame are usually the occasion of great hilarity. I heard of a wedding rehearsal in a church down there in which the best man and a friend got themselves up regardless of the sacredness of the place. One of them seized an altar cloth and twisted it about his head, letting the ends trail behind him after the manner of a bridal veil. Later on he did a cake-walk down the centre aisle and he was encouraged with cat-calls, joshes and plenteous showers of hot chaff. But the gayety of the rehearsal was totally eclipsed by the roaring hilarity that greeted the wedding itself. As before the church was used for the staging of the burlesque. No one had the slightest idea of desecrating the holy place. It was simply an exhibition of Burlingame's idea of how an up-to-date wedding should be conducted. There wasn't a trace of anything formal, conventional or restrained in the manner the gay parties trooped into the church.

The Hobart Signal

But the climax of the hilarious scene occurred when that droll comedian, Walter Hobart, who was acting in an official capacity, gave the signal to the organist that the bridal couple was approaching. Did he wave a lily white hand or touch an electric bell? Nay, nay, policeman 1144—not on your wildest guess. He merely poked his forefingers into his face, and emulated an impatient gallery god demanding the "hoisting of the rag." The raconteur to whom I am indebted for the story told me that he never witnessed such an exciting wedding, and he added that, since the marriage ceremony, judging from the records of the divorce court, was no longer taken seriously, he rather favored the fashionable way of making it a josh from the beginning. He was pleasantly impressed with the ebullience of spirits exhibited at Burlingame. But he was amused to read in one of the dailies that the wedding was "marked by rare simplicity and good taste."

Society's Paramount Duty

Burlingame is not the only place where "society" has a high conception of its duties to the less fortunate portion of mankind, and that strives to make the show highly theatrical. In the fashionable centres of the East the wedding function is a gorgeously mounted production to which the multitude is summoned to feast its eyes on the fifty thousand dollar tiara, the seventy-five thousand dollar necklace and other evidences of great wealth. The shrinking violets of the elect abhor this vulgar display, but it is a duty they owe to the common herd, and noblesse oblige. It is not un-was founded in 1743, and owns more vineyards in the champagne district than all the other leading champagne houses combined, and their sales throughout the world greatly exceed those of any other brand.

THE HOUSE OF

Moët & Chandon

AUTHORITY FOR PREFERENCE

Moët & Chandon Champagne was the only Champagne used at

The Tour of the Prince and the Princess of Wales through Canada.	Dinner to the Prince by the City of Chicago.
Dinner to Prince Henry at the White House.	Dinner to the Prince by the Citizens of Milwaukee.
Launching breakfast at the launching of the "Meteor."	Banquet tendered by the Old Guard of New York to the Honorable Artillery Company of London, England.
Dinner on the "Hohenzollern" by Prince Henry to the President.	DERBY DINNER to the JOCKERY CLUB, GIVEN BY KING EDWARD VII, ON DERBY DAY, JUNE 4, 1902.
Luncheon to Prince Henry at Annapolis	And at almost all prominent society functions.
Dinner to the Prince by the Captains of Industry.
Dinner to the Prince by the Citizens of Boston.

The New Vintage of

"White Seal" <sup>Is</sup> perfection in Champagne

WILLIAM WOLFF & CO., Pacific Coast Agents, SAN FRANCISCO

DEAFNESS

Those troubled with deafness are cordially invited to demonstrations of the MASSACON and ACOUSTICON at the offices of the

HUTCHISON ACOUSTIC COMPANY

W. B. EGAN, Pacific Coast Agent Phone Priv. Ex. 216
417-418 Starr-King Bldg., 121 Geary St., San Francisco

usual at such functions for the bride to have her veil torn away and her wedding gown badly damaged by collectors of souvenirs. Only a few weeks ago the fury of a Goelet riot occasioned by a Goelet wedding was graphically described in the press despatches. So Burlingame is strictly up to date.

E. O. McCormick, the Southern Pacific magnate, who was elevated a little closer to the Harriman throne some months ago, with headquarters at Chicago, came back to town in the early part of the week on a visit to his family. Mr. McCormick likes San Francisco so well that it is pretty certain that he will never overlook an opportunity to make the trip to the coast.

Wood's Resignation Demanded

The gossips of Mill Valley have played havoc with the affairs of John R. Wood, the paying-teller of the Crocker-Woolworth bank. Mr. Wood has lost not only his wife but also his job. In financial circles there is a pretty well-founded theory that a bank is no stronger than its reputation, and the reputation of a bank depends to a great extent on the personnel of the men by whom the institution is conducted. Anything that savors of looseness of morals is strictly prohibited. All bank clerks are not ascetic in their habits, but they must guard against publicity, for to be identified with a public scandal is fatal. Mr. Wood was regarded as one of the most efficient paying-tellers in the city. He was also regarded as a model husband, one that spent nearly all his leisure hours at home, and never indulged in the lighter dissipations. But when the newspapers announced that he had been sued for divorce on the ground of adultery, the bank directors demanded his resignation. He was receiving a salary of two hundred and seventy-five dollars a month.

Those Friendly Gossips

The treatment which Wood received seems rather harsh, especially as no court has yet decided that the charge made by his wife is true. The moral of the story, however, is that a grand passion, even of a platonic character, is not to be recklessly indulged in such a place as Mill Valley, where everybody knows everybody else and the tongue of gossip wags the livelong day. It has proved an unfortunate scandal all around, for the postmistress, who figures in the unenviable role of home-breaker, has lost her position, too. Both Wood and the postmistress have defenders who say that they are the victims of malicious gossip. Wood with several other citizens of Mill Valley aided the pretty widow in securing the position of postmistress, and thereafter the paying-teller assisted her in straightening out the books. Mrs. Wood knew of her husband's conduct, but having confidence in him had no suspicion of an improper attachment. Not so, the argus-eyed gossips of Mill Valley; they knew what was going on, or at least they believed they did. And of course they were properly shocked. Some of them, affecting great friendship for Mr. Wood, resolved to avert a scandal, and they took steps in his behalf and that of his wife, did these kind souls, to break off what they considered an unholy relationship. In time of course the situation was presented to Mrs. Wood in such a light that she was constrained to assert her wifely dignity. In justice to the benevolent gossips of Mill Valley it should be said that they deeply deplore the outcome. They pity Mr. Wood from the bottom of their big hearts, so they do. And they pity Mrs. Wood and they pity the pretty widow, and they are all conscious of their own rectitude and consequently happy.

Ambitious Mrs. Fairbanks

Though Roosevelt's running mate, Charles W. Fairbanks, has been a conspicuous figure in the Senate, he was for a long time overshadowed by his wife, and last year she submerged his identity when she permitted herself to be known as Mrs. Cornelia Cole Fairbanks. She is a typical club woman, and though she is too tactful to mix in national politics, she is eager, I have been told, to see her husband Vice-President. Officially she would be second to Mrs. Roosevelt, but socially she would be very likely to take the stage centre away from the President's wife. In the event of her husband's election she will be as prominent as was Mrs. Garret A. Hobart, wife of the Vice-President under the first McKinley administration. Mrs. Fairbanks is the leading Daughter of the American Revolution and she has already won fame as a hostess. The marital experience of her only daughter, Adelaide, has caused her unbounded grief. Miss Fairbanks was married secretly to Horace R. Allen Jr., and they were divorced. About fifteen months ago Mrs. Allen married Ensign J. W. Timmins, and that match fell far short of satisfying the ambitious Mrs. Fairbanks.

Their Courtship

Though the social bee buzzes insistently in the Fairbanks bonnet it has not been ever thus. They were not born to the smart set purple. Senator Fairbanks is a man of grit who loves to talk of the days of his poverty before he became a great corporation lawyer. Miss Cornelia Cole was one of the belles of Wesleyan University where Fairbanks was also a student, working his way through college. They fell in love with each other while editing the college paper, and Fairbanks proposed when he was without funds. Miss Cole said she would wait for him to strike the road to fortune, and encouraged by this he went to Cleveland to study law. Three years later he came back to claim his bride.

RUINART

The fascinating quality of Ruinart has made it the choice of the elite of the world's society.

Hilbert Mercantile Company
PACIFIC COAST AGENTS
V. W. GASKILL, Special Agent
San Francisco, Cal.

DISSOLUTION SALE

LAST DAY

As MR. LIPPITT HAS SOLD OUT, I am compelled to raise $17,634.45. PRICES GREATLY REDUCED.

GODFREY FISHER,

945 Market Street

That Romantic Marriage

In the dailies' story of the romantic marriage of Hortense Steinhart with Hugh Russell of Oakland, it was said that the ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, and was a quiet celebration owing to the Russells' dislike to their son's marrying one of a different religion. As a matter of fact, the bride's parents were as much astonished as were the bridegroom's people when they heard of the marriage. It was a runaway match, and the young couple did not see fit to announce it until six weeks after the event. Miss Beatrice Bromfield, of San Mateo, who was a fellow dramatic pupil of Miss Steinhart at Paul Gerson's school, and later with her in the Neill company, assisted in the ceremony as sole bridesmaid. Mrs. Russell, who is only just out of her teens, is an only daughter. When she went on the stage, it was against her parents' will, but as she possessed genuine talent they finally acceded to her wish for a dramatic career. Her latest step seems to have cut that career short. The Joseph Steinharts formerly lived in Stockton, where the main branch of the family still resides. Hortense's mother was a Miss Marks, and is a beautiful woman of rare mental endowments.

Ragtime on the Organ

The celerity with which the trustees of the First Congregational church of Oakland accepted the resignation of the talented young organist, William King, occasioned considerable gossip. Admirers of his art thought the apparent satisfaction over the resignation was uncomplimentary, but now I hear that Mr. King lost the esteem of the good church people by practicing on the organ at an unusual hour one night, not long ago. Moreover he is said to have evoked from the organ music that was far from being conducive to religious fervor. He actually played rag-time on the sacred instrument. It was on an occasion when he was accompanied by some convivial companions, true music lovers, who were not in a mood at that particular time for "Nearer My God to Thee" or kindred melodies. However Mr. King resigned because he is tired and wishes to go abroad for recreation.

Hymen Over The Bay

There was a deal of comment, I hear, because Florence Hatch had Judge Ogden instead of a minister of the Gospel to unite her to Asa Mendenhall. However, all the Hatches have minds of their own, and if Florence wished to have an old friend unite her to the man of her choice she would not be gainsaid by all the Dame Grundies in Oakland. Judge Ogden, who performed the ceremony, is an old friend of both families. He also acted as toastmaster at the supper that followed. The wedding was a very pretty one. Hortense Chichester caught the bride's bouquet, and rumor says she has already selected the one to lead her to the altar within the twelvemonth. The bride and bridegroom are spending their honeymoon in Livermore.

Oakland society is delighted over the betrothal of Sarah Van Larue and Archie Kerr, just announced. Miss Larue is popularly known as "the granddaughter of Brooklyn Township," her grandfather, John R. Larue, having been one of the founders of what is now East Oakland. The family still occupy the stately old house that was built by the first Larue.

Cupid Still Busy

The engagement of Adele McCoy of Los Angeles with "Ned" Beck bears out the propinquity theory. The latter has been spending the past winter at Kendall, Montana, where he is interested in mines, and Miss McCoy was there also as the guest and ward of her brother, who is physician for the mining company. The engagement is, I hear, pleasing to both families, but as the fiancées are very young the wedding bells will not ring for some time to come.

After giving the North a good fair trial Mr. and Mrs. "Jack" Valentine have returned to California. They are at present on the Moore ranch at Mission San Jose, where a famous specialist is treating the bride's throat, which was too delicate to endure the raw climate of Oregon and Washington.

The Retort Courteous

Oakland society is hustling to entertain Mrs. Long, who is visiting her parents, the Isaac Requas. She is to be the guest of honor at numerous luncheons, teas and card parties, and a big dinner with a dance afterward, at the Piedmont Club-house, is on the rug. I am told that there was a little pique produced during Mrs. Long's last visit here. Some of her friends hastened to call on the

WATCHES

Perfect within and without.
The finest American and Swiss movements. The most tasteful and elegant cases: plain or elaborate.
We have the most expert watch
repairing.

Bohm-Bristol Co.
104-110 Geary Street

PIERCE-RODOLPH STORAGE CO. Inc.

STORAGE, MOVING, PACKING AND SHIPPING

WAREHOUSE: EDDY ST., near Fillmore

Specially built for the Storage of Household Furniture

OFFICE: POST AND POWELL STS.

Phone Private 571

General's wife, and they found her sitting on the veranda. She wore a simple white dimity gown. One of the callers remarked that they had expected to see her in something more elaborate.

"I am sorry that you are disappointed," replied Mrs. Long. "I can assure you that in Washington the women are all wearing frocks of this kind."

"We thought you would wear your best things out here where your friends are," protested the other, who had hoped to see a Doucet at the least.

"Well," rejoined Mrs. Long, "I am not a bit disappointed in you. I see you have all put on your best black silks."

A Charming Georgian

Miss Loretta Hanley, the pretty young Southern girl who is visiting Miss Anita Thomson in Oakland, has made a deep impression on the susceptible youth over the bay. She comes, I understand, of a wealthy and aristocratic family of Savannah, Georgia, and has the manners of the true Southern gentlewoman. Miss Hanley and Anita Thomson have been room mates for two years in a fashionable finishing school of New York.

Alameda has another addition to its literary cult in the person of Mrs. A. C. Girard, wife of Colonel Girard, the army surgeon whose career has been so distinguished. The Girards have taken a house in Alameda, and intend making their home there, I hear. Mrs. Girard is a brilliant writer. She publishes her stories over the pseudonym of "Rachel Epping."

On Thursday, in Alameda, was solemnized the marriage of Miss Augusta Friedrichs, corresponding secretary of the Women's Press Association, and Charles Arnold Borle Von Eichen. Miss Friedrichs is the daughter of the late General Robert A. Friedrichs, United States District Attorney to Alaska. The bridegroom belongs to a French-German family, and his coat-of-arms bears numerous quarterings.

Romance in Berkeley

This reads like a pretty bit of old-fashioned romance: There was to have been a wedding in the college town last Thursday, that of Emily Norton of Berkeley and Charles W. Coleman of Los Angeles. All the preparations were complete when word came that Mr. Coleman was ill and would be unable to attend his own marriage. Now everyone knows what a wedding put off means, and Miss Norton declared that she would take no chances. She declared she would journey to Los Angeles and have the ceremony performed there. This program was carried out, the bride's family accompanying her to the South. The wedding took place according to schedule, and as soon as the bridegroom is able to travel the happy pair will journey to St. Louis.

The Important Secretaryship

The secretaryship of the State University is now a job worth hustling for and everybody was surprised when it was refused by Anson Blake. Six thousand a year is a salary not to be lightly thrust aside. Mr. Blake has been represented as a man of independent fortune, a financier, a friend of Benjamin Ide Wheeler and what not. Mr. Blake was graduated from the university in the nineties, and was not a brilliant student. However the regents heaped encomiums on him preparatory to offering him the job. He has a little property on the income of which he lives most modestly. He is not only the friend of President Wheeler but also of one of the most prominent members of the regents' finance committee. Having the confidence and friendship of the President he would be an ideal man for the place, for the secretary is hereafter to serve in an administrative capacity. I think he may still be induced to accept the appointment.

Scholars Of The Summer School

Reginald Aldworth Daly, the great geologist, and Professor Frederick J. Turner, the eminent American historian, have already arrived in Berkeley and will lecture at the Summer School. Daly is geologist for Canada to the International Boundary Commission, and commenced a course in physical geography at the opening session on Monday morning. His writings are world-known. He is recognized as an authority on the subject of the earth's formation and crust. In his course, Mr. Daly will speak of origin and classification of the elements of relief on the earth's surface, the evolution of scenery, land sculpture, the phenomena of sea life, the sea bottom, oceanic basins, and the relations of land forms to the activities of human life. Professor Turner, who is the head of the department of history in the University of Wisconsin, is considered

Artistic Interiors Designed and Decorated

Ideas and Estimates furnished for all classes of Decorative Work

L. TOZER & SON

762-764 Mission St.

San Francisco, Cal.

STOP DRINKING

A CURE THAT CURES

Our Booklet "Drunkenness and Liquor Habit" Mailed to any Address Free
L. L. C. Company, Inc., 417 Hayward Building, San Francisco

one of the foremost scholars of the world. He is a writer of great merit and has produced several volumes of United States history. This is his first trip to this Coast and he is very enthusiastic over the coming excursions now being planned for the pleasure of those who will lecture at the Summer School. Professor F. T. Bioletti, who is to assist in the work of the agricultural experiment station, is now giving his attention to the study of existing conditions in the vineyards of Sonoma, Sacramento and San Joaquin counties. He will endeavor to ascertain the cause of the spotting of grape vine leaves and of the death of the bark of the shoots. He has also determined to find out the secret of the coloring of the Tokay grape.

Curbstone Repartee

A chronicler of curbstone happenings is authority for the story of a recent meeting between Colonel Irish and Gavin McNab. Naturally a conversation ensued. Said Colonel Irish: "Any Democrat who has supported the Democratic ticket in the last eight years is an ass."

McNab, proud of his reputation for epigrammatic repartee:

"Any man who is a Democrat and has held office during the last eight years under the Republican Administration is a prostitute."

Colonel Irish, himself better than a raw hand at repartee, and too polite to descend to ungracious personalities, came back with this:

"My dear man, history has seen fit to perpetuate the acts and words of prostitutes, but never the acts and words of an ass."

Has Written a Book

One of the most active and clever young society matrons of Los Angeles has written a book, which is now in press, and will soon be issued. It is a novel and is called "Pride and Pelf." Mrs. John Singleton is the author. She is the wife of the millionaire mine owner and lives in one of the most beautiful homes in Los Angeles, "Singleton Court." The Singletons are going abroad this fall, after visiting the St. Louis exposition.

In Financial Circles

During the week under review business showed slight improvement in volume, dealings amounting to $311,000, bonds, and 1,732 shares, divided as follows: 230 shares lighting, 612 shares water, 660 shares miscellaneous, and 230 shares sugar.

Spring Valley Water stock gained 1-2 point under a fair demand, a decision favorable to the company being expected. Should it come the stock will be considered very cheap as it would assure the company a fair income.

Sugar stocks are lifeless with the exception of Hawaiian Commercial, which gained 1-2 point, and for which there seems to be a steady demand. There is considerable dividend talk in the air.

In the bond market the United Railroads lead in the number of transactions. The reasonable figure the bond is selling at makes it particularly attractive. The "Preferred" stock sold at $48.3-4.

—The Financier.

The Crafts Awakening

BY DR. ORLOF N. ORLOW.

Whistler's theory of the birth of art is something of this sort:

In the childhood of the world, a youth in hollowing a receptacle with which to drink from a pool happened by chance to fashion a simple goblet of wondrous beauty. Delighting at the marvel, he strove to mould into graceful forms all other things that served him, and those of his fellows who were deft of hand and fleet of imagination vied with him in seeking perfection of shape and color. Thus all things became beautiful and art for art's sake existed in its pristine purity.

In time, however, the merchants came to barter for whatever the artists had made, and he that had finished the most became very rich. Here was the original temptation which led men to value the equivalent of their labor above the simple joy of doing well the task in hand, and thus the pure spring of art was defiled.

The thought which is embodied in this pretty myth has been at work of late years in many minds, and has inspired in all the great art centres of the world a rejuvenation of the crafts.

Nowhere in America was the need for an awakening of the applied arts so apparent as in San Francisco, when I established the United Crafts and Arts. Through this medium a new lesson may be taught to the work-a-day world. It is that all things have their personality and their influence—the everyday things we use and the everyday things we see—and that, this being true, we should choose our house and furniture with as much care as we choose our friends, looking for beauty, honesty, simplicity and harmony in all things.

In this glorious State of California nature has lavishly provided the raw material needed by the artist-artisan to give a visible expression to their art and work of brain and hands. Wherever there is love of art—in a community or commonwealth—there is found the sturdy human element so necessary to the up-building of an ideal state. The dream of the ideal united to the deed of endeavor has always been the weapon with which intelligence has vanquished ignorance. Along these lines a true civilization will be able to conquer the manifold ills of humanity by making men realize the importance and power of labor done in willing love, and in surroundings calculated to bring out the best there is in man.

The building of the United Crafts and Arts is meant to be just such a place, where artist-artisans may fashion, shape, and labor in and with the right material—a place, too, where all who wish to see the spirit of art finding its expression in useful things are always welcome.

In the designing of all manner of furniture, the planning of interiors, and the outlining and execution of decoration along simple lines, the United Crafts and Arts is expressing the spirit of the new renaissance in many places—in Mrs. Hearst's Old Norman castle up in the McCloud mountains, in the California building at the St. Louis Fair, in business houses and residences—showing the perfect harmony of the useful and the beautiful.

If the impulse that may be given by the United Crafts and Arts in the awakening of the applied arts in San Francisco, shall result in the formation and establishment of artists' guilds and crafts institutions wherever a nucleus of the movement lives on the Pacific Coast, then I shall feel that my coming to this city has not been in vain, for my highest ambition will have been realized.

July 1st, 2nd & 3rd
Open Evenings

Open all day
Sunday July 3rd

BANG!
Every kind of fireworks at factory prices for the Glorious 4th

California Fireworks Co.
219 Front St.

THE HIGHEST
Optical reputation. Most reasonable prices.
Inventors of Shark Skin Grips and Comfort Eye Glasses. Money saved you on Oculists' Prescriptions.
The Haskell & Jones Co., 243 Grant Ave.

Eurydice

How Orpheus must have thrilled thy captive soul,
When, facing Dis thy freedom to obtain,
He struck the classic chords, the master strain,
That made rocks reel and rivers backward roll.
Hell's tortured heroes heard his hymns extol
Thy matchless worth, till they forgot their pain,
And turned—one glimpse of thy fair face to gain—
As after him they saw thee earthward stroll.

Proserpina sat silent while he played,
Then whispered to her lord to set thee free;
Great Pluto nodded, and the gates of hell
Swung swift and wide, while Cerberus obeyed
The taming tune; Then Orpheus turned to see
If thou wert safe, and heard thee shriek
"Farewell!"

Proserpina

Daughter of Ceres, throned within the shade
Of Hell's black arches, ever gazing through
The gloom to where, wet with the morning dew,
The violet greets the sun in Enna's glade.
Year after year it flourishes to fade,
But through the mists of Time thy face we view,
As fair as when great Pluto paused to woo,
When at thy side his foaming steeds were stayed.

The fragrant fields of sea-girt Sicily,
That bloomed beneath thy feet, have barren grown,
And all the music of her streams is still.
The birds sit mute on every withered tree.
With thistles now that velvet sward is sown,
The winds that wantoned with thy hair are chill.

July, 1904.

Louis A. Robertson.

A Modern Myth

There lived, once upon a time, a Very Rich Man, who by chance was elevated to the Senate of his country. He did not know why he had been thus honored. Neither did the People. When the expiration of his term drew nigh he got down on the ground and tried to catch within the porches of his ear the sound of the clamoring of the People for his re-election. For the Very Rich Man had persuaded himself that the toga was very becoming. But he had not so persuaded the People. Hence they did not clamor. However, he maintained his undignified posture close to the ground, and he was in constant danger of catching cold. One day a Sympathetic Friend presented him with a Demophone, and explained that by putting the funnel-shaped cylinder to his ear he would be able to hear the music that he so long wished for. At the same time the Sympathetic Friend warned the Very Rich Man that he should shut off the sound when it grew too loud or else his tympana would be cracked. Then up spake the Very Rich Man: "In the service of my Country I should gladly sacrifice my Ears!"

—The Mythologist..

A Modern Farce

Scene: A Business Office.

Youth of Sixteen (applying for position): Yes, I'm a graduate of the Blank Grammar School and have had one year in the High.

Manager: Can you write a good hand?

Youth: Not very, but I can make a beautifully carved grandfather's clock, can sew patchwork, transpose music, draw Gibson Girls, and compose love-lyrics in three languages.

Manager: These are not essentials. Can you figure rapidly?

Youth: I'm afraid not, but I can do a hundred yard dash ahead of any fellow you can name, and I won the broad jump last Field Day.

Manager: I'm afraid we'll have to do without you. We want a lad who can write a fair hand and be an assistant to our bookkeeper, not an expert at the arts or an athlete. You might try next door, on your latter qualifications. They need a porter. Or, wait—perhaps a messenger boy's place would be within your limit.

—The Clerk.

"The Voice of the Scholar"

Some of the sayings of David Starr Jordan.

Culture not only raises the man above the mass, it turns the masses into men. That the multitude may imagine themselves men before they hold a man's grasp on life is the greatest danger of democracy. Here again the university plays its part, teaching the relative value of ideals. Under its criticism men learn that good results are better than good intentions, and they demand a far higher order of skill and courage.

Once in our schools we studied the decline and fall of the Roman empire. Now we realize that nothing that had life in it could decline and fall. The decay of empires is but the breaking of the clouds above the growth of man.

Oxford and Cambridge are still choked by the dust of their own traditions. Because this is so we may doubt whether England has today any universities at all but merely ingenious and venerable substitutes.

He must speak, he will speak, and it is for the safety of democracy that sooner or later his word is triumphant. The final outcome of all action rests with the educated man. Not all the politicians of all the parties in all the republics have secured so many final victories in thought and action as the universities.

Doubtless the average professor isn't worth two thousand a year. Doubtless you could fill every chair here on five hundred. But that is not the point. The fact is, the average college professor is worth very little indeed. It is not average men, but real men that make a university. Some real men you have, and you know who they are. There is no excuse for you to employ any others. Average men and average teachers you can buy tied in bunches at any price you choose to offer. For real men you must look far and wide, for they are in constant demand.

The scholar must be free to speak when needs arise. He cannot breathe in confined air, and his speech or his silence must be at his own will, subject to his own conscience and to the demands of truth.

And Lo Wept

The aged Indian chief wept. Bitter, scalding tears moistened his leathern cheeks.

"Oh, these degenerate, decadent times!" he cried. "Oh, the curse of effeminacy is on my race. Sad indeed is my fate, that I should live to see the day that my tribe should refuse to go on the warpath astride the fleet ponies."

Through blinding tears he gazed with ever-increasing bitterness on a band of young bucks who were trying to repair an automobile.

The Chauffeur.

Ladies returning from the country on shopping trips should take lunch at the Cafe Zinkand. There they can meet their friends and listen to the delightful music of Professor Marquardt and his full orchestra.

Fire of Life, known for years as the most remarkable remedy for the cure of

RHEUMATISM

A trial of this remedy will at once show its great merit as a rheumatic cure.

ROWELL & BROWN
32 Turk St., S. F.

The Ordeal by Fire

BY W. O. MCGEEHAN

The woman threw herself panting on a bed of ferns. "I can't go much farther," she gasped.

The man looked down at her with a troubled expression. "I'm afraid we had better stay here till morning," he said. "The country gets wilder every step we take and I think that we are going the wrong way. We should have kept the trail. Short cuts are always dangerous."

They were in one of the canons of the Big Basin. For miles about them thickly wooded ridges were piled helter-skelter and the ravines that yawned between them intertwined like paths in a labyrinth. Manzanita brush that tears the clothing and the flesh made their progress slow and painful.

"Stay here all night!" the woman echoed. She sat up and lifted her oval face so that the fading light that struggled through the redwoods illumined it. She peered up to a patch of blue sky with a half-pleased, half-tired expression. "And the moon will creep slowly over the ridges," she said dreamily. "Oh, there is nothing so beautiful as the moonlight on the mountains. It seems like another world."

"What will your husband say?" he asked shortly. "What will those cats at camp say? Oh, Kathleen, I've got you into an awful mix-up."

"What can they say?" she said bewildered. "We lost our way. Tom will only be terribly worried tonight. As for the others, I don't care what they say. Anyhow, it's not your fault. I wanted to take the short cut."

A woman who talks in that fashion is exceedingly innocent or recklessly the opposite. Maddison knew that this one was the former and suffered untold mental torture because of it. Her husband, Tom Melvin, was his friend, which made the affair all the more unpleasant. Over all, Kathleen and he had been boy and girl together and she was still all that he considered pure and sacred in the world. Now he knew that "Thou can'st not escape calumny" would be proven with her the victim.

"Kathleen, you don't understand how serious this is," he said. "You don't know what they will say about you. Even Tom—remember, in the old days you and I—"

"No, no," she cried quickly, "don't speak of that. I—no, don't say anything. I—. Let us make the best of things."

And he realized himself that it was dangerous ground, for she was a girl again in the twilight, and there was nobody but themselves all alone in a world of redwoods and madrones. The twilight melted into moonlight. The leaves rustled in a cool breeze and the creek babbled a droning song. The air grew colder.

He built a fire of brushwood and they watched the light play with the weird shadows about them till she grew weary. Her head drooped on her arm and she slept the untroubled sleep of a child. Maddison watched over her as a Knight of the Round Table would guard the Holy Grail. But he thought of the wagging tongues that would whisper to the contrary and was troubled.

Dawn broke over the mountains and they resumed their weary tramp. The sun beat down upon them pitilessly with a heat that seemed to wither every living thing. Desperately Maddison charged at the clinging manzanita that scratched and tore. She followed the trail he broke with uncomplaining patience. Sometimes they crawled over fallen logs, sometimes tumbled into a hidden ravine. Often they came upon a clear place that promised well but led to barriers impassable.

By noon the man experienced a new fear. They might not have to face the charitable opinions, after all. Many people at different times had wandered into the Big Basin and had staid there. The thought caused him to storm the manzanita with renewed frenzy. Beneath his breath he cursed as he looked up at the impassable ridges that hemmed them in.

The faint odor of burning forest, a smell like incense, came to his nostrils and sent a chill of horror through him. He threw himself bodily up the side of a little cliff and glanced backward. A rolling cloud of smoke hovered over the tops of the trees. And the wind blew toward them.

But to the right there was a ridge of bare rocks and little brush between the pair and this haven. Quickly he turned to descend to Kathleen. Too quickly, for his foot slipped on the smooth surface and he fell. She made her way to his side with an anxious cry.

"Are you hurt?" she gasped.

His face was white and drawn with agony. Frantically he tried to stagger to his feet, but fell with a sharp cry of pain.

"Leg's broken. We're trapped," he groaned.

She paled, but uttered no complaint. Even then she proved herself worthy of the deep, silent love that he had borne for her through all the years. She took his hand and pressed it silently. Maddison felt miserably weak before her patient bravery.

"We're going to be roasted," he moaned, half delirious. "I am not afraid, God knows. But oh, Kathleen!"

Faintly they heard in the distance the rumble of the forest fire like the sound of a troublous sea from afar. The smoke was wafted toward them, and made them fight for breath.

"There's a chance," he cried. "Go that way quickly. There's a bare ridge. Try, try, Kathleen. It's a chance for life."

Her grasp tightened on his hand. "I couldn't go a step," she said quietly. "Besides, I won't. There, there," she added soothingly, "I couldn't go."

"Oh, Kathleen!" he cried.

"We are going to die, then?" she said.

"A terrible death, Kathleen," he replied sorrowfully.

"And there is no hope?"

"None."

"There, Jack," she said, her face transfigured, "let us talk about the old days. It can not be wrong now. There will be no one injured."

He drew her face down to him with all the passionate longing that had been pent up for years. The roar of the fire became audible but it added no terrors. A sea of flame swept overwhelmingly toward them, lapping up the dried brush with an ever-increasing hunger. The smoke choked them.

"All that I asked was to die with you," he gasped. "And you regret nothing?"

Her face shone on him with an unearthly radiance. "God is good to me," she said. And neither felt that it was blasphemous.

Suddenly, distinct above the hell of sound around them, came a voice. Kathleen half started to her feet.

"It is Tom; it's your husband," whispered Maddison. "You're safe. There's a crowd on the rocks. Get toward them somehow and shout. They'll get you out."

She did not stir. "Hurry, for God's sake," he gasped. "I can't shout." His voice was a cracked whisper.

"I can't go back to life now," she said with quiet resolution. "Our fate has been decided."

Maddison choked as he tried to shout. His throat was like lime and no sound. "Kathleen," he gasped, "save yourself. For God's sake. For my sake."

A hundred yards away flames spurted out of a gigantic redwood as though the tree had been covered with petroleum. The rock where they sat was hot as an oven. Like the infernal region swelled the roar of the fire.

"Kathleen," called a voice from the place of safety.

She placed her arms around Maddison's neck and sealed his cracked lips with her mouth.

And the sea of flames swept onward in its course.

For July Fourth

"It's a good proposition," as Westerners say, to lay in a fairish supply of "wet goods." You need not think too long as to where you will get the wines and liquors you like best. You have only to drop in at where you will find the best that's going. Try a quart bottle of or suppose we put you up a sample case of half a dozen assorted varieties.

Rathjen's

OLD ROSE BUD

RATHJEN WINE CO.

46 ELLIS STREET

Telephone Main 5171

NEAR MARKET

The Little Girl Who Happened to be There

BY LIONEL JOSAPHARE.

"That picture of the blossoms on the cherry trees was taken in the early morning, Santa Cruz mountains. There's atmosphere in it—for a photograph," said Frank Pell, amusing his friend with some camera work of the year previous.

"Here's an apple-tree; unusual part of it is a branch of pears. Good graft, that is.

"That in your hand is a distant view of the hotel from a mountain I climbed before breakfast and was so proud of the daring and thrilling act that I cameraed the dining-room windows below. No; as you say, there is nothing in the picture to show it was taken before breakfast. But am I not here to explain it?"

The friend held out from his lapful of solios and bromides the portrait of a young woman, as he asked:

"Who is she?"

"Oh, that," answered Frank Pell, looking at it as if for a moment he did not recognize the faintly-smiling face, "that's just a little girl who happened to be there."

Then she was replaced among the others, where she continued to smile against the back of the photograph in front of her.

About a year before, Frank and a young woman, both brightly clad, were following their shadows along a country road that lay out from the mountain hotel where, a few days before, the two had been introduced by the Goddess of Chance.

The young woman had just enough beauty to make a man forget that any more is necessary. After the few days of railleury to which Frank had subjected her, they were speaking gravely now, and every now and then his head or hers would turn to look at the other in the pleasure of some especially beautiful thing one or the other would say. While her high-heeled shoes left their fashionable imprints along the dust of the road her glances made their spiritual and less modish communion with the skies.

"When I think that I might have gone to Skaggs's and never met you—," said Frank, and paused, seeming to falter.

"I cannot think how it would feel not to know you," she responded.

He muttered, as if thinking intensely: "I might have thought sometime, in a negligent way, that I should have liked another woman, and never have known what ignorance would be mine loving any one but you."

The girl at his side smiled as if happy with all the heavens.

"And now I love you with all the soul that I have carried unconcernedly since a child," he continued. "This is the only hand I have ever held in mine that has ever with its light touch drawn so tremendously on my heart."

She drew in her gaze from the long, green-vague hills at the end of the fields, and whispered:

"I tremble when I think how magnificent it is to be loved by one as noble as you. And then I fear you have misjudged me as worthy of yourself and will some day regret what you have told me."

"Sweetheart," he murmured in a sombre voice, and suddenly girdling her waist with his arm, "you are cruel to say that—cruel to yourself and me. But nothing you could say can make me love you the less. Nothing can ever take you from me. You are mine and my soul's." His words came passionately.

And she closed her eyes as he bent over and kissed her.

Soon they came to a little tributary path that stole into the shadowed picturesqueness of the trees, among which they heard the rattle of the cooler branches like the patter of a brook. They went that way.

Outside on the main road the sun was almost making the day boil with a profusion of rays. A hawk in the sky slowly soared from the vicinity of some white tattered clouds into a background of sheer blue. On earth a wrinkled farmer appeared with a wide wagon of hay. His horses slowly drew him townwards.

On a morning, some days after that day, Frank Pell stood on the veranda of the hotel. His trunk and valises were in the bus. With him stood the prettily attired object of his love-making. The two were conversing softly.

"Now, I'll return to San Francisco Tuesday afternoon," said she, "and you'll telephone about five o'clock. I can hardly wait to go. But then, as you say, everybody here knows that my week is not up for three days. And then I am happy as it is. I don't think I could endure any more happiness just now. So it is better that I have this one little grievance of not seeing you for three days."

She adjusted his overcoat, and he looked on indulgently.

"I'm so glad that I can see things now as you do," she whispered very softly and prettily. "Life is greater to me now. And moreover, I can now consider you mine. None of those other girls have a right to you as I have. You will think of me often until Tuesday. And there'll be time for you to send me two letters—one tonight and one tomorrow. And I'll write of course everything. Are we not everything to each other?"

"There, the bus is ready to start. How I wish I could kiss you goodbye; but kissing you hello Tuesday will be better." And then louder: "Goodbye!"

That was a year ago. Frank has not seen her since, though he answered a note she once sent him. Once in a while, picking up her photograph from some heap, he has thought of her, but not to the extent of wondering if she still has the same thoughtful smile that appeared only when he told her the most loving things. She may have loved him. He once asked himself if she did. He was so accustomed to that kind of woman-talk that he did not know. Anyway, he sometimes remembered her; that is, when he recounted the many feminines with whom he had become more than momentarily acquainted. And she was, when he thought of the romantic scenery in the Santa Cruz mountains, just a little girl who happened to be there.

"The season is pretty well advanced and yet I have seen no sign of him. He must be extinct."

"What are you talking about?"

"The sea-serpent."

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR, MOLES, ETC., Permanently Removed

MRS. EATON
Room 609
369 Sutter Street

Electric Needle Specialists
Phone 4253 Black

MISS EATON
233 Geary Street
Room 38

Old J. H. Cutter Whisky

We are the sole owners and proprietors of this celebrated brand, and here assert in the strongest language possible that

J. H. CUTTER WHISKY

Rye or Bourbon—in barrels or cases, is all whisky, and whisky, too, of the highest grade known.

The best afloat or ashore

It will hereafter be supplied the trade under the KENTUCKY INSPECTION in all its purity, flavor and mellowness, just as it leaves its "Old Kentucky Home."

C. P. MOORMAN & COMPANY,
Louisville, Kentucky.

SHERWOOD & SHERWOOD

Distributors, 212-214 MARKET ST., San Francisco
HARRY G. HOWELL, SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE

Great Beauty Specialist

ANNA AMELIA HOLSHOUSER

121 GEARY STREET

Parlors 319-320

(STARR-KING BUILDING)

Greatest Magnetic Operator upon the human body living. My treatment not only reduces obesity but develops every imperfectly formed part of the body. Fine magnetic massage to ladies and gentlemen at their homes or at her parlors by appointment. Phone Private Ex. 216.

The Stage

White Whittlesey's Return

"Soldiers of Fortune" is a play that is redolent of the personality of Richard Harding Davis, but that is a circumstance which should not be resolved prejudicially. Mr. Davis is one of the most theatrical of men; his personality is therefore suitable for dramatization. He writes fiction much better than he does history, and his plays are more convincing than his war correspondence. If, during his sojourn in the Orient, he should gather material for more plays of the type of "Soldiers of Fortune," his subsequent performances as a playwright would palliate his theatrical exploits as a news mangler. A play that is worth two sittings in less than a year is also worth while, and that breezy, romantic drama which has served to reintroduce White Whittlesey to his constituents of the Alcazar is such a one. It is not a play that strives to point a moral, and therefore it does not deal with cryptic social problems involving the more intimate sexual relations. It is simply a suave blend of sentiment, romance and picturesqueness. It is an exciting story and unfolds in fascinating circumstance. The subtle satire on the ways of our neighbors of the Latin countries to the south of us is the essence of this little drama, but there is a great deal in it to appeal to the spread-eagle sentiment that animates the average American. The craftsmanship of Davis is not particularly polished, but he has neatly developed an ingenious plot and contrived a realistic ambience for his characters. The humor is wholesome, the thrill exhilarating, and there isn't a depressing moment in the four acts. I witnessed the presentation of this play by a star and his supporting company at the Columbia some months ago, and I have no hesitation in reporting that comparisons in this instance would not be odious to the O'Farrell street temple of the drama. Of course it would be absurd to contend that the Columbia performance, given by people who knew the play backwards, was not the smoother one, but it had its shortcomings; so has the Alcazar production. White Whittlesey has not the repose of Bob Edeson, and temperamentally he is not so well suited to the role of Robert Clay, but he is better supplied with the heroic proportions, and he gives a more virile performance than did the Eastern star. The part of Hope Langham is in better hands at the Alcazar than it was in at the Columbia, for Mrs. Edeson is no ingenue. Virginia Brissac is not a sufficiently volatile Hope Langham, but she imparts a pleasing daintiness to the role. The droll and breezy MacWilliams, as played by Mr. Fred Butler, is as lovable an individual as ever bounded boisterously through a drama. Mr. Butler is one of the stagiest of villains, but give him a role with a dash of homespun comedy in it, and he immediately feels his oats. A fine bit of characterization is that of George Barnum as President Alvarez. Mr. Barnum is a new comer, and he is evidently a man of talent. Adele Belgarde as Madame Alvarez does not get out of the part all that there is in it, and some of the other people in the cast fall a little short of possible achievement, but the play does not suffer to any appreciable extent from the limitations of the company.

Theodore Bonnet.

The Durkin Starr Scandal

That was rather a sensational wind-up to the engagement of James Durkin and Frances Starr at the Alcazar. It was unfortunate not only for the actor's wife, who was cruelly deserted, but also for the management of the theatre. Miss Starr is a clever little woman, and she was expected to return here next season, but when publicity was given to the scandal it was decided that she was no longer wanted. As for Mr. Durkin, nobody appears to care what becomes of him.

The Orpheum Program

Pathos and comedy are charmingly blended in "His Japanese Wife," the playlet written by Grace Griswold for Valerie Bergere, and the result is one of the most artistic sketches I have ever seen at the Orpheum. In its refinement and daintiness it is like a Japanese interior. It suggests that delightful book "A Japanese Nightingale" in its tender side, but there is nothing of the bitterness of "Madame Butterfly" in its happy finale. Miss Bergere's piquant brunette beauty lends itself readily to the Japanese make-up. She is bewitching in her arch moments, and touches the audience's heart in the deeper scenes. She has surrounded herself with a very good supporting company, Henry Keane as the American husband, Maude Turner Gordon as his kind-hearted sister, Marie Burke as the neat English maid, and Charles Diamond as the butler. Helen Bertram changes her songs this week. She does not appear in the regulation decollete bodice that most prima donnas assume who have gone into vaudeville, but wears a high-necked blue gown with hat to match, and a long tan wrap. There is not great variety in this week's program. There are three turns done by masculine partners, which leads one to wonder whether there is a dearth just now in women vaudevillians. Howe and Scott, in a make-up suggestive of Barney Bernard, do a clever Hebrew act, in dialogue, song and dance. Foster and Foster, one a singer and the other a freak pianist, give a turn that interests. Gallagher and Barrett have what they term an "operatic comedy," "The Stockbrokers," which is something out of the common and rather above the average in conception and execution. Ada Burnett, in a hand-painted gown, and Dan Gracey in an Irish make-up, lead off with a stunt in which music and acrobatics are blended. John F. Clark has so many familiar bits in his monologue that the audience naturally greets him like an old friend. The agile Zarrows do their great bicycle act with its farce accompaniment, and the biograph shows the local fire department in exciting poses.

Mrs. Carter's engagement at the Grand was not the great financial success that was expected. Unfortunately, she came at a season of the year when the theatrical business is necessarily dull, owing to the absence of thousands of people from the city. Besides, there was a strong counter-attraction at the Columbia.

At the Central

There is one striking scene in "The Power of the Cross" at the Central that has not failed to win several curtain-calls every night. This is where the villain is foiled by a natural phenomenon which, however, seems to him to be of a spiritual nature. He is about to wreak his will on the lovely country-girl whom he has enticed to the city when his wicked hand is stayed. A large illuminated cross confronts him, and before he has time to recover from his awestruck wonder his victim escapes. The melodrama is a strong one, abounding in sensations such as the Central's audiences enjoy. Mayall has the role of the country hero, Shumer is the villain and Miss Lawton the ill-treated heroine. Winifred Gordon is a waif of the streets, and gives a vocal specialty in connection with the role. The Newsboys' Quartet also gives several selections.

Kolb's Bluff

The latest news from the Weberfieldians en route to Australia came from Pago-Pago. At that point the company was intact, and Comedian Kolb was tame. Kolb was responsible for most of the trouble. At Honolulu he tried to bluff manager James into a

MRS. GENTRY

Mrs. GENTRY

The Famous DIVINE HEALER, Clairvoyant, Palmist and Business Medium. Fortunes told Correctly, Dreams Interpreted, Flow of Blood Stopped Instantly.

She cures Rheumatism, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance and, in fact, ANY ailments and afflictions, and she will give you names and addresses of people she has cured right here in the Mission. Come and see for yourself. Consultation FREE. Call and see how we live and have developed ourselves. Consult this ENDOWED woman and you will be made well and happy.

Treatments and Readings by Mail. At home Every day and Evening.

2725 MISSION ST.

Between 31 and 24th, S. F., Cal.

Telephone Church 762

raise of salary by threatening to return home. James called the bluff and cabled to this country for another team of German comedians. At the same time he let Dill know that his partner, who acted as the business representative of the team, was getting the bigger slice of the salary. Thereupon Dill called Kolb to time, and substituted himself for business representative. Kolb had also demanded that the name of the team be printed in all the show-bills in type one-third larger than that of any other member of the company. This demand was refused. It is with such selfishness that the average theatrical manager has to contend.

Blanche Bates will not play an engagement in San Francisco this summer, as was expected. She goes to St. Louis, and will play an engagement there during the Exposition. She will take a house in St. Louis for the season, and will entertain some of her San Francisco friends.

Features of Next Week's Bills

Mrs. Leslie Carter will appear for the last times this afternoon and evening in "Du Barry" at the Grand. Beginning tomorrow (Sunday) matinee James Neill, supported by Edythe Chapman and the original Neill company, will begin a season in Clyde Fitch's "Barbara Frietchie." The immense resources of the Grand's stage will be utilized for this production, which will undoubtedly be the most effective and complete ever given the play in this city. Mr. Neill will repeat a former triumph as Captain Trumbull, and the announcement that Edythe Chapman is again to impersonate Barbara Frietchie should be sufficient to draw crowded houses. During Mr. Neill's engagement special summer prices, fifteen, twenty-five and fifty cents, will prevail, the very best seat in the orchestra being obtainable at fifty cents. This is the first time "Barbara Frietchie" has been offered at these prices. There will be a special matinee July fourth.

"One Summer's Day," the Alcazar's bill, was written by R. V. Esmond, the author of "When We Were Twenty-One," and John Drew made a great hit in the leading role, which White Whittlesey will play here. The piece is English in setting and has a pretty plot. Marie Rawson, Mr. Whittlesey's new leading lady, will have the role of Maysie, the heroine, and Richard Vivian, the new juvenile, will have the role of Tom Reid. Marie Howe, Annie Miffin, Luke Conness and John B. Maher will all be of the cast.

"Wedded and Parted," at the Central, is one of Theodore Kremer's stirring melodramas. He is said to have obtained the plot from actual circumstances revealed by New York's police records. One of the acts shows the court-yard at Auburn (N. Y.) state prison. Several new people have been engaged to strengthen the cast.

There will be a Fourth of July matinee to open the Tivoli's third week of "Robin Hood." Large houses nightly enjoy the tuneful opera. "The Toreador" will be given next, but "Robin Hood's" run may extend into weeks, judging by the way it has been received.

The Columbia reopens on Monday, July eleventh, for the season of 1904 and 1905, with Ethel Barrymore in "Cousin Kate." The star will be supported by the entire original New York cast. The advance sale of seats begins Thursday.

The Leigh brothers, European equilibrists and acrobats, direct from London, will make their first appearance in San Francisco at the Orpheum in an extraordinary act, during the course of which Percy Leigh does a hand stand on sixteen billiard cues, something never before attempted by any athlete. Other newcomers will be Gillihan and Murray, singers of songs of the sunny Southland and dancing comedians; Eugene Greene and Blanche Werner, the "Babes of the Jungle," who made such a hit here last year; Inez de Wolf, mezzo soprano, who will be heard for the first time in San Francisco. For her second week Valerie Bergere will present "Jimmie's Experiment," a playlet by Roy Fairchild.

Lotta and Belle Tobin will make their first appearance at the Chutes. They play on a variety of instruments and their selections range from the popular to classical. Carl Reiter, who ranks high among monologists, will also be new. The three sisters Kecey, eccentric comedy singers and dancers, will reappear after a long season in the Eastern vaudeville houses. Herschell Stern, baritone, will make his vaudeville debut as a singer of illustrated songs. There will be a magnificent display of fireworks on Monday night.

"The Mormons" will run at Fischer's up to and including Friday night, July eighth. Beginning Saturday, July ninth, the theatre will return to the Weber and Fields style of burlesque, with two Germans and a Hebrew comedian. The new Germans are Rice and Cady, who for several years have appeared in all the Weber and Fields plays, and have been headliners in vaudeville, and the new Hebrew comedian is Bobby North. They come direct from a successful tour of fifty-two weeks, ending in Seattle. Dorothy Morton and Nora Bayes, said to be a remarkably clever comedienne, will be the other new faces to appear in

ALCAZAR THEATRE

Phone "ALCAZAR"
Belasco and Mayer
Proprietors
E. D. Price, Gen. Mgr.

Commencing with Special Independence Day Matinee

Monday, July 4th, one week

Regular Matinees Thursday and Saturday

WHITE WHITTLESEY

And the Alcazar Stock Company in R. V. Esmond's Delightful Comedy

"ONE SUMMER'S DAY"

First Appearance of Miss Marie Rawson with Alcazar Co.

Evenings, 25c to 75c

Matinees Thursday and Saturday 25c to 50c

Monday, July 11—WHITE WHITTLESEY in "HEARTSEASE"

Orpheum

O'Farrell between
Stockton and Powell
Streets.

Week Commencing
Sunday Matinee,
July 3rd

Special Matinee, Monday, July 4th

A VAUDEVILLE REVELATION!

Leigh Brothers; Gillihan and Murray; Green and Werner; Inez de Wolf; Gallagher and Barrett; John F. Clark; The Zarro Trio; A Trip Through Italy, Shown in Orpheum Motion Pictures, and VALERIE BERGERE AND COMPANY, presenting "Jimmie's Experiment."

Regular Matinees Every Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday

Prices: 10c, 25c and 50c.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Phone "Grand Opera House"
GRAND OPERA HOUSE CO.
Lessee

Beginning Tomorrow (Sunday) Matinee

MR. JAMES NEILL

And the Original Neill Company

In the Superb Production of Clyde Fitch's Patriotic Drama

"BARBARA FRIETCHIE"

Extra Matinee, Monday, July 4th

Regular Matinee Saturday

Special Summer Prices, 15c, 25c and 50c

Best Reserved Seat in Orchestra, 50c—No Higher

Fischer's THEATRE

O'Farrell, bet. Stockton and
Powell Streets

Phone "Fischer's"

"THE MORMONS" until July 8th

Commencing Saturday, July 9th

Complete change in company

First time here of

Straight back to "old times"
Something new under the sun

"A LUCKY STONE"

A Musical Burlesque by Collin Davis and Frank Witmark

With this Extraordinary Cast

Dorothy Morton—Queen of Burlesque Nora Bayes—Queen of Comediennes
Rice and Cady—Emperors of German Comedy
Bobby North—Peer of Hebrew Comedians Edwin Clark—Ben Dillon—Roy Alton Garrity Sisters Chorus of 30 Pretty Girls A Tower of Specialties
New and Striking Scenery, Costumes, Etc.

Matinees Saturday and Sunday

Same Popular Prices

★TIVOLI★

Cor. Eddy and Mason Sts.

Third Triumphant
Week of

"ROBIN

Extra grand Matinee
Monday, July 4th

HOOD"

With the Great Cast of NEW ARTISTS and the FAMOUS BEAUTY CHORUS

Usual Tivoli prices, 25, 50 and 75c

Regular Matinee Saturday

CENTRAL

Belasco & Mayer, Props. Phone South 538
Market Street near Eighth
Opposite City Hall

Starting Matinee Monday, July 4th

All Week—Matinees Saturday and Sunday

Theodore Kremer's Great Comedy Drama

"WEDDED AND PARTED"

Prices: Evening, 10c to 50c

Matinees, 10c, 15c, 25c

Next—"ALONG THE MOHAWK"

RICHARD VIVIAN

A new juvenile man of high repute in the East is Richard Vivian, who appears at the Alcazar next week with White Whit-thesey in "One Summer's Day." For the present he will replace Harry Hilliard while the latter is enjoying his vacation. Mr. Vivian was born in San Francisco but has never played here. He has had wide experience in the Proctor and Keith companies in New York and Philadelphia and with the Frohman organizations the new piece, written especially for Fischer's by Collin Davis and Frank M. Witmark. The scenes of "A Lucky Stone," the new musical comedy, are laid in the Board of Trade building, Chicago, Market street and in front of the Park Museum, San Francisco. Everything will be new—specialties, costumes and scenery. Edwin Clark, Roy Alton, Ben Dillon and the Garrity sisters will still be of the company. There will be a special "Mormons" matinee July fourth.

When Smith Wrote "Robin Hood."

George Ade recently announced that hereafter he would lend his pen only to the writing of "straight" plays, because there is not sufficient profit in musical comedies. Harry B. Smith could give Mr. Ade some valuable information on the subject. He wrote the libretto of "Robin Hood" in two weeks and in the thirteen years it has been on the stage it has brought him an income of ten thousand a year. Moreover it gave him a reputation that has enabled him to draw plethoric royalties from forty other pieces devoid of merit. Smith was a plodding newspaper man in Chicago when he conceived the idea of "Robin Hood." He was at that time very friendly with De Koven and together they developed the opera. They obtained a vacation of two weeks, hired a room over a grocery store in a suburb and settled down to work. Smith turned out the libretto at express speed, and De Koven kept pace with the music. The day after it was finished Smith offered to sell his interest in the work for two hundred and fifty dollars. By the way, he is now writing a comic opera in collaboration with Sousa.

GILBERT and STOLL.

Movers of Household Furniture and Storage Warehouse, have removed their offices from the Murphy Bldg. to Room 43, Donohoe Bldg., Market and Taylor Sts. Storage Warehouse: Mercantile Library Bldg., Golden Gate and Van Ness ave

Lillian First Aid to a Frost

Lillian Coleman, who was cut here recently with the Rogers Brothers, has been summoned to London by Manager Savage, to brace up "The Prince of Pilsen" company which has been a frost in the British metropolis. Miss Coleman made the hit of "The Prince of Pilsen" when it was first put on in New York. Helen Bottam was in the company then but failed to score, and later on Trisic Friganza, who is now with the company in London, took her place. Miss Coleman recently wrote to her mother in this city to tell her of the London engagement. Colonel Savage borrowed her from Klaw & Erlanger, to whom she is under a three years' contract. This is Savage's first experience in London. He expected to create a big sensation with "The Prince of Pilsen," but the Britishers pronounced it rot. They considered the music fairly good, but objected to having it slaughtered by voiceless vocalists. Savage sought to reinforce the company with Edna May but Frohman would not release her.

Importance of The Stock Theatre

The stock company is coming into favor again. In several of the large cities stock companies are now flourishing, and people are gradually awakening to the fact that the star system is very much of a fraud on the public. Many of the so-called stars are managerial pets who would not be worth while were it not for the plays written to order with an actor-proof part, and with everything designed for the success of the favored one. The stock theatre with its stability of artistic impulse, and its accumulating traditions is the bulwark of all that is best in modern drama, and it is deserving of the highest encouragement. It also gives great encouragement to our playwrights. The royalties from revivals at stock theatres amount to a great deal every year. I have heard that Augustus Thomas could live comfortably on the annual return from intermittent revivals of his old successes. "In Mizzoura" is the most popular of his plays with all stock companies. Clyde Fitch is another writer who profits from stock activity.

BLANCHE WERNER

in "Babes of the Jungle" at the Orpheum next week.

MR. JAMES NEILL

will open in San Francisco, on July first, a school of dramatic instruction. In the conduct of this school he will have the active assistance of Mrs. Neill, known to the professional stage as Edyth Chapman. Under the latter's care will be the development of the voice, instructions in the art of dressing for the stage, the proper make-up for women, exercises for the inculcation of physical grace and a careful study of the principles of Delsarte. In addition to her wide experience as an actress of leading parts, Mrs. Neill has had the advantage of courses of instruction in the famous schools of Abbie Whinnery, of Philadelphia, and Laura J. Tisdale, of Chicago, and the Lyceum School of New York. While a pupil of the latter school she received two years' instruction under such able masters as David Belasco, Henry C. De Mille, Fred Williams, Franklin Sargeant, Nelson Wheatcroft and Charles Walcott. For more than twenty years Mr. Neill has been a successful professional actor and stage director, and in his charge will be the practical department of the school. Stage technique, rehearsals and the giving of public performances by the pupils of the school will be in Mr. Neill's department. The summer engagement of Mr. James Neill and the Neill Company, which begins at the Grand Opera House in San Francisco on July third, will last until the fall, and will give opportunity for the trying out in small parts and amid professional surroundings of the most advanced of Mr. Neill's pupils. Mr. Neill reserves the right to use in his supporting cast, or in some company in which he may be interested, at a fair salary, the services of his most proficient graduates. No charge will be made for the securing of engagements for graduates of the School. The terms for the summer course are: Three months' course, four days weekly, one hundred and fifty dollars; two months' course, four days weekly, one hundred dollars; one month's course, four days weekly, seventy-five dollars; ten private lessons, under Mr. or Mrs. Neill, forty minutes each, sixty dollars. Fencing and dancing extra. All fees payable in advance. During his long career as manager and stage manager, Mr. Neill has had with him, in his various companies, many of the most brilliant players of the day. Making no mention of the distinguished artists that have appeared in the past five years on the coast, in the several companies in which Mr. Neill has been concerned, such as The James Neill Co., The Neill-Frawley Co., The Neill-Morosco Co., The Neill Stock Co., The Mary Elizabeth Forbes Co., etc., Mr. Neill points with pride and pleasure to the names of some of his old associates, and in the full confidence that he will receive their hearty endorsement: Blanche Bates, Julia Arthur, Madge Carr Cook, Harry Corson Clark, Arnold Daly, Mary Hampton, Fred Butler, Howard Kyle, Sandol Milliken, William Ingersoll, James E. Wilson, Henrietta Crozman, Eleanor Robson, Daniel Frawley, Edwin Arden, Mary Elizabeth Forbes, Robert Drouet, Herschel Mayall, Walter Clarke Bellows, Jane Kennark, John B. Maher, Charles Wyngate and Eugene Ormond. Address James Neill, Grand Opera House, San Francisco.

VALUABLE JEWELRY LOST

During the summer months much jewelry is lost traveling and at summer resorts. This can be avoided by leaving yours with the Baldwin Jewelry Co., 906 Market St., who make advances on diamonds and jewelry.

IN OAKLAND.

"How do you enjoy yourself over here?"

"By taking trips over to San Francisco."

-The Commuter.

BIG TREES

AND

YOSEMITE

The greatest trees in all the world are found in the Mariposa grove, reached only by the Raymond-Wawona route to the Yosemite Valley. "The Grizzly Giant," "Wawona," "The Fallen Monarch," and other famous Big Trees.

The stage road is shortest and smoothest, the Big Trees mightiest, and the entire route the most satisfactory. Ask any agent, or at the San Francisco office

613 MARKET ST.
SOUTHERN PACIFIC

The Education that Pays

BY E. P. HEALD.

The cause of practical education needs no special plea. This is the education that pays, both in a financial and moral sense. The danger of the future is because so many of our youth are growing up without knowing how to do anything of practical value. Teach them how to earn an honorable living and you have largely solved the great problem of prevention of crime and dissipation, thus avoiding the crowding of insane asylums, poorhouses and jails. No young person, either male or female, should be turned loose on the world without knowing how to earn an honest living. Every person should be required to learn some useful trade or calling by which he can support himself in an honorable manner.

It is therefore trade schools, engineering schools, business training schools and technical schools of all kinds that we need. These should be liberally provided for, both by the state and by private enterprise. We need not worry about the schools of higher education; these will come in abundance for the wants of the few that can afford the time to educate themselves for the so-called professions. The rich can take care of themselves; it is the sons and daughters of our citizens of average means, our farmers, artisans and laborers, that must be trained to become our merchants, our mechanics and our laborers in all fields of enterprise and usefulness.

In passing, a word in regard to schools of business training will not be out of place. These institutions have done their part among the great technical schools of the country in promoting the interests of mankind. They have bettered the conditions of millions of the human family; they have made them self-supporting, and therefore self-respecting. They have perhaps done more for womankind than any other class of technical schools. They have placed many thousands of young ladies in responsible and lucrative positions in business which have rendered them independent, and therefore happy. Nothing in recent years has done more for the advancement of women than the better class of business training schools. In fact it is beginning to be conceded that every young lady, rich or poor, should have a practical business training, whether required to enter upon a commercial life or not. The mere fact that a woman is independent and can earn her own living, if need be, adds greatly to her dignity, her happiness and her protection. It is well known that in a majority of cases where women were left fortunes these were lost and frequently great suffering ensued. This is largely because these women have never had the advantages of a commercial training and were therefore lacking in good business judgment. Many parents are now educating their daughters for business, even when they have no intention of having them follow it as a calling.

All schools must be judged by results, by the good they do. Considered from this point of view, what schools have made a better showing than business colleges? They have inculcated lessons of honesty, integrity and pride of character, together with sound commercial principles. Whenever managed by conscientious, far-seeing men, they have provided their graduates with qualifications which induce success, viz., ambition, trustworthiness and gentlemanly qualities. It has been frequently noted that there are fewer defalcations and other breaches of trust among graduates of these schools, than among those who have commenced business life without these advantages. This is because the pupils of these institutions are carefully trained in principles of integrity and are taught not only that "honesty is the best policy" but also that dishonesty is a stupidity as well as a crime. These lessons, together with a love of work and the ambition to do the very best possible for one's employer, must be important features in the course of study of every successful school of business training.

FOURTH OF JULY AT DEL MONTE.

If you want quiet sport, a game of golf on the links, a dip in the surf, or salmon fishing on Monterey Bay, why not go to Hotel Del Monte for your Fourth of July holiday?

Round trip rate, including two days' board at the hotel, $10. Tickets good leaving San Francisco Saturday or Sunday, returning Monday or Tuesday.

St. Mary's College

OAKLAND, CAL.

Literary, Scientific, Commercial Courses.

Studies resumed August 1, 1904.

Send for Catalogue.

BROTHER VELLESLAN, President.

THE JULY SUNSET

There are some noteworthy news features in the July Sunset, the magazine devoted to our State, and which has improved so perceptibly since Charles S. Aiken became its editor. Among the interesting features are the frontispiece of President Roosevelt and his sons—the latest portrait of the President; the article on "Fighting for News in Manchuria," which contains among other illustrations a group of war correspondents at Newchwang, showing Edwin H. Clough of the Examiner, J. F. J. Archibald of Collier's, George Bronson-Howard of the London Chronicle (now in this city), and others. Here is shown also the last portrait of Louis Etzel of the London Telegraph, who was killed by the Chinese June seventh on the Yalu river. The case of Etzel is now before the Department of State, and promises to become an international episode. "Over Trail and Track" by Ninetta Eames tells of the changes in travel caused by the advent of railroads. "Up Mount Tallac" by Archibald Treat of the California Camera Club is a beautifully illustrated article. "California's Fruit Industry" and the illustrated article on the industries of the Santa Clara valley are also worthy of note.

Much more is said of knowledge than it's worth.
—Butler.

Hopkinson Smith says his test of a good story is a simple one. If he can tell the whole plot in five minutes at dinner and hold the attention he knows he has a good piece of work. Otherwise it does not come up to his standard. Though he has gained eminence as a novelist, a water-color painter and a civil engineer, he is never all three at the same time, nor even any two. When he is building a lighthouse, he does not, as is popularly believed, lighten his labor by taking his pen or brush in hand, and when he is painting or writing, he is not constructing lighthouses. Though all of his stories are more or less autobiographical, there are none of them transcripts from life, and his characters do not recognize themselves in print.

Test by Taste

and you'll take

Hunter Whiskey

HILBERT MERCANTILE CO.
213-215 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.
Telephone Exchange 313

THE HOLIDAY OUTING

The California Northwestern Railway is making very low special rates this year for the Fourth of July holidays. Tickets go on sale Friday, July first, and will be sold on the second, third and fourth with return limit Tuesday, July fifth. During the past two years the company has extended its road from Ukiah to Willits and from Willits to Sherwood, opening a practically unknown country. The ride over the mountains affords one of the most beautiful trips on the continent. Between Ukiah and Ridge-wood the road ascends from six hundred and ten feet above the sea to nineteen hundred and thirty feet. At Willits the elevation is thirteen hundred and sixty-four feet, and in the thirteen miles between Willits and Sherwood the road ascends to two thousand three hundred and ninety-five feet above the sea at En Cima, the Summit, then descends into Sherwood Valley, where the elevation is two thousand two hundred and ninety feet. The view from En Cima, the Summit, covers miles and miles of red-wood forests yet untouched by the axe, and in the distance is seen the Pacific ocean. The special rates given will afford an opportunity to take in the grandeur and magnificence of this trip. In order to give those who visit the Guerneville and Sonoma branches a good long holiday on July fourth, the California Northwestern Railway will run on that day a special train leaving Camp Vacation at 7:00 o'clock P. M., Russian River Heights 7:10 P. M., Guerneville Park 7:15 P. M., and Guerneville at 7:20 P. M., stopping at Santa Rosa, Petaluma and all intermediates. The special train from the Sonoma branch will leave Glen Ellen at 8:15 P. M., stopping at Sonoma, Vineburg and other branch points. Both trains arrive in San Francisco at 10:45 P. M.

If the Russians continue to advance upon their own rear they will reach St. Petersburg in much shorter time than they expected to arrive in Tokio.

Miss Lois A. Gray (formerly Mrs. Dr. A. W. Traverse), dermatologist, has returned to town after ten months' vacation, and has opened her office in the Donahoe building, 1170 Market street, rooms 28 and 29. She will be glad to meet her patients every afternoon between one and four. Miss Gray has taken entire charge of Dr. Traverse's practice ever since he left for Alaska, where he will probably remain. She is considered the best electric needle operator in practice west of Chicago, and not only removes superfluous hair permanently, without pain or soreness of skin, but successfully treats all kinds of facial blemishes without leaving scars. She removes wrinkles by means of the electric roller, and gives facial massage. She can be reached by phone: Folsom 3783.

Miss Anna Moore of this city has been appointed principal of the vocal department at the Girls' State College of Alabama. Miss Moore is one of H. B. Pasmore's favorite pupils, and is soprano soloist at St. Paul's Episcopal church. She has been teaching successfully here and in the interior. Her voice is a low mezzo-soprano of exceedingly sympathetic quality.

MOTOCYCLE ITEMS.

There will be no regular run by the Pacific Motoocyclists on the third and fourth, but all of the club riders will go to the country. Mr. Christie and J. M. Litchfield left on Tuesday for a week's tour through Lake county. Mr. and Mrs. Alborelle and several others will ride to Livermore for the Fourth. Lincoln Beach and Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hopkins will tour through Napa county from Saturday until Tuesday. Several motorists will run to San Jose, Santa Cruz and Monterey.

The Rev. Bradford Leavitt of this city is the first clergyman to see the advantages of a motorcycle and this week he purchased an Indian of C. C. Hopkins and took it to his summer home at Campbell, Santa Clara county. Next year he will tour Europe with Mrs. Bradford, riding the Indian with the tandem attachment. When men of Mr. Leavitt's intelligence, experience and prominence buy motorcycles, it must be because the little machines are a success. The motorcycle surely is here.

CAMPING

We pack provisions & outfits on short notice. Reasonable prices.

SMITH'S CASH STORE
25 MARKET ST., S. F.
PHONE, EXCHANGE 550

DIVIDEND NOTICES

CALIFORNIA SAFE DEPOSIT AND TRUST COMPANY. Corner California and Montgomery Sts. For the six months ending June 30, 1904, dividends have been declared on deposits in the Savings Department of this Company as follows: On term deposits at the rate of 3 6-10 per cent per annum, and on ordinary deposits at the rate of 3 per cent per annum, free of taxes, and payable on and after Friday, July 1, 1904. J. DALZELL BROWN, Manager

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION. 532 California St., corner Webb. For the half year ending with the 30th of June, 1904, a dividend has been declared at the rate per annum of three and one-half (3 1-2) per cent on term deposits, and three (3) per cent on ordinary deposits, free of taxes, payable on and after Friday, July 1, 1904. LOVELL WHITE, Cashier.

THE GERMAN SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY. 526 California St. For the half year ending June 30, 1904, a dividend has been declared at the rate of three and one-quarter (3 1-4) per cent per annum on all deposits, free of taxes, payable on and after Friday, July 1, 1904. GEORGE TOURNEY, Secretary.

THE CONTINENTAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION. Corner of California and Battery streets, San Francisco, has declared a dividend of eight per cent per annum on Class "A" and "F" stock, six per cent on term deposits and five per cent on ordinary deposits, for the six months ending June 30, 1904.

WASHINGTON DODGE, President

WILLIAM CORBIN, Secretary and Gen'l Mgr.

OFFICE OF THE HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY. Corner Market, McAllister and Jones Sts., San Francisco, June 27, 1904. At a regular meeting of the board of directors of this society, held this day, a dividend has been declared at the rate of three and one-fourth (3 1-4) per cent per annum on all deposits for the six months ending June 30, 1904, free from all taxes, and payable on and after July 1, 1904. ROBERT J. TOBIN, Secretary.

MUTUAL SAVINGS BANK OF SAN FRANCISCO. 710 Market St.; for the half-year ending June 30, 1904, a dividend has been declared at the rate of three and one quarter (3 1-4) per cent per annum on all deposits, free of taxes; payable on and after Friday, July 1, 1904. GEORGE A. STORY, Cashier.

SECURITY SAVINGS BANK. 222 Montgomery St., Mills Building; for the half-year ending June 30, 1904, dividends upon all deposits at the rate of three and one-quarter (3 1-4) per cent per annum, free of taxes, will be payable on and after July 1, 1904. FRED W. RAY, Secretary.

SWISS-AMERICAN BANK. 524 Montgomery St., between Commercial and Clay; for the six months ending June 30, 1904, dividends have been declared on deposits in the savings department of this company as follows: On term deposits at the rate of 3 6-10 per cent per annum, and on ordinary deposits at the rate of 3 1-4 per cent per annum, free of taxes, and payable on and after Friday, July 1, 1904. ARTHUR BAUR, Cashier.
A. A. MICHELETTI, Assistant Cashier.

FRENCH SAVINGS BANK. 315 Montgomery St.; for the half-year ending June 30, 1904, a dividend has been declared at the rate of three and one-quarter (3 1-4) per cent per annum on all deposits, free of taxes, payable on and after Friday, July 1, 1904. LEON BOCCQUERAZ, Secretary.

SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY. 101 Montgomery St.; corner Sutter, has declared a dividend for the term ending June 30, 1904, at the rate of three and one-quarter (3 1-4) per cent per annum on all deposits, free of taxes, and payable on and after July 1, 1904. CYRUS W. CARMANY, Cashier.

PHOENIX SAVINGS, B. and L. ASSOCIATION. For the six months ending June 30, 1904, dividends have been declared on deposits in the savings department, as follows: On term certificates, at the rate of 5 per cent per annum; on ordinary savings accounts at the rate of 4 1-2 per cent per annum, free of taxes and payable on and after July 20, 1904. The Phoenix has a guaranteed capital of $200,000 and a total paid in capital of $1,200,000. Its board of directors are: A. A. Watkins, president; Charles R. Bishop, vice-president; S. Prentiss Smith, treasurer; George C. Boardman, director; Gavin McNab, director; Charles E. Ladd, director; CLARENCE GRANGE, secretary and managing director.

"SOLUTION OF TIRE TROUBLES" FISK DETACHABLE

ONLY A WRENCH NEEDED
CAN'T COME OFF THE RIM
CAN'T PINCH THE TUBE

MORE MILEAGE
MORE COMFORT
MORE SATISFACTION

CALL OR WRITE PACIFIC COAST BRANCH
PHIL. B. BEKEART CO. 114 SECOND ST.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Hoitt's School for Boys at Menlo Park.

THE MELBOURNE INSTITUTE

Is a school for the cure of stuttering and stammering. It has been established in San Francisco for three years, under the direct teaching of Professor F. G. Norcross, who has achieved celebrity by reason of his success in matters mental. The main school is located at the corner of Van Ness avenue and Market street, with a juvenile branch in Franklin street. There is no class work in the Melbourne. Each student receives individual attention. The length of time varies, but averages four weeks of four hours per day, from one to five p. m. The peculiar merit claimed for the Melbourne system is in its ability to first soothe the mental nervousness (primarily the cause), then by development of the organs of speech and a course in mental training to abolish the impediment. That this can be done where there is not chronic weakness, there is not the least doubt. As every reputable physician knows, it is useless to endeavor to upbuild the mental where there is physical drain. Thus it is the first duty of every stammerer to look to his general health before an attempt be made to correct the speech fault. With a basis of fair health, the Melbourne promises success to every earnest effort to conquer stammering, and its great point of merit is the solidity of its teaching, leading to permanency and ability to master environment.

The Poet (after reading his latest effusion): This is the best poem I ever wrote.

The Editor: Oh, well, don't let that discourage you.

The Lyceum Preparatory School in the Phelan building is well known for the thorough, good and efficient work which it does in all its departments. The students who have been prepared at the Lyceum, almost without a single exception, have made a fine record at the universities and other colleges. They are taught how to study, how to assimilate knowledge, and how to develop the power of concentration. A great deal of individual attention is given to the students in order that the aim of the school, "thoroughness," may be attained.

KENT LAW SCHOOL.

With the present session the Kent Law School enters upon its thirteenth year. It is the first successful attempt to establish an entirely private law school with day and night instruction, adapted to the wants of those who are unable to attend what may be called "regular" law courses. It is the first school so far as we know in which all books used are furnished free of charge. These alone, at regular rates, cost about seventy-five dollars. Kent Law School furnishes books and instruction at a trifle more than the cost of books. It is also the first school where all preparatory studies are pursued if required—history, rhetoric, logic, Latin and Greek. We now have over one hundred graduates scattered all over the State—district attorneys, deputies, justices, etc. The method is personal, private instruction instead of class lectures. The terms vary according to the number of lessons given, from five dollars a month upward. For further particulars, address Kent Law School, 536 Parrott Building, Market street, San Francisco; phone Folsom 2031.

The school is under the personal management of John Goss, a graduate of the University of California (degree of A. M.) who has been engaged in practice twenty-five years and is well known as an author and scholar. We follow the course prescribed by the Supreme Court, special text books and the leading cases used at Eastern universities.

Rudolph BARTH, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 134 Sutter St. (Upstairs.) Fine Watch and Jewelry Repairing a Specialty. Careful attention paid to Repairing of French and other Fine Clocks. Phone Red 1221.

THE OWL'S SUCCESS.

To all fair-minded men it is gratifying and satisfying to see a business succeed in face of the strongest kind of unfair and underhanded antagonism. We all know the severe fight The Owl Drug Company has made for its existence during the past two years and it is indeed a pleasure to see this firm come out of the affair stronger and bigger than ever before. The Owl is the first business house in San Francisco to take a firm stand against the impositions of organized labor. Refusing to force their clerks to join the Drug Clerks' Union, nearly two years ago, they have been boycotted severely, yet their business has continued to grow until they now have six branch stores, all doing an excellent business. Next Saturday, July second, a new branch store will be opened to the public at 80-82 Geary street, east of Grant avenue. The manager of The Owl, Mr. R. E. Miller, recently returned from the East, where he made extensive purchases of drug store necessities and luxuries for the new Geary street branch. The Owl maintains a buyer in Europe to gather personally from the factories the latest novelties in leather goods, such as purses, bags, chateaines, etc.; also fine perfumes, toilet waters, face creams, soaps and powders. These goods are shipped direct to The Owl and are placed on sale in San Francisco as soon as in New York. Since the beginning, The Owl has always carried out its policy of cut prices—that means that no matter at what price drug-store goods sell for, The Owl cuts the price from ten to sixty per cent. The Owl can afford to do this and make a small profit, for its aggregate business is now over one million dollars a year. The Owl management gives the labor leaders credit for at least twenty per cent of the large business during the past two years.

WORLD'S SHORTHAND RECORD.

It is not generally known that Robt. F. Gallagher, the proprietor and principal of the Gallagher-Marsh Business College of San Francisco, established the world's record for blackboard shorthand writing, by writing on the blackboard with a piece of chalk two hundred and eighty-six words in a single minute, as against two hundred and thirty in the East, but such is the fact. The young people of this city interested in shorthand are fortunate in having an opportunity to learn practical shorthand from such an expert.

The Key to Comfort

these days is the electrical one. Think of what benefits accrue to you from the electrical current!—light, the telegraph, the telephone, fans, call bells, annunciators, burglar alarms—lots of useful devices. See us about any or all of these if you want a cheap and real "Key to Comfort."

NATIONAL ELECTRIC CO.

455 Sutter St. San Francisco
PHONE BUSH 639

Music

[Communications addressed to this department should be received not later than Tuesday noon.]

Reminiscences of Chopin and Liszt

To an old musician, now resident in this city, I am indebted for these interesting reminiscences: Chopin seldom played; he would only touch the piano when he was sure of perfection. It was the reverse with Liszt; he always played whether well or badly. One evening in the month of May, between eleven and twelve o'clock, the company was gathered in the parlor of the famous Black Valley country-place. It was a moonlight night, the nightingales were singing, and the air was fragrant with roses. Liszt was playing a nocturne of Chopin, and, as usual, was embellishing it in his peculiar style, and adding to it trills, tremolos and organ-points. Several times Chopin betrayed signs of impatience. At length, not being able to remain quiet any longer, he walked to the piano, and said to Liszt, in his phlegmatic English way:

"I beg you, my dear Liszt, if you do me the honor to play my composition, play what is written, or favor me with something else. Chopin is the only one who has the right to change Chopin."

"Well, then, play yourself," said Liszt, leaving the piano, somewhat piqued.

"Willingly," answered Chopin.

At that moment the lamp was extinguished by an insect which had been attracted by its radiance. Some one wished to relight it.

"No," cried Chopin, "on the contrary, put out all the candles. The moonlight suffices me."

Then he played. He played a whole hour. The audience in mute ecstasy were breathless; and when the wizard was silent all eyes were wet with tears, and Liszt's wetter than any. He pressed Chopin to his bosom, exclaiming:

"Oh, friend, you were right! The works of such a genius as yourself are sacred; it is profanation to touch them. You are a real poet. I am a mountebank."

"How absurd!" quickly retorted Chopin. "We have each of us our style, and that is all about it. You know very well that no one in the world can interpret Weber and Beethoven as you do. Come, play me Beethoven's adagio in C sharp minor; but do it seriously, as you can if you will."

Liszt rendered the adagio, and threw into it the work of his whole soul and will. Then the emotion of the audience was of altogether a different nature. The melody of the second artist did not find its way slowly into the heart of the listener; it was thrust into it like a dagger. It was not an elegy; it was a drama. Yet Chopin thought that evening that he had eclipsed Liszt, and boasted of his achievement, saying: "How vexed he was!" Liszt heard of this, and took his revenge only as an intelligent artist like himself could have done. Four or five days afterward the company was assembled at the same hour, toward midnight. Liszt requested that the lamps should be extinguished and the curtains drawn, in order that they might be in total darkness. It was an artist's caprice, and was acceded to. As Chopin was stepping to the piano, Liszt whispered rapidly a few words in his ear, and took his seat. Chopin, who was far from understanding his friend's intentions, quietly threw himself into the nearest arm-chair. Then Liszt played the same pieces Chopin had executed on that memorable evening of which I have already spoken. He imitated Chopin's style with such fidelity that it would have been impossible for any one not to have been mistaken. Everybody was deceived; all experienced the same raptures, the same emotions. When the ecstasy was at its height, Liszt struck a match and lighted a candle which stood on the piano. A cry of astonishment broke forth.

"What! Is it you?"

"As you see."

"We all thought it was Chopin."

"What do you say to this?" asked Liszt of his rival.

"I say as they all do; I thought it was Chopin."

"You see," said Liszt, rising, "that Liszt can be Chopin when he pleases; but could Chopin be Liszt?"

It was a challenge; but Chopin would not, or dared not, accept it. Liszt was revenged.

Hother Wismer has gone to the Santa Cruz mountains to be away about a month.

Accordeon and Sunburst Pleating, STEWART'S, 110 Taylor St. Phone Folsom 2121

Dr. H. J. STEWART

TEACHER OF VOCAL MUSIC

Pianoforte, Organ, Harmony and Composition
Special course for singers desiring church appointments

Studio, 1105 Bush St.

H. B. PASMORE

TEACHER OF SINGING

Specialty—Shakespeare's system of tone production.

1424 Washington Street

573 Fifteenth street, OAKLAND, on Thursdays after August 1st.

MR. ANDREW BOGART

TEACHER OF SINGING

METHOD of the ELDER LAMPERTI

Home Studio: S. E. corner Buchanan and Page Sts.

PHONE PARK 202

SIGNOR ABRAMOFF

The only teacher of the famous California Prima Donna, Miss Edith Decker (Dramatic Soprano), Miss Paraskova Sandelin (Contralto), Mr. Emil Arnold (Tenor) and of several other singers prominent in the profession.

VOICE CULTURE (OLD ITALIAN METHOD)

Signor Abramoff Equalizes, Beautifies and Strengthens the Tone. Corrects Nasal and Throaty Production Produces apartments, and Covered tones with Open Mouth.

703 SUTTER ST.

HOURS: 10 to 1 and 3 to 7 Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday

MR. THEODOR

SALMON

Concert Pianist and Teacher. Pupil of Kullak, Reinecke, Jadassohn and Richter. Studio, 546 Sutter St. Phone James 1281. Residence, "The Nordhoff."

Von Meyerinck School of Music

Telephone Park 223

341 FULTON STREET

Offers all the advantages of Eastern and European conservatories for a thorough musical education.

STAFF OF TEACHERS.

Voice Culture - - MRS. ANNA VON MEYERINCK
Art Expression, Opera and Drama, MRS. MARY FAIRWEATHER
Piano Harmony and Composition MR. FRED ZECH, JR.
Violin and Viola MISS MARIE H. MILLS
MR. W. F. ZECH

Competent staff of assistant teachers. Special teachers for Languages German, French and Italian), Physical Culture, Fencing, Elocution, and Stage Dancing. Prospectus upon application.

Watson's Latest

Mr. William Watson is producing poetry at a pretty steady rate once more. His latest sonnet is entitled "Reign of the Muse":

"When life was dewy and in morning mood,
Then was indeed the Muse's golden reign;
When gods and heroes slept from sculptor's brain,
And perfect with a great perfection stood;
When poets saw the world, that it was good,
Worthy a noble and a limpid strain;
And secret Night, and the unravished main,
Kept holy their mysterious maidenhood.

O happy singers of that vernal day!
Fled in the simple, bounded world ye saw;
Those gods, that never dashed the soul with awe,
Sunny imaginations, fled are they;
And on Olympus, blind and ruthless Law
Holds unadored his adamantine sway."

So far deafness has been considered incurable and the most to be hoped for was temporary relief. With the advance of science, however, in so many directions it is not surprising that one of the greatest living scientists has now perfected a system of treatment whereby the hearing can be perfectly restored in a few weeks. The instrument to do this is a very delicately adjusted one called the Massacon and it works on the principle of educating the aural apparatus to receive human sound vibrations by natural exercise in the same way that any one lying up for several years would have to learn to walk again. We have personally inspected the medical reports of cases treated and were wonderfully surprised at the marvelous results. There is also another invention for the deaf by the same inventor which supersedes the old-fashioned ear trumpet, and being on the principle of a small telephone for attachment to the coat by means of which the totally deaf are enabled to hear at a distance, such as at the dinner table, church or theatre. Both instruments can be seen in operation at Hutchison Acoustic Company, 121 Geary street, San Francisco, and are well worthy of inspection.

At the Resorts

The opening dance at Hotel Rowardennan, last Saturday night, was very largely attended. Many went down from town, and the trip well repaid them, for they had a most enjoyable time. The ball-room at Rowardennan is large and the floor of hard-wood, so a dance there is always delightful. There were effective decorations and excellent music to contribute to the affair's success. Among those present were Mrs. Wakefield Baker, Miss Helen Thomas, the H. F. Andersons of Ben Lomond, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Porter, Mrs. Andrew Moseley, Mrs. de Wolfe, Mr. and Mrs. Bishop, Mrs. N. P. Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Foster Cole, Sidney Liebes and Mrs. Liebes, Miss Merrill, Dr. H. P. Carlton, Mr. and Mrs. Deming, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roberts.

Recent arrivals at the Tallac, Lake Tahoe, were: Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Stephens, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hibbard, A. F. Schleicher, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Crichton, Miss Alice Crichton, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Winship of Los Angeles, S. D. Brastow, Walter Snook, Dr. John Snook, J. C. Everding, Miss Elsa Everding, Robert Duncan, Adolph Roos, Mr. and Mrs. A. Rothschild, Mrs. J. Brownstone.

Mrs. Godfrey Fisher, with her daughters, Miss Carrie and Miss Maud, will spend the season at the Potter in Santa Barbara. Her son, Godfrey, is at the Tallac, Lake Tahoe.

Mrs. George M. Wilcox has opened her house in Los Gatos and will be there during the summer months. Her sister, Mrs. C. Rossi, will spend the summer with her, and in October they will visit the East, stopping at the Fair on the going trip.

The week's arrivals at Rowardennan included Mrs. Castle and Miss Norma Castle, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Foote Jr., C. S. Plant, Mr. Belcher, Mr. Valentine, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Clay and Miss Madeline Clay.

Bayard Cutting and Lady Sybil, with their family, are at Del Monte. Others at the hotel are Miss Julia Garber, W. C. Thornbarron, E. J. Molera, Archdeacon Emery and Miss Emery, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Jones of Louisville, Ky.

Mr. Nicholas and Dr. Fine of Oakland arrived in the former's auto car at El Carmelo, Pacific Grove, on Saturday, having made the trip in six hours and ten minutes. Among those at El Carmelo for the summer are Dr. and Mrs. McDougall of Capertino, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Loveland and Mrs. Wilhoit and family of Stockton, Robert Kirkwood and family of Mountain View. Mr. Kirkwood has his Winston touring car with him.

LOUIS CREPAUX

(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

SCHOOL OF TONE PLACING (PALATAL SYSTEM)

Vocal Phonetics—Besides the "Palatal Tone Placing System"

taught in the Louis Crepau School, another and most important feature is the teaching of the English phonetic sounds. The study of the five vowels is not all that is necessary to sing in a language, and particularly so in English. Very few English-speaking people are able to sing the phonetics of their language exempt from throatiness. Fundamentally, English phonetics cannot be emitted in singing as uttered in speech. From a vocal standpoint and through ten years of experience in teaching English-speaking singers, Mr. Crepau has made a vocal classification of all the English phonetic sounds. This classification enables English-speaking singers to master all the English phonetic sounds and renders them harmonious and easy to sing.

Apply at the School Mondays and Thursdays, from 2:00 to 2:30 p. m. Y. M. C. A. Building, Ellis and Mason Sts.

LOUIS H. EATON

ORGANIST AND DIRECTOR OF THE CHOIR

TRINITY CHURCH

Teacher of Singing, Piano and Organ

Special advantages offered singers in choir training
Studio and Residence 1676 Broadway

Between Van Ness Ave. and Franklin Street

HOTHER WISMER (Violinist)

ENSEMBLE INSTRUCTION

Will resume teaching about August 8th, at his residence and studio, 844 Grove Street near Fillmore.

M. GERTRUDE JUDD

Teacher of Whistling

785 Geary St., S. F.

Phone Hyde 933

MUSICAL DIRECTORY

JOSEPH ROECKEL and MME. COURSEN-ROECKEL

Assisted by Mlle. Elena Roeckel, Concert contralto

NEW VOCAL CLASSES Placing of Voice and Solo Practice
1060 FULTON ST. Opposite Alamo Square

Conrad W. Fuhrer

TEACHER of Violin and Ensemble Playing. 1676 Page St.
Phone Fell 3373. Also care of Sherman, Clay & Co.

SIGNOR PAOLO LA VILLA

Of Florence, Italy

N. B.—Special Terms for Professionals.

Vocal Studio: THE ROOSEVELT, 546 Sutter St.
Phone James 1282

CHICKERING Best in the World
PIANOS Oldest in America

100,000 IN USE

BENJ. CURTAZ & SON, 16 O'FARRELL STREET

SOLE AGENTS

Jesuit Education

BY S. C. C.

It is not strange that in an age of intellectual development the science of education should claim an unusual interest, and that corresponding to this interest a broadening of the science itself, by the discovery of many new principles and a more accurate knowledge of principles already known, should result. Such is the very plausible thesis advanced by thousands of those around us. Nor can we deny that the science of education is receiving very material additions, if we consider as additions the array of pedagogical systems and theories which are daily demanding and receiving at the hands of well-intentioned experimentalists the trial of their worth. Unfortunately for the thesis, however, this out-cropping of theories for the most part proves very little to the point. As a rule those who introduced them into the world assist at their burial. "They have their day and cease to be." And thinkers begin to agree with Professor Bennet of Cornell when he says, "In America we are unfortunately too prone to view with favor any new idea educational or other and to embark precipitately in experiments which involve serious consequences." Such men find themselves quite naturally facing the question: After all, is it not possible that, as in philosophy and letters, so too in education, the true principles have already been discovered, and that development and progress, for development and progress there must be, consist not in framing new principles and new theories, but in adapting the principles already known to the requirements of the age as they arise? Very many are inclined, as well by the repeated failures of the new theories, as by the uniform success of the old, to take an affirmative view, and to them the most practical educational system would be that which, based on the true and changeless pedagogical principles already discovered, contains within itself a living principle of adaptability to the needs of a progressing age. If there exists such a system, they deem it worth a search, and in the search they need not go blindly. From its very nature they know the marks it must possess, unity and organization, thoroughness, breadth, so as to reach and embrace the whole man, simplicity and flexibility. Or, if they would proceed a posteriori, they will look for an educational system that has demonstrated its vitality and soundness by generations of successful results. Among the most prominent systems that will bear this twofold scrutiny, is that of the Jesuits, which under the name of the Ratio Studiorum or Method of Education, has been employed in the countless colleges of the Society of Jesus the world over for more than three hundred years. This method is composed of two parts, the material, by which is to be understood the subject matter to be taught, and the formal part, which prescribes the manner to be followed in teaching. As applied in undergraduate work, the Ratio Studiorum insists on a few solid studies, such as the languages, Latin, Greek and the vernacular, as well as mathematics, the sciences, especially physics, chemistry, geology and astronomy, and philosophy, mental and moral. Besides these studies which form the ordinary subject matter of Jesuit undergraduate teaching, other studies are taught according to the needs of the students, provided always they are compatible with thorough and solid work in the staple branches. Moreover, that the whole man may be trained, will as well as intellect and memory, the solid principles of religion and morality, social and private, are taught from the moment a student enters the college until his departure from it.

Thus in the subject matter we see simplicity, breadth and flexibility, three of the cardinal qualities of a perfect system. In the manner prescribed in the Ratio for imparting knowledge we find these qualities reinforced, and unity, organization and thoroughness efficaciously secured. Thus unity and organization are obtained by taking up branches successively rather than simultaneously, by teaching the same branches for a number of years in carefully graded classes, by judiciously limiting electivism to a few studies with the proviso that the essential branches be in no wise tampered with. For the Jesuits have held more tenaciously than any other body of educators the principle that they know better than those that come to them to be educated what training is best for them. They have selected after the most careful study and experiment those branches which are of highest educational worth and these they have placed as the foundation of their plan of education.

Unity is furthermore secured by the method prescribed by the Ratio for every exercise of the class room. The master, and every master, is directed accurately as to the order he must follow in his explanations and in class recitations. As to thoroughness, the defect noted by President Draper of the University of Illinois that "the educational system [of America] is undertaking too much, at least [the limitation is not necessary] in the grades below the college. 'Research' is attempted where drill is needed,"

ABBO

THE WONDER WORKER!

Makes the Blind See, the Lame Walk and Cures the Weak, Nervous, Dyspeptic, Rheumatic and Paralytic in a most Remarkable Manner by a New System of Medicine from Europe

FREE FREE FREE

Abbo's Extraordinary Offer to the Sick People—
Free for Seven Days Only—All Who Visit Abbo before JULY 1st, will Receive all Medical Attention and Surgical Treatment Free Until Cured. No Charge Except for Necessary Medicines.

The deaf, lame, blind and rheumatic are cured without cost and without price by a new system of medicine from Europe. No laying on of hands or faith cure.

Abbo's cures have puzzled the whole medical fraternity and astonished the world. He uses certain secret preparations imported from Europe. His treatment is quick and permanent and he protects his patients by taking only those cases that can be cured.

No man living has made the record that Abbo has in eight years' time in America. He has received more testimonials and sworn affidavits than any living physician.

Abbo treats no acute diseases, but makes an entire specialty of chronic diseases. Long standing cases given up by doctors and pronounced incurable he most desires to see.

ALL SUFFERERS

From Nervousness, Dyspepsia, Liver, Kidney, Stomach and Blood Disorders, Piles, Catarrh, Bladder and Urinary troubles, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Sciatica, should call at once.

ABBO'S SPECIFIC MEDICATIONS

go straight to the diseased organs and can be plainly felt at work in the diseased parts very shortly after their use is begun. They are pleasant to take, mild, but searching in action, yet agree with the most delicate lady, or child, do not reduce the strength, and can be used at the usual occupation, as many patients still able to work and attend to business are often slowly, surely, yet unconsciously dying, knowing themselves to be ill, yet deceived into a false security. They procrastinate and put off the matter until the case is incurable. Call and be examined and at least learn the cause of your disease and if you can be cured. It costs you nothing and may save your life.

A legal written guarantee to cure or refund the money is given in every case.

ABBO INSTITUTE
242 POST STREET

is impossible in the Jesuit course since in it Repetition is an essential point easily secured on account of the wise limitations in the choice and number of studies to be pursued simultaneously. Thus steady and persistent drilling by further repetition in each day's lesson follows a twofold repetition, the first immediately after the explanation of the professor, the second on the following day.

We should however omit the chief element of the success of Jesuit education were we to say nothing of the Masters. Prepared for their work by years of painstaking personal labor and by a training which without touching his individuality, for Jesuits are unsurpassed in individual diversity by any body of men, furnishes them with all the means to discover and remedy the limitations, intellectual and moral, of those with whom they come in contact, they enter on the work of the class room with the single aim of employing lives already solemnly dedicated to God and their fellow men in improving and elevating in their entirety the pupils committed to their care. Prudent restrictions in the number of students confided to each render possible the personal contact of the teacher with each and every one of his charges and the personal consultation, advice, and active co-operation which give such results, that at the close of the college year the Jesuit may say with conviction that not a few merely but every one of the students, though in different degrees, has been bettered.

So much for the private influence of the master in as much as he is a teacher and friend. Another influence not less effective is that which he exercises as an authority of the college. The Jesuit educator, aiming as he does to fit young men for useful and honorable lives in society, insists from the outset on full and unhesitating obedience to duly constituted authority. He knows human nature too well to be caught with what sane thinkers even secular and protestant are beginning to see with Dr. McCosh, "the fine language about treating students as capable of self-government and responsible for their conduct." The Jesuit knows that submission to authority must precede ability for self-government; that the young with their inexperience of judgment and flexibility of will must be trained to form good moral as well as intellectual habits, and training supposes the constant attention and supervision of him to whom it is committed—the attention of one whose heart is in his work, the effect of which he feels will one day help shape the destiny of his country for virtue, right and order and against riotous vice and anarchy, the supervision of an ordinarily prudent and sensible father who knows his boys and who gives to them not the freedom he might give to strangers, but the sweeter and freer liberty of sons. Liberty the growing youth and young man must have, yet such a liberty as is accompanied by saving supervision, advice and restraints which shall train him to use judiciously the greater liberty which full manhood will bring. He must not have a liberty which will astound the community in byways and highways by nightly scenes of riotous uproar and debauch.

Despite the evident merits of such a system as that of which we have drawn a faint and very incomplete outline, one great objection to it often presents itself to our very practical American people. Why not stop with the high school or its equivalent or more than equivalent—the classical high school or academy of a Jesuit college? The answer to this has been given so often that it is singular the objector should not begin to realize that in urging it he is not practical but short-sighted. Dr. McCosh, Princeton's greatest educator, remarks with reference to this practical education: "A well known ship-builder once said to me: 'Do not try to teach my art in school; see that you make the youth intelligent, and I will easily teach him ship-building.' The business of a college is to teach scientific principles of all sorts of practical application. The youth thus trained will start life in far better circumstances than those who have learned only the details of their craft, . . . and will commonly outstrip them in the rivalries of life. He will be able to advance when others are obliged to stop." And Archbishop Quigley advises parents to give their sons a college course in preparation for the professions. "We have now lawyers and doctors enough, what we want is better lawyers and better doctors."

A word of testimony as to the character of Jesuit Education is all space will permit us to add. The Protestant Frederick the Great of Prussia says: "I view them only as men of letters whose place in the instruction of youth it would be difficult if not impossible to supply." "For the good Jesuit Fathers I have a d—tenderness, not as far as they are monks, but as educators and scholars whose services are useful to civil society." And to pass at once to present-day critics, Davidson, a frankly cordial hater of the Jesuits, tells us in his "History of Education": "There is one point connected with it [Jesuit education] that well deserves our most serious consideration, and that is its success. This was due to three causes, first, to the single-minded devotion of the members of the Society; second, to their clear insight into the needs of the times; third, to the completeness with which they systematized their entire course, in view of a simple, well-defined aim. In all these matters we can well afford to imitate them. Indeed, the education of the present day demands just the three conditions which they realized."

The Dinner Setting is Incomplete
without

White Rock LITHIA Water

A Selected Water is as Essential
as a Selected Wine

P. J. WENIGER & CO.
DISTRIBUTORS

101-103 Powell St.
SAN FRANCISCO

GOODYEAR'S "GOLD SEAL"

Rubber Goods the Best Made

Rubber Hose, Belting and Packings

We are headquarters for everything made of Rubber

GOODYEAR RUBBER COMPANY

R. H. Pease, Pres. F. M. Shepard, Jr., Treas. C. F. Runyon, Sec.

573-575-577-579 Market St., San Francisco

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

On FACE, NECK, ARMS, HANDS. Absolutely Removed by the new discovery, "STENZIE" without injury to the most delicate skin. Positively will not return or grow again.

Mrs. Henderson, 326½ Ellis St., Nr. Taylor
Gray Hair restored to natural color without use of dyes.

FAT FOLKS!

YOUR WEIGHT REDUCED

By New Process I guarantee to REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT as much as you desire. No Change in Diet, no inconvenience, no bad after-effects.

MRS. E. L. RYAN, Dermatologist
Apt. 500, THE IROQUOIS, 524 Ellis Street

Wrinkles and all facial blemishes. Superfluous hair removed. Manicuring, hair dressing, scalp treatment. Phone Private Exchange 710.

NELSON'S AMYCOSE

Infallible Remedy for Catarrh
Sore Throat and Inflammations of the Skin

DRINK HABIT

VEST POCKET CURE
Permanent and Complete $5.00.
Wallace Medical Co., San Francisco.

ASTHMA

No injurious powder or mere relief.
ABSOLUTE CURE. Liquid medicine $1.00
G. W. Fane, San Francisco.

Corona Cafe, New Montgomery and Mission St. Mercantile lunch 25c. Always good, try it.

Automobile Topics

E. P. Brinegar, president of the Pioneer Automobile Company, is in receipt of a telegram from the Winton Motor Carriage Company at Cleveland, Ohio, to the effect that the War Department has placed orders for two Winton touring cars, one of which is to be used by the Atlantic Department, and the other by General MacArthur, in the manoeuvres of the State and National troops in August. The department in Washington has been trying out the different makes of automobiles during the past year, and the Winton was chosen on account of its power, durability of its working parts, and simplicity of control. The car to be used by General MacArthur is fitted to be used as either a telephone and telegraph office or a repair car. Provision has been made for the car to carry a folding table, wire, insulators, brackets, hammer, nails, a digging bar, pliers, block-and-tackle, and six lance poles, two box relays, one sander, one service telephone, one two-line telegraph switch-board, two conductor's lanterns, eight cells of dry battery, one field buzzer, two calcium carbide generators, pencils, telegraph message blanks, etc. A complete record will be kept of the number of miles the car runs, the fuel consumed, number of days or hours in which the machine is out of commission, due to accident or wear, and, in fact, such complete data as will enable the War Department to judge as to whether automobiles are practical for army usage. The experiment will be watched with great interest, as this is the first attempt made in this country to use automobiles for this purpose.

Since the publication of Mr. Williamson's automobile novel, "The Lightning Conductor," automobiling trips in Europe have become the rage. Miss Jean Reid, daughter of Whitelaw Reid, is to enjoy such a trip this summer. It strikes me that California would be a good scenic background for an automobile novel. Some very interesting trips have been made through the State lately.

The journey from San Francisco to Los Angeles, although a pleasant trip, is no easy task to accomplish with a modern chariot. But Dr. C. B. Brown of Portland, Oregon, an amateur, unaccompanied by mechanic or chauffeur, successfully made the run to Los Angeles and home again in "Samantha," his White steam touring car, not stripped of its tonneau, but a car just as it left the factory, canopy top, side-baskets and full lamp equipment, four people and baggage. The doctor covered something like seventeen hundred miles while in California. After the long journey he told me: "A farewell word for 'Samantha.' With the exception of the broken diaphragm, the car has never been touched by a repair man save only to be cleaned and oiled, which was not done as often as it should have been, and what is more remarkable, we have traveled two thousand miles without a puncture, which I suppose was more luck than judgment. The engine has never been taken apart or tightened for adjustment. After receiving the car from the factory and using it three days in the snow and mud in Portland, we shipped it to San Francisco, starting on a Thursday morning for our run south, crossing the bay on the Creek route and reaching San Jose safely. We remained in San Jose two weeks and then resumed our journey, tackled the San Juan without the least trouble and stopped at Salinas for lunch. Thence it is a beautiful drive of twenty miles to Del Monte. After touring in Monterey we left again to remain the night in Salinas. The morning found us in good humor for our start of about five hundred miles. The roads were good except those fenced in by the cattle companies and leaving a path something frightful to travel over. King's City soon appeared, and after crossing the river and securing gasoline we had to retrace our tracks and make a seventy mile detour to Jolon. The next morning early we arrived at Bradley and then took the road through the Indian Valley, making a twenty-mile detour to reach San Miguel. Paso Robles was next reached and then we had forty miles and a bad mountain to cross before reaching San Luis Obispo. We stayed here until Monday, when we made Los Olivos and Gaioto the next day, and remained the following day at Naples, only running until about two in the afternoon. On Saturday morning we started for our last day's trip south. At Carpenter we left the beach and went inland into the Casitas Pass and straight on into Ventura. Here we stopped for lunch and filled our tanks with gasoline, as this was the last chance to procure gasoline this side of Los Angeles. We had seventy-five miles to cover that afternoon, and got into Los Angeles about six o'clock. After two weeks in Los Angeles our thoughts turned homeward once more and we left on Saturday morning to retrace our tracks to San Francisco."

L. T. Shettler and John F. McLain, of Los Angeles, arrived in Santa Barbara last Wednesday afternoon, having gone up

Celebrated "KNOX" Hats

EUGENE KORN, 746 MARKET STREET, Sole Agent. Spring Styles now open; silks, operas, derbys and soft hats.

from Los Angeles in a twenty-horse Winton touring car, in five hours and thirty-five minutes. This is the best record thus far made for elapsed time on automobile runs between Los Angeles and this city. The best former record elapsed time was six hours

INDIAN and RAMBLER MOTOCYCLES

Absolute one-hand control.
Powerful engines. Run fast or
slow and CLIMB HILLS.
Indian won recent hill-climb in
New York against all-comers;
also won 50 mile road race at
Buffalo, June 11. Time, 1 hr.
11 min., 30 sec.—a 1:25 4-5 gait.

C. C. HOPKINS
Larkin & McAllister

Rambler

Model "K." Price, $1,350

2 Cylinders. 16 Horse Power. 84 Wheel Base.
The Greatest Money Value Ever Offered.

Rambler Automobile Agency

TENTH AND MARKET STS., SAN FRANCISCO

"Toledo"

POPE TOLEDO TOURING CAR CO.

Phone South 1142

G. A. BOYER, Manager

134-148 GOLDEN GATE AVE.

and forty-five minutes and actual running time was five hours and three minutes. They probably broke the running record also, as they were obliged to stop a number of times, but did not keep close time on the stops, but it surely beats the best elapsed time. They left Los Angeles at 8:35 a. m. and reached Santa Barbara at 2:10 p. m. After a hasty lunch, they at once started again in the same machine for the return trip, which they hoped to make in almost as quick time, and which they did, thus establishing the best round-trip record between the two cities mentioned. Mr. McLain is the manager of the Pioneer Automobile Company of Los Angeles, and Mr. Shettler is his chief salesman. They told of some exciting experiences on the trip and had some close calls to accidents. At one time, not being able to make a short turn, they plowed through an orchard, but missed the trees. They both agree that if any one makes this trip in less time he will run some very dangerous risks, and may not get through without some serious accident. The time made by Messrs. McLain and Shettler, from Los Angeles to Ventura, was 3:27.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Joy, their daughter Myrtle, and Mrs. Joy's father, W. P. Grainger, arrived at their home in Watsonville from San Francisco, last Thursday evening, in Mr. Joy's Winton touring car. Mr. Joy, in speaking of the trip, characterized it as the best ride he has ever taken, one without a single disagreeable accident. It was a record trip, the number of miles of ground covered being one hundred and the time consumed four hours and twelve minutes.

A number of Stevens-Duryea enthusiasts, residing across the bay, made a run through Oakland, Alameda, Haywards, and other towns adjacent thereto on Sunday last. Among those in the party were George H. Strong, Miss Georgie Strong, Dr. A. L. Cunningham, Dr. Chamberlain, William H. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Eloise Merriman.

Thomas H. B. Varney is in the East with his family. He recently bought the Pope-Toledo four-cylinder auto that won the hill-climbing contest in Minneapolis.

Mr. Boyer, manager of the Pope Toledo Touring Car Company, states that they have, to date, disposed of thirty four-cylinder cars and will receive but twenty more this season. Eight are on the way.

O. L. Pettigrew toured around the bay last Sunday in a Winton.

Twelve Model B Cadillacs arrived here last Monday and have all been disposed of.

Mrs. Southworth of Stockton is an enthusiastic motorist, and her Waverly electric can be seen almost any day speeding on its merry way. Mrs. Southworth and the doctor take a good many trips into the country together.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Watson made the trip to Los Gatos recently and after a hurried run back in their auto again left on the chug wagon for the Yosemite and thence to Los Gatos.

Dr. C. P. Thomas and Mrs. Thomas of Spokane, Washington, made a long automobile trip recently, running from Chicago to St. Louis, an estimated distance of four hundred miles, in three days' travel.

New Model B Cadillac touring cars were delivered last week to Dr. Conrad Weil of San Francisco, J. J. Valentine of Oakland and Clarence Letcher of San Jose.

Frank H. Johnson of San Rafael and his father made an extensive tour of Marin county Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Valentine of Oakland and Miss Goodfellow made a tour through Marin county Sunday. H. H. Owens of San Francisco made a trip to Del Monte Saturday and took his father and mother home in his Cadillac.

Although he has owned his White touring car less than a fortnight J. O. Bradney of this city made a most successful trip of nearly five hundred miles last week in his new car. Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Bradney, accompanied by Oscar Grothe, have just returned from a four days' outing in their automobile, going as far north as Healdsburg. The roads on the entire trip were in excellent shape except four miles between Vallejo and Napa, where they are constructing a street car line. The odometer registered four hundred and thirty-seven miles.

Wiley B. Allen has just returned from a week's trip in his Rambler touring car. Mr. Allen explored the valleys and mountains of Napa, Sonoma and Mendocino counties. He had quite an experience in Hopland during the fire which devastated the town. His auto was in a stable near the hotel. Mr. Allen hurriedly dressed and got his machine out before the stable burned.

M. R. Modary of Fresno is in the Yosemite Valley in his Rambler touring car.

At the hill climbing contest at Minneapolis last week the Rambler touring car covered itself with glory, defeating cars which cost over twice as much money. It not only won the prize for all cars costing one thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars or less but also defeated the entire list of machines costing between seventeen hundred and fifty dollars and twenty-seven hundred and fifty dollars, and in the list of machines costing over twenty-seven hundred and fifty dollars it defeated all machines with one exception—a four-cylinder car costing thirty-five hundred dollars.

Almost every week some motorist is making the trip overland from Fresno and that vicinity to San Francisco. Interest in autoing in Fresno is ever on the increase and many machines are now owned there. The trip two weeks ago of Mr. Roberts of Madera in his new White steam touring car was interesting. The trip, though successfully traveled by the smooth running horseless carriage, proved a very arduous run. Several bridges on the run up were down on account of the San Joaquin river's being high and overflowing, and after fording several streams the autoists came upon a stream impossible to cross, as it was over four feet deep. An auto has proved itself a very practical conveyance and improvements are constantly being made, but as yet the manufacturers have failed to make them swim. A flat car had to be brought into service and the car was taken from Lathrop to Tracey, from which place the White was headed for San Francisco.

"Miss Daisy Barnhart promises to be one of the crack chauffeurs of the State," says the Stockton Record of recent date, "and it has taken her new and swell White (ten h. p.) machine to bring out the dash and nerve which proclaim the genius in motoring. Miss Barnhart boarded her White in San Francisco at one o'clock on Friday, crossed the bay and made the run to Stockton in five and a half hours, reaching here before six o'clock. This was the first time she had handled that particular machine. The motive power is known as the 'Generator System.' The auto is a beauty in appearance, and Miss Barnhart looks every inch the part as she speeds along the boulevard."

—The Chauffeur.

Wanted
for our branch drug store to be opened at 80-82 Geary St. near Grant Ave.

A real, genuine, duly accredited sandwich man;
Must be ready to promenade, on the day of the opening—July 2d

The Owl Drug Co. San Francisco.

REPAIRS MADE AND SUPPLIES FURNISHED
AT THE

Hotel Vendome Automobile Garage San Jose

Stable accommodations free to guests. Record time
on road from San Francisco to San Jose, two hours.

KNOX WATERLESS, GASOLINE CARS

Easy Control
Easy Riding
Reliable
Safe
Free From Lost
Motion

Automobile
Sundries

LEAVITT & BILL, 307-309 Larkin Street

San Francisco

Price, $1350 without Top; $1450 with Top

Pierce Arrow Touring Car (French) $2650

Northern Runabout, $800

MOBILE CARRIAGE CO.

GOLDEN GATE AVE. AND GOUGH ST.

Phone Private Exchange 770

San Francisco

AUTOMOBILES FOR HIRE

Downtown Offices:

Palace Hotel Occidental Hotel St. Francis Hotel

Pioneer Automobile Co.

We have five carloads of Runabouts and Touring Cars on the way. Only a few for delivery. Speed, power, durability are features of the new

OLDSMOBILE

*901-925 Golden Gate Avenue
San Francisco*

The CADILLAC

MODEL B. Price $950
With Tonneau $1050

Record from Del
Monte to Oakland 5
hours and 38 minutes.
The only successful
tour of the Yosemite made by Major Ful-
mer of Los Angeles
and a party of three.

CUYLER LEE, Agent. 201-203 Larkin St., S. F.

AUTOMOBILE GARAGE SAN MATEO

PAUL L. NOISAT PHONE BLACK 111
GARAGE AND REPAIR SHOP
B ST., NEAR THIRD AVE.

AUTOMOBILE REPAIRS

81 CITY HALL AVE. Telephone South 1039

De Dion Plugs
De Dion Porcelains
Electric Cable

ANDREWS, KEENAN & BLASAUF

SECOND HAND F. R. LUCKHARDT
AUTOMOBILES 20 GOLDEN GATE AVE.
WITH CALIFORNIA AUTO EXPRESS CO.

This is the White
Steam Touring Car
complete with canopy
top, curtains and glass
front, baskets, acetylene lamp equipment,
and extra tonneau
seat.

WHITE STEAM TOURING CAR COMPLETE

Schools for Boys

BY W. J. MEREDITH.

Long before the state began to provide for the education of its future citizens, schools for boys flourished in all civilized countries. Antiquity does not prove excellence, yet the fact remains that side by side with the state's school the private school for boys still flourishes, and there is no doubt that it possesses some advantages no other educational institution can boast. No one nowadays would for a moment deny the great value of the public school with its commingling of the children of all our citizens, so like the world of business around us, but there are thousands of boys whose best interests the public school cannot serve.

Home discipline is often so lax as to prevent the formation of habits of industry and application; not infrequently the business of the father and the social engagements of the mother leave the boy to his own devices; sometimes it happens that the parent and child are of such antagonistic natures that government or obedience is impossible.

Too many pupils are given to each teacher in the public schools to bring forth the best results. In both the home and the day school too large a per cent of the boy's time is without adequate supervision, permitting the formation of evil habits and harmful associations. Again, the lack of harmony and the divided responsibility between the home and day school make the educational outcome extremely uncertain.

What I have said applies especially to the boy whose home is in the city or town, but it is not the town boy only who would be most benefited by the boarding school. All through the country are boys whose parents are well-to-do. Such boys being under no necessity to labor, and having nothing to give them a sense of responsibility, often drift into habits of indolence, seek doubtful forms of amusement, idle about the village post office, store and saloon, smoke cigarettes and drink a little, growing up without a purpose in life, useless, discontented, a disappointment to their friends, a detriment to society. Such a boy placed in a boarding school would most likely, under the regular discipline and occupation of the daily classes, become a self-reliant, industrious student and grow into a good citizen. There is a period in a boy's life when he needs wise repression; there is a time when he needs wise stimulation; there is a time when it is best to leave him alone. All through the period of adolescence he is particularly susceptible to influences outside his home and impatient of home restraint. He must have associates of his own kind but he needs the direction of the adult mind. In the ordinary home it would take a detail of one adult to each boy to carry him safely through the temptations and thwarting influences that beset his life at this critical time. This is becoming less and less feasible. No member of the family can be drafted for this purpose and a hiring tutor is very seldom satisfactory, for the reason that few men who are really fit to teach boys can be hired to teach a single boy. Furthermore, the education of a boy by private tutor tends to develop those selfish and priggish traits that contact with other boys would eliminate or suppress.

This, then, is the problem of educating a boy who is not compelled to earn his living: He must be subjected to such discipline and regularity of life as will develop self-reliant industry and application; he must have a greater amount of personal attention from his instructors than the boy who has had the discipline of labor; he must have actual contact with a sufficient number of his kind to develop his sense of fair play and social obligation to his fellow citizens; finally, he must have as many of the comforts, refinements and pleasures of the home as possible so that he may take his place in society when he is grown, without undue embarrassment and disadvantage.

The right kind of boarding school can give him these things and no other institution can.

Kutch, the excellent chef of the Cafe Zinkand, serves a lunch that causes the place to be the rendezvous of ladies in town for a day. The music of Professor Marquardt and his full orchestra makes the hour a pleasant one.

CURES

Bythinia

SPECIAL LAXATIVE PILLS

CONSTIPATION

FOR SALE AT DRUG STORES AND BARS

MURINE EYE REMEDY

THOSE LUSTROUS
EYES ARE MURINE
EYES

Sunlight Intensified by Reflection

from Ocean Beach and Desert Sand unrelieved by foliage. Winds and mineral laden poisonous dust, all bring eye-troubles in their wake, Granulated Eyelids, Red, Itching, Burning, Tired and Watery Eyes, Impaired Vision and Eye Pain. Prevention, Relief and Cure are found in MURINE EYE REMEDY, mild and harmless. Murine aids those wearing glasses, doesn't smart, but soothes and quickly cures. Is an Eye Tonic. Sold by Opticians and Druggists. Fifty Cents.

WM. WILLIAMS & SONS

(LTD.) OF ABERDEEN.

V V O

Scotch Whisky

Importers - MACONDRAY & CO.

Guadalupe Milk is Pure

We know it is pure and no matter how severe the test imposed by the Board of Health, we are able to stand it—and more. When you use Guadalupe Milk you can be sure of getting pure, rich milk and full measure. Just try it once.

GUADALOUPE DAIRY CO.
1814 San Bruno Road, San Francisco
TELEPHONE WHITE 31

Some Aspects of the Schools

BY IRENE CONNELL.

The public school is one of the great formative influences at work in the making of American character. Correlatively it is perhaps the institution most thoroughly representative of the American spirit. The common school is preservative of democracy. Popular government is safe only so far as education reaches the base of society, and only a system of popular education can be relied on to do this. Of late years much discussion has arisen as to what ought to be the aim and end of education, but out of the confusion of opinions there arises clearly and persistently at least one idea, namely, that the object of the school should be to fit the young for usefulness. In a republic the government is the people, there is no privileged or governing class. Every citizen is supposed to be an active member of the commonwealth. He should be sufficiently well schooled to take an intelligent part, and this was the practical aim which the founders of the American system had in view. In some respects this end has been lost sight of, though in the main it has been kept in view. That the aim is a practical one and has the approval of the people accounts for the hold the schools have had upon the public. For in spite of their shortcomings—not a few—and the just criticism to which they may be subjected, the schools have the confidence of the community. This quality of practicality, of adopting means to ends, has not failed to arouse the admiration of foreigners who have studied the system, and was one of the points which the late Mosby Commission found most praiseworthy. The schools have evidently grown out of a need of the body politic and as evidently answer to that need. Herein lies their strength. If the American of today is a composite type it is in the public school that the blend is accomplished. Obstinate and aggressive national traits are softened and combined, the sharp corners of opposing creeds and peoples are rounded off and polished. The love of a common country and flag replaces the hate of class for class and people for people. This is accomplished not so much by direct lessons in patriotism as by common associations and interests, by sharing in the same tasks and games, the same rewards and penalties at the most plastic period of life. In a word, the public school is the factory where Americans are made. Private schools, however excellent, can not fully accomplish the task. The private school deals with classes separately, and its tendency is to stratify and not to amalgamate. There are schools where the rich associate with the rich, schools where the children of Germans are taught the language and mental outlook of their fathers, parochial schools where children meet others of their religious faith. Were there no public schools this state of affairs would be both widened and intensified. I speak not to dispraise the private school, but the common ground where all learn to know one another is lacking.

The last two decades have been for the schools a time of agitation, unrest, and upheaval. There is something in the air called The New Education, although its most ardent advocates would be hard pushed if asked to give an exact definition of it. It would seem on the whole to be a revolt against the formal discipline of the older schools. Pushed to the extreme its motto might be "Whatever is, is wrong." Its prophets have in many instances rejected the old before they had a firm grasp on the principles of the new. The result has been unceasing change and uncertainty in the administration of the schools. There has been a burning desire for novelty, and theory after theory has run rampant for a time, only to be knocked down and laid low by the next one, equally mad and rampant. It has been the day of the doctrinaire. The manipulations of the visionary under the plea of "enriching the course of study" have introduced a bewildering complexity into things scholastic. An up-to-date course of study is a wonderful thing of adjustment and machinery, elaboration and specializing. The danger point in this direction, however, seems to be passed, for there are now signs of a return to greater simplicity and sanity.

Dr. J. M. Rice recently imposed upon a number of Eastern schools a simple test in arithmetic and language. About seventy per cent of the schools examined failed to show even a moderate degree of success in these branches. The errors made were tabulated by Dr. Rice, and the results showed confused and foggy thinking with an imperfect understanding of fundamental principles. Indeed it is somewhat characteristic of the New Education to scorn what our grandfathers regarded as essentials, and from a superior height to look slightly down upon the three R's. Reading is "literature" or "thought getting," and the primary child is quite independent of the alphabet, the spelling-book and the multiplication table. "Parrot-like repetition" has been so denounced that nobody learns anything by heart, and memory is

Take care of your health! Massage improves circulation and gives strength to muscles and nerves. Lindstrom's Swedish Institute. 406 Sutter Street.

SCHOOLS and COLLEGES

Santa Clara College

SANTA CLARA CAL.

The next session will begin August 2, 1904. Send for full particulars to (Rev.) R. E. KENNA, S. J., President.

Hoitt's

School for Boys; 14th year begins August 9th; larger and stronger faculty than ever; perfect sanitation; illustrated catalogue. W. J. MEREDITH, Vice-Principal. Menlo Park, Cal.

Irving Institute

Boarding and day school for young ladies and little girls. 2126 California St. Will reopen August 1, 1904. Accredited to the universities. REV. EDWARD B. CHURCH, A. M., Principal.

Miss Bolte's School

2174 Post St., prepares for universities and colleges. Music by graduate professor of Berlin and Leipzig conservatories. Conversational and grammatical French and German; English. Board, English, French, German, music, $30 month. Next term July 11.

San Francisco Business College

Scott & Van Arsdale Building, 738 Mission St., between Third and Fourth. We are located in our new quarters. The finest schoolrooms in the West. Come and see them whether you want to go to school or not. Business men know where we are. We had eight calls for help this week.

is the most practical; recommended by expert court reporters. Send for catalogue.

1382 Market St., San Francisco.

The Melbourne Institute

For stuttering and stammering teaches a new scientific course for cure. It is successful. It has been established in this city for three years under teaching of Prof. F. G. Norcross, acknowledged mental expert, whose work has won the admiration of reputable physicians and other deep students of mentality. The services of the Melbourne may be enlisted with the utmost confidence. Address MELBOURNE INSTITUTE, Van Ness Ave. and Market St., San Francisco. Hours 1 to 5 P. M. Telephone Mint 2626.

THE LYCEUM

Jordan or any Stanford

AN ACCREDITED PREPARATORY SCHOOL For the University, Law, and Medical College, Etc. This school is well known for its careful and thorough work; we prepare you well. References, President professor. L. H. GRAU Ph. D., Principal. Rooms, 333-346, 5th floor, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

CALIFORNIA BUSINESS COLLEGE

The largest and finest quarters in the city; refined residence locality. Position for every graduate. Thorough, modern. 75 Page Catalogue on request.

R. L. DURHAM, President.

925 Golden Gate Avenue. San Francisco

HEALD'S

LEADING BUSINESS COLLEGE of the WEST Over 24 Post St., San Francisco, Cal.

Established 40 years. Open entire year, day and night. Write for circulars (free.)

Kent Law School

THIRTEENTH YEAR

Day and Night. Always open. No Vacations. Book Free. 536 Parrott Building (Emporium). Phone Folsom 2031

Century Electric Corporation

SUPPLIES, CONSTRUCTION, MANUFACTURING AND REPAIRING. BUILDINGS WIRED

16 and 18 SECOND STREET

Telephone Bush 352

San Francisco

MAISON TORTONI

111 O'Farrell St.

French Rotisserie

Private Dining Rooms.

Banquet Hall.

S. Constantini, Prop.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST—Phelan Bldg., Rooms 6, 8, 10, 48. 806 Market St. Phone John 3841

The modish woman's stationery is as much a part of her nowadays as her dainty wardrobe. Cooper & Co., 746 Market Street, are showing the newest modes in paper and envelopes, dies and seals.

SUMMER RESORTS

The following Resorts will send descriptive booklet when requested.

TUSCAN SPRINGS

Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Catarrh and Stomach, Gout, Rheumatism and All BLOOD DISEASES taken under a guarantee to be cured in a specific time, or all expenses including Ry. fare both ways refunded. Send socs. for a bottle of Stomach and Catarrh Salts. Reduced round trip rates. FRANK J. HELLEN, Mgr., Tuscan Springs, Cal.

GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM

A Sanitarium, cottage plan; not a hospital. Equipped for the scientific application of Water, Electricity, Massage, Tissue Oscillation, Electric Light, X-Ray, Dry, Hot Air and all minor treatments. Large grounds, 5½ acres, shade, etc. Separate treatment apartments for men and women. Fifteen minutes walk from centre of city; one block from car line. Beautiful scenery. Write for literature. GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM, San Jose, Cal.

SKAGGS

Hot Springs, Sonoma County; only 4½ hours from San Francisco and but 9 miles staging; waters noted for medicinal virtues; best natural hot mineral water bath in State; boating and swimming; good trout streams; telephone, telegraph, daily mail and San Francisco papers. FIRST-CLASS HOTEL AND STAGE SERVICE morning and afternoon; round trip from San Francisco $5.50. Take Tiburon ferry daily 7:30 a. m. or 2:30 p. m. Rates $2 a day or $12 a week. References: any guest of the past nine years. Information at Peck's, 11 Montgomery St., or of J. F. MULGREW, Skaggs, Cal.

PARAISO SPRINGS

MONTEREY CO., CAL.

The most popular sanitary health resort in California. Completely renovated and improved. No winds or fogs, grand mountain and valley scenery. Hot soda and sulphur baths, large swimming tank, excellent table. Booklet and particulars of F. W. SCHROEDER, Mgr. or PECK'S BUREAU, 11 Montgomery St.

SODA BAY SPRINGS

On Clear Lake. Hunting, fishing, boating, launch, horses, tennis, croquet, dark room, warm soda geyser in bathhouse, clubhouse, etc. Rates $10 to $15. CHATFIELD & VINZENT, 228 Montgomery St., or LEE D. CRAIG, Manager, Soda Bay, Kelseyville, P. O., Lake Co., Cal.

TRUCKEE RIVER COUNTRY CLUB

Summer Resort and Sportsmen's Lodge. Fourth Season May 15. Sierra attractions. California's Largest Rainbow Hatchery and Finest Fishing.

G. H. FOULKS, Verdi, Nev., or Nevada Block, S. F.

Camp Vacation

Hotel under canvas on the Russian River below Guerneville in a grove a mile and a half long, skirting the river; tennis courts; 40 new boats. There will be a dam in the river affording 4 miles of smooth water for boating, bathing and swimming. Adults $2 per day, $10 per week; children under 10 half rates. Special rates for families. Opens May 1. Address Mrs. L. C. CNOPIUS, Camp Vacation. "Vacation" P. O., Sonoma Co., Cal.

Byron Hot Springs

Open all the year. Unexcelled climate. Luxurious Mineral and Mud Baths, and the most curative waters known for Rheumatism, Gout, Sciatica, Liver and Kidney and Nervous troubles, also Malaria.

Hotel unique in cuisine, service and appointments.

Rates $17.50 per week in Cottages. $3 per day and upwards in Main Hotel.

Reached by Southern Pacific, 2 1-2 hours from San Francisco. 3 trains daily, at 8:30 a. m., 10 a. m. and 3:30 p. m.

H. R. WARNER, Manager

Byron Hot Springs Post Office, California

Awnings, Tents, Campers' Outfits, Bags, Etc.

Rented and Sold

R. McMAHON

Tel. Bush 858 35 MARKET ST.

ASK PECK, HE KNOWS

Literature and Particulars on all hotels and summer resorts in California. 11 Montgomery Street.

Free Information

HOTEL VENDOME

San Jose, Cal.

Situated in Vendome Park of 12½ acres and while secluded, yet convenient to all avenues and stations, a charming resort for summer. Automobile Garage on the grounds free to guests. Prof. Geo. D'Abilaing's Orchestra engaged for summer.

Excellent roads, beautiful drives, bathing pavilion, bowling alleys, tennis courts, croquet, etc.

J. T. BROOKS, Proprietor

Agua Caliente Springs

New attractions; open all the year round; nearest Hot Sulphur Springs to San Francisco. Temperature 115 degrees; no staging; fare $1.10. Cures rheumatism, asthma and kindred ailments. Five Hot Sulphur Springs; tub and plunge baths, largest mineral water swimming tank in State. Accommodations first class. $2.00 per day; $12 to $14 per week; rates to families, half rates to children. Peck's, 11 Montgomery St. or THEO RICHARDS, Agua Caliente Springs, Sonoma Co., Cal. We have erected a stone dining room, seats 400 guests.

Deer Park Inn

And cottages; 6 miles from Lake Tahoe; open June 1st; ideal place for rest and recreation; elevation 6507 feet. Fine mineral springs. For further information call at office of Traveler, 30 Montgomery St., or send for booklet.

J. B. SCOTT, Folsom, Cal.

Beautiful Laurel Dell

The Robson Orchestral and Dr. Monroe N. Callender will furnish the best music ever played at any resort in the state.

The Switzerland of America. The only lake resort that has its own mineral springs and a chemically pure spring. Boating, swimming, marine toboggan 160 feet in length; first class livery; saddle horses. Dining room seats 300. Bowling alley and all games free to guests. Pamphlets at Peck's, 11 Montgomery St. and Cal. N. W. Ry., 650 Market St. Address, EDGAR DURNAN, Owner and Proprietor Laurel Dell, Lake Co., Cal.

HOTEL BELVEDERE

Most attractive resort on San Francisco bay. Special rates to clubs of young men. Send for booklet. MRS. A. T. MOORE, Belvedere, Cal.

TENTS AWNINGS, BAGS HAMMOCKS

W. A. PLUMMER

Tel. Main 549

111 CLAY ST., SAN FRANCISCO

VACATION 1904

IS NOW READY FOR DISTRIBUTION.

"VACATION" is issued annually by the

California Northwestern Railway

THE PICTURESQUE ROUTE OF CALIFORNIA

and is the standard publication on the Pacific Coast for information regarding

MINERAL SPRING RESORTS, COUNTRY HOMES AND FARMS WHERE SUMMER BOARDERS ARE TAKEN, AND SELECT CAMPING SPOTS.

This year's edition "VACATION 1904" contains over 150 pages, beautifully illustrated, and is complete in its detailed information as to location, accommodations, attractions, etc., with terms from $7.00 per week up.

To be had at Ticket Offices, 650 Market Street (Chronicle Building) and Tiburon Ferry, foot of Market Street; General Office, Mutual Life Building, corner of Sansome and California Streets, San Francisco.

Applications by mail will receive immediate response.

JAS. L. FRAZIER, Gen'l Mgr. R. X. RYAN, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

becoming a lost faculty. In our efforts to find a royal road to learning, to remove difficulties and to save time we have caused the children's minds to grow flabby. The power to overcome obstacles is in itself a valuable acquisition, and by making it easy for children they are apt to miss two good things—concentration and application. But as I have before stated there are evidences of a return to first principles, and we are beginning to discover that there was something good in the old formal methods and that simplicity and thoroughness are not to be despised, after all.

Frequent changes of text-books and courses of study fret the teachers, confuse the pupils and hinder good and consecutive work. This is one of the greatest sources of weakness in the schools. As a county superintendent recently remarked, "It is hard on both teachers and children to be manipulated by so many experts who do not agree."

Large cities have problems peculiar to themselves. One of these is the way in which attendance seems to press upon accommodation. There is always a certain number of children crowded out for want of room. Classes are too large, school-buildings over-peopled and unsanitary. There is a lack of play-room, and hence proper recreation and exercise are impossible. San Francisco has hardly reached the condition of New York where the children enjoy their recesses in dark, or at best, gas-lighted cellars, but we may arrive at that point by-and-by. The children in over-crowded schools are nervous, fidgety, unruly and noisy. Who can blame them? The teachers can not reach individual pupils; they have not time. It is all they can do to "cover the ground," as they call it, meaning to teach all that is laid down in the course of study. Then there are rules and regulations—scores of them. The teacher grows into a machine, and a machine teacher makes machine pupils. Then there is the truant question: you can force the bad boy into school, but what can you do after you get him there? Can you make him work? Does the mere act of sitting in a school-room transform an idle and indolent youth into a studious and respectful one? And what about the other children whose time he wastes and to whom he sets a bad example. "Parental schools," suggests some one, but there you face a new problem, and you need new machinery. Now you are treading on home preserves.

While the school has of late years been assuming duties which belong to the home and which the home in some measure shirks, there has at the same time grown up a sort of distrust of the pedagogical body and a disposition to curtail the teacher's power and influence. In other words, while the teacher's responsibilities have increased her authority has diminished. This is perhaps another phase of the feminization of the schools, which is now the subject of much discussion, and which is pronounced by recent critics to be a source and symptom of weakness. The schools would no doubt be stronger if more men taught in them, but strong men are not attracted to school teaching and weak ones do not strengthen it as a profession. At last accounts even women teachers are becoming scarce. Forty school districts in California were, for want of teachers, unable to open at the proper time this year, and this same cry goes up from other parts of the Union. Teachers are dropping out of the ranks to enter other professions. So much is now demanded in the way of preparation for work that young women find the same equipment will enable them to enter other professions where the rewards are greater. The effort to improve the personnel of the teaching body has positively resulted in driving the most desirable candidates out of the profession.

Many points of weakness in school management are reflections of similar defects in the home. Parents today lack authority and can not or do not exact obedience from their offspring. They are lenient and expect teachers to be lenient. There is much said about character building as the chief work of the school. While the aim of character building may be deliberate, much of the process is unconscious or at least, sub-conscious. Character is not made in a day nor a year. It is made stroke by stroke, habit on habit. If so much is insisted on the teacher must be allowed to demand promptness, truth, respect, and obedience, and must be supported and not hindered in her efforts.

One of the crying needs of the day is occupation for the children out of school hours. I say advisedly occupation and not excitement nor amusement. Few children have regular tasks in the home, and the law no longer allows home study. The result is a vast amount of wasted, undirected or misdirected time. To be sure they play on the streets and flock to the Public Library, but much of their reading is fiction, often pernicious and generally weak and idle. A child is not allowed to study a dozen words in spelling, but there is no objection in law to his devouring a story book every other day. To many children home is a place to eat and sleep in, and to be when there is other place to go. It is probable

Corey's Cafe, 600 Mission. Mercantile Lunch 11 to 2. Cedar Brook Whiskey, formerly W. H. McBrayer—10 yrs. old.

SUMMER RESORTS

The following Resorts will send descriptive booklet when requested

Hotel Rowardennan

"IN THE MOUNTAINS BY THE SEA"

Ben Lomond, Santa Cruz County. Opened under entirely new management. Round-trip Tickets from San Francisco, $3. For booklet apply PECK'S BUREAU, 11 Montgomery St., S. F.; or to WM. G. DODGE, Lessee.

The Monterey

Most Elegantly appointed Hotel on the Pacific Coast. Hot and cold water; Electric and Gas Lights; Private and Public Baths; Telephone in every room; four Private Dining Rooms; Fine Sample Rooms. American Plan, $2.50 and upwards; European Plan, 75c and upwards. Hageman & Jones, Props., Monterey, Cal.

Hotel Ben Lomond

SANTA CRUZ MOUNTAINS—NO STAGING

Table first-class. Electric lights, boating, swimming, fishing, hunting, tennis, croquet. See booklet, S. P. Company, 613 Market St., or B. DICKINSON, Ben Lomond, Cal.

Tahoe Tavern

On Lake Tahoe, the largest and most beautiful body of water in the world at this elevation, now open. The tavern will be conducted this season by Mr. F. W. Richardson, manager of California's famous mission hotel, The Glenwood, Riverside; a guarantee that it will be strictly first class. The table supplied with all delicacies; fishermen constantly employed to furnish lake trout. For rates address F. W. RICHARDSON

La Honda and Pescadero

Buy your R. R. tickets to Redwood City; o A. M. train 3d and Townsend, and 9:20 A. M. train from San Jose connect with stages direct. Address, WALTER KNIGHT, Redwood City, Cal.

Brockway

Lake Tahoe

Opens June 1st.

Write FRANK B. ALVERSON, Mgr.

Brockway, Cal.

The Tallac

Lake Tahoe, Cal.

Cafe European. Nurses, Muds and Children, American Plan. Prices now as low as any hotel on Lake. Service, accommodations, boating and livery superior to any. Address M. LAWRENCE & CO., Tallac, Cal.

The Grove

Lake Tahoe

Half mile east of Tallac on Lake Shore. Rates $2 per day; $10 per week; meals 50c. Good saddle horses and the best of livery; boats free to all guests, J. E. FARMETER, Prop., Tallac, Cal.

Spend Your Vacation

A great many San Francisco people are planning to spend the entire summer at Hotel Del Monte. No other resort in California offers such a combination of attractions—sea bathing, golf, automobilism, bowling, tennis, fishing, and all out-of-door sports. Instead of going from place to place seeking comforts, the wise ones of society are planning already to put in several enjoyable weeks down at Del Monte by the sea. Address Geo. P. Snell, manager, Del Monte, California.

At Hotel Del Monte

Hotel Berkeley

Dwight Way, Berkeley

Half block from Key Route and Berkeley local trains. Surrounded by beautiful lawns and flowers; an ideal summer resort hotel; quiet, restful; modern appointments; cuisine first class in every respect; large, airy rooms. M. A. GIBBS, Prop.

THE MART

1348 MARKET STREET

DOMESTIC and IMPORTED BEERS
WINES and LIQUORS, for Camping,
Picnics and Vacations, at

Phone South 1176

REDUCED PRICES

MOORE'S POISON OAK REMEDY

Cures Poison-Oak and all Skin Diseases
Sold by all Druggists

(that the addition of manual training courses, such as sewing, cooking, and carpentry, to the curriculum will give the children an interest in handiwork and will correct this inclination to idleness. A beginning in this direction has happily been made.

Art in the school is an up-to-date subject of discussion. School-room decoration is good, but school-room sanitation and cleanliness are better. Let the school-room have clean walls, bright windows, good light and adequate ventilation and then add the frieze of the Parthenon and Raphael's Madonnas if you like. A teacher's soul is not necessarily dead to the Beautiful because she neglects to apply high art to grimy walls. She may perchance be restrained by a sense of incongruity. She may feel also that to inculcate a love of nature something more is needed than a sickly plant and a collection of caterpillars or pollywogs. There are many kinds of cant in the world, and the educational variety is as bad as any.

The very fact that the schools are so near the people and so representative of them makes it a matter of course that all sorts of faddists long to tinker at the course of study. Every one who invents a new art or discovers a new science wants it introduced into the public schools. Reformers wonder what the public schools have been doing that they have not ere this cured every ill that soul and body are heir to. If war and drunkenness, gambling and cruelty have not been banished from the world, the schools have surely been shirking their responsibilities. Fads came and fads go, but a fad of some kind we have always with us. Happily, they are like Pharaoh's lean kine, inasmuch as one fad devours another. We have had the Grube system (where is it now?), apperception, nature study, bugology, child study, scientific temperance, object teaching, local geography and Hiawatha, besides others too numerous to mention. We still have a few, but I refrain from particularizing.

The elementary school is the base of the public school system, and should be its strongest part. Eighty-five per cent of the pupils end their school life in the grammar grades. Of those who enter the high schools less than twelve per cent go to college. It will readily be seen that the lower school is something more than a mere link in the chain that leads through the university. It constitutes the entire school life of more than half of the children. Whatever education is to do for them must be done then and there. While there may be a difference of opinion as to what subjects should be taught it can be universally conceded that the end of a wise educational policy should be to encourage individual effort, to develop will power and self-control, to inculcate industry, truth and honor as a basis of moral character; in short, not so much to make scholars as to turn out men and women.

Knowledge is proud that she has learned so much.
Wisdom is humble that he knows no more.
Knowledge and wisdom, far from being one,
Have oftentimes no connection. Knowledge dwells
In heads replete with thoughts of other men;
Wisdom in minds attentive to their own.

—Cooper.

Her Last Wish

The dying San Francisco society beauty closed her glorious eyes and leaped back on her many pillows, breathing but faintly.

The family clergyman elevated his eyes in pious expression, and only the sobbing of the members of the disconsolate family broke the stillness of the luxurious apartment.

The wan-faced sufferer raised one lily-white hand.

It was evident that she had something to say, for those once red lips, now pale, parted.

"What is it, my darling?" asked the weeping, heart-broken mother, falling on her knees by the bed.

"I wish—" gasped the dying woman, "I wish—"

"Yes, yes, my beloved, you have a last request to make. It will be granted. Express but your wish, my dear."

A faint smile played on the pale lips. "Yes," she whispered, faintly, "I wish that—"

"That what, my poor child?"

"That you will see that the list of those present is published in the society columns of the dailies."

—The Reporter.

EXCURSION RATES ST. LOUIS

ROUND TRIP Excursion Tickets to St. Louis and Chicago on sale July 1, 2, 7, 8, 13, 14 and dates in other months later at the following rates:

TO ST. LOUIS . . . $67.50
TO CHICAGO, passing one way through St. Louis . . . $72.50

RETURN LIMIT three months. Stop overs allowed on both going and returning trip.

THESE RATES GOOD ON OVERLAND LIMITED

Ask about the Through Tourist Cars direct to the Exposition.

613 MARKET STREET
SOUTHERN PACIFIC

BEKINS
VAN & STORAGE CO.

11 MONTGOMERY ST.

PHONE MAIN 1840

Oakland Office, 1016 BROADWAY

PHONE MAIN 285

PACKING, MOVING, STORING HOUSEHOLD GOODS

is Our Exclusive Business. The Only Safe, Quick and Economical Way.

—TRY US

Shipping at GREATLY REDUCED RATES in our PRIVATE CARS to and from the East and South.

LOS ANGELES OFFICE . . . 244 SOUTH BROADWAY
CHICAGO OFFICE, . . . 95 WASHINGTON ST.

PALACE HOTEL

San Francisco, California.

TOURISTS and TRAVELERS will, now, with difficulty recognize the famous Court into which for twenty-five years carriages have been driven. This space of over a quarter of an acre has recently, by the addition of very handsome furniture, rugs, chandeliers and tropical plants, been converted into a lounging room, the

FINEST
IN THE
WORLD

THE EMPIRE PARLOR—the Palm Room, furnished in Cerise, with Billiard and Pool tables for the ladies—the Louis XV Parlor—the Ladies' Writing Room, and numerous other modern improvements, together with unexcelled Cuisine and the most convenient location in the City—all add much to the ever-increasing popularity of this most famous Hotel.

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO STATE OF CALIFORNIA

In the matter of the Estate of SAMUEL DAVIS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given that the petition of Andrew Hendrickson for an order directing the executor of the Will of SAMUEL DAVIS, Deceased, to convey to said petitioner a lot 25 by 100 feet in Protrero Block No. 145, has been set for hearing on Friday, July 22, 1904, in Department 10 of said Superior Court, at 10 o'clock A. M., at which time and place any objections that may be presented to said application will be heard and determined.

FRANK H. KERRIGAN, Judge of the Superior Court

Endorsed, Filed, June 3, 1904.

By D. J. CRANE, Deputy Clerk

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO STATE OF CALIFORNIA

In the matter of the Estate of SAMUEL DAVIS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given that the petition of Michael and Mary O'Keefe for an order directing the executor of the Will of SAMUEL DAVIS, deceased, to convey to said petitioners a lot 25 by 100 feet in Protrero Block No. 145, has been set for hearing on Friday, July 22, 1904, in Department 10 of said Superior Court, at 10 o'clock A. M., at which time and place any objections that may be presented to said application will be heard and determined.

FRANK H. KERRIGAN, Judge of the Superior Court.

Endorsed, Filed June 3, 1904.

By D. J. CRANE, Deputy Clerk.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk.

Techau Tavern

The most unique resort in San Francisco.

There is not a more artistically appointed cafe in the country.

It is a place wherein the guest may feast the eye while dining sumptuously and being regaled with exquisite music.

The Tavern is now under new and experienced management, and patrons are assured of the constant attendance of the chief of the establishment, and of prompt service at all times.

Special attention is paid to luncheon, dinner and after-theatre parties.

Those who read much

are more frequently subject to eye trouble than others. There are, however, numerous modern occupations which bring on eye troubles that injure the brain and the physical system irreparably. Avoid danger by

Using GEORGE MAYERLE'S GLASSES

His Glasses insure health and a clear vision. Consultation Free. Open until 9 o'clock every evening. Geo. Mayerle's GERMAN EYEWATER makes weak eyes strong, sore eyes well, rests tired eyes. Price 50c. 62c by mail. Mail order or Wells-Fargo. Geo. Mayerle's Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers insure clean lenses without scratching.

Showing effect of George Mayerle's
Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers

GEORGE MAYERLE, German Expert Optician

1071 MARKET STREET

Two Doors from Seventh

CAFE ZINKAND

After the Theatre call at this Palace of Delights and revel in the luxuries of a spread fit for the gods, or drink of some of the best wine that ever chased the skeleton from the feast or painted landscapes within the brain of man.—Hogrove.

...THE...

German Savings & Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus - - - - - $ 2,423,751.69
 Capital actually paid up in Cash - - - - - 1,000,000.00
 Deposits Dec. 31, 1903 - - - - - 36,049,491.18

Board of Directors

JOHN LLOYD, President.
 DANIEL MEYER, 1st Vice-President
 H. HORSTMANN, 2nd Vice-President
 Ign. Steinhart      Emil Rohte      H. B. Russ      N. Ohlandt
 I. N. Walter      J. W. Van Bergen
 A. H. R. Schmidt,      Cashier
 Wm. Herrmann,      Asst. Cashier
 Geo. Tourny,      Secretary
 A. H. Muller,      Asst. Secretary
 W. S. Goodfellow      General Attorney

San Francisco Savings Union

532 California Street, Corner Webb

Deposits January 1, 1904 - - - - - $33,232,908.00
 Paid Up Capital - - - - - 1,000,000.00
 Reserve and Contingent Funds - - - - - 899,519.00

E. B. POND, President      W. C. B. de FREMERY } Vice-Presidents
    ROBERT WATT }
 LOVELL WHITE, Cashier      R. M. WELCH, Asst Cashier

DIRECTORS:

Henry F. Allen, William A. Magee, W. C. B. de Fremery, C. O. G. Miller,
 Robert Watt, George C. Boardman, Fred H. Beaver, Jacob Barth,
 E. B. Pond.

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits: Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

CONTINENTAL BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATION
OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital - - - - - $13,000,000.00
 Paid in Capital - - - - - 2,500,000.00
 Monthly Income - - - - - 150,000.00
 Homes built since organization - - - - - 1,250

Home Office 301 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

It might be well to remember
 when making a will

THAT THE

CALIFORNIA SAFE DEPOSIT
AND TRUST COMPANY

Is in a position to settle estates with the assurance that the administration will not change hands and that the estate will be prudently managed with absolute safety.

WILLS SAFELY KEPT WITHOUT CHARGE

OFFICES:

Cor. CALIFORNIA and MONTGOMERY STS.
 San Francisco

Mechanics' Savings Bank

Incorporated January 21, 1904

Capital Stock paid-up $250,000.00

OFFICERS:

President, James O'B. Gunn      Vice-President, Geo. D. Gray
 Vice-President, Geo. F. Lyon      Cashier, Frederick H. Clark

DIRECTORS:

F. W. Dohrmann, Jr.,      Geo. D. Gray,      F. M. Greenwood,      Jas. O'B. Gunn
 Marshall Hale,      G. W. Kline,      Geo. F. Lyon,      Geo. M. Mitchell,
 Chas. C. Moore,      Henry T. Scott,      W. F. Williamson

The Mechanics' Savings Bank has opened its doors for a general Savings and Loan business at the S.W. corner Montgomery and Bush Sts., San Francisco, Cal.
 May 2, 1904.      Open Every Saturday Evening from 6 to 8.

The Owl Drug Co.

is the largest concern of its kind in this country—it buys
 its goods in such large quantity it can sell them for less money than most any other
 druggist pays for them.
 Telephone orders filled at once and delivered free.
 South 356.

1128 MARKET ST., S. F.
 BROADWAY & 10TH ST., OAKLAND

La Grande*BRANCHES

5 A Taylor Street
 200 Mtgy. Ave. cor. Kearny
 202 Third cor. Howard
 1738 Market opp. Eleventh

Laundry
 23 POWELL ST.
 Phone Bush 12

Sews Buttons

Ordinary Mending

Work called for and delivered

FREE
 of charge

Rathjen Bros. 39 Stockton St.
Phone Main 5522

Complete Line of Imported and Domestic

GROCERIES, TEAS, COFFEES
 WINES AND LIQUORS

Special Sale Days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday

Look for Items in all the Daily Papers

J. PORCHER*HATTER

Latest
 Summer
 Styles

JOHN &amp; STETSON CO.

1109 Market St
 Odd Fellows Building, S. F.

HATS AND BONNETS

RUMPLE & RIEDEL
221 Geary St. We have just received a few choice French novelties in Hats, Turbans and Bonnets.

HAIR GOODS

G. LEDERER
Wig Maker and Hairdresser. Scalp treatments, Shampooing, Manicuring, Hair dyeing, Switches, Ornaments, Toupees. Complete line of pure Hair Goods only. 123 Stockton St.

HAT RENOVATORY

PANAMA HATS
Bleached and Blocked. 423 Sutter Street. 424 1/2 Montgomery Street. 1061 Market Street. Telephones Black 4616, Red 3212.

KIMONOS AND JAPANESE GOODS

KIMONOS
Silk and Cotton; Custom made and made to order; of every description at special low price. Call and inspect our large and artistic line. The Orient, 633 Sutter St. near Taylor.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR REMOVED

TENEYCK
(Miss) Electric Needle Specialist. Moles, warts and superfluous hair permanently removed by electric needle. All branches taught. References given. 201 Grant Building, 1095 Market Street, corner 7th.

For those who appreciate comfort and attention

Occidental Hotel

SAN FRANCISCO

AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN PLAN
A QUIET HOME
CENTRALLY LOCATED

GEORGE WARREN HOOPER, LESSEE

VEUVE
CLICQUOT
PONSARDIN

The most delicious
Champagne
of the Age

Yellow Label, Dry
Gold Label, Brut

Cruse &
Fils Freres

Clarets and
Sauternes

Creme des Grands
Crus
(Creme de Cognac)

A. Vignier Co.

429 & 431 Battery
San Francisco

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great

Museum of Anatomy

1051 Market St., bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.

The largest of its kind in the world.
Book "The Philosophy of Marriage" mailed free.
A Valuable Book for Men.

W. SCHEPPLER & SON

Dealer in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing
and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry.
1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Other People's Ideas

ON EDUCATION

'Tis education forms the common mind;
Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined.

—Pope.

A little learning is a dangerous thing;
Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring,

For shallow draughts intoxicate the brain,

But drinking largely sobers us again.

—Pope.

Learning by study must be won;
'Twas ne'er entail'd from sire to son.

—Gay.

Look through the casement of yon village
school,

Where now the pedant with his oaken rule,

Sits like Augustus on the imperial throne,

Between two poets yet to fame unknown.

—James T. Fields.

Be understood in thy teaching, and insistent to the measure of capacity;
Precepts and rules are repulsive to a child, but happy illustration winneth him.

—Tupper.

The more politic sort

Or parents will to handicrafts resort:
If they observe their children to produce
Some flashings of a mounting genius.
Then must they with all diligence invade
Some rising calling, or some gainful trade;

But if, by chance, they have one leaden soul

Born for to number eggs, he must to school;

Specially if some patron will engage
Th' adwoson of a neighboring vicarage;
Strange hedly-medly! who would make his swine

Turn greyhounds, or hunt foxes with his kine?

—Hall.

ON KNOWLEDGE

Learning is

A bunch of grapes sprung up among the thorns;

Where, but by caution, none the harm can miss;

Nor art's true riches read to understand.
But shall, to please his taste, offend his hand.

—Lord Brooke.

Learning, that cobweb of the brain
Profane, erroneous and vain;

A trade of knowledge as replete
As others are with fraud and cheat;

An art t' incumber gifts and wit
And render both for nothing fit.

—From Butler's "Hudibras."

Through knowledge we behold the world's creation,

How in his cradle first he fostered was;
And judge of nature's cunning operation,

How things she formed of a formless
mass;

By knowledge we do learn ourselves to know;

And what to man and what to God we owe.

—Spenser.

Residence 814 Grove St., S. F.
Telephone Page 81

HENRY P. TRICOU
Notary Public

Telephone Main 1880

306 Montgomery St.
Bet. Pine and Rush

SOHMER
PIANO
AGENCY

WARRANTED 10 YEARS
BYRON MAUZY
The CECILIAN — The Perfect Piano Player

PIANO
308-312 Post St.
San Francisco

ORDER SOME

"Club Cocktails"

SENT HOME TODAY.

You will then have on your own sideboard a better cocktail than can be served over any bar in the world. A cocktail is a blend of different liquors, and all blends improve with age.

The "Club Cocktails" are made of the best of liquors; made by actual weight and measurement. No guesswork about them.

Ask your husband at dinner which he prefers
—a Manhattan, Martini,
Whiskey, Holland Gin,
Tom Gin, Vermouth or York.

For sale by all Fancy Grocers and Dealers generally, or write to

G. F. Heublein & Bro.,
29 Broadway, N. Y.
and Hartford, Conn.

PACIFIC COAST AGENTS

Spohn-Patrick Company

San Francisco Seattle Denver
Salt Lake City Los Angeles

Visit the

Hoffman Cafe

Wm. J. Sullivan, Proprietor

Lunch, Grill and Wine Rooms

Half a block below Palace and Grand Hotels, S. F.

Fine Goods a Specialty. Merchants' hot lunch from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. An extra spread served on all holidays. Merchants' lunch served in Ladies Cafe and Grill, from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m.
Oysters, English Chops, Steaks and Delicacies a specialty.

Handsomest Cafe in America

Open all night. Private Dining Rooms for Ladies and Escorts

601 Market St. (S. W. Cor. 2nd and Market St.)

POODLE DOG RESTAURANT, CORNER
Eddy and Mason Streets, San Francisco—Private dining and banquet rooms. Telephone 429.
A. B. BLANCO & BRUN, Proprietors

CAFE ZINKAND

THE RESORT OF THE BON VIVANT

The fame of this popular cafe is world wide. It has become identified with San Francisco as one of its institutions. It is typical of the metropolis of the West. It is the place where wealth and culture meet after the theatre to discuss rare viands and vintages and to be regaled with high class music.

923-29 MARKET STREET

TOWN TALK

VOL. XII. NO. 619.

SAN FRANCISCO, JULY 9, 1904.

PRICE 10 CENTS.

BYRON HOT SPRINGS HOTEL CALIFORNIA

*Finest
Hotel in Central
California*

ONLY two and a half hours from San Francisco and at the entrance to the San Joaquin Valley. The most famous Springs and most elegantly appointed Springs Hotel in California perfectly unique in all its appointments; spacious and beautiful public rooms, sleeping rooms with private baths, bathing pavilion with tank of ever changing natural warm water, mineral and mud baths; croquet and tennis, delightful auto roads. Send for our handsome illustrated brochure or our Guide for Automobile Trip to Byron Hot Springs. Address, PECK'S INFORMATION BUREAU, 11 Montgomery Street, SOUTHERN PACIFIC CO. INFORMATION BUREAU, 613 Market St., or

H. R. WARNER, Manager

BYRON HOT SPRINGS - - CALIFORNIA

Home of MONT ROUGE WINES Livermore Valley, Cal.

CHAUCHE & BON, Proprietors

17 First St., San Francisco

TOWN TALK

SAN FRANCISCO, JULY 9, 1904.

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

THEODORE F. BONNET - - - Editor
CHARLES S. SMITH - - - Manager

609 MISSION ST. FOURTH FLOOR Telephone BUSH 713

SUBSCRIPTION.—One Year, in advance, $3.00; six months, $1.75; three months, $1.00; one month, 40 cents; single copies, 10 cents. Foreign subscriptions (countries in postal union), $4.00 per year. Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application. For Sale by all Newsdealers.

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

RALPH A. GROVER Manager of Advertising
New York Representative, FREDERIC M. KRUGLER, Room 918.
150 Nassau Street.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N. Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 200 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

No attention is paid to anonymous communications, but the wishes of contributors as to the use of their names will be scrupulously regarded. We cannot undertake to preserve or return manuscripts.

TOWN TALK is mailed to subscribers every Thursday and should be received in this city and vicinity every Friday. Please notify us of tardy delivery.

Our President Scrutinized

Let us take a dispassionate, non-partisan view of Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, candidate of the Republican party for election to the office to which he was called by a national bereavement. At the time at which we write this appreciation of our Chief Executive his opponent is yet to be nominated. We think it the duty of every citizen to consider whether Mr. Roosevelt has risen in the fullest measure to the requirements and burdens of the Chief Magistracy, and to examine the qualities attributed to him as an administrator and a leader. At this time we think it fair to ask whether he has carried into the White House the ideals for which he has so long stood. Sincerity is a virtue that the American people exact of their statesmen. They are ever ready to palliate the shortcomings and even the minor vices of greatness and genius, but when a reformer once receives favor at their hands he must ever after avoid the faintest symptom of insincerity. They love to show their appreciation of a man with high ideals, and they are quick to execrate the hypocrite. Mr. Roosevelt has always stood for justice, fair dealing and the uprooting of fraud and greed. He has always expressed a hatred of meanness and corruption. These are the moving forces behind his statesmanship. Prior to his elevation to the Presidency he was regarded as a wholesome power in politics, a patriot ever responsive to ideals of courage and manliness. He was acknowledged to be a man of untarnished public and private character, and of cultured mind. During his term in the White House he has been standing in the fierce light that beats on an American statesman, and it is now proper to ask, has he lived up to his ideals?

The Smashing Of Ideals

Before venturing a reply we are constrained to remark that a statesman might fail to live up to the Roosevelt ideals, and yet be deserving of the gratitude of his countrymen. Moreover, the temptation to abandon ideals is strong in the statesman who finds himself put to the necessity of resolving political expedients. Before his accession to the Presidency Mr. Roosevelt abominated exponents of corruption in politics. He detested practical politicians of the Hanna type. He believed that they jeopardized the best interests of the country. For awhile after he became President he took no pains to conceal his contempt for Mr. Hanna. But when he realized that the Senator from Ohio was in control of the great Republican political machine, he took occasion to conciliate that gentleman. Not only did he cultivate his political friendship, but he even condescended to lend eclat to the wedding of a member of the Hanna family. About that time one of the Roosevelt ideals went to smash. Converted to Hannaism it was not so hard for him to wink at the methods of Matt Quay. In a little while the great preacher of political purity was transformed into an unblushing exponent of practical politics. Long had he stood for the uprooting of fraud, but when the Post-Office scandals were brought to light, did our virtuous President insist on a thorough investigation? When the Democrats in Congress were demanding that the rascals be driven out and the Republicans were struggling to smother the fires of corruption, was Mr. Roosevelt holding fast to his ideal? No, Mr. Roosevelt had been persuaded that the best interests of the Republican party demanded the concealment of the facts. Those interests are his interests and he is convinced that for the best interest of the country he should be elected President in November. He probably reasoned that it was his duty to his country to refrain from doing aught that might imperil the joint interest of the country and the President. Hence the submerging of another ideal.

His Magical Personality

As for Mr. Roosevelt's ideals of justice and fair dealing they were sadly shattered when his sense of gratitude to the man who taught him the rudiments of the military art, prompted him to promote Captain Wood, the army doctor, over scores of gallant officers who had won distinction in the service of their country. By the promotion of Wood he established an outrageous precedent in defiance of the traditions of the army that have been accumulating since the institution of the military academy at West Point, but he proved his loyalty to his friend, a trait which has the approval of our own idealist, Mayor Schmitz, by whom it was extolled on the occasion of the Ruef banquet. Viewed in the light of his performances it cannot be truthfully said of President Roosevelt that he has lived up to his ideals. However, we should not permit his failure to wreck our faith in other men. Bad moral marksmanship is sad to contemplate, but some shafts go straight and true to the centre. None of us is temptation proof, and there is no temptation so strong as that which confronts a man in high office. We believe that Mr. Roosevelt is honest of purpose, and we regret that he has deemed it expedient to dissemble. Few there are that make good their compacts with their good angels. Roosevelt went into office intending to make a record for courage, manliness and devotion to principle. He found that to prolong his career he must compromise with the evil forces in politics. Many of his admirers have been disillusioned, but there are many that still idealize his every word and act. There is unquestionably magic in his name, and glamour in his personality. He became a picturesque hero in the war, not as a result of what he did but by reason of what he appeared to be willing to do. Today what he is willing to do is confounded with what others did. As President he has enhanced the glamour of his personality by his strenuous, alert physical and mental habits and his eagerness to be doing things. He is sensational at all times and sensationalism appeals to the mob. He has interfered in everything from the coal strike to the revolution on the Isthmus. He has bossed Congress and shocked conservative students of American history by taking the initiative at every opportunity. It remains to be seen whether he has the capacity to continue to seem as heroic as he has appeared. The task is one that would appall the ordinary man. Moreover, it is beset with difficulties, for it would be easy to take the fatal step from the sublime to the ridiculous. Though his long-continued heroic performance under forced draught has pleased the breezy West it has scared the effete East, and the conservatives have been longing for the nomination of a Democrat of a reposeful temperament for whom they could conscientiously vote. One thing is certain, and that is that Roosevelt is the Republican party for this campaign. Party principles have been subordinated to his personality, and it is up to him to keep pace with the popular belief in his heroic qualities.

Latest London and New York styles in Hats. Tom Dillon and Co., opp. Palace.

Melville's Wise Suggestion

Rear-Admiral Melville has made a suggestion looking to the creation of a reserve supply of naval officers for war which should receive the attention of our statesmen in Washington. He urges that the Government supervise the curriculum in some of our best technical schools and colleges, with the purpose of making their best equipped graduates eligible for commissions. By acting on this important suggestion the Government could safeguard against the shortage in the supply of naval officers which always exists in time of peace, and causes grave embarrassment when hostilities threaten. We have just seen how Russia has suffered from a poorly-trained lot of naval officers, and we should guard against a similar danger. Rear-Admiral Melville's plan is for a naval reserve drawn from our best scientific schools outside Annapolis, and it should appeal to every one desirous of having the American navy as well equipped in officers as it is in ships and men. Battleships are precious charges and no nation can afford to have them put into the hands of men unfit to care for them.

Frenzied Finance

Mr. Thomas W. Lawson's pretext for exposing the methods of the magnates of the Amalgamated Copper combine is that he wishes to show that their crimes are not due to their perversity but to the conditions which have made the defrauding of the public possible. He says that in their private lives their conduct is exemplary. They are good husbands and fathers, and have great sympathy for their fellow men, but they have availed themselves of the prevailing methods of modern finance to plunder the unsuspecting public. This is a mild way of stigmatizing them as hypocrites. They are the bank burglars, highwaymen and counterfeiters of the mercantile world who deceive themselves into thinking that they are just and honorable men even while they are negotiating corrupt schemes and seeking to gain personal advancement and power by trickery, intimidation and fraud. They stand high in the church and in society but they are incorrigible and unrepentant criminals. In these piping times of industrial wealth it is hard to distinguish between the highwayman and the man of affairs. In the great contest for wealth the object of the dignified financier is to get his neighbor's purse. He does not break into his house or lie in wait for him, but he seeks to create in him supreme faith in schemes that are swindles pure and simple. He is forever wheedling the gullible into investments that he knows are unprofitable. He uses his wits instead of a burglar's jimmy. When there is a scandal over transgression of law it provides a brilliant lesson in the true state of the business ethics of the times. But the scandals never amount to much. The righteous citizens that denounce the rascality are likely to indulge in a worse form of swindling when they get the opportunity. And the more we hear of these scandals the more convinced we become that the dividing line between custom and crime is almost imperceptible.

Perfected Christianity

Harold Bolce, writing of the present attitude of Japan in the June Booklovers' Magazine, quotes a Japanese university professor on the subject of religion thus:

The West cannot hope to Christianize Japan when our ambition is to Japanize Christianity, and to carry the new doctrines, the gospel of rational ethics, to the millions of Asia, and in time, to all the world. We shall go to China—in fact, we are already there—with a harmonious blending of the best precepts of Buddhism, Confucianism, Bushido, Brahmanism, Herbert Spencer, Christianity, and other systems of thought, and we shall, I think, have little trouble in awakening the naturally agnostic mind of the Chinese to the enlightenment of modern thought. What the Far East needs is a religion as modern as machinery. We have had more gods than were good for us. We believe that a cosmopolitan gospel, tolerating the existence, but minimizing the potency of prayers, offerings, shrines, temples, churches, litanies and gods, and dwelling more on the time that now is and the relation of man to man, will create a wonderful reformation in Asia.

This is, of course, extremely reprehensible in the Japanese, and gives rise to all sorts of forebodings, but let us be honest about it and look the matter straight in the face. The Japanese university professor has made his shocking declaration in plain words, but has he not arrived at a single bound in precisely the same spot as the advanced cults have led their followers? It is another example of the capacity of the Japanese for taking short cuts and making their way 'cross lots. For about four hundred years the occidental mind has been wrestling with religion,

The Hub
 CHAS. KEILUS & CO.
 EXCLUSIVES
 HIGH GRADE CLOTHIERS

Suggestions of money saving are not the incentives we offer to purchase clothes here. It's the creations we show that emanate from premier designers, whose talents with shears, needle and brain are of the highest class. Correct dressers say, "Immediate Service Clothes" for theirs.

132
 KEARNY STREET
 Churlow Block

Engraved
 Wedding Announcements
 and Invitations

ROBERTSON. 136 Post Street
 San Francisco

quarreling about orthodoxy and heresy and wrangling over the relative efficacy of baptism by immersion, infant damnation, candles, incense, robes, instrumental music and female voices in the choirs. They have burned and banished one another for the crimes of building meeting houses without steeples and placing their church government in the hands of a bishop or a synod. Stained glass windows and a rejection of the Scriptures have stood on an equal footing as ecclesiastical crimes, and pulpits have been turned into slave markets and places from which to retail jokes and raise a laugh in the gallery. So-called ministers of the gospel have cut up as many monkey-shines and planned as many freak entertainments by way of drawing crowds to what they were pleased to call divine worship as were ever presented from a vaudeville stage, and while one has affected to be pleased when members of his congregation slumbered during his discourses, others have made political speeches, discussed literature and lauded Judas Iscariot. Our so-called Christianity is simply an advanced paganism in which Ruskin, Herbert Spencer, Tolstoi, Ibsen, Maeterlinck, or any other name of the hour is as often quoted as that of Christ or St. Paul. We have been sending missionaries abroad these many years to teach the heathen a religion which has been discarded in all but name by ourselves, and the missionaries have trampled down one another's fields, a Baptist succeeding a Methodist, and being in turn followed by a Presbyterian or a Congregationalist, each bent on applying his own brand and cutting his own ear-marks, without heed for the signs already there. The result, which is a perfectly natural one, is that confusion reigns. The harried natives accept nominally every new religion that is offered to them, as the shortest way to being left to pursue their vocations in peace, blissfully unconscious that the seeming succession of gods is all one, until like the Cingalese whom Mark Twain tells of, some of them are good Christians with a hierarchy of two thousand. It is several years now since Japan decided, in the interests of peace, that no recognition or state aid should be given to any religious body for educational or any other purposes. It looks now as if this Japanned Christianity which they propose to introduce to the other Asiatics is nothing more than the final product of the friction and hybridization which have been going on all this while among Christians. The Japanese have let them do all the quarreling and throat-cutting. Now they will adopt the finished product, and gain whatever advantage there is in it, without having to look back to the persecutions and bloodshed by which the fusion has been accomplished. It is precisely as they have learned to use the telephone, the linotype, and the modern battleship, without having to await the long process of evolution.

Of Interest To Heiresses

The decision of one of the points at issue in the Venezuelan controversy so affects the status of the wife in an international marriage that it is surprising that so little attention has been directed to it. Hitherto it has been the rule to regard marriage with a foreigner as canceling the citizenship of the woman, who became thereby a subject of the country of her husband, but as eleven nations bound themselves to abide by the findings of President Roosevelt's arbitre, the dictum of Mr. Frank Plumley has now become international law. One of the points at issue was the jurisdiction over the estate left to a Venezuelan woman, the widow of an Englishman domiciled at Caracas, and it was decided that she is still a Venezuelan, not a British subject. This directly affects the status of all the American heiresses who have purchased foreign titles and regretted their bargains, for up to the present time they have been obliged, perforce and willy-nilly, to make the best of things. No matter how tired they became of their titled spouses, and no matter how good cause they have had for demanding separation, from the American point of view, they have had no redress unless their masters were willing to grant it. Even though they returned to mamma and sought and obtained divorce in the United States, they were still wives under the laws of the land of their adoption, and if they married again and were inadvertent enough to venture abroad, were liable to arrest and prosecution for bigamy if they crossed the frontier of their adopted country. Property rights are of course equally affected, for an American woman can keep a tight grip on what is her own. It is not likely that the titled fortune-hunter will disappear from Newport and New York on this account, however. It will result merely in a stricter attention to the marriage settlement and succession, and the heiress who wants a title will be none the less likely to agree to the price. It is not improbable that there will grow up some restrictions in the right to use titles, and possibly the princesses, duchesses, countesses and all the smaller fry of aristocracy will be asked to make a formal renunciation of their own country before they are permitted to sport the gay plumage of another.

The Abuse Of Libraries

W. L. Alden, the London correspondent of the New York Times, is opposed to public libraries supported by taxation. He says they are frequented by three classes: people who go to read the daily papers, the unemployed and idle who find there warmth and shelter without making any exertion to provide it for themselves, and the women and children who go for novels. Those who go to read the news are, as a rule, well able to buy their own papers; the class which strays in to be out of the heat or wet has no use for a reading room, and the novel readers, like those who seek the papers, could buy their own. As to the convenience for students, those who are at all earnest will never be likely to find the books they want in a free library. This is England, but are we any better off in America? Perhaps it is our better climate which protects us from the genus tramp, but we have an idle class which has contracted the library habit and which gathers in day after day to read all five of our daily papers, and which makes slow and laborious progress down each column, especially of the criminal news, and passes from file to file along the reading desks, spending hours in its lazy and leisurely perusal. There is a class of well-dressed women, invariably provided

CHAS. LYONS

LONDON TAILOR

721 MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO
Branch
122 KEARNY ST.

SUITS from $17.50 up

LARGEST
TAILORING
ESTABLISHMENT
on the Pacific Coast

DO YOU WANT AN INCOME?

DIVIDENDS monthly at rate of $60.00 per year on each 100 shares. Will sell limited number shares. Oil lands and mines for sale. Also best Cuban fruit and farm lands at special prices. Printed matter free. Bank references.

DEBENTURE SURETY COMPANY (Inc.), Suit B., Rialto Bldg., San Francisco

with a bag of candy to munch at, who are on deck in the same fashion for the weeklies, and who sit and cast black looks at those of their own class who have arrived before them. To judge by their dress and accompaniments, not to mention the time they can afford to waste, they must be people of means and leisure, yet they are unwilling to part with a dime for the superior comfort of owning their own copy and reading at their leisure. As to reference books and, for that matter, anything but fiction, it hardly pays a public library to invest. By far the greater part of the business of a library is the exchange of one volume of fiction for another, and it is rarely that anything but what is comparatively recent is called for. Women and girls are the chief patrons, and they read on an average half a dozen romances a month, without taking time for a breathing spell between. As with the newspaper readers, most of them are amply able to buy books, not in the quantities in which they devour them, but at least a dozen in a twelvemonth. Undoubtedly they would be the better for reading less and owning more. As long as libraries are supported by public taxation they must provide what the tax-payers want, and that is fiction—plenty of it and of the latest brand, but there is really no reason why books and newspapers should be supplied and reading-rooms warmed and lighted at public expense than food and clothing should be distributed. One may read a worn and tattered volume as long as a line of print is legible, and if the book were worth publishing in the first place it will afford pleasure and profit to the end, but the coat and boots of five years ago and the dinner of last week are alike unavailable now. It would not be an unendurable misfortune if public libraries were to confine themselves to such reference volumes as are too bulky and expensive for people of average means to afford, and let the devourers of current fiction and the people with the library habit supply themselves with their light reading and a place in which to enjoy it.

Honesty Mechanically Insured

In this age of invention and continual striving for the advancement of knowledge, how little do we appreciate the achievements of those who devote themselves to scientific discovery for the benefit of mankind! So accustomed have we become to the revolutionizing of the utilities by the application of new devices that we have ceased to be astonished at the marvelous. We scoffed at Marconi when he talked of wireless telegraphy, but when he demonstrated the practicability of his theory we accepted it as a matter of course. We accepted with blase indifference the application of the steam turbine, designed to revolutionize ocean transit. When the dream of making silk from the threads spun by spiders was made a reality nobody seemed to be interested. Some years ago it was thought that if a scheme could be devised to safeguard the elective franchise from contamination, the millennium would be brought within hailing distance. But the wildest reformer never conceived the notion that anybody would undertake to invent a mechanical device for making virtue compulsory. And now we have such a device in good working order. Its practicability has undergone numerous tests at several elections, in some of the principal cities in the country, and singular as it may appear this highly moral contrivance is not yet in general use. The United States Voting Machine, which is conceded to be the perfection of mechanism for the registering and tabulating of votes, has been adopted wherever public sentiment has forced public officials to give the community the benefit of the wonderful achievement of inventive genius. Considering, however, all that it has done and promises to do for this country, it is remarkable that there is a single precinct without it in any State of the Union. We are always quick to avail ourselves of any new device designed to enhance the creature comforts. How much more important is it to the State that it should avail itself of the blessings of an instrument designed to insure its stability. Here is a mechanical device that renders impossible not only repeating but disfranchisement. It is the essence of a reform that should make headway swiftly. It is no longer an experiment. It is infallible in registering the will of the people, in thwarting all schemes for the corruption of voters or for getting assurances that votes bought or bargained for are delivered. It is the realization of the dreams of American statesmen for a hundred years. We should be reluctant to believe it necessary to urge its adoption on the score of economy, or in that connection to point out that it obviates the necessity of employing clerks and watchers, and precludes election contests, those inevitable expensive nuisances. When this machine is in operation there is no opportunity for fraud in the wee sma' hours. The count is over within a few minutes of the registering of the last vote. A majority of one is all that is necessary to make the result final. The machine is the court of last resort. Its virtues are speed, simplicity and unvarying accuracy, and it is a boon which should be hailed with delight by all who are desirous of making it impossible for corrupt politicians to defeat the will of the people.

Stewart Edward White is an expert in woodcraft. Not only does he know all about the forests and their secrets, but now he is taking a hand in another branch of the science or craft. He has lately built him a house near Santa Barbara, for which he was the architect and building supervisor, and now he is making his own furniture. By the way, it seems to be a fad of the writers on this coast to build their own houses. Let us pray that it will prove a contagious one, for if the imitators and crank-turners who turn out the machine-made books will become enamored of hammers and saws they will have to give the pen and the typewriter a rest. Some of them may turn out to be pretty fair wood-butchers, but in any event their houses may be borne with greater equanimity than some of their books.

EMIL W. HAGBOM	C. H. REHNSTROM
REHNSTROM &amp; HAGBOM
FORMERLY SANDERS & JOHNSON
..TAILORS..
PHELAN BUILDING, Rooms 1, 2, 3 Telephone Main 5387
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

	For Breakfast
	For Breakfast
	For Breakfast

The Voice of Culture

BY THEODORE BONNET.

Though this is a materialistic age, dominated by utilitarianism, there is undoubtedly an undercurrent of revolt against the apotheosizing of success. And it is easy to see that this undercurrent has its course in the institutions of learning that abound in the land. While we may find fault with the methods of some educators, and grumble at the tendency of a few college presidents to bend the pregnant hinges of the knee in the presence of Mammon, it would be unjust and unreasonable to deny that there are in the faculties of nearly all our colleges and universities men who are exercising tremendous influence for good. It is not so much what they do in the way of fitting students for a career as what they accomplish in directing the thought of large masses of people. Despite the sordid spirit that animates most of us, the panegyricizing of the Captains of Industry, and the indifference to ideals, the exponents of higher education are given not only respectful but eager attention whenever they discuss questions of vital interest. To a large mass of the people of this country their utterances are oracular. So receptive are the minds of people to the philosophy of our college savants, that the latter are becoming moulders of public opinion. They have awakened interest not only in culture topics but in sociological and political questions. They are scholars and thinkers who apply to modern conditions the wisdom of the ages. In many of the colleges are men who have inspired the public with confidence in their sincerity of purpose, and who are unquestionably leaders of thought. Their views are instructive and are in demand by the leading publishing houses because it is known that they will be read. These men are stimulating interest in the higher aims of life. They keep step with the march of progress, widen the sympathies of those whom they address and interest, and seek not only to instruct but to uplift and to serve so that the cause of morality and learning and of human freedom and opportunity may be continually advanced.

The importance of our universities should not be measured merely by the capabilities of the men and women that emerge from them. It should be remembered that the men who succeed in any branch of business constitute a very small proportion of those who enter it. Failure to succeed in business is not evidence of unworth. Failure is frequently due to too much of that divine virtue, sympathy. Successful men are usually bores.

Academical institutions are important as bulwarks of civil institutions. They are cloisters of mature students, followers of Zeno to the extent of appraising the pleasures of the mind above those of the body. It is not as a mere teacher of the young that the faculty professor should be judged, but as an expounder of the truth, a conservator of taste and a worshiper of beauty. There is kinship between good morals and good taste, between the heart and the mind, and he who is insensible to beauty is blind to virtue. The faculty professor is a zealot for good government, and therefore it is that when academical institutions flourish civil institutions may be preserved unimpaired. And that academical institution is the best for the nation in which men are moved not so much to extend the empire of man over the material world as to promote the physical and moral good of their species.

In many of our colleges are men who regard material success as the parent of vulgarity. It is not their aim to qualify students merely for commercial achievement. They are satisfied if the student leave the college a liberally cultured man, capable of engaging in life's struggle but not insensible to the importance of ideals. These men are themselves students glad to be in a place removed from sordid environment and political turmoil, with no selfish ends to subserve, caring only if the truth come out in answer to their prayer. These men are of the temperament of those ascetic philosophers who devoted themselves to scientific research and to the cultivation of the classics in the monastic institutions of the Middle Ages. They are the men upon whom we must depend for a second preaching of the gospel to a nation of money-grubbers. They are the debaters of the world's questions with knowledge and without passion, seated in a place where ideals are fostered, breathing a pure and wholesome atmosphere conducive to health of mind. They can speak of grievous, crying wrongs, of conditions alien to the spirit of our system of government, of corruption in politics and oppression of the poor without being accused of anarchistic and communistic language. They may preach the doctrine of reform without being accused of demagoguism, and they may thunder against mob rule without being suspected of having been subsidized. Their indictments of the evils and frivolities of life are taken seriously.

When Colonel Henry Watterson launched his jeremiad against the smart set of Newport he was lambasted by the press for his scurrilous language, and lampooned for his silly exaggeration. It was supposed that the Kentucky journalist was merely trying to attract attention to his paper. But when that juvenalian outburst of Senator Lodge, against the abuse of wealth, awoke the echoes, pulpiteers, editors, essayists and statesmen sat up and took notice. "If the holders of immense fortunes," said Senator Lodge, "lose sight of the responsibilities which their great wealth brings, they become in my judgment the greatest source of danger which our modern times afford." And then he proceeded to condemn in scathing terms the ostentatious, vulgar display made at a New York wedding. The speech was delivered at the dedication of Clark College in Worcester, Mass. The speaker was a college graduate, a man of culture, and his remarks were commended throughout the country. It is on such occasions that college men are accorded the public ear, and that they take advantage of the opportunity to mould public opinion. These are the men we must rely upon, in an age of religious indifference, to call a halt when Folly takes the bit.

DEAFNESS

Those troubled with deafness are cordially invited to demonstrations of the MASSACON and ACOUSTICON at the offices of the

HUTCHISON ACOUSTIC COMPANY

W. B. EGAN, Pacific Coast Agent

Phone Priv. Ex. 216

417-418 Starr-King Bldg., 121 Geary St., San Francisco

IMPERIAL STUDIO

744 Market St.
San Francisco - Cal.

THE IMPERIAL STUDIO'S PARCHMENT PROOFS

Are the swellest thing the Photographer's art has yet produced. There are plenty of imitations. The real thing is a little more expensive, but it's worth the difference.

The Awakening of Woman

BY HARRY COWELL.

"Scientific" is the word oftenest used to designate that attribute of the age in which we live that is most characteristic of it and most significant; and of a truth we moderns have been setting the house of the mind in order, bringing it into closer correspondence with the wonderful order of the world without us. We have swept and dusted; we have washed our windows; and burned up much rubbish; in the sacred places is the odor of the latest disinfectant. We are nothing if not scientific.

But until a man has acquired the habit of observing the spiritual side of things physical and estimating them accordingly, his judgment on vital matters is not over likely to be just. Things that affect the soul are significant. Scientific discoveries, human achievements of all sorts, "movements," events, are important in proportion as they tend to modify profoundly the inner life of man.

Now, for a writer to speak of this as the age of woman's awakening is to make himself ridiculous in the sight of many a well-washed window. Nevertheless, the final effect of modern science upon human life, deep and lasting as it undoubtedly will be, is like to be insignificant when compared with that of this latter-day awakening of woman's soul from its immeasurable sleep.

What woman has awakened to, what she now clearly sees with eyes rubbed free of sleep, is a truth so obvious as to have remained hidden for ages; namely, that she exists for her own sake, not for the sake of man; that she is more than wife and mother: that she is human and half of the race of reeds that think.

Love is still, as it has ever been and doubtless ever will be, the lord of woman's life; but the "lord of terrible aspect" is now much more adorable to look upon than formerly; for today knows a love possible only between equals. For that matter, the warm feeling of superior for subordinate or of subordinate for superior ought to be called by some lesser name. In the love life of man also, no less than in that of his mate, the future may see strange modifications, with effects reaching into the very profundities. Indeed, love is lord of man's life also, let him deny it so vehemently; let his flippant lips be incapable of declaiming without a smile: "O Cupid, prince of gods and men!" Beside Love, Death is a mere bagatelle; the question of immortality interests us mainly because it involves the fate of the affections. Now, what touches the lord of life touches life itself.

While the outer life of man has been revolutionized by means of modern science, his soul has been but little changed thereby. Gradually, however, the inner life of man is being modified to meet the requirements of the awakened woman.

The arts, the handicrafts, the professions, religion, home, education, have all more or less come under the potent influence of what is known as scientific advancement, but have they not also felt the fateful touch of the awakened woman?

Naturally, the external effects of any great force take the eye—the eye of the observant few as well as that of the unobservant many. There is, moreover, a tendency on the part of the multitude to think in its thoughtless way that the internal effects are proportionate to the external; that is, if haply it give heed to the matter at all. That the soul of man in these post-Darwin days differs from the soul of man in the pre-Darwin days of our forefathers, is a fact that I am quite willing to affirm, as indeed I am to affirm any fact. Science—there is no denying it—has of late been internally operative. Its work in the secret places, however, has not been the wonder work of the woman aroused from sleep.

North and south, east and west; in ancient days and in days modern, the soul of man has been and is more nearly one and the same soul than the unthinking imagine. Beneath differences of appearance—skin, dress, and a thousand others—hearts beat strangely alike. Change in the environment means change in the outer life; but does it invariably or even usually mean corresponding change in the soul? The head is variable, the heart stable. Were Socrates, loosed by miracle from the hemlock slumber that is long and deep, to walk the streets of San Francisco, in the garb of Greece of old, talking his ancient wisdom, various gamins would doubtless guy him and the disciples of the late Herbert Spencer ungratefully laugh him to scorn; but they whose hearts have often in the still watches of the night kept beat with his great heart, whose eyes have recognized through the obscurity of the centuries his for the face of a friend, would give him worthy welcome, feeling in his presence such consciousness of kind as is caused by but few moderns, an affinity for him which difference of dress, knowledge, and the like, would do little to impair. 'Tis a miracle to be worked at will by means of literature and imagination. But I forgot; your moderns will have none of miracles. And yet I have fallen in with more than one man of my own time and place who has smiled happily to find himself on a footing of intimacy with Epictetus, the great slave, and with Marcus Aurelius, the good emperor. Strange, the great and the good our familiar friends! The vanity, however, has my heartiest approval. To the credit of ten thousand humble followers of the cross, and of humanity at large, be it said: they feel in their hearts akin to Christ Jesus, never to Judas Iscariot or to Pontius Pilate. Nobility is not new under the sun, nor meanness neither. The head changes, not the heart. The soul of Thomas Huxley, scientist, founder of agnosticism, most modern of cults, sobbing in the darkness, is of one dream stuff with that of the poet of old, maker of the book of Job, propounder of unanswerable problems.

I do not mean to assert that the soul is absolutely unchangeable—not that. What I wish to bring into strong relief is this: that a little change in the soul is a great thing, a thing of immeasurable moment, and that this great thing is now being effected by the awakening of woman. The difference between our mothers and our daughters is momentous.

Will life in the future be nobler in consequence; more worth the living? Who can say? But this, at least, I venture to prophesy: it will be different, different at the depths; the souls of our son's sons will not be as the souls of our father's fathers; and all because the women of our times are awake.

DECORATIONS For Weddings, Dinners, Luncheons, Receptions and Stores. Flower gifts attractively arranged. Bridal bouquets artistically specialized.

Original Designs in Favors, Name Cards,

Menus, Almond Dishes and Candle Shades

MISS CHARLOTTE F. WILLIAMS

121 Post Street

Tel. John 1911

San Francisco

Out of Town Correspondence Solicited

The Saunterer

Lawyers and Their Fees

According to the Bulletin Lord Alverstone, Chief Justice of England, told an eminent member of the San Francisco bar that he thought not more than five lawyers in London made an average of twenty-five thousand dollars a year out of their practice. The same member of the local bar says that he is not aware of one lawyer in San Francisco who makes twenty-five thousand annually year in and year out. I am surprised that any member of the San Francisco bar should be so lacking in knowledge of the affairs of members of his profession. I know at least three lawyers in this city who make over twenty-five thousand annually, year in and year out. One of them is Mr. E. S. Pillsbury, the Standard Oil attorney, whose retainers from that company, the telephone company and several other corporations aggregate sixty thousand dollars a year. In addition to that sum he is constantly receiving fees from stray clients. William F. Herrin's retainers are over twenty-five thousand a year, and so are the fees that Reuben H. Lloyd receives from the mercantile community. There is a big difference between San Francisco and London, but New York, which more nearly approximates the British metropolis, has scores of lawyers whose retainers far exceed twenty-five thousand a year.

The Coveted Big Fee

Many lawyers who are not blessed with steady incomes get rich quick. There are many lawyers in San Francisco who got rich off one case, and every struggling practitioner in town is eagerly waiting for the single big fee that will put him beyond the necessity of worrying about his office rent. The Fair case made half a dozen lawyers comfortable for life. John Garber has had several big fees during his career, and there were many successive years in which his income exceeded twenty-five thousand dollars every twelve-month. T. I. Bergin stowed away over twenty-five thousand a year for many years when he was in active practice and he is the richest attorney in San Francisco today. He is worth considerably over a million dollars. Lawyers are important factors in the commercial world, and the growth of corporations throughout the country has prospered the legal profession. It is in politics, however, that lawyers seem to be losing their hold. Comparatively few of the profession are figuring conspicuously nowadays in affairs of state. Mr. Roosevelt is a literary man and politician by profession. Secretary Hay has been poet, newspaper writer and diplomat. Secretary Shaw was a country banker before he entered politics, and his predecessor, Mr. Gage, was a city banker. Secretary Hitchcock was a merchant. Mr. Cortelyou, ex-Secretary of Commerce, was a stenographer, and Mr. Paul Morton was a railroad man. Mr. Roosevelt has had Mr. Root, Judge Taft, Mr. Knox, Mr. Moody and other able lawyers around him, but they have not predominated in his counsels as lawyers once did in the counsels of Presidents. Lawyers are still numerous in our legislative bodies but their political influence is growing less potent.

Where Was Filcher

Already rumblings of dissatisfaction over the work of the California Commissioners to the St. Louis Fair are to be heard. I should not be surprised if, after it is all over, and they return to receive the plaudits of their fellow-citizens, they will be summoned before the Legislature to render an account of their stewardship, and to be smirched as were the gentlemen who officiated in Paris. The knockers are already becoming active. The complaint is made that the California building in St. Louis is so remote from the centre of things that one requires the services of an experienced guide to find it. It is said that people who have visited the building were confronted by the legend, "Sign Your Name Here," and nothing else. Nobody was there to receive them, but they were eyed suspiciously by a janitor. When he was asked where they could get some information about California he regarded them in wonder.

Mamma Luning Stands Pat

Mamma Luning continues irreconcilable, I hear, to the marriage of her son and pretty Miss Button, with whom he eloped. The gossips say that she had set her heart on the matching of her precious son with a young woman residing in the East, and hence she was grievously disappointed by the course of true love running smooth in the unexpected direction. Not only is she unrelenting in her disapproval, but she has forbidden her husband to succor the young folks. He is quite sympathetic and is quite ready to do something for the boy, but meanwhile the only assistance vouchsafed comes from the Buttons.

Because He Loved in Vain

Angelo Conte, the young Italian who has been coddled by society people during his few years of residence in this city, recently returned from a trip to his native land. Much to the regret of many of our maids and matrons, to whom he was most interesting, he has announced his intention of going to New York to live. He enjoys the friendship of some of the smartest people in Gotham, and is particularly intimate with the wealthy Morosini family. During a discussion of his contemplated change of residence, the other day, I heard it hinted that he wishes to get away from San Francisco because this city is alive with the unpleasant memories of a dead passion. He is said to have been

BOORD'S

LONDON, ENG.

OLD TOM GIN,

"CAT ON BARREL" BRAND

CHARLES MEINECKE & CO.,
SOLE AGENTS P. C. SAN FRANCISCO

Go to the Factory to Buy    Phone Folsom 2812

TRUNKS VALISES AND SUIT CASES

You Get Your Money's Worth

J. MARTY CO.

Repairing    22 TURK STREET    Manufacturers

Sample Trunks and Bags to order

enamored of a prominent belle who was married last winter. The gossips love to weave threads of romance.

The Honoring of Rhodes

It is pleasant to be highly honored on your birthday. It is not exhilarating, however, while being highly honored, to be reminded that you are serving your second time on earth, and that the grave is yawning for you. That was what happened at the Vendome in San Jose last Saturday night, when judges and lawyers assembled at the banquet board in honor of Judge Rhodes, of the Superior Court of that city, the occasion being his eighty-fourth birthday. It was a notable gathering of distinguished representatives of the legal profession. The Supreme Court was represented by all the justices save Beatty, who sent regrets at the eleventh hour. Judge Lawlor represented the Superior Court of San Francisco and Judge Garber was on hand as the Nestor of the local bar. The hosts of the occasion were the members of the Bar Association of San Jose, but the head and front of the affair was John E. Richards, the combination newspaper man and attorney. Mr. Richards was the toastmaster and principal speaker; that is, he did most of the speaking. In every half-hour of the banquet Mr. Richards consumed twenty-five minutes. Consequently Mr. Richards constituted a large part of the show. It was really a gala affair, but the spellbinding had for its refrain, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." The keynote of the oratory was decidedly funereal. If the speeches had been made to slow music, "Flee as a Bird" would have been the prevailing tune.

McFarland's Story

Judge Rhodes is one of the most highly respected representatives of the Californian judiciary, and every man that journeyed to San Jose to do him honor was proud of the privilege of attending the banquet. And notwithstanding the tendency of the orators to remind the aged jurist of his finish, there were occasional rifts in the solemnity. Whenever Justice McFarland and Judge Garber meet there is bound to be a little fun. Justice McFarland, by the way, was called upon to act as Justice Beatty's substitute. In responding he said he feared that the Chief Justice would dissent. As Beatty and McFarland seldom agree it was plain that the latter was taking a mild fling at his associate, and the laughter that greeted the remark was uproarious. McFarland then told a story about a lawyer who was famous as a cross-examiner. He always seemed to impress people with his great shrewdness, but McFarland confessed that he could never quite determine what the attorney was trying to bring out. However he was usually successful. His manner was ponderously dignified, and juries seemed to take it for granted that there was a great deal behind his questions. One day he was defending a man charged with murder and the physician who had testified that the fatal bullet wound had penetrated the pleura was turned over to him for cross-examination. With impressive solemnity the lawyer asked the witness if he was aware that he was under oath and that all his utterances were given under the sanctity of his oath. The witness replied that he was.

"And you are a citizen of the State of California?" said the lawyer, interrogatively.

"Yes, sir," replied the doctor.

"And of the United States of America?" said the attorney.

"Yes, sir," said the doctor.

"Now, doctor," continued the attorney, "do you, as a citizen of California and of the United States of America, mindful of your oath and its sanctity, tell this jury that the bullet penetrated the plural?"

"Yes," replied the witness.

"And will you further state that the plural is part of the human system?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"That is all," said the attorney, and he looked triumphantly at the jury.

Metcalf for Naval Secretary

A friend in Washington has written me that, in the event of Roosevelt's election, Victor Metcalf will not long continue as Secretary of Commerce. My correspondent is in close touch with the President's political family circle, and he says that Mr. Roosevelt will make some sweeping changes after the close of the term for which McKinley was elected. He will no longer feel it to be his duty to retain in office men appointed by his predecessor. Among the changes contemplated is the appointment of Metcalf to the Secretaryship of the Navy, the portfolio which that gentleman desires. Morton will then be shifted to some other portfolio.

Mazuma Essential

Russ Lukens has not only seen his Congressional hopes decay but there is some likelihood of his being disappointed in his Senatorial aspirations. The old factional feud in Alameda county has broken out afresh, and the anti-Pardee forces are going to concentrate their energies on a program for the undoing of Lukens. They have become quite sanguine by reason of the report that Lukens pere has not so much spare change as he had when his son was elected two years ago, and they say that unless the Lukens have a plethoric sack to open they may as well keep out of the

Hotel Richelieu

The Leading and Finest Private Family Hotel on the Pacific Coast

1012 VAN NESS AVENUE

Bet. Geary and O'Farrell Sts., San Francisco

HOTEL GRANADA

1000 SUTTER ST.

The management of the Hotel Richelieu wishes to announce to its friends and patrons that it has purchased the property of the Hotel Granada, and will run the latter on the same plan that has made the Richelieu the finest family hotel in San Francisco.

HOTEL RICHELIEU CO.

ALASKA REFRIGERATORS

FOR GROCERS

BUTCHERS

FLORISTS AND

HOUSEHOLD -

TILE, OPAL OR
ZINC LINED -
PACIFIC COAST AGENTS

W.W. MONTAGUE & CO.
309-317 MARKET ST.

fight. In other words they are confident that Ross Lukens is not sufficiently popular to win the Senatorship without the aid of money.

As Sung by the Janitor

The recent scandal at the Alcazar inspired the janitor, who is an undiscovered Burgess, and this is his song:

There was a bold actor named Durkin,
A devil he was with his smirkin'.
His warm lamps he threw
On the young ingenue,
And now neither one of 'em 's workin'.

Under His Own Mahogany Tree

Herr Zinkand has been obliged to take the handsome Ross Valley residence on which he set his heart some time ago. After paying one thousand dollars deposit to bind the bargain he thought he had been a bit precipitate in snapping at the price and in a diplomatic way attempted to fashion the contract more satisfactory to himself; but the owners saw his object and insisted on their bond. They had the one thousand dollars in hand and they bluntly declared that they'd bring suit for the balance unless he consummated the sale on the original terms. Rather than have the screws twisted on him so fiercely Zinkand paid the balance, twenty-four thousand dollars, and took the property. It is a handsome place, but somewhat costly, as it requires at least half a dozen servants to keep it up. Since the new owner took possession he has put in a lot of rich furniture and the holding is vastly improved. He has made it one of the show places of Ross Valley. Most of the residents there, who delight in good living, are fond of dropping in on Zinkand one or two evenings in the week and taking pot luck with him. The latch-string always hangs out, for Zinkand delights in the "open house" and is extremely fond of of companionable folk about his hearthstone. Hermann Oelrichs is a frequent visitor around the fist-banged board.

Mr. and Mrs. George Beardsley (Kathryn Robinson) are rejoicing over the recent visit of the solemn-visaged, long-legged bird, and the little daughter which he left behind as a souvenir. The Beardsleys are living in an apartment house in Sutter street. Mrs. Beardsley is a model young wife who prides herself on her cooking.

A Cudahy To Marry

Mrs. "Jack" Casserly's good-looking brother, "Joe" Cudahy, is going to take unto himself a wife, and as he is the first of the Cudahy boys to contemplate wedlock, the wedding will be made the occasion for great show and rejoicing. Mrs. Casserly will of course attend the wedding. "Joe" Cudahy is a Yale graduate, a big, manly, dark-haired fellow with rosy cheeks and highly polished manners. He has been living in Omaha for some time, having had charge of his father's business interests. He has been very successful and is a credit to the house of Cudahy.

The Cudahys, by the way, have all turned out well. Though they have money to burn and are cultured there is not a drone in the family excepting, of course, the distinguished son-in-law, Mr. "Jack" Casserly, who is a gentleman of leisure. But Mr. Casserly is not unwilling to do things. He was a school director some years ago, and he is a lawyer by profession.

The Passing of Mrs. Norris

When Mrs. Norris passed away the other day not many people recalled that she was the wife, in her youth, of the brilliant Starr King. She was a very pretty woman in her youth, and her marriage with Starr King was a love match. She was still a very young woman when King died of diphtheria, leaving her with two little children, one of whom is now Mrs. Horace Davis. The son, Frederic King, is now a resident of San Mateo. Mrs. King's second husband was Mr. Norris of the Spring Valley Water Company. Her children by her first husband will inherit the fortune bequeathed to her by her second husband. Norris Davis is one of her grandsons and there is a whole flock of little Kings.

Le Gallienne's Prodigy

Richard Le Gallienne is sponsoring a volume of poems by an eight-year-old child, Julia Cooley. This is not the first time we have heard of the infant phenomenon, for Mr. Le Gallienne discovered her some time ago and immediately pre-empted several pages of a literary (?) magazine in which to exploit his find. The stuff was no better than what any child of that age might produce off-hand, and considering that Mr. Le Gallienne and an indulgent, if ill-advised mother, were at the little girl's elbow, to encourage and stimulate her vanity, the so-called poems were very much below what one had a right to expect. They were limping in meter, and false in rhyme. That much at least, we are entitled to, but when in addition, there was neither thought, feeling nor emotion back of them, to what purpose were they written down, much less put into print? No doubt little eight-year-old Miss Julia Cooley is a most engaging child, with a host of adoring relatives, but if they have regard for the future welfare and development of their pet they had better suppress her precocious muse. At best, they should keep her effusions for private circulation. As to the irrepressible La Gallienne, he has furnished some forty pages of biographical, descriptive and explanatory matter by way of introduction, and that sufficiently accounts for his enthusiasm.

John Dewar & Sons

Distillers to His Majesty

53 Gold and Prize Medals

Old Highland Whisky

Sherwood & Sherwood, Pacific Coast Agents

HAVE YOU HAD LUNCH AT THE RED LION?

New Grill for Ladies and Gentlemen

WILL BE OPEN ONLY FOR LUNCHEON, FROM 10 A. M. TO 3 P. M.
DURING SUMMER MONTHS

Any Evening the Whole or Any Part of the Dining Room may be Reserved
for Banquets.

"The Red Lion" is in the San Francisco Stock Exchange Bldg. It has two entrances from Pine St., just below Montgomery, and is also readily accessible from Montgomery and Bush Sts. through the Mills Bldg.

The Unfortunate Salisburys

Surely the Salisbury family is having a hard time this summer. Mrs. Salisbury is still far from well, and it is doubtful if she will be her old self before next winter's campaign. Sidney Salisbury no sooner recovered from a bad case of scarlet fever than his sister, Mrs. Danforth Boardman, became ill with the same disease. She is just out of quarantine.

Wedding Postponed

Anna Sperry and Lieutenant Corrigan are not to be married in August. Miss Sperry's preparations for the interesting nuptials were almost complete, and an elaborate trousseau had been brought over from Paris for her, by Mrs. Will Crocker, when Lieutenant Corrigan received orders to report for duty at Point Bonita. Now it is thought that the marriage will not take place until November. Anna Sperry is Mrs. Will Crocker's favorite niece. Some time ago when Mrs. Crocker scored a financial coup she settled a handsome allowance on fortunate Anna.

Katherine Wright, the social sensation of the past few weeks, has sailed for Manila. She made many friends during her sojourn here, for she is a very amiable girl, and will no doubt cut a wide swath in the social circles of Manila. The Malacanang Palace which the Wrights are to occupy is an imposing pile, which was the scene of many sumptuous functions under Spanish rule.

Her Hatred of Publicity

Nothing is quite so touching as the agony expressed by the average society woman who abhors publicity and loathes the reporters that exploit her social functions. One of the type who is eloquent on the subject of her grievance tells her friends that the society reporters are forever pestering her by summoning her to the 'phone for news, and that she always hangs up on them. One night, recently, some friends who had been invited to her home to dinner, knowing of her pet aversion, decided to play a joke on her. Before going to the dinner they rang her up and one of them represented herself as a reporter and asked for some information about the affair. She expected to be shut off, indignantly, but much to her surprise the lady was very cordial. She not only recited the list of guests, but gave an elaborate description of the gown and jewels to be worn by herself. The story has been going the rounds, causing a great deal of amusement.

"It's hard to endure the proud man's scorn."

"No harder than the rich man's gasoline."

The Ball That wasn't Pulled Off

Since the departure of the Peter Martins an amusing story has leaked out about the collapse of the plans made by the young society queen from Newport for a big ball with which she expected to bewilder our provincial aristocracy. The story as told in the boudoirs and drawing-rooms of the elect, and on the piazzas of the fashionable summer resorts, is to the effect that Mrs. "Peter" grew very enthusiastic over a contemplated pyrotechnic finale to her meteoric career in the Far West. She had attended a few balls during her sojourn here, and she conceived the notion that she could perpetuate her memory in local sweldom by giving a ball unique in grandeur and originality in the social history of California. She purposed showing the natives how a Newport hostess dazzles her friends. She was eager to give them something to talk about. She wanted to eclipse the Borel ball, and score a sensational social triumph in San Francisco. So she confided in her fond mother-in-law, whose home in Broadway was to be made the scene of this splendid function. The dowager Martin approved the plans of her queenly daughter-in-law, and Mrs. "Peter" was becoming jubilant over the prospect when the news reached the ears of Mrs. Walter Martin.

The Dowager's Veto

Mrs. Walter Martin did not enthuse a little bit. Indeed, Mrs. Walter Martin was never very enthusiastic over Mrs. Peter Martin. So say the gossips of the smart set, and they ought to know for they keep their eyes and ears open. They also say that Mrs. "Walter" not only did not approve of the proposed ball but actually frowned on the proposition. And Walter Martin, it is said, took occasion to do some very forcible knocking. Finally Mrs. Eleanor Martin decided to interpose a veto and the ball was declared off. This strange story is given credence in the swagger set with surprising readiness. It seems to be taken for granted that Mrs. Walter Martin felt that her more distinguished sister-in-law had been holding the stage-centre long enough, and that it was time to turn off the spot-light. The fact is that Mrs. Walter Martin has been keeping in the background of late, but nobody in society ever credits a person with relinquishing the stage centre voluntarily. Such is the craving for publicity that when a woman is not getting her share of it, it is assumed that she must be green-eyed.

London's Domestic Trouble

Dramatic enough to please the most exacting lover of headlines was the home-coming of Jack London. Jaun-

THE HOUSE OF

Moët & Chandon

was founded in 1743, and owns more vineyards in the champagne district than all the other leading champagne houses combined, and their sales throughout the world greatly exceed those of any other brand.

AUTHORITY FOR PREFERENCE

Moët & Chandon Champagne was the only Champagne used at

The Tour of the Prince and the Princess of Wales through Canada.	Dinner to the Prince by the City of Chicago.
Dinner to Prince Henry at the White House.	Dinner to the Prince by the Citizens of Milwaukee.
Launching breakfast at the launching of the "Meteor."	Banquet tendered by the OLD GUARD of New York to the Honorable Artillery Company of London, England
Dinner on the "Hohenzollern" by Prince Henry to the President.	DERBY DINNER to the JOCKERY CLUB, GIVEN BY KING EDWARD VII. ON DERBY DAY, JUNE 4, 1902.
Luncheon to Prince Henry at Annapolis	And at almost all prominent society functions.
Dinner to the Prince by the Captains of Industry.
Dinner to the Prince by the Citizens of Boston.

The New Vintage of

"White Seal" perfection in Champagne

WILLIAM WOLFF & CO., Pacific Coast Agents, SAN FRANCISCO

S. KRAMER

Suits, Jackets and Outer Garments

Made to Order

LADIES' ARTISTIC TAILORING

Phone Black 3831

218 Powell St., San Francisco

diced beyond endurance by the intolerable touch of yellow hands, he had harkened to the call of the cultivated and hit the high places for the land of white life—to find, upon his arrival, his belongings, down to his beloved books—the tools of his trade—tied up by home hands, and the fair name of a literary friend in the foul mouth of many, that beast of prey with no understanding which must be held by bit and bridle lest it fall upon you. Where Jack London abides is the abode of a philosopher; he lives wherever he happens to be. There uninvited Public Opinion is met, cap on head, knees inflexible; there Surprise, being ever expected, seldom intrudes. Now, Chance loves not the unbowed head; Fate has it in for the philosopher. But what a contemptible revenge: to put Generosity under writ of injunction; to seize an honest man's hand and slap there-with an unoffending lady's face; to take unawares a traveler down with nostalgia and surprise him into the belief that he is being sued for divorce!

The Woman in the Case

The well-informed will be very much surprised if the sequel does not go to prove that the noted novelist's wife is all for keeping him, willy-nilly, and not for letting him go. His liberty is the thing Mrs. London is least willing to give her husband. Mark my words: not for divorce will any suit be brought by Bessie London against Jack, but for maintenance. The name of the woman in the case is not to be found on the title page of the latest edition of the "Kempton-Wace Letters"; it is not explicitly mentioned in a certain lengthy legal document under seal in the city of Oakland; neither was it given by her godfathers and her godmothers at her baptism to any of the bold would-be hero-conquerors who were wont to besiege o' Wednesday nights the defenceless Bungalow on Piedmont hills; but it has long been known to friends of both the party of the first part and of the second; nor is this the first time that it has come between man and wife—it is Incompatibility.

Frank Powers's Principality

That picturesque settlement, Carmel-by-the-Sea, in Monterey, is becoming the home of culture. Its beauties are appealing to artists, university professors and other professional people, and they are building homes down there. Frank Powers, the attorney, is the ruler of this Carmel-by-the-Sea, owning as he does all the land that is most desirable for home sites, and he is cutting it up into villa lots, but he is not selling to the public. He intends to make it an exclusive settlement, and nobody is permitted to erect a home until the plans have been approved by a committee of artists. There was quite a gathering of congenial souls down there on the Fourth, and Mrs. Powers gave an al fresco dinner to her friends at "The Dunes," which is the name of her home, so called because of its being adjacent to the sand dunes. There are fifteen acres included in the dunes with the ocean on the west, the seventeen mile drive as a northern boundary, Carmel-by-the-Sea on the east and part of the old Camino Real on the south. The Powers home is one of the old Spanish houses built in 1846. The framework of the house has been strengthened and the interior completely remodeled. All the furniture was used in California in the fifties. The rosewood bed-room set was brought from the West Indies by a Spanish family in 1843.

Everybody goes to Moraghan's in the California Market for oysters. The Moraghan oysters, which are grown on their own beds off Burlingame, have a worldwide reputation.

The Uniformed Beaux Were Busy

The al fresco dinner was given under the eucalyptus trees that surround "The Dunes." They are over sixty feet in height and were hung with Chinese lanterns. The dinner consisted of Mexican dishes cooked by two Mexican chefs. Charlie Dickman was master of ceremonies and was ably assisted by Mrs. Mark Gerstle. Among the guests were Doctor and Mrs. Shiels, Charley Peters, his sister-in-law, Miss Murphy, Willis Davis, General Quinton and his two daughters, one of whom, Mrs. Mason, is a stunning beauty, Noble Eaton, Jack Watkins and about twenty army officers from the Post. And by the way those army officers are great gallants. About ten of them were obviously smitten with Mrs. Mason and two of them were contesting for the smiles of one of the Davis girls.

At the regular Fourth of July exercises Mrs. Gerstle recited "The Pride of Battery B," the Rev. Father Mestres, the handsome pastor of the Monterey and Carmel missions, gave an invocation, Frank Powers delivered the oration and Mrs. Benjamin of Chico read an original poem. In the procession were many of the women residing in the town, with Mrs. Willis Davis at their head. Within one year nearly two hundred homes have been built in Carmel. Professor and Mrs. Bernard Moses of Berkeley have bought a block of land on which Berkeley college professors are to build their homes, and Professor Stillman has bought a block for the Stanford professors. Chris Jorgensen is laying the foundation for his studio, and William Keith has secured a villa site.

Arrivals at El Carmelo include: J. P. Thorn, W. F. Stafford, A. H. Ramsey, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Baird, Madame de Seminario, Miss Mattie McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. D. St. Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Thomas of San Francisco; Mrs. A. D. Ireland, H. E. Goodwin, Salt Lake City; William Hume, Eagle Cliff, Washington; Mrs. Borrowe, Miss Borrowe, Sausalito; E. R. Dible, Mrs. R. C. Brunser, Geo. E. Fairchild, Oakland.

High Grade Knitted Wear

BATHING SUITS

The Neatest, Nicest and Most Satisfactory Garments on the Coast

UNDERWEAR

In Linen, Lisle, Wool and Silk

Made to Order, if desired, Fitting the Form and Pleasing All Wearers. Made for Both Men and Women.

LADIES' KNIT JACKETS

Sweaters

Jerseys

Gymnasium Suits

Athletic Supplies

Tennis Goods

J. J. Pfister

KNITTING CO.

60 GEARY ST.
San Francisco, Cal.

Open Saturdays till 10 P. M.

Exquisite Decorations and Stunning Gowns

The two big weddings of last week were marked by exquisite decorations. Hydrangeas in pink and blue were largely used in both cases, though the Hellman drawing-room where one ceremony was performed was, most appropriately, in white and gold. Above the bridal pair hung an urn filled with golden-rod and Easter lilies. Both weddings were in excellent taste. The two brides were a great contrast, Miss Hecht being plump and blooming while the former Miss Hellman is spirituelle and slender. The Hellman-Ehrman wedding was largely a family affair, very few outsiders being invited, for the family connection is so immense that it alone comprises about a hundred, and they came from far and near. Some of the gowns worn at the latter wedding were very handsome. Mrs. M. Ehrman, the bridegroom's mother, looked like a girl herself in her priceless Irish point gown. Miss Belle Gerstle was a picture in lavender taffeta, and nothing could have been more chic than Miss May Greenebaum's Rococo organdie. Miss Sutro wore a becoming blue crepe frock, and lovely Paris creations were worn by Mrs. David Neustadter, Mrs. Abraham Stern and Mrs. Helen Hecht. Mrs. I. W. Hellman and Mrs. E. S. Heller, who received the guests, were both beautifully gowned.

Merely Conjecture

The very latest morceau of gossip from the inner circle of the elect is that the Maddox-Blanding engagement is off. It is merely a rumor, and is interesting inasmuch as it affords an insight into the process by which the gossips put two and two together. Since her engagement was announced, say the gossips, Miss Blanding has been taking the rest cure, and within a short time after the announcement was made it was reported that she was going to take a trip to Europe for "a year or more." "What more do you want to know?" ask the gossips. "No girl," say they, "ever needs a rest cure when she becomes a fiancée; neither does she decide on taking a trip to Europe for an indefinite period." Incidentally it should be stated that they have noticed that Mr. Maddox has been looking very gloomy of late, and as he has been attentive to the elder Miss Blanding, the aunt of his fiancée, they have suspected that he has been trying to throw them off the scent.

And the Dancers Waited

Mr. Maddox has never been much of a beau, and by the way he usually wears a preoccupied air that gives him a gloomy appearance. The first I heard of him socially was when he arranged a dance for the Yale Glee Club which was here on a concert tour. I recall that his mother took a deep interest in the affair which took place in the Maple Room of the Palace. Knoxie was the master of ceremonies and made all the arrangements, and at the eleventh hour it was discovered that he had forgotten to hire an orchestra. There was then much anxiety and everybody stood around until some scrub musicians were rounded up, and then it was on with the dance.

REMEMBERTan Shoes are Being Slaughtered

I am determined not to carry over one pair. The Best Shoes made in this country at Ridiculous Prices

GODFREY FISHER,945 Market StreetCupid in Actor Clarke's Pay

None of the friends of Alice Deming are surprised that her matrimonial experiences with Harry Corson Clarke, the actor, have ended in the divorce court. But the loudest "I told you so's" are heard around the family hearthstone, for it was there the opposition to the union of the actor and the daughter of the household was strongest. The singular feature of the divorce suit, though, is that the sister of the plaintiff was the main witness against the erratic Harry Corson. On the steamer trip to Honolulu, when he first met the Deming girls, it was an open secret on board that both seemed to be deeply smitten with his ways and Thespian airs. Afterwards, in Honolulu, where he and the other members of the Frawley company were in a measure invited into society, it was an openly discussed question among the gossips which of the sisters would become Mrs. C. When the question that might have bothered the love-lit Paris was so airily settled by Harry and his election lighted on Alice the tea babbies wondered how Adelaide would take it.

Bruguiere Baby Sterilized

Pedar Bruguiere is playing the role of Papa in the same eccentric fashion that characterizes all the parts fate assigns him. Mrs. Bruguiere Number Two is a beautiful woman and the baby has inherited much family pulchritude. Pedar is taking every precaution to preserve the child's good looks and good health. When Mrs. Bruguiere Sr. returned from Newport she wanted to take the youngster to her heart, but with a horrified cry son Pedar exclaimed, "Don't touch the baby! You've just come in from the street and heaven knows how many germs are hopping around you."

Pedar Chases Germs

If a germ wants to get its clutches on Baby Bruguiere it will have to come early and avoid the rush of antiseptic precautions which protect the child. Even the rug it sits on is sterilized every day, to say nothing of clothes and

HAVE A BEER WITH YOUR RACKET

MAKE A RACKET IF YOU DON'T GET

Rainier

JOHN RAPP & SON, AGTS., S. F.
Distributors in every town on the coast.

toilet articles. No osculatory demonstration on the part of relatives and admiring friends is permitted. When Mrs. Brugiere wants to kiss and fondle her own child she sends a maid out into the street, stations another one at the back door and places sentries in all the windows to warn her if Papa Pedar is coming.

Professor Jaffa's Experiment

Old-fashioned folk who do not believe in modern nursery methods will watch the Brugiere baby with interest. As a rule these scientifically brought-up children are rather disappointing. The famous Jaffa baby, who was fed out of the fullness of the father's knowledge of dietary laws, is a very puny child. Professor Jaffa is the acknowledged authority in California on the relative nutritive value of various food stuffs and the results of his experiments in these lines are printed and distributed by the Department of Agriculture. His child from the moment of its birth was carefully watched and a tabulated account kept of the kind and quantity of food given to it. Theoretically the scientists know to a fraction just how much of this, that, and the other the juvenile system requires to keep it in perfect form. Probably no child has ever been so hygienically and scientifically fed and yet today the Jaffa child is a weakling, while playmates growing up all around, who fill their little tummies with all sorts of things, are as happy and healthy as the day is long.

Millicent Shinn Looking For a New Subject

Everyone knows that Millicent Shinn's "Biography of a Baby" was the result of a psychological study of her own little niece. But not everyone knows that the child's mother has refused to further the interest of science at the sacrifice of her little daughter's disposition. Mrs. Shinn says that the system of espionage makes a youngster precociously self-conscious and she has put a stop to it. The sort of mental dissecting which the scientific observer must indulge in is hardly antiseptic for a child.

He is Not Immoral

Lieutenant-Commander Fidelio S. Carter, of the navy, has many friends on the Pacific coast who will be glad to hear that he has again managed to extricate himself from a difficulty. When an examining board on the Asiatic station, not long ago, found him "professionally, physically and morally unfit for promotion," things looked black indeed for little Fidelio, and it seemed inevitable that he would be relegated to private life. Fortunately for the unlucky officer, his friends at court had his case carefully investigated by the Navy Department, with the result that, while the other disqualifications have been confirmed, the moral stigma has been removed, and it is now probable that he will be retired from active service instead of being dismissed.

Gallant Lieutenant Blue

Lieutenant Victor Blue, of the navy, a brother of Dr. Rupert Blue, who is well known in this city, will probably visit San Francisco in a few weeks, en route to his home from a long tour of duty on the Asiatic station where he has served as flag lieutenant to two commanders-in-chief. Lieutenant Blue is one of the modest heroes of the service; but little is known outside of the navy of his gallantry. It was he who made a daring reconnaissance around Santiago during the Spanish war, and brought to Admiral Sampson the first detailed authentic news of the character and location of Cervera's squadron. He made the hazardous trip twice, and was inside the enemy's lines for three or four days and nights.

Strange Case of Colonel Long

Surprising is the news that Colonel Oscar Fitzalan Long, who married Amy Requa, is to be promoted to a brigadier-generalship and immediately retired. Though he is nowhere near the age limit it appears that his usefulness to the War Department is at an end. When Colonel Long's office was under a cloud during the war, his friends had absolute confidence in his integrity, but it was felt that he had been careless so far as keeping tab on his subordinates was concerned. However, he was on the defensive for awhile and considerable time was spent in investigations. A little later it was given out that he was to be promoted to the highest position in the commissary department in Washington. He went to Washington, where he remained unassigned for months, during which period he was on the anxious seat. Finally he did receive his appointment, but not the one he had been promised. And now comes the news of his impending retirement.

Our Model Consul

A correspondent in the Orient writes me, under date May fifth: "The Third Assistant Secretary of State, Pierce, has been in Canton for the last week investigating

THE HIGHEST
 Optical reputation. Most reasonable prices.
 Inventors of Shark Skin Grips and Comfort Eye Glasses. Money saved you on Oculists' Prescriptions.
The Haskell & Jones Co., 243 Grant Ave.

charges against McWade, our Consul at that point. I believe he has finally decided that they were all false, so Robert will continue in power. If an American full of the 'We are the Nation' idea will only start globetrotting he won't have far to go before he has it in for everybody from George Washington down. This self-same Consul was present at the opening of the Fatshan division of the Imperial Chinese Railway last November. About two hundred people had been brought up from Hong-Kong and, as this was a big event, all nations were represented by their Consuls. After dinner they all had their little say, and McWade, having hit them up a bit rapidly, interrupted the proceedings by standing, with the aid of a bottle of champagne, and singing "Auld Lang Syne." Some of the Americans present tried to make him subside but he preferred to finish his stunt. On another occasion, when bidden to a luncheon given by some of the Consuls' wives, somebody in the party who noticed McWade's 'edge' cried, "Three cheers for Ireland." The things our Consul said to the cheerful spirit are, I am told, not to be found in Webster's Unabridged. The fair ones at the luncheon were properly shocked. And yet you people at home wonder why it is that our British cousins in the Orient get handy with an eye-glass and say 'Fawney!' when we are presented. You never hear of these things in the States and you are too busy making money back there to let it bother you, in any case."

When Drake was a Lieutenant

I heard a good story the other day about Commander F. J. Drake, the ordnance officer at the Mare Island navy yard. Drake was in the navy in the old days when lieutenants frequently reached their fortieth year before being promoted above that grade, and were consequently soured in disposition. He was one of the elderly lieutenants, and a watch officer in the old "jackass" frigate Pensacola, now the station ship at Goat Island. It was blowing fresh one stormy morning in the Mediterranean and it became necessary to shorten sail. Drake was responsible for taking in the light sails on the main and mizzen, and the officer of the forecandle, a young midshipman just out of Annapolis, was looking out for the fore. Drake had no affection for midshipmen, and spent more time watching his junior's work than his own masts. Suddenly he ran forward. "Forecandle there!" he cried, "you are not rounding in your brace properly, sir. You ——" Just then there was a cry from aft. The mizzen gear was jammed and the main topgallant had broken loose, with a parted sheet, and Drake had troubles of his own. It took him some time to get things clear, and his temper was not improved when, in the midst of his mishap, the middy from the forecandle blandly reported: "All furl'd forward, sir," without cracking a smile. After that Drake always made sure of his own territory before tackling any of the youngsters.

The California Drama

So we are to have the drama of California! Charles Keeler is to be the Yeats of the Pacific Coast. He has established a cult, and as he is much admired by the skirted sex, fair ones are flocking to his standard. His play, "Viviana of San Luis Rey," is in the nature of an effort to exploit in the drama the early romance of California. It presents pictures of life in the shadow of the old missions, the time being 1812. Herman Whitaker will write a play dealing with the days of '49, and Johannes Reimers of Stockton will write a third, drawing his inspiration from the Spanish-American war.

Greyrigg of Rigg

The return of Robert Greyrigg has occasioned a flutter among the buds. This young man has had a somewhat romantic history. He is a son of Mrs. Wilfred B. Chapman whose first husband was a young baronet, Grey Greyrigg of Rigg, England. About a year after their marriage they went to Del Monte for a few weeks. Greyrigg was a great tennis enthusiast and spent much of his time in the courts. After a heated set one day he took off his sweater and threw himself on the grass to cool off. He contracted pneumonia, and three days later he died, leaving a large fortune to his young son. Robert Greyrigg was brought up in ignorance of the estates which belonged to him, and only lately was he made aware of his inheritance. Mrs. Chapman sent her son to Oxford that he might learn English ways and customs, and fit himself for the management of his interests in England. It is said that he fell in love with a San Francisco girl before he went to college, but he may have outgrown his youthful passion.

RICH!

in the tonic properties necessary to quiet tired nerves and build up a run down system are the Wines and Liquors we offer for sale. They are endorsed by too many people to be without worth, and to show our belief we ask you to try a bottle. We leave the decision to you.

RATHJEN WINE CO.

46 ELLIS STREET

Telephone Main 5171

NEAR MARKET

BALMORAL CASTLE

JOHN BEGGS

LOCHNAGAR

Scotch Whisky

As supplied to all the Royal Palaces for over fifty years

A Book of Toasts

The Spinners' Club, that organization of clever minds, has gone in for the serious work of publication. Under the name of "Clotho," some of the members have compiled a book of toasts which is to be published shortly by Paul Elder. The volume is to be rather an artistic thing, and the toasts are unique and brilliant. Some of them are by J. D. Phelan, Wallace Irwin, George Sterling, Howard Sutherland, Grace Luce Irwin, Ednah Robinson, John Vance Cheney, Gelett Burgess, John McNaught, Ernest Simpson, Ambrose Bierce and Will Irwin.

The Pomp And Circumstance Of Knighthood

Though General Horace Porter, as stated in the despatches, is the first citizen of the United States to receive the Grand Cross of the French Legion of Honor, he is by no means the first American envoy to have a foreign decoration conferred on him. Charlemagne Tower, the United States Ambassador to the court of Berlin, whose wife, by the way, is expected to arrive shortly at her Oakland home, has received two of the five grades of this French national order, and Major Rathbone of this city received one when he was consul at Paris. Many citizens of this country holding diplomatic positions abroad have received orders of knighthood from foreign governments without any objections being offered either by the State Department or by Congress, to their acceptance or to their being worn. If General Porter were a French citizen instead of a foreigner, the possession of the Grand Cross would have carried with it a pension for life of seven hundred and fifty dollars a year. But foreign knights, no matter what their grade, receive no pecuniary indemnity. However, as a Knight Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor, General Porter will, even after he retires from the post of Ambassador at Paris, be exempt from the jurisdiction of the ordinary tribunals of France, the only court competent to deal with any offence with which he might be charged being the Supreme Court. Moreover, should he die in France he would be entitled to the most imposing military honors, the presence of the greater part of an entire division of troops being de rigueur.

Princess Mathilde and Her Salon

The sale of the jewels of the late Princess Mathilde, in Paris the other day, revived many pleasant reminiscences of this remarkable woman, who for fifty years held the sceptre of social supremacy in the French capital. During the early part of the Second Empire her salon was in reality the court club. She was a woman who held a real salon, not a mere gathering of people assuming culture, but genuine brains and men of genius. At her salons one met the Houssayes, Boulanger, Gerome, Maupassant, Alexandre Dumas, Doucet, Sardou, Bourget, Comtesse Walewska, Coppee and other celebrities, all of whom were her friends. She was a very witty woman, and many of her bright sayings have been preserved. At one time when Bernard, the great scholar, was at her house, she desired to listen to him alone but was obliged to chat with two women visitors. After the latter had gone, the Princess remarked: "Really, thirty years' apprenticeship to the world should suffice; then one should go on the retired list, and no longer be called upon for the boring duties of society." She considered women, as a whole, mediocre. "Imagine it!" she exclaimed, on one occasion, "When a woman enters, I am obliged to change the subject of conversation. The intelligent women of the day, yes, I am ready to see them again. I would receive Mlle. Rachel or George Sand." She did not care for children, and regarded her sex as somewhat in the same light. She was highly educated, and used to tell how she had eighteen piano-teachers and seven writing-masters, yet she wrote a rather illegible hand in spite of all her lessons. One of her friends once questioned her as to the condition of her soul. "Oh, madame," returned Mathilde, "at my age, people do not have souls." And when Madame Doucet asked if her Royal Highness loved as ordinary mortals love, she replied, "I do not know. I am not a princess of divine descent." The Emperor wished at one time to marry Mathilde, but she would not consent. "If I had married him," she said later, "it seems to me I would have broken open his head to see what was inside of it." Her jewels were very valuable. Pearls were her favorite jewels and she had one pearl necklace, given by Napoleon I to her mother, Queen Catherine, that was estimated at one hundred thousand dollars.

Another Engagement Rumored

From several sources the story comes to me that Grace Gowing has completely recovered from the depression resulting from the unhappy termination of her marriage, and that she is preparing for another honeymoon. I should hope the story were true, for competent authorities agree that grass-widowhood is a dreadful bore. But the engagement has not been announced, and I am sure that the story of the match is merely the surmise of somebody with a long leased wire leading to Cupid's court. The reputed fiancée is none other than Duncan McDuffie, the popular young University of California man. The gossips insist on matching this young bachelor with somebody. Not long ago it was rumored that he was engaged to Miss Chrissie Taft, the sister of his friend Maxwell Taft. The rumor was without foundation. He has lately been politely attentive to Mrs. Gowing, and the tea-tabbies concluded that she was to be the favored one. It was a little over six months ago that Mrs. Gowing sued her husband for a divorce, and sought seclusion in the beautiful home of her parents, the W. R. Gorrills, in Hillside avenue, Piedmont. She had the deep sympathy of Oakland people, for she is one of the most charming and intellectual matrons in the exclusive set across the bay. Upon inquiry I learned that the story of her engagement was circulated absolutely without authority.

RUINART

The fascinating quality of Ruinart has made it the choice of the elite of the world's society.

Hilbert Mercantile Company
PACIFIC COAST AGENTS
V. W. GASKILL, Special Agent
San Francisco, Cal.

What the Tramp Wanted

In the neighborhood of Twelfth and Market streets, Oakland, there are several feminine medicos living within a block of one another. Dr. Myra Knox's sign reads simply "Dr. Knox," and Dr. Annette Buckell has dropped her Christian name, too. The other day a tramp made his appearance at the office of one of the doctors, and she responded to his summons.

"Beg yer pardon, mum," said the tramp, "but might I trouble yer fer a pair of the doctor's old pants?"

"He hasn't any old ones," said the lady, "try the doctor next door."

And from one to another the tramp was shifted along the row of women doctors until the whole neighborhood was shrieking with laughter.

Busy Mrs. Nuttall

No work done in connection with the University of California is quite as interesting as that of Mrs. Zelia Nuttall, who is engaged in archaeological investigations in Old Mexico. In the line of her explorations, she has reached the ruined temple of Tepaztlan in the State of Morelas, besides making two trips to the ruins of San Juan Teotihuacan. Mrs. Nuttall is already well known among scientists as the translator of "The Book of the Ancient Mexicans." She has spent years in studying and digging up the facts that are embodied in this remarkable volume which has attracted widespread attention among archaeologists. She has lately turned her attention to a translation and commentary of a sixteenth century map of the Valley of Mexico, prepared for King Philip II by Alonzo de Santa Cruz, his cosmographer. The color facsimile of the map is now being made at the government printing office in Stockholm.

Sympathetic Colonel Bauer

Student soldiers of the University of California are jubilant over the "roast" given the professors in the report of Colonel George W. Bauer, commander of the Alumni commissioned officers, to President Benjamin Ide Wheeler. In this report Colonel Bauer declares that there is a clique in the faculty that is hostile to the military department. To the students military and to their commandant, Colonel Henry de H. Waite, he accords much praise, paying them compliments that are almost fulsome in their general tone. The opposition alluded to is that of the professors who have endeavored to have the hours of drill changed from eleven o'clock in the morning to four o'clock in the afternoon. According to Colonel Bauer the former hour best suited the students as they were not then fatigued by their day's recitations and study. This view of the case is arousing a good deal of amusement in Berkeley among those who are familiar with the not over-strenuous work done by many of the students. It is said that a wager has been laid that if anything in the way of entertainment, no matter how tiresome, were proposed for four o'clock, it would be eagerly welcomed by these same young men.

Savants Of The Summer School

The present session of the Summer School at Berkeley is the most remarkable ever held in this country, both on account of the number of students enrolled—nearly twelve hundred—and the prominence and standing in the fields of science and literature of the lecturers who have assembled under the great live oaks. Among the notable foreigners are Svante August Arrhenius, professor of physics in the University of Stockholm, who will give three courses in physical chemistry; Hugo de Vries, professor of botany in the University of Amsterdam, who will have associated with him in his especial field, Jacques Loeb, professor of physiology in the University of California, the three making the strongest group of scientific experts in the world. James Ward, professor of mental philosophy, Cambridge University, England, will enter courses in his specialty. In history, Professor Frederick Jackson, of the chair of American history in the University of Wisconsin, who is acknowledged to be the foremost authority on subjects relating to American history, will be supported by Archibald Cary Coolidge, assistant professor of history in Harvard University, and Professors Bernard Moses and Henry Morse Stephens of the permanent staff of the University of California. The faculty also includes such noted scholars as Francis Barton Gummere of Harvard College, and Hammond Lamont, managing editor of the New York Evening Post and former professor of rhetoric in Brown University, in English; Frank Morton McMurray of Columbia University, in education; Morris Hickey Morgan of Columbia University, the classics; Charles Hall Grandgent, Harvard; Edward C. Armstrong of John Hopkins, and Fonger de Haan of Bryn Mawr, romance languages; Dr. Richard Aldsworth Daly, geologist to Canada for the International Boundary Commission, physical geography.

Artistic Interiors Designed and Decorated

Ideas and Estimates furnished for all classes of Decorative Work

L. TOZER & SON

762-764 Mission St.

San Francisco, Cal.

STOP DRINKING

A CURE THAT CURES

Our Booklet "Drunkenness and Liquor Habit" Mailed to any Address Free
L. L. C. Company, Inc., 417 Hayward Building, San Francisco

He Likes The Co-eds

Professor Svante Arrhenius is viewed with much interest by the students. He is over six feet tall and he has the simple ways of a child. The most renowned of living physicists, he is more approachable than some petty pedagogue of a village high school. Co-eds, by the way, are an unknown quantity to the professor from Stockholm, and he is the most enthusiastic of their admirers.

As They Sat In The Moonlight

Professor de Vries is another distinguished scholar with a keen appreciation of the charms of the American woman. And a few nights ago while the charms of one of the most interesting of her sex were appealing to him in the most propitious of romantic lights—that of fair Luna—he narrowly escaped being subjected to the indignity of arrest. It was early in the evening and the scholar, wishing to stroll in the moonlight beneath the live-oaks on the college campus, invited a girl he had met at a dinner party to accompany him. After walking leisurely along for a time they sat down beneath a tree. A few moments later a policeman made his appearance.

"You can't do any courtin' here," he began, and he was about to place the hand of the law on the academical shoulder when the young woman acquainted him with the fact that the professor was one of the foreign visitors. The policeman moved on, and thus were the dailies robbed of a fine story.

Gayley Was Wroth

During the last full-moon, Professor Gayley was hard at work in the late watches when the bark of a dog diverted his attention from his task. He bent his mind to the written page but it was no use; the dog barked on. The student and teacher of English bethought him that Professor Bernard Moses was the possessor of a dog that looked as if he might utter just such a note as was rending the air at that moment. The indignant Gayley decided to have the dog disciplined. Professor Moses is Professor Gayley's nearest neighbor. Professor Gayley called Professor Moses up on the 'phone. He called him up literally, for Moses was in bed.

"Your dog is barking and he distracts me," said Professor Gayley. "I am trying to do some work. Won't you please persuade him to shut up."

Professor Moses was not in gracious mood, but he put on some clothes and went out to argue with the dog. Much to his surprise and indignation it was not his dog that was doing the barking. What was worse, the barking dog belonged to Professor Gayley. He waited until he thought it was time for his friend Gayley to be in bed and sleeping and then he called him up on the 'phone.

"By the way, Gayley," he said, "I thought I should let you know that it was not my dog that was barking. The unmannerly beast belongs to you."

He didn't wait to hear what Gayley had to say.

AT BYRON SPRINGS.

The last week, including the Fourth of July, has been particularly gay at this charming resort. The beautiful blue-grass lawn of several acres with handsome trees, comfortable settees and hammocks, looks very enticing and restful to the weary city visitor. Hardly a day passes but that from one to three automobiles arrive with a jolly crowd aboard. Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Pease, R. H. Pease Jr., Arthur Watson and Stanley Page arrived Saturday evening in their automobiles, returning via San Jose. E. T. Sterling and Wilbur J. Edwards, prominent bankers of San Jose, came up in their auto Saturday, remaining over Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Wallace of Alameda came over in their Ford Sunday, returning Monday morning. Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Mead and Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Wells of Alameda lunched at the hotel Monday while touring the country in their White steamer. Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Mead entertained a merry crowd at their cottage over the Fourth—Mr. and Mrs. C. Klein, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Jenkins and Dr. Charles E. Parent. Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Moore and their little daughter Josephine are over for several days' rest. Dr. and Mrs. G. W. Fuller and Mrs. N. Hanford spent Sunday at the hotel. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Meyerstein, C. V. Meyerstein, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hilbert, Louis Roesch, Supervisor Brauhart, Thomas J. Coleman, D. Dalzell, E. H. Shibley, D. W. Hughs, D. Webster, Mr. and Mrs. John Robertson, Miss W. Ragland, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Davis, John "Pop" Sloan, Mr. and Mrs. Patterson Ross, Colin M. Boyd, John Martin, W. H. Marston, Mrs. Irvine and maid, John W. Byrne, Miss Louise Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Luigi Dell Orto, Mrs. W. F. Burke, Mrs. J. Danieri, Miss Josephine Cereghino, J. E. Wetmore, Colonel A. Andrews, all of San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. M. Callaghan and Miss Callaghan of Collinsville, Mrs. Truman G. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. H. Granz, Miss Adelaide Granz and Miss Clara Granz of Fresno were recent arrivals at Byron.

Recent arrivals at Paraiso Springs included: A. W. Blow, A. Bayne Jr., A. J. Cleary, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Burnett, Miss Duncay, Mr. and Mrs. M. Lange, Mrs. M. Lucke and children, O. H. Greenwald, Mrs. William Martin and Miss Alice Martin, all of San Francisco; Mrs. W. Noon and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Abrahamson and Miss Abrahamson, Mrs. L. M. Hays, N. Rosenbaum, N. Rosenberg and Miss Jenni Rosenberg, Mrs. A. Seligman of Oakland.

WATCHES

Perfect within and without.
The finest American and Swiss movements. The most tasteful and elegant cases: plain or elaborate.

We have the most expert watch
repairers.

Bohm-Bristol Co.
104-110 Geary Street

PIERCE-RODOLPH STORAGE CO. Inc.

STORAGE, MOVING, PACKING AND SHIPPING

WAREHOUSE: EDDY ST., near Fillmore

Specially built for the Storage of Household Furniture

OFFICE: POST AND POWELL STS.

Phone Private 571

The Metamorphosis of a Western Circus Girl

Englished for Town Talk by Beatrice Hastings.

Ah! the melancholy nostalgia of music. How powerfully it awakens within us the almost forgotten memories of the past. And how mournfully sad, in the waning twilight of this dismal November evening, sound the strains of that antique galop, mechanically ground out by the listless organ-grinder, in the street below.

Of what are you thinking, as you listen, Madame la Comtesse? And why do you stand, lost in reverie, so still, so statuesque, beside the great high window of your magnificent boudoir? What associations can there possibly be for you, Madame, a happy, aristocratic woman, in the splendid beauty of your thirty years, in this antique galop, ground out by the street-organ, on the almost deserted boulevard, beyond the bare, leafless lindens of your picturesque garden?

Ah! yes, I remember now, Comtesse; I recall it all, for I saw you then, and so understand your pensive mood, under the fascinating spell of this old and almost forgotten music, ground out there, in the half deserted boulevard below, by the bronzed Italian, on this misty November evening—for each gay little note recalls to your mind the vast amphitheatre of "Johnson's Chicago American Circus," with its throng of people, its sea of faces, precisely as it was at the time of your equestrian triumphs.

Ah! how vividly the whole scene comes back in the misty twilight: the two negro minstrels have just finished their comical turn, the loud, boisterous music of their banjos has scarcely died away, when the groom, Lawrence Smith, leads into the ring your superb white horse, brilliantly caparisoned in gold and blue. A moment later you make your entree, giving your hand to the dark, dashing ring-master, in scarlet coat, with whom you and the other fair riders of the troupe were madly in love; with a graceful bow you salute the audience; then, with airy-fairy lightness spring to your saddle; at the crack of the ring-master's whip the brass instruments of the orchestra burst into music, your superb white horse begins his mincing little steps, and to the gay notes of this old galop you start off on your triumphant tour of the ring.

What an Olympian creature you were then, Countess! Only seventeen—with the figure of the Venus of Capitol, full of strength and as graceful as a tall white lily, one of those perfect beauties, rarely ever obtained except in the New World, by the crossing and amalgamation of race.

As you pirouetted before an admiring audience, the loud whisper went round: "She is the beautiful Ada, the peerless American equestrian queen!"

The murmur of admiration reached you; intoxicated by your triumph, you redoubled your daring pirouetting, followed by bravos and deafening applause. The first of your turn was now over; the gaudily attired grooms of the ring mounted their stools in readiness for the hoop and streamer act; the clown, to amuse the gallery, had some horse-play with his brother-clown, the tall slim fellow in green and yellow, while you, in this interval of rest, poised on the side of your saddle, with the lightness of a butterfly, made a walking tour of the ring.

Decidedly this was the moment par excellence for your admirers.

Ah! Countess, how charmingly beautiful you appeared in the bouffant spangled skirts, your superb limbs encased in rose colored tights, your dark hair garlanded with crimson roses.

It was during one of these intervals of rest that you first observed the Count, today your husband, known then to all Paris as one of the fastest livers of the jeunesse doree.

He was standing directly in the passage-way leading to the stalls. He stood there completely absorbed, with his eyes fixed on the ring, tapping his gold-headed cane against his lips; tall, slender, scrupulously correct in his gray hat and tightly buttoned redingote, a sprig of lilacs in his boutonniere.

The next day you noticed him again, and the day after, and every day during the entire week; and you blushing dropped your eye-lids, embarrassed and abashed, whenever your dark eyes met his—the pallid, desperate, distracted eyes of a man who had completely lost his head. And indeed he had entirely lost it; but you were a simple, honest Western girl, as pure as the flowers of your native prairies.

Ah! Countess, how strangely romantic your life has been. Indeed, I hardly think that you remember the day, for you were scarcely five, when your father fell from the trapeze and broke his neck—and you were adopted by the troupe.

Ah! how those brave saltinbancoes loved you; with paternal interest the old Parisian clown Mistigris taught you French, and to read and write. You became at once the Benjamin, the pet child of the troupe, and when you grew up, its glory and stellar attraction. The rough men of the ring always treated you with the most profound respect, for they knew that you were a good girl and that you earned your living honestly.

I wonder, Countess, if you ever recall the evening in Paris that the Count offered you that magnificent set of turquois, brutally enough, it must be admitted—and how very near you came to giving him a horse-whipping before the elephants' box, in full view of the stablemen. Ah! how he flushed under your contemptuous glance, as you turned away and left him standing there with his jewels.

Yet, undaunted, and crazed with love and passion, he followed you about France—to Orleans, to Tours, to Saumur, to Angers; and finally at Nantes he went to the full length of his folly, like a Russian, and married you.

What to do with you after the ardent honeymoon, spent in a sequestered village by the sea, was as perplexing to the Count as a Chinese puzzle. His friends at the Jockey Club were bursting with laughter; the society women elevated their eye-brows, and whispered behind their fans, whenever the circus-girl's name was

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR, MOLES, ETC., Permanently Removed

MRS. EATON
Room 609
369 Sutter Street

Electric Needle Specialists
Phone 4253 Black

MISS EATON
233 Geary Street
Room 38

Old J. H. Cutter Whisky

We are the sole owners and proprietors of this celebrated brand, and here assert in the strongest language possible that

J. H. CUTTER WHISKY

Rye or Bourbon—in barrels or cases, is all whisky, and whisky, too, of the highest grade known.

The best afloat or ashore

It will hereafter be supplied the trade under the KENTUCKY INSPECTION in all its purity, flavor and mellowness, just as it leaves its "Old Kentucky Home."

C. P. MOORMAN & COMPANY,
Louisville, Kentucky.

SHERWOOD & SHERWOOD

Distributors, 212-214 MARKET ST., San Francisco
HARRY G. HOWELL, SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE

Great Beauty Specialist

ANNA AMELIA HOLSHOUSER

121 GEARY STREET

Parlors 319-320

STARR-KING BUILDING

Greatest Magnetic Operator upon the human body living. My treatment not only reduces obesity but develops every imperfectly formed part of the body. Fine magnetic massage to ladies and gentlemen at their homes or at her parlors by appointment. Phone Private Ex. 216.

Take care of your health! Massage improves circulation and gives strength to muscles and nerves. Lindstrom's Swedish Institute. 406 Sutter Street.

mentioned. Extremely sensitive, his aristocratic pride deeply wounded, your husband did the wise thing; he expatriated himself.

Ah! Countess, how gloomy you found that dingy old palace at Florence, where you led the life of a school girl, and resigned yourself to the tiresome routine of lessons given by learned professors. True, you submitted peacefully to the irksome regime; yet rather as a grateful than as a loving woman—and because you wished to please your husband and to become worthy of him.

Naturally your transformation required time, and though the Count was the quintessence of gentleness and kindness, yet he bored you to death with his perpetual corrections and admonitions: "My dear, you must not say this; my dear, you must not do that." All women are educable; the American woman is pre-eminently so. At the end of three years, you were indeed a true Countess, with the delicately refined, distinguished manners of the Faubourg-Saint-Germain; and the Count, bored to death by Florence and its museums, gladly returned with you to Paris.

The heavy shutters of his fine old mansion were thrown open, and you took your first dinner in the spacious dining-room, directly in front of the life-size portrait of your husband's great-grandfather, a Lieutenant-General of the royal armies, in full regimentals, with powdered hair, who seemingly looked down upon you with unwarranted severity.

Here, Countess, as in the gloomy old palace at Florence, you live in solitary grandeur. True, the Count, by herculean efforts, and by becoming a generous patron of charitable institutions, has at last succeeded in forming for you a little coterie of priests and devotees. But oh, how lugubrious they are, those black gowns of the two sexes!

For six years you have visited, regularly every morning, schools and foundling asylums; in the evening you sit in solitary state in your box at the Francais or at the Opera—for no one ever crosses the threshold of the door.

Ah! Countess, how lonely you sometimes feel. The years are passing! And unfortunately, you yet experience for your husband merely friendship and gratitude—and at times you even permit yourself to judge him. Ah! of course, you acknowledge that he is most assuredly very devoted, but oh, so full of silly, foolish, aristocratic notions, and as tiresome as a concert.

Today the Count is forty-eight and a striking example of a gay, reckless youth metamorphosed into a quiet, staid man—an insipid, dull mixture of dyed whiskers, faultless attire and aristocratic prejudices.

Ah! Countess, how your heart palpitates as you listen to the gay notes of that old galop. How vividly the past comes back tonight. Once more you see yourself again in the middle of the ring, at the end of your turn, throwing kisses of adieu to the audience, as you are led away by the dashing ring-master in scarlet coat; indeed, you even seem to feel the tender pressure of his hand, the delightful emotions of youth return, and for a second you are the triumphant equestrian queen of Johnson's Chicago American Circus.

The notes of the organ have died away; the twilight has deepened into night, the huge skeletons of the leafless lindens are barely distinguishable. With noiseless step the valet de chambre enters the boudoir, and placing the lamp on the round table announces, in his ceremonious way, that "the curate of Saint Thomas Aquinas awaits Madame la Comtesse in the drawing-room."

Ah! Countess, how you sigh—the spell is broken. And if I hear aright, you whisper half aloud, as you pass down the broad staircase: "How I do wish this sort of visitors would stay at home!"

In Financial Circles

The holidays reduced the number of business days to four, with the transactions as a consequence extremely light. The amount of bonds sold was $78,000, and 470 shares of stocks, as follows: 30 lighting, 130 shares water, 125 shares miscellaneous and 185 sugar.

The semi-annual disbursement of dividends and interest made no impression on the market. Ordinarily such monies seek reinvestment on the Stock and Bond Exchange.

In the sugar group Hawaiian Commercial & Sugar easily holds the lead. No wonder! Raw sugar selling at 4 cents, their profits ought to be immense.

—The Financier.

MURINE EYE REMEDY

THOSE LUSTROUS
EYES ARE MURINE
EYES

Sunlight Intensified by Reflection

from Ocean Beach and Desert Sand unrelieved by foliage. Winds and mineral laden poisonous dust, all bring eye-troubles in their wake, Granulated Eyelids, Red, Itching, Burning, Tired and Watery Eyes, Impaired Vision and Eye Pain. Prevention, Relief and Cure are found in MURINE EYE REMEDY, mild and harmless. Murine aids those wearing glasses, doesn't smart, but soothes and quickly cures. Is an Eye Tonic. Sold by Opticians and Druggists. Fifty Cents.

EXCURSION RATES ST. LOUIS

ROUND TRIP Excursion Tickets to St. Louis and Chicago on sale July 1, 2, 7, 8, 13, 14 and dates in other months later at the following rates:

TO ST. LOUIS . . . $67.50
TO CHICAGO, passing one way through St. Louis . . . $72.50

RETURN LIMIT three months. Stop overs allowed on both going and returning trip.

THESE RATES GOOD ON OVERLAND LIMITED

Ask about the Through Tourist Cars direct to the Exposition.

613 MARKET STREET
SOUTHERN PACIFIC

The Stage

Whittlesey's Second Week

There is a lot of pretty scenery in "One Summer's Day," the Esmond play at the Alcazar, but the scenery scarcely compensates for the lack of action. It is only in a Pinero drama, where the dialogue bristles with wit, that one can feel compensated for scenes that drag. And "One Summer's Day" drags very much. Perhaps it seems slower because of the briskness of action in "Soldiers of Fortune," last week's play. Mr. Whittlesey is good in the Drew role of Major Dick Rudyard, the old bachelor, but such a part does not suit his personality so well as a role calling for more vivacity. Mr. Maher as Theodore Bendyshe is the life of the play. He is the typical summer man, always in love, every woman being his "Cleopatra" whom he must make immortal by painting her picture. Miss Rawson, the star's new leading lady, is very charming but the play does not afford her much opportunity for the exhibition of the subtleties of histrionic technique. Agnes Ranken has returned to the Alcazar after her season with Nance O'Neil, and in the small part of Irene Reed received as hearty a welcome as if she were the star of the piece. Little Ollie Cooper gives a pleasing picture of a clever child.

A Melodrama That Thrills

One understands, after seeing the Central's play, why Theodore Kremer, after he turned his hand to melodrama, began to make money, hand over fist. There's more art in constructing a good melodrama than the esthetic playgoer comprehends. It must contain situations that are new, or else if old that appear like new. It must have a heart interest that will set the impressionable feminine a-weeping, and sufficient comedy to keep the gallery in good humor. There must not be over-much dialogue, but what there is must count. In "Wedded and Parted" Kremer has combined these elements so successfully that a very strong melodrama is the result. There is a snow scene that reminds one of Mayo's "Street of New York," the old melodrama that in its day thrilled its thousands. A prison scene stirs the audience's sympathies, and there are two little children who stimulate the heart feeling among the mothers and fathers. Mayall is the hero, of course, and Miss Lawton the heroine, and Miss El-mere, Shumer and Howell are the villains. Miss Blanc and Booth are the fun of the piece, the sunshine that occasionally pierces the gloom. Edith Cooper, whose sister Ollie is the child in the Alcazar play this week, has a juvenile role in the Central production, and Baby Martine has the part of the other child.

The Neills' Warmly Welcomed

James Neill may well feel flattered at the greeting he received at the opening performance of "Barbara Frietchie." The Grand Opera House was packed, and the mighty audience's applause shook the building. This warm reception extended over the holidays, and has kept up all the week. The Neills have given "Barbara Frietchie" many times in this city, but never at popular prices. The play has lost none of its charm, and Mr. Neill, Miss Chapman and their excellent support are very much at home in their parts. The play goes well on the roomy stage of the Grand.

When the unfortunate Du Barry, on her way to the scaffold, cries "Good-bye, Corsair; we never picked the violets," a man sitting back of me at one performance turned to his companion and said: "That's what Corsair got for never picking the violets." "Du Barry" is a drama that offers a splendid field for burlesque. I believe Weber & Fields did have a clever skit on it.

Features of Next Week's Bills

The Neills are crowding the Grand. The second week of this admirable company will be devoted to Archie Gunter's "Mr. Barnes of New York," James Neill appearing for the first time in this city in the title role. Miss Chapman will be the fiery Corsican, Marina Paoli. "The Cowboy and the Lady" comes next. These plays at popular prices are something out of the common. They are really dollar and a half shows.

For his third week at the Alcazar, White Whittlesey will appear in the always favorite "Heartsease," one of the most charming plays ever written. Oza Waldrop will make her reappearance here in this play. The music will be interpreted by singers under Homer Henley's direction. A revival of "The Prisoner of Zenda" comes next, to be followed by its sequel, "Rupert of Hentzau." After this Mr. Whittlesey will give some plays new to us.

Accordeon and Sunburst Pleating, STEWART'S, 110 Taylor St. Phone Folsom 2121

ETHEL BARRYMORE

Who opens the new season at the Columbia next Monday night in her production of "Cousin Kate," and at the same time inaugurates the fifth season of her stellar career under the management of Charles Frohman. Much has been written of this star's immense vogue in the East. As the daughter of Maurice and Georgie Drew Barrymore and the granddaughter of Mrs. John Drew Sr., much was expected of her, and critics agree that she has fulfilled expectations. All of the younger Barrymores have "made good." Lionel, Ethel and Jack give promise of eclipsing the fame of their most distinguished ancestors. Lionel has been playing small parts for seven years and now is established as a Broadway favorite, having created quite a furore in Augustus Thomas's comedy, "The Other Girl." Ethel Barrymore began much earlier than her elder brother, served seven years apprenticeship, scored a success in "His Excellency, the Governor," and Mr. Frohman decided that she was worthy to leave the ranks. Her success in "Captain Jinks," "Carrots," "A Country Mouse" and "Cousin Kate" show that Mr. Frohman knows his star and her public. Miss Barrymore is quite a social favorite and some very fashionable audiences will be in attendance during her two weeks' stay at the Columbia.

ESTELLE AND BABETTE D'ARVILLE.
Dainty Dancers at the Orpheum.

A play new to San Francisco is "Along the Mohawk," which the Central will present next week. It has a novel plot. The hero is the editor of the Mohawk Beacon, which plays a star part in an election war between embittered factions. There is a plot to destroy the Beacon press and prevent the publication of the sheet on the eve of election. A newspaper office, with presses, type and all, is shown. The heroine of the play is a girl reporter, who has an up-hill struggle and who is befriended by the Beacon editor.

Society will turn out in numbers at the Columbia on Monday night, when the theatre reopens after a fortnight's rest, with Ethel Barrymore in "Cousin Kate." This comedy was written by Hubert Henry Davies, who is very well known in San Francisco as a dramatic critic. The piece made a decided hit in New York. Since Miss Barrymore's last visit here she has become a star and one of the most popular actresses in the East. There will only be Saturday matinees during her engagement, and the sale of seats is already very large. In her support are Bruce McRae, Grant Stewart, Fanny Addison Pitt and other sterling players. Kyrle Bellew in "Raffles" and Henry Miller in "Joseph Entangled" and other new plays are Columbia futures.

"Robin Hood" enters triumphantly upon its fourth week at the Tivoli. The prospects for a long run are just as bright as they were when the curtain descended upon the performance upon its opening night and every person in the audience is full of enthusiasm about the excellence of the production.

"A Lucky Stone" goes on tonight at Fischer's, with the new people—Dorothy Morton, Nora Bayes, Rice and Cady, and Bobby North—in the cast. The piece, judging by the rehearsals, is sure to catch the public. The old New York Casino success, "The Whirl of the Town," comes next. Dorothy Morton is engaged for a year, and will appear in all the Fischer productions.

Walter Le Roy and Florence Clayton will return to the Orpheum, presenting an original Irish comedy "A Horse on Hogan," said to be even funnier than their effort of two years ago. Estelle and Babette D'Arville, acrobatic dancing girls who have set London and all the Eastern cities talking, will make their first appearance here. George W. Cunningham, one of the original "Brutal Brothers," and Miss Geneva Smith, a sprightly comedienne, will present, with the assistance of their trained dog, "Zero," a rapid-fire talking and comedy act entitled "A Perfect Paradise." Harry Seebach, the world's greatest bag puncher, will be new here. Valerie Bergere will present up to and including Wednesday evening, "Billie's First Love," and for the remainder of her engagement "His Japanese Wife."

At the Chutes will be: Belle Gordon, phenomenal athlete; Brandow and Wiley, clever colored entertainers; Belle and Lotta Tobin, Carl Reiter, the sisters Kecey, and Hershail Stein.

—The Playgoer.

Arrivals at Del Monte include: Rolla V. Watt, John F. Merrill, Mrs. Merrill, Charles H. Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Girvin, Joseph Gottlob, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Gottlob, Mrs. B. Converse, Mrs. J. Katz, Mrs. J. Strassburger, J. D. Lederman, Frances E. Lederman, Mr. and Mrs. B. Triest, San Francisco; Mr. C. N. Thorpe, Miss Thorpe, Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Ure and son, Louisville, Ky.; L. M. Snow, England; F. W. Carlyle, Washington, D. C.

DOROTHY MORTON, at Fischer's

Corona Cafe, New Montgomery and Mission St. Mercantile lunch 25c. Always good, try it.

MOUNTAIN GOLD MINES.

A mining concern that is attracting favorable attention was recently incorporated under the title of the Mountain Gold Mines Company, for the purpose of operating and purchasing the famous old Mountain Ledge Gold Mine, in Sierra county, this State.

The property has been extensively developed and equipped with 40-stamp mill, with ample water power for all purposes, and the new company expect to have everything in shape to begin milling by October first, this year.

This well known property has been tied up in litigation for twelve years past, and although known to be profitable, has been idle through inability to adjust the conflicting interests.

Attorneys for the new company succeeded in satisfactorily adjusting everything last summer before the incorporation was effected, and repairs are now being pushed, which, when completed, will place this company on the list of dividend payers, as reports from the mine are very satisfactory and there is a large amount of ore that can be milled profitably.

Mr. L. H. Carver, a well known mining engineer of this city, is the President and Manager, F. F. Bostwick, Secretary, and the others interested in the company are some of the most prominent business men in the community.

OZA WALDROP.

A demure and dimpled divinity, with just a piquant suggestion of devilishness, is Oza Waldrop, who goes back to the Alcazar next week, to play ingenues during White Whittlesey's summer engagement. The diminutive Miss Waldrop has a larger personal following in San Francisco than any of the Eastern importations.

HOME INDUSTRY.

The efficacy of the combination of energetic minds, coupled with young blood and ambition, is exemplified by the growth and progress of the manufacturing concern of Gantner & Mattern Co., knitters of underwear, bathing suits, sweaters and ladies' blouses, of 20 Post street, who established their identity with the business world of San Francisco three years ago.

Beginning with a plant not large enough to occupy the space of one hundred square feet, and continuing to grow so that today their mill, situated on the corner of Grove and Laguna streets, stands as the largest knitting plant west of Chicago. Equipped with the most modern machinery and operated by one hundred and fifty skilled young men and women who enjoy the clean and well-arranged surroundings of a modern mill where sunshine and fresh air pour in upon the happy faces of the artisans, so different from the ill-ventilated, crowded and poorly paid artisans of the Eastern mills. Simultaneous with this progress, many organizations are being formed to promote the general welfare of California that each and every one of us must not overlook the importance of patronizing goods made, sold and worn right here. This is the key to success of the great wheel of progress of San Francisco, incomplete without the spoke of manufacturing industries.

The brand G. & M. on goods needs no further praise. Their goods are seen everywhere. Comparison carries conviction. They are successful because they are right.

"I hear that young Swiftleigh is in mourning for his grandfather."

"Yes, he doesn't get jagged until after midnight."

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATRE

Matinee Saturday only

OPENING OF THE NEW SEASON

Next Monday, July 11th

Charles Frohman presents

ETHEL BARRYMORE

In Hubert Henry Davies' comedy

"COUSIN KATE"

Original New York Cast and Production

ALCAZAR THEATRE

Phone "ALCAZAR"
Belasco and Mayer
Proprietors
E. D. Price, Gen. Mgr.

Monday, July 11th, one week

Regular Matinees Thursday and Saturday

WHITE WHITTLESEY

And the Alcazar Stock Company in the Romantic Comedy

"HEARTSEASE"

By Chas. Klein and J. I. C. Clarke Exquisite Production. The Original Music

Evenings, 25c to 75c

Matinees Thursday and Saturday 25c to 50c

Monday, July 18—WHITE WHITTLESEY in "The Prisoner of Zenda"

Crepheum

O'Farrell between
Stockton and Powell
StreetsWeek Commencing
Sunday Matinee,
July 10th

A STUPENDOUS SHOW

LE ROY and CLAYTON. Estelle and Babette D'Arville. Cunningham and Smith. Harry Seebach. Leigh Brothers. Gillihan and Murray. Green and Werner. Lowe, and last week of

VALERIE BERGERE and COMPANY.

Presenting, up to and including Wednesday Evening, "Billie's First Love" and, for the remainder of the engagement, "His Japanese Wife"

Regular Matinees Every Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday

Prices: 10c, 25c and 50c.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Phone "Grand Opera House"
Grand Opera House Co.
LesseeTremendous
Success of

MR. JAMES NEILL

Regular Matinee Saturday
And the Original
Neill Company

Week Beginning Tomorrow (Sunday) Matinee

MR. NEILL

In a Magnificent Production of Archibald Clavering Gunther's Dramatization of His Own Famous Story

"MR. BARNES OF NEW YORK"

Sunday Matinee, July 17th - "THE COWBOY AND THE LADY"

Special Summer Prices, 15c, 25c and 50c

Best Reserved Seat in Orchestra, 50c

Fischers THEATRE

O'Farrell between Stockton and
Powell Streets

Phone "Fischer's"

Triumphant Success of "A LUCKY STONE" So pronounced by Press and Public

A Musical Cocktail in two acts by Collin Davis and Frank Witmark Upoariouly Funny. Filled with Novelties and this Remarkable Cast:

Dorothy Morton, Nora Bayes, Garrity Sisters, Rice and Cady, Bobby North, Edwin Clark, Ben Dillon, The "Only" Chorus of Forty.

Matinees Saturday and Sunday
Next Play, "Whirl of the Town" Same Popular Prices

★TIVOLI★

Cor. Eddy and Mason Sts.

Evenings at 8 Sharp

Fourth Triumphant Week of

"ROBIN HOOD"

With Edith Mason, Kate Condon, Dora De Fillippe, Bessie Tannehill, Barron Berthald, Willard Simms, Arthur Cunningham, John Dunsinure, Teddy Webb, William Schuster. Promenade Circle; 3rd Floor, Smokers' Paradise

Elevator Always Running
Seats Always SellingUsual Tivoli prices, 25, 50 and 75c
Only Matinee Saturday

CENTRAL

Belasco & Mayer, Props. Phone South 523
Market Street near Eighth
Opposite City HallWeek Starting Monday Evening, July 11th Matinees Saturday and Sunday
The Tremendously Successful Comedy-Drama

"ALONG THE MOHAWK"

Prices: Evening, 10c to 50c

Matinees, 10c, 15c, 25c

Next - "ROBERT EMMETT"

Automobile Topics

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Taylor of Oakland recently made a trip from Oakland to Byron Springs in Mr. Taylor's Stevens-Duryea in three hours, which is record time.

The Pioneer Automobile Company received a carload of twelve Oldsmobile runabouts last Saturday. These machines have already been disposed of as follows: George H. Osen of San Jose, three; Walter J. Hansel of Stockton, two; G. C. Schelling of Santa Rosa, one; P. J. Steiger of Petaluma, one; F. J. Jacks of Napa, one; F. H. Catherwood of Eureka, one, and Phillip Penick of Chico, one.

W. T. Robertson of Alameda last Friday took a party of friends from Oakland to San Jose, by way of Niles, in his Winton touring car, making the trip in one hour and thirty minutes. The return trip, over the regular route, was made in the record time of one hour and thirty-five minutes.

On June nineteenth, a seven horsepower regular stock Stevens-Duryea climbed Mt. Washington in forty-eight minutes and thirty seconds, breaking the best previous record held by a twenty horsepower car by nearly an hour; Nestman driving, accompanied by A. G. Batchelder as timer and observer. They had dinner at the Summit House and returned to the foot of the mountain inside of two and one-half hours. This is a remarkable performance when you consider the road is eight miles and there is a rise of seven hundred and eighty-seven feet to the mile. The surface was very rough. The timing and arrangements were personally inspected by Harlem W. Whipple, of the American Automobile Association, and when the record was made three other cars were present, the occasion being the inspection of the famous Mt. Washington toll road, the top of which is six thousand two hundred and ninety-three feet above sea level. Here the first Annual National Hill Climbing Contest will occur July eleventh to sixteenth.

A party of Winton enthusiasts drove their machines to San Mateo last Sunday. Among those in the party were P. L. Pettigrew, R. J. Mier and family, Charles C. Moore and family, Max Schwabacher and family, John Breuner, and J. J. Spieker and family.

S. E. Slade, president of the S. E. Slade Lumber Company, recently purchased a Pierce Arrow touring car from the Mobile Carriage Company, which he has taken to his home at Menlo Park. Mr. Slade visited the automobile exhibit at St. Louis and then went to the Pierce factory at Buffalo, and from his observations he concluded that the Arrow took the lead in style and construction.

Dr. James Ward, president of the Board of Health, has established a new record in the automobile business. He recently purchased two Pierce Arrow touring cars from the Mobile Carriage Company, which he is to use in his practice. He finds that the use of the automobile means a saving of about one-third of his time, and to a physician with so large a practice this means a great deal. This is the beginning of an automobile stable which, no doubt, will be followed by other prominent and busy physicians.

The Mobile Carriage Company has been recently advised by the Pierce factory that they will soon place on the market a four-cylinder Pierce Arrow touring car, from twenty to twenty-four horsepower, French, which will sell for about three thousand dollars. They will also continue to manufacture the large four-cylinder Arrow which will sell for about four thousand five hundred dollars with the top. The two-cylinder car is rapidly disappearing in the East and the demand is running almost exclusively to four-cylinder high-grade cars.

Either by coincidence, or by premeditation, the White Sewing Machine Company of Cleveland, Ohio, seems to be very patriotic. It shipped a carload of machines to its San Francisco office which arrived on July fourth. One of these is painted red, a second white and the third blue. When these three autos were run up Market street on the afternoon of the Fourth they created quite a furor, the spectators thinking that the White Company had arranged a special celebration of Independence Day.

Mrs. D. Z. Dennouriz may be classed as one of the expert chauffeuses of the city. She recently passed the Park examination with high honors, manipulating the ex-Governor's White touring car in the tests given by examiner Saville.

John D. Spreckels and family left last Friday in their White and ran as far as San Jose that night. On Saturday they continued the journey to Monterey where the party remained over the Fourth.

Dr. Watt Kerr, accompanied by his wife and nephew, made an interesting tour in a White machine recently, going as far as

GILBERT and STOLL

Movers of Household Furniture and Storage Warehouse, have removed their offices from the Murphy Bldg. to Room 43, Donohoe Bldg., Market and Taylor Sts. Storage Warehouse: Mercantile Library Bldg., Golden Gate and Van Ness ave

ON the HILLS NOT THE RACE TRACK

is the test of power. The Annual Hill Climbing Contest of the Minneapolis Automobile Club was held on Saturday, June 11th, on Kenwood Hill, when the

Rambler

again demonstrated its superiority over cars costing three times its price, and, for the second time, won

FIRST PRIZE

finishing the course, 2680 feet, on a 10 per cent grade, in 1 minute, 7 3-5 seconds.

ENTRIES AND TIMES

Class No. A, Machines Valued at $2,750 and over—

Owner	Make	Time
J. H. Queal,	Pope-Toledo	:59
A. F. Timme,	Pope-Toledo	:1:05
Dic. Ferris,	Pope-Toledo	:1:05 4-5
F. T. Heffelfinger,	Peerless	:1:08 1-5
Ralph Bagley,	Packard	:1:11
Bert Strong,	Stearns	:1:22

Class No. B, Machines Valued bet. $2,750 and $1,750—

A. C. Bennett,	Winton	:1:11
G. W. Cappelin,	Winton	:1:25
George Shear,	Knox	:1:41

Class No. C, Machines Valued bet. $1,750 and $1,000—

M. E. Clark,	Rambler	:1:07 3-5
C. C. Pillsbury,	Franklin	:1:10 1-5
Dr. A. P. Walrath,	Rambler	:1:14

Send for our latest illustrated Catalogue "C"; it explains RAMBLER construction; the records prove its value.

RAMBLER AUTOMOBILE AGENCY
Tenth and Market Sts., San Francisco

AUTOMOBILE REPAIRS

81 CITY HALL AVE. Telephone South 1039

De Dion Plugs
De Dion Porcelains
Electric Cable

ANDREWS, KEENAN & BLASAUF

"Pope"

POPE TOLEDO TOURING CAR CO.

Phone South 1142

G. A. BOYER, Manager

134-148 GOLDEN GATE AVE.

A HAPPY SAN FRANCISCO MOTOCYCLIST.

San Jose on Friday and the next morning as far as Del Monte. After touring about Del Monte, a start was made for home and a record run was made from Del Monte to San Jose, covering the eighty-three miles in three hours and forty minutes, including all stops en route. The steamer went from the foot of one side of the famous San Juan hill to the other in exactly fourteen minutes.

Miss Anna Bixby has joined the chauffeurs in the southern part of the State and has purchased a White touring car.

Hal Shields is one of the latest of San Franciscans to secure a license to operate an automobile in Golden Gate park. Shields has the honor of being the youngest to secure such a privilege and he passed the examination in fine style, handling his father's White touring car like a veteran. He was not a bit nervous and although only fourteen years old promises to make a most ardent automobilist.

Motocycle Items

Nearly every motocyclist of San Francisco spent the holiday in the country. Livermore and Napa valleys and Lake county were the sections visited by the greatest number of riders.

Dr. Christie and H. L. Litchfield have made an extensive trip through Lake county.

City chemist Costa will ride to Boulder Creek and through the Santa Cruz mountains shortly.

Lincoln Beany, C. C. Hopkins and Mrs. Hopkins went to Aetna Springs over the Fourth. Theirs was the first successful trip to this popular resort that has ever been made on motorcycles. The climb over the grade by way of Charles and Pope valleys was a hard one, as the roads were quite deep with dust and there are many sharp turns and rocky climbs. The road near the Springs is in perfect condition for several miles into Pope Valley. They returned on Monday from Aetna to Vallejo, fifty-six miles, in two hours and twenty-three minutes. Considering the road this is remarkable time and the rider who betters it will have to keep busy.

Louis Bill, who was nominated for vice-president of the Federation of American Motocyclists, which means that he will be the Coast representative of that organization, has returned from the East. Mr. Bill is very enthusiastic on the motorcycle outlook.

There will be an important meeting of the Pacific Motocyclists on Tuesday evening, July twelfth, at 304 McAllister street.

—The Chauffeur.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. . . .

ELLA VAN BENTHUSEN, Plaintiff )
vs. )
THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN, Defendant )
Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:

THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's alleged willful and utter neglect of said plaintiff for more than four years last past, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 30th day of June, in the year of our Lord; one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk.

By CHAS. C. MORRIS, Deputy Clerk.

N. L. FLOOD, Plaintiff's Attorney.

1122 Market St., Rooms 1, 2, 3 and 4.

The Key to Comfort

these days is the electrical one. Think of what benefits accrue to you from the electrical current! light, the telegraph, the telephone, fans, call bells, annunciators, burglar alarms—lots of useful devices. See us about any or all of these if you want a cheap and real "Key to Comfort."

NATIONAL ELECTRIC CO.

455 Sutter St. San Francisco
PHONE BUSH 639

WM. WILLIAMS & SONS

(LTD.) OF ABERDEEN.

V V O

Scotch Whisky

Importers - MACONDRAY & CO.

FAT
FOLKS!

YOUR WEIGHT REDUCED

By New Process I guarantee to REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT as much as you desire. No Change in Diet, no inconvenience, no bad after-effects.

MRS. E. L. RYAN, Dermatologist

Apt. 500, THE IROQUOIS, 524 Ellis Street

Wrinkles and all facial blemishes. Superfluous hair removed. Manicuring, hair dressing, scalp treatment. Phone Private Exchange 719.

DRINK HABIT
ASTHMA

VEST POCKET CURE

Permanent and Complete $5.00.
Wallace Medical Co., San Francisco.

No injurious powder or mere relief.
ABSOLUTE CURE. Liquid medicine $1.00
G. W. Fane, San Francisco.

REPAIRS MADE AND SUPPLIES FURNISHED
AT THE

Hotel Vendome Automobile Garage San Jose

Stable accommodations free to guests. Record time
on road from San Francisco to San Jose, two hours.

KNOX WATERLESS, GASOLINE CARS

Easy Control
Easy Riding
Reliable
Safe
Free From Lost
Motion

Automobile
Sundries

LEAVITT & BILL, 307-309 Larkin Street

San Francisco

PIERCE
STANHOPE

Price, $1350 without Top; $1450 with Top

Pierce Arrow Touring Car (French) $2650

Northern Runabout, $800

MOBILE CARRIAGE CO.

GOLDEN GATE AVE. AND GOUGH ST.

Phone Private Exchange 770

San Francisco

AUTOMOBILES FOR HIRE

Downtown Offices:

Palace Hotel Occidental Hotel St. Francis Hotel

INDIAN and RAMBLER MOTOCYCLES

Absolute one-hand control.
Powerful engines. Run fast or
slow and CLIMB HILLS.
Indian won recent hill-climb in
New York against all-comers;
also won 50 mile road race at
Buffalo, June 11. Time, 1 hr.
11 min., 30 sec.—a 125 4-5 gait.

C. C. HOPKINS
Larkin & McAllister

One of the many letters received from our pleased customers of the

OLDSMOBILE

Pioneer Automobile Co., June 24 1911
San Francisco Cal.
Friend Brewster..

I suppose that you
are anxious to know how the Oldsmobile
Tonneau is behaving.
We Sawyer & myself are greatly pleased for the car unquestionably develops
much greater power and rides much easier
& smoother than we had anticipated.
I can drive it from Vallejo to Berkeley on high speed without changing, and on the low speed can have the top out for the roughest grade with few passing cars with ease not using more than 2/3 of throttle.

It is unquestionably the prettiest car on the market admires much of all for its simplicity & beauty workmanship & materials and is much better than any other car in its class.

We expect to place a number of these cars in Papa's Saloon Cal.

Thanking you for the many favors

I am Very truly yours

F. B. Jackson

Will send you some photographs soon.

PIONEER AUTOMOBILE CO.

901-25 Golden Gate Ave.

San Francisco

The CADILLAC

MODEL B. Price $950
With Tonneau $1050

Record from Del
Monte to Oakland 5
hours and 38 minutes.
The only successful
tour of the Yosemite made by Major Ful-
mer of Los Angeles
and a party of three.

CUYLER LEE, Agent. 201-203 Larkin St., S. F.

This is the White
Steam Touring Car
complete with canopy
top, curtains and glass
front, baskets, acety-
lene lamp equipment,
and extra tonneau
seat.

WHITE STEAM TOURING CAR COMPLETE

AUTOMOBILE GARAGE
SAN MATEO

PAUL L. NOISAT PHONE BLACK 111
GARAGE AND REPAIR SHOP
B ST., NEAR THIRD AVE.

Concerning Corporal Punishment

Editor Town Talk:

A telegraphic despatch from Vienna reports a remarkable lecture delivered by a Dr. Terkel, in which he has taken occasion to refer to the "brutes" and "incompetents" who have been defeated by the good sense of the American people in their effort to reintroduce corporal punishment into the public schools. Dr. Terkel takes the ground that "Hysteria is far more frequent amongst children than even the general run of physicians recognize. The disease makes the children lie and imagine the things they dream are real happenings. While children are sometimes caught in acts of violence, particularly cruelty, thefts, incendiarism, etc., these apparent crimes are largely caused by the psychological condition of the children's minds, by curious ideas, passions and impulses over which they have no control." Precisely, and one reason why they have no control over their impulses is that there is no adequate penalty attached to their lack of control. Evidently Dr. Terkel is one of those benevolent philanthropists who earns a good salary by sitting in a pedagogical chair formulating theories. Unfortunately, the unruly child is a palpable fact, not an intangible theory, and if the medico were obliged to deal with one specimen, not to burden him with a whole class of incorrigibles, he would speedily find his fine-spun notions inadequate to deal with the case. These people—college lecturers, presidents of culture clubs, and others who have nothing to do but air their opinions—seem to imagine that public school teachers are a race of savages whose keenest delight is to pound inoffensive infants to jelly. In reality there is nothing more repugnant to the average teacher than the necessity for a resort to corporal punishment. Indeed, if there is any one crying need of the child of the twentieth century, it is just a good, sound, old-fashioned spanking, at home as well as in school. When the Mosely Educational Committee was investigating our American system, the corporal punishment question was at the boiling point. Professor Mosely was asked what the attitude towards the rod was in England, and he promptly replied that every British schoolmaster had, ex officio, the right to apply the cane to any pupil whose conduct merited the chastisement. He was surprised that there should be any question about its use and efficacy. Hysteria is a disease common to people who do not exercise self-restraint. A great deal of what is now called hysteria, and tenderly treated was, in former generations, rightly set down to "pure cussedness," and eradicated by drastic measures. The "disease" has increased in geometrical proportion to the elimination of the spank-stick and the abdication of parents in the matter of maintaining family discipline. Children are never punished in school for their romancing, mixing their dreams with realities, but if Dr. Terkel knew more about a certain cast of mind he would discover that there are children, girls in particular, who at a very tender age are capable of inventing most circumstantial and malicious falsehoods for no other reason than a delight in seeing others punished or creating a sensation of which they may pose as heroines. It is a great pity that these embryo black-mailers and slanderers are protected by their sex, for a sound and sufficient trouncing for the first proved offence would be apt to make it also the last. As to the other counts, cruelty, theft, incendiarism and the like, is it worse to inflict a little private "cruelty" than to have the unrestrained impulse lead to greater crime and sentence to death or the penitentiary? The "psychological condition of the children's minds" which leads them to such acts is simply indifference to the sufferings and losses of others provided their own pleasure is secured. A child who cannot understand when the situation is explained is idiotic and should be restrained by confinement in a secure place. One who will not desist is criminal, the good doctor and his adherents to the contrary notwithstanding. The destruction of property and the endangering of life is not rendered any more agreeable by the reflection that the catastrophes are the result of hysteria. These very same good people who go into hysterics themselves at the thought of a slipper sole applied to the portion of the youthful anatomy which Nature designed to receive it will advocate the placing of incorrigibles under the influence of hypnotism rather than compel them, by mild force if necessary, to practice restraint and strengthen their wills and their powers of resistance. They are to be protected from a little physical inconvenience at the expense of rendering them forever liable to be acted upon by forces outside of themselves, to become the prey of evil and criminal minds and the victims of every chance suggestion. Even such juvenile peccadilloes as thumb-sucking, nail-biting and kicking off the bed-coverings at night are to be cured by hypnotism, instead of the cruel devices of our grandmothers, a woollen mitten worn on the offending member, an application of bitter aloes or a stout tape to tie the corners of the blanket securely to the crib railings, until the child has either learned to lie still, or to wake when he feels cold and abate the cause of his restlessness. A little of the old-fashioned doctrines of free will and personal parental responsibility would make short work of these new-fangled notions of hysteria, nervousness and "psychological conditions." In plain English they are a mixture of wilfulness on the part of the child and laziness on the part of the parent, with the blame shifted to the suffering shoulders of the unfortunate teachers.

Teacher.

DIVIDEND NOTICES

CALIFORNIA SAFE DEPOSIT AND TRUST COMPANY. Corner California and Montgomery Sts. For the six months ending June 30, 1904, dividends have been declared on deposits in the Savings Department of this Company as follows: On term deposits at the rate of 3 6-10 per cent per annum, and on ordinary deposits at the rate of 3 per cent per annum, free of taxes, and payable on and after Friday, July 1, 1904. J. DALZELL BROWN, Manager

SAN FRANCISCO SAVINGS UNION. 532 California St., corner Webb. For the half year ending with the 30th of June, 1904, a dividend has been declared at the rate per annum of three and one-half (3 1-2) per cent on term deposits, and three (3) per cent on ordinary deposits, free of taxes, payable on and after Friday, July 1, 1904. LOVELL WHITE, Cashier.

THE GERMAN SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY. 526 California St. For the half year ending June 30, 1904, a dividend has been declared at the rate of three and one-quarter (3 1-4) per cent per annum on all deposits, free of taxes, payable on and after Friday, July 1, 1904. GEORGE TOURNY, Secretary.

THE CONTINENTAL BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION. Corner of California and Battery streets, San Francisco, has declared a dividend of eight per cent per annum on Class "A" and "F" stock, six per cent on term deposits and five per cent on ordinary deposits, for the six months ending June 30, 1904.

WASHINGTON DODGE, President
WILLIAM CORBIN, Secretary and Gen'l Mgr.

OFFICE OF THE HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY. Corner Market, McAllister and Jones Sts., San Francisco, June 27, 1904. At a regular meeting of the board of directors of this society, held this day, a dividend has been declared at the rate of three and one-fourth (3 1-4) per cent per annum on all deposits for the six months ending June 30, 1904, free from all taxes, and payable on and after July 1, 1904. ROBERT J. TOBIN, Secretary.

MUTUAL SAVINGS BANK OF SAN FRANCISCO. 710 Market St.; for the half-year ending June 30, 1904, a dividend has been declared at the rate of three and one quarter (3 1-4) per cent per annum on all deposits, free of taxes; payable on and after Friday, July 1, 1904. GEORGE A. STORV, Cashier.

SECURITY SAVINGS BANK. 222 Montgomery St., Mills Building; for the half-year ending June 30, 1904, dividends upon all deposits at the rate of three and one-quarter (3 1-4) per cent per annum, free of taxes, will be payable on and after July 1, 1904. FRED W. RAY, Secretary.

SWISS-AMERICAN BANK. 524 Montgomery St., between Commercial and Clay; for the six months ending June 30, 1904, dividends have been declared on deposits in the savings department of this company as follows: On term deposits at the rate of 3 6-10 per cent per annum, and on ordinary deposits at the rate of 3 1-4 per cent per annum, free of taxes, and payable on and after Friday, July 1, 1904. ARTHUR BAUR, Cashier.
A. A. MICHELETTI, Assistant Cashier.

FRENCH SAVINGS BANK. 315 Montgomery St.; for the half-year ending June 30, 1904, a dividend has been declared at the rate of three and one-quarter (3 1-4) per cent per annum on all deposits, free of taxes, payable on and after Friday, July 1, 1904. LEON BOCQUERAZ, Secretary.

SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY. 101 Montgomery St.; corner Sutter, has declared a dividend for the term ending June 30, 1904, at the rate of three and one-quarter (3 1-4) per cent per annum on all deposits, free of taxes, and payable on and after July 1, 1904. CYRUS W. CARMANY, Cashier.

PHOENIX SAVINGS, B. and L. ASSOCIATION For the six months ending June 20, 1904, dividends have been declared on deposits in the savings department, as follows: On term certificates, at the rate of 5 per cent per annum; on ordinary savings accounts at the rate of 4 1-2 per cent per annum, free of taxes and payable on and after July 20, 1904. The Phoenix has a guaranteed capital of $200,000 and a total paid in capital of $1,200,000. Its board of directors are: A. A. Watkins, president; Charles R. Bishop, vice-president; S. Prentiss Smith, treasurer; George C. Boardman, director; Gavin McNab, director; Charles E. Ladd, director; CLARENCE GRANGE, secretary and managing director.

THE OAKLAND TRIBUNE

is delivered into more homes of the masses and classes of Oakland, and Alameda County than all other Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley dailies combined. Reason—it's the best newspaper.

W. E. DARGIE, Pres.

T. T. DARGIE, Secy.

MAISON TORTONI

111 O'Farrell St.

French Rotisserie

Private Dining Rooms.

Banquet Hall.

S. Constantini, Prop.

The modish woman's stationery is as much a part of her nowadays as her dainty wardrobe. Cooper & Co., 746 Market Street, are showing the newest modes in paper and envelopes, dies and seals.

Corey's Cafe, 600 Mission. Mercantile Lunch 11 to 2. Cedar Brook Whiskey, formerly W. H. McBrayer—10 yrs. old.

Letters

A Story Worth While

It is a pity that Mrs. Voynich has selected so non-committal a title as "Olive Latham" for her new novel. It tells nothing and excites no anticipation, so that those who are unfortunate enough to have passed over her former books, and therefore do not know what the name of the author stands for, are in danger of neglecting what must prove one of the strongest books of the year if not of the decade. The subject is timely—Russia and its political methods, but this is no clap-trap volume thrown together in haste in order to take advantage of the interest of the day. It is reported that Mrs. Voynich has been at work on it for fourteen years, and there are no marks of haste or slighted work in the finished production to contradict the assertion. Though the author has emphatically denied that there have been any unusual or sensational incidents in her life, or that her husband was ever a Siberian exile or otherwise proscribed, her narrative has all the strength that one could look for were she transcribing an experience of her own. Just as in "The Gadfly" she laid bare the secret political intrigues of Italy; as in "Jack Raymond," she made us live through the sufferings and tortures of the unfortunate boy whose perfectly respectable, but fiendishly cruel relatives had him in their power, now we are conducted into the heart of Russia to see for ourselves the mental and material condition of the degenerate petty nobility and their one time serfs, besotted and bestial, not so much immoral as without conception of morals or decency. Olive Latham, as the name indicates, was an English girl who, in the course of her work as a trained nurse in the poorer districts, had engaged herself to Vladimir Damrov, a Russian gentleman whose pursuits had called him to England temporarily. When scarcely out of his boyhood, and with an ambition to become an artist, Vladimir had made the acquaintance of a Polish medical student and his sister, of about the same age. The result of the intimacy was that all three were arrested for complicity in some plot, real or imaginary. Vladimir, after two years of imprisonment with all its horrors, was liberated, with lungs diseased and hair prematurely gray; young Slavinski suffered the same term in exile and Wanda, the young sister, was dead, and there was only the comfort of knowing there was nothing more that could be done to her. Both the young men were under perpetual police surveillance. They never knew—nor did any one else. All this is preliminary. At the beginning of the narrative, Vladimir is suffering from a dangerous illness and in response to a telegram from Dr. Slavinski, Olive Latham makes the journey to Russia to care for him. It is through her eyes that we see the degenerate family and the miserable villagers. "In all that village there is not one sound man or woman or child; the people are rotting alive, body and soul. That cottage where we've been all day—there are ten persons in it, four generations. From the great-grandfather to the baby born today, they ought to be chloroformed, every one. They're diseased to the marrow of their bones; the father a drunkard, the aunt an idiot, the grandmother—Oh, I can't describe it. And the talk!" It must take an exalted degree of patriotism to make sacrifices for such as that. Eventually the sword which hung over the head of Vladimir Damrov was dropped. Though suffering from an attack of pneumonia which would probably have proved fatal within a short time, the sick man was brutally dragged from his bed in the depth of a stormy night and the efforts of his friends to gain some tidings of his destination and his fate make one of the most heartrending narratives ever put into print. The coarse jokes and insinuations, the misrepresentations and the deceptions practiced for no purpose whatever than to add needlessly to the sufferings and anxieties of friends are past belief of any other nationality. One sees the nihilist and revolutionist in the process of making and little wonders at the political unrest of the Czar's domain. It is not in the wealth of detailed description, but rather in the suppression, that the strength of the story lies. Those good, kind souls who have sat on padded cushions all their lives will be as ready to condemn many things in this book as they were to find fault with the Raymonds for discussing the question of whether it would not be wiser to poison the child and let him die at once in peace than to have him ever run the risk of falling into the hands of those who had ruined their own lives, will be just as ready to be shocked at Dr. Slavinski and Olive now, but those who have passed through such terrible experiences are the best judges of the limit of endurance. This is no pretty little story to be read on a summer day and forgotten the day after. It is not characteristic of Mrs. Voynich to do weak work, and "Olive Latham" is as powerful as its predecessors. It has a compelling force, and once taken in hand it will be read through to the end, even though one goes sleepless for many nights thereafter. The love interest is not less powerful than the political side of the narrative. There is nothing here for people of flabby mentality, and weak nerves. "Olive Latham" will not be likely to prove a popular success but the discriminating few will find it worth their while to make room for it, even at the expense of overcrowded book shelves. Published by J. B. Lippincott, Philadelphia.

—The Bookworm.

SCHOOLS and COLLEGES

HEALD'S

LEADING BUSINESS COLLEGE of the WEST

Over 24 Post St., San Francisco, Cal.

Established 40 years. Open entire year, day and night Write for circulars (free.)

St. Mary's College

OAKLAND, CAL.

Literary, Scientific, Commercial Courses.

Studies resumed August 1, 1904. Send for Catalogue.

BROTHER VELLESIAN, President.

Santa Clara College

SANTA CLARA CAL.

The next session will begin August 2, 1904. Send for full particulars to

(Rev.) R. E. KENNA, S. J., President.

Hoitt's

School for Boys; 14th year begins August 9th; larger and stronger faculty than ever; perfect sanitation; illustrated catalogue. W. J. MEREDITH, Vice-Principal. Menlo Park, Cal.

Irving Institute

Boarding and day school for young ladies and little girls. 2126 California St. Will reopen August 1, 1904. Accredited to the universities. REV. EDWARD B. CHURCH, A. M., Principal.

Miss Bolte's School

2174 Post St., prepares for universities and colleges. Music by graduate professor of Berlin and Leipsic conservatories. Conversational and grammatical French and German; English. Board, English, French, German, music, $30 month. Next term July 11.

San Francisco Business College

Scott & Van Arsdale Building, 738 Mission St., between Third and Fourth. We are located in our new quarters. The finest schoolrooms in the West. Come and see them whether you want to go to school or not. Business men know where we are. We had eight calls for help this week.

is the most practical; recommended by expert court reporters. Send for catalogue.

1382 Market St., San Francisco.

The Melbourne Institute

For stuttering and stammering teaches a new scientific course for cure. It is successful. It has been established in this city for three years under teaching of Prof. F. G. Norcross, acknowledged mental expert, whose work has won the admiration of reputable physicians and other deep students of mentality. The services of the Melbourne may be enlisted with the utmost confidence. Address MELBOURNE INSTITUTE, Van Ness Ave. and Market St., San Francisco. Hours 1 to 5 P. M. Telephone Mint 2626.

THE LYCEUM

Jordan or any Stanford professor. L. H. GRAU Ph. D., Principal. Rooms, 333-346, 5th floor, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

AN ACCREDITED PREPARATORY SCHOOL

For the University, Law, and Medical College, Etc. This school is well known for its careful and thorough work; we prepare you well. References, President work; we prepare you well. References, President

CALIFORNIA BUSINESS COLLEGE

The largest and finest quarters in the city; refined residence locality. Position for every graduate. Thorough, modern. 75 Page Catalogue on request.

R. L. DURHAM, President.

925 Golden Gate Avenue. San Francisco

Kent Law School

THIRTEENTH YEAR

Day and Night. Always open. No Vacations. Book Free. 536 Parrott Building (Emporium). Phone Folsom 2031

Century Electric Corporation

SUPPLIES, CONSTRUCTION, MANUFACTURING AND REPAIRING. BUILDINGS WIRED

16 and 18 SECOND STREET

Telephone Bush 352

San Francisco

Music

[Communications addressed to this department should be received not later than Tuesday noon.]

The Musical Novel

It is quite the thing now to write novels in which music is a dominant feature. Heroines play Beethoven and Chopin and go abroad to absorb the artistic atmosphere. But some writers make odd errors in attempting to make their scenes musical. I read of a heroine who "played a symphony," of an orchestra which "created a sensation in a sonata," of an infant prodigy who "astonished the world in a madrigal," of a German fiddler, who, when he thought himself unobserved, "played a sonata for violin and contralto." Disraeli, in "Endymion," makes one of his characters "play a cantata on the piano." In "Daniel Deronda" George Eliot tells us of a conversation that was resumed after "a long organ stop," as if an organ stop were some kind of musical pause. Ouida describes one of her heroines as singing a "Stabat Mater" alone in a wood and producing "glorious harmonies," and again she says, "I never let a maid make a dress. You might as well want Rubinstein to make the violin he plays on." Again she makes "a romantic creature spend hours at the organ playing the grand old masses of Mendelssohn." A modern novelist wrote that his heroine's nervous system was at such a constant unremitting tension that it was "like the C string of a highly tuned violin; a breeze blowing against it, it will cry out; another turn of the key and it will snap asunder." Any violinist who can tell me what the "C string" is will please speak up. I confess I never heard of it. Charles Reade makes his Peg Woffington "whistle a quick movement on a paste ring," and then tells us that Mr. Cribber was confounded by "this sparkling adagio." The average adagio, I am sure, does not "sparkle." Victor Hugo describes how three violins and a flute played some of Haydn's quartets at a wedding. Fancy Haydn rising in his grave at this combination. I have happened upon even worse "musical" descriptions in modern literature, yet music nowadays is supposed to be a necessary a-b-c in general culture. One of the best of the musical novels, if one excepts "Tribby," which initiated the unlearned in the mysteries of tone-deafness, is Jessie Fothergill's "The First Violin." Richard Harding Davis included a charming musical episode in his last volume of short stories, and in "The Inevitable" Philip Verrill Mighels wrote one chapter that no musical mind should fail to read. You positively feel and hear the music it describes.

Colonel Savage is going to produce "Parsifal," and has engaged several European artists to sing the principal roles. Putnam Griswold, a basso from Oakland—our own Oakland—who has been singing with success in Frankfort, Germany, will have the role of Gurnemanz.

Louis Blumenberg, the 'cellist, had a novel experience when giving his first concert in the City of Mexico. The advertised hour was half-past eight and the artist waited in the wings, watching the house fill. A police functionary came upon the stage, and pointing to his watch said, "It is time. Begin. You must go on at once or pay the municipal fine." Imagine the effect which such a city ordinance would have in San Francisco, where concerts as a rule begin half an hour later than the advertised time.

W. H. Keith, the baritone, formerly of San Francisco, has become a great favorite with the congregation of the Washington Avenue Baptist church, New York city. At a recent Sunday service he sang Gounod's "Adore, and Be Still," the difficult solo being rendered with fine expression and art.

Ysaye will give concerts in the United States this winter.

Melba will give her local concerts, next winter, under Gottlob, Marx & Company's management.

—The Music Critic.

FIRE OF LIFE

AN UNFAILING CURE FOR

RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA,

SPRAINS, BRUISES, AND

ALL PAINS AND ACHES.

ALL DRUGGISTS 50¢

Fire of Life, known for years as the most remarkable remedy for the cure of

RHEUMATISM

A trial of this remedy will at once show its great merit as a rheumatic cure.

ROWELL & BROWN
32 Turk St., S. F.

The Dinner Setting is Incomplete
without

White Rock LITHIA Water

A Selected Water is as Essential
as a Selected Wine

P. J. WENIGER & CO.
DISTRIBUTORS

101-103 Powell St.
SAN FRANCISCO

NELSON'S AMYCOSE

Infalible Remedy for Catarrh
Sore Throat and Inflammations of the Skin

BIG TREES AND YOSEMITE

The greatest trees in all the world are found in the Mariposa grove, reached only by the Raymond-Wawona route to the Yosemite Valley. "The Grizzly Giant," "Wawona," "The Fallen Monarch," and other famous Big Trees.

The stage road is shortest and smoothest, the Big Trees mightiest, and the entire route the most satisfactory. Ask any agent, or at the San Francisco office

613 MARKET ST.
SOUTHERN PACIFIC

LOUIS CREPAUX

(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

SCHOOL OF TONE PLACING (PALATAL SYSTEM)

Vocal Phonetics—Besides the
"Palatal Tone Placing System"

taught in the Louis Crepau School, another and most important feature is the teaching of the English phonetic sounds. The study of the five vowels is not all that is necessary to sing in a language, and particularly so in English. Very few English-speaking people are able to sing the phonetics of their language exempt from throatiness. Fundamentally, English phonetics cannot be emitted in singing as uttered in speech. From a vocal standpoint and through ten years of experience in teaching English-speaking singers, Mr. Crepau has made a vocal classification of all the English phonetic sounds. This classification enables English-speaking singers to master all the English phonetic sounds and renders them harmonious and easy to sing.

Apply at the School Mondays and Thursdays, from 2:00 to 2:30 p. m. Y. M. C. A. Building, Ellis and Mason Sts.

LOUIS H. EATON

ORGANIST AND DIRECTOR OF THE CHOIR

TRINITY CHURCH

Teacher of Singing, Piano and Organ

Special advantages offered singers in choir training
Studio and Residence 1676 Broadway

Between Van Ness Ave. and Franklin Street

H. B. PASMORE

TEACHER OF SINGING

Specialty—Shakespeare's system of tone production.

1424 Washington Street

573 Fifteenth street; OAKLAND, on Thursdays after August 1st.

M. GERTRUDE JUDD

Teacher of Whistling

785 Geary St., S. F.

Phone Hyde 933

JOSEPH ROECKEL and MME. COURSEN-ROECKEL

Assisted by Mlle. Elena Roeckel, Concert contralto

NEW VOCAL CLASSES Placing of Voice and Solo Practice
1060 FULTON ST. Opposite Alamo Square

Conrad W. Fuhrer

TEACHER of Violin and Ensemble Playing. 1676 Page St.
Phone Fell 3373. Also care of Sherman, Clay & Co.

SIGNOR PAOLO LA VILLA

(Of Florence, Italy)

N. B.—Special Terms for Professionals.

Vocal Studio: THE ROOSEVELT, 546 Sutter St.
Phone James 1282

CHICKERING Best in the World
PIANOS Oldest in America

100,000 IN USE

BENJ. CURTAZ & SON, 16 O'FARRELL STREET
SOLE AGENTS

Dr. H. J. STEWART

TEACHER OF VOCAL MUSIC

Pianoforte, Organ, Harmony and Composition

Special course for singers desiring church appointments

Studio, 1105 Bush St.

MR. ANDREW BOGART

TEACHER OF SINGING

METHOD of the ELDER LAMPERTI

Home Studio: S. E. corner Buchanan and Page Sts.

PHONE PARK 202

SIGNOR ABRAMOFF

The only teacher of the famous California Prima Donna, Miss Edith Decker (Dramatic Soprano), Miss Paraskova Sandelin (Contralto), Mr. Emil Arnold (Tenor) and of several other singers prominent in the profession.

VOICE CULTURE (OLD ITALIAN METHOD)

Signor Abramoff Equalizes, Beautifies and Strengthens the Tone. Corrects Nasal and Throaty Production Produces apartamentos, and Covered tones with Open Mouth.

703 SUTTER ST.

HOURS: 10 to 1 and 3 to 7 Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday

MR. THEODOR

SALMON

Concert Pianist and Teacher. Pupil of Kullak, Reinecke, Jadassohn and Richter. Studio, 546 Sutter St. Phone James 1281. Residence, "The Nordhoff."

Von Meyerinck
School of Music

Telephone Park 223

341 FULTON STREET

Offers all the advantages of Eastern and European conservatories for a thorough musical education.

STAFF OF TEACHERS.

Voice Culture - - - MRS. ANNA VON MEYERINCK

Art Expression, Opera and Drama, MRS. MARY FAIRWEATHER

Piano Harmony and Composition MR. FRED ZECH, JR.

Violin and Viola - - - MISS MARIE H. MILLS

Competent staff of assistant teachers. Special teachers for

Languages (German, French and Italian), Physical Culture,

Fencing, Elocution, and Stage Dancing. Prospectus upon application.

TONKIN, Photographer

1490 MARKET ST.

Bet. 7th and 8th Sts.

San Francisco, Cal.

GROUND FLOOR STUDIO

SUMMER RESORTS

The following Resorts will send descriptive booklet when requested.

TUSCAN SPRINGS

Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Catarrh and Stomach, Gout, Rheumatism and All BLOOD DISEASES taken under a guarantee to be cured in a specific time, or all expenses including Ry. fare both ways refunded. Send socs. for a bottle of Stomach and Catarrh Salts. Reduced round trip rates. FRANK J. HELLEN, Mgr., Tuscan Springs, Cal.

GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM

A Sanitarium, cottage plan; not a hospital. Equipped for the scientific application of Water, Electricity, Massage, Tissue Oscillation, Electric Light, X-Ray, Dry, Hot Air and all minor treatments. Large grounds, 5½ acres, shade, etc. Separate treatment apartments for men and women. Fifteen minutes walk from centre of city; one block from car line. Beautiful scenery. Write for literature. GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM, San Jose, Cal.

SKAGGS

Hot Springs, Sonoma County; only 4½ hours from San Francisco and but 9 miles staging; waters noted for medicinal virtues; best natural hot mineral water bath in State; boating and swimming; good trout streams; telephone, telegraph, daily mail and San Francisco papers. FIRST-CLASS HOTEL AND STAGE SERVICE morning and afternoon; round trip from San Francisco $5.50. Take Tiburon ferry daily 7:30 a. m. or 2:30 p. m. Rates $2 a day or $12 a week. References: any guest of the past nine years. Information at Peck's, 11 Montgomery St., or of J. F. MULGREW, Skaggs, Cal.

PARAISO SPRINGS

MONTEREY CO., CAL.

The most popular sanitary health resort in California. Completely renovated and improved. No winds or fogs, grand mountain and valley scenery. Hot soda and sulphur baths, large swimming tank, excellent table. Booklet and particulars of F. W. SCHROEDER, Mgr. or PECK'S BUREAU, 11 Montgomery St.

SODA BAY SPRINGS

On Clear Lake. Hunting, fishing, boating, launch, horses, tennis, croquet, dark room, warm soda geyser in bathhouse, clubhouse, etc. Rates $10 to $15. CHATFIELD & VINZENT, 228 Montgomery St., or LEE D. CRAIG, Manager, Soda Bay, Kelseyville, P. O., Lake Co., Cal.

TRUCKEE RIVER COUNTRY CLUB

Summer Resort and Sportsmen's Lodge. Fourth Season May 15. Sierra attractions. California's Largest Rainbow Hatchery and Finest Fishing. G. H. FOULKES, Verdi, Nev., or Nevada Block, S. F.

Camp Vacation

Hotel under canvas on the Russian River below Guerneville in a grove a mile and a half long, skirting the river; tennis courts; 40 new boats. There will be a dam in the river affording 4 miles of smooth water for boating, bathing and swimming. Adults $2 per day, $10 per week; children under 10 half rates. Special rates for families. Opens May 1. Address Mrs. L. C. CNOPIUS, Camp Vacation. "Vacation" P. O., Sonoma Co., Cal.

Byron Hot Springs

Open all the year. Unexcelled climate. Luxurious Mineral and Mud Baths, and the most curative waters known for Rheumatism, Gout, Sciatica, Liver and Kidney and Nervous troubles, also Malaria.

Hotel unique in cuisine, service and appointments.

Rates $17.50 per week in Cottages. $3 per day and upwards in Main Hotel.

Reached by Southern Pacific, 2 1/2 hours from San Francisco. 3 trains daily, at 8:30 a. m., 10 a. m. and 3:30 p. m.

H. R. WARNER, Manager

Byron Hot Springs Post Office, California

Awnings, Tents, Campers' Outfits, Bags, Etc. Rented and Sold

R. McMAHON
Tel. Bush 858 35 MARKET ST.

ASK PECK, HE KNOWS

Literature and Particulars on all hotels and summer resorts in California. 11 Montgomery Street.

Free Information

HOTEL VENDOME

San Jose, Cal.

Situated in Vendome Park of 12½ acres and while secluded, yet convenient to all avenues and stations, a charming resort for summer. Automobile Garage on the grounds free to guests. Prof. Geo. D'Abblang's Orchestra engaged for summer.

Excellent roads, beautiful drives, bathing pavilion, bowling alleys, tennis courts, croquet, etc.

J. T. BROOKS, Proprietor

Agua Caliente Springs

New attractions; open all the year round; nearest Hot Sulphur Springs to San Francisco. Temperature 115 degrees; no staging; fare $1.10. Cures rheumatism, asthma and kindred ailments. Five Hot Sulphur Springs; tub and plunge baths, largest mineral water swimming tank in State. Accommodations first class. $2.00 per day; $12 to $14 per week; rates to families, half rates to children. Peck's, 11 Montgomery St. or THEO RICHARDS, Agua Caliente Springs, Sonoma Co., Cal. We have erected a stone dining room, seats 400 guests.

Deer Park Inn

And cottages; 6 miles from Lake Tahoe; open June 1st; ideal place for rest and recreation; elevation 6507 feet. Fine mineral springs. For further information call at office of Traveler, 30 Montgomery St., or send for booklet.

J. B. SCOTT, Folsom, Cal.

Beautiful Laurel Dell

The Robson Orchestral and Dr. Monroe N. Callender will furnish the best music ever played at any resort in the state.

The Switzerland of America. The only lake resort that has its own mineral springs and a chemically pure spring. Boating, swimming, marine toboggan 160 feet in length; first class livery; saddle horses. Dining room seats 300. Bowling alley and all games free to guests. Pamphlets at Peck's, 11 Montgomery St. and Cal. N. W. Ry., 650 Market St. Address, EDGAR DURNAN, Owner and Proprietor Laurel Dell, Lake Co., Cal.

HOTEL BELVEDERE

Most attractive resort on San Francisco bay. Special rates to clubs of young men. Send for booklet. MRS. A. T. MOORE, Belvedere, Cal.

TENTS AWNINGS, BAGS HAMMOCKS

W. A. PLUMMER

Tel. Main 549 111 CLAY ST., SAN FRANCISCO

VACATION 1904

IS NOW READY FOR DISTRIBUTION.

"VACATION" is issued annually by the

California Northwestern Railway

THE PICTURESQUE ROUTE OF CALIFORNIA

and is the standard publication on the Pacific Coast for information regarding

MINERAL SPRING RESORTS, COUNTRY HOMES AND FARMS WHERE SUMMER BOARDERS ARE TAKEN, AND SELECT CAMPING SPOTS.

This year's edition "VACATION 1904" contains over 150 pages, beautifully illustrated, and is complete in its detailed information as to location, accommodations, attractions, etc., with terms from $7.00 per week up.

To be had at Ticket Offices, 650 Market Street (Chronicle Building) and Tiburon Ferry, foot of Market Street; General Office, Mutual Life Building, corner of Sansome and California Streets, San Francisco.

Applications by mail will receive immediate response.

JAS. L. FRAZIER, Gen'l Mgr. R. X. RYAN, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

The Holier-Than-Thou Sinner

"Well, who are you?" asked the Prince of Darkness. "I'm an Honest Man," said the visitor. "I was a Reformer in San Francisco."

"Oh, yes, I remember now; Peter 'phoned down about you the other day. 'I am holier than thou' was your favorite expression, I believe?"

"Yes, sir."

"You were always quick to suspect people of corrupt motives, I believe?"

"Yes, sir."

"When a member of the legislature voted as you thought he shouldn't, you never considered it possible that he might have been influenced by friendship. You invariably charged him with having accepted a bribe."

"Yes, sir."

"In your opinion, whenever a judge decided in favor of a corporation he was corrupt?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you suspected that all newspapers that espoused causes which you did not approve had been subsidized?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, what have you to say for yourself?"

"I am an Honest Man. I fathered many reform measures, and I was always for good government, and always faithful to the People."

"You talk as though you deem yourself qualified for admission to Heaven," said the Prince of Darkness.

"I believe that I am," calmly replied the Reformer.

"And Peter turned you down?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then why don't you suspect him of having accepted a bribe from me?"

Thus the Reformer:

"I have come to the conclusion that it is a great sin to harbor suspicions of others; that it leads to injustice."

"Well," said the Prince of Darkness, "it took you a long time to find it out. You have done great evil in your time. Hell is too good for you. Apply farther down."

—The Philosopher.

The Palpable Fact

Tom: "Mrs. Decollete keeps quite up to date with her bodices, does she not?"

Jim: "Yes, she keeps abreast of the times."

—The Wag.

VALUABLE JEWELRY LOST

During the summer months much jewelry is lost traveling and at summer resorts. This can be avoided by leaving yours with the Baldwin Jewelry Co., 906 Market St., who make advances on diamonds and jewelry.

Rupert Hughes's new book, "The Real New York," will be brought out by the Smart Set Company. It is described as at once something more and a good deal less than a guide book, and was designed to do for the American metropolis what Cucuel's "Bohemian Paris" did for the Latin Quarter of that city, and Robert Machray's "The Night Side of London" accomplished for the English capital. Why do not some of our bright local writers take up the idea and tell of San Francisco as it is? Apparently the only places that are known at all are the Cliff House and Chinatown, though transient missionaries and their like manage to know a good deal more about the tenderloin than the year round residents ever discover. An illustrated volume which is not palpably an advertisement thinly disguised should be favorably received.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST—Phelan Bldg., Rooms 6, 8, 10, 48. 806 Market St. Phone John 3841

SUMMER RESORTS

The following Resorts will send descriptive booklet when requested

Hotel Rowardennan

"IN THE MOUNTAINS BY THE SEA"

Ben Lomond, Santa Cruz County. Opened under entirely new management. Round-trip Tickets from San Francisco, $3. For booklet apply PECK'S BUREAU, 11 Montgomery St., S. F.; or to WM. G. DODGE, Lessee.

The Monterey

Most Elegantly appointed Hotel on the Pacific Coast. Hot and cold water; Electric and Gas Lights; Private and Public Baths; Telephone in every room; four Private Dining Rooms; Fine Sample Rooms. American Plan, $2.50 and upwards; European Plan, 75c and upwards. Hageman & Jones, Props., Monterey, Cal.

Hotel Ben Lomond

SANTA CRUZ MOUNTAINS—NO STAGING

Table first-class. Electric lights, boating, swimming, fishing, hunting, tennis, croquet. See booklet, S. P. Company, 613 Market St., or B. DICKINSON, Ben Lomond, Cal.

Tahoe Tavern

On Lake Tahoe, the largest and most beautiful body of water in the world at this elevation, now open. The tavern will be conducted this season by Mr. F. W. Richardson, manager of California's famous mission hotel, The Glenwood, Riverside; a guarantee that it will be strictly first class. The table supplied with all delicacies; fishermen constantly employed to furnish lake trout. For rates address F. W. RICHARDSON

La Honda and Pescadero

Buy your R. R. tickets to Redwood City; 9 A. M. train 3d and Townsend, and 9:20 A. M. train from San Jose connect with stages direct. Address, WALTER KNIGHT, Redwood City, Cal.

Brockway

Lake Tahoe

Opens June 1st.

Write FRANK B. ALVERSON, Mgr.

Brockway, Cal.

The Tallac

Lake Tahoe, Cal.

Cafe European. Nurses, Maids and Children, American Plan. Prices now as low as any hotel on Lake. Service, accommodations, boating and livery superior to any. Address M. LAWRENCE & CO., Tallac, Cal.

The Grove

Lake Tahoe

Half mile east of Tallac on Lake Shore. Rates $2 per day; $10 per week; meals 50c. Good saddle horses and the best of livery; boats free to all guests, J. E. PARMETER, Prop., Tallac, Cal.

Spend Your Vacation

A great many San Francisco people are planning to spend the entire summer at Hotel Del Monte. No other resort in California offers such a combination of attractions—sea bathing, golf, automobilism, bowling, tennis, fishing, and all out-of-door sports. Instead of going from place to place seeking comforts, the wise ones of society are planning already to put in several enjoyable weeks down at Del Monte by the sea. Address Geo. P. Snell, manager, Del Monte, California.

At Hotel Del Monte

Hotel Berkeley

Dwight Way, Berkeley

Half block from Key Route and Berkeley local trains. Surrounded by beautiful lawns and flowers; an ideal summer resort hotel; quiet, restful; modern appointments; cuisine first class in every respect; large, airy rooms. M. A. GIBBS, Prop.

THE MART

1348 MARKET STREET

DOMESTIC and IMPORTED BEERS
WINES and LIQUORS, for Camping,
Picnics and Vacations, at

Phone South 1176

REDUCED PRICES

MOORE'S POISON OAK REMEDY

Cures Poison-Oak and all Skin Diseases
Sold by all Druggists

...THE...

German Savings & Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus	- - - - -	$ 2,448,948.13
Capital actually paid up in Cash	- - - - -	1,000,000.00
Deposits June 30, 1904	- - - - -	36,573,015.18

Board of Directors

JOHN LLOYD, President.
DANIEL MEYER, 1st Vice-President
H. HORSTMANN, 2nd Vice-President
Ign. Steinhart	Emil Rohte	H. B. Russ	N. Ohlandt
I. N. Walter	A. H. R. Schmidt,	J. W. Van Bergen
Wm. Herrmann,		Asst. Cashier
Geo. Tourny,		Secretary
A. H. Muller,		Asst. Secretary
W. S. Goodfellow		General Attorney

San Francisco Savings Union

532 California Street, Corner Webb

Deposits July 1, 1904	- - - - -	$33,908,594.00
Paid Up Capital	- - - - -	1,000,000.00
Reserve and Contingent Funds	- - - - -	935,033.00

E. B. POND, President	W. C. B. de FREMERY	} Vice-Presidents
LOVELL WHITE, Cashier	ROBERT WATT
	R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier

DIRECTORS:

Henry F. Allen, William A. Magee, W. C. B. de Fremery, C. O. G. Miller, Robert Watt, George C. Boardman, Fred H. Beaver, Jacob Barth, E. B. Pond.

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits: Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

CONTINENTAL BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATION

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital	- - - - -	$13,000,000.00
Paid in Capital	- - - - -	2,500,000.00
Monthly Income	- - - - -	150,000.00
Homes built since organization	- - - - -	1,250

Home Office 301 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

It might be well to remember
when making a will

THAT THE

CALIFORNIA SAFE DEPOSIT
AND TRUST COMPANY

Is in a position to settle estates with the assurance that the administration will not change hands and that the estate will be prudently managed with absolute safety.

WILLS SAFELY KEPT WITHOUT CHARGE

OFFICES:

Cor. CALIFORNIA and MONTGOMERY STS.
San Francisco

Mechanics' Savings Bank

Incorporated January 21, 1904

Capital Stock paid-up $250,000.00

OFFICERS:

President, James O'B. Gunn	Vice-President, Geo. D. Gray
Vice-President, Geo. F. Lyon	Cashier, Frederick H. Clark

DIRECTORS:

F. W. Dohrmann, Jr.,	Geo. D. Gray,	F. M. Greenwood,	Jas. O'B. Gunn
Marshall Hale,	G. W. Kline,	Geo. F. Lyon,	Geo. M. Mitchell,
Chas. C. Moore,	Henry T. Scott,	W. F. Williamson

The Mechanics' Savings Bank has opened its doors for a general Savings and Loan business at the S. W. corner Montgomery and Bush Sts., San Francisco, Cal. May 2, 1904. Open Every Saturday Evening from 6 to 8.

The Owl Drug Co.

is the largest concern of its kind in this country—it buys
its goods in such large quantity it can sell them for less
money than most any other
druggist pays for them.
Telephone orders filled at
once and delivered free.
South 356.

1128 MARKET ST., S. F.
BROADWAY & 10TH ST., OAKLAND

La Grande

BRANCHES

5 A Taylor Street
200 Mtgy. Ave. cor. Kearny
202 Third cor. Howard
1738 Market opp. Eleventh

Laundry
23 POWELL ST.
Phone Bush 12

Sews Buttons

Ordinary Mending

Work called for and delivered

FREE of charge

Rathjen Bros.

39 Stockton St.
Phone Main 5522

Complete Line of Imported and Domestic

GROCERIES, TEAS, COFFEES
WINES AND LIQUORS

Special Sale Days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday

Look for Items in all the Daily Papers

J. PORCHER*HATTER

Latest
Summer
Styles

JOHN B. STETSON CO.

1109 Market St.
Odd Fellows Building, S. F.

HATS AND BONNETS

RUMPLE & RIEDEL
221 Geary St. We have just received a few choice French novelties in Hats, Turbans and Bonnets.

HAIR GOODS

G. LEEDERER
Wig Maker and Hairdresser. Scalp treatments, Shampooing, Manicuring, Hair dyeing, Switches, Ornaments, Toupees. Complete line of pure Hair Goods only. 123 Stockton St.

HAT RENOVATORY

PANAMA HATS
Bleached and Blocked. 423 Sutter Street, 424 1/2 Montgomery Street, 1051 Market Street. Telephones Black 4516, Red 3212.

KIMONOS AND JAPANESE GOODS

KIMONO
Silk and Cotton; Custom made and made to order; of every description at special low price. Call and inspect our large and artistic line. The Orient, 633 Sutter St. near Taylor.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR REMOVED

TENEYCK
(Miss) Electric Needle Specialist. Moles, warts and superfluous hair permanently removed by electric needle. All branches taught. References given. 201 Grant Building, 1095 Market Street, corner 7th.

For those who appreciate comfort and attention

Occidental Hotel

SAN FRANCISCO

AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN PLAN
A QUIET HOME
CENTRALLY LOCATED

GEORGE WARREN HOOPER, LESSEE

VEUVE
CLICQUOT
PONSARDIN

The most delicious
Champagne
of the Age

Yellow Label, Dry
Gold Label, Brut

Cruse &
Fils Freres

Clarets and
Sauternes

Creme des Grands
Crus
(Creme of Cognac)

A. Vignier Co.

429 & 431 Battery
San Francisco

Visit

DR. JORDAN'S

Great

Museum of Anatomy

1051 Market St., bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.

The largest of its kind in the world.
Book "The Philosophy of Marriage" mailed free.
A Valuable Book for Men.

W. SCHEPPLER & SON

Dealer in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing
and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry.
1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

In Times of War

I was talking with an old Southern lady, apropos the production of "Barbara Frietchie," and she gave me some interesting stories of how they managed to keep their houses furnished during war-times. "As years went by," she said, "and the war went on, furniture perished and had to be replaced. Worn out carpets saw themselves renewed in pretty colors and patterns, coming from the busy loom rooms with restored capacity to keep out the cold and deaden the clatter of the little wooden bottom shoes. Rugs were made of old shawls, flannel petticoats, stockings the heels and toes of which had forsaken them, and the like. Curtains of quaint stripes and figures, woven of stuffs from similar sources, shut out the winds of winter. Broken chairs and decrepit sofas were replaced with others constructed of homespun cloth and cotton stuffing upon frames of wood roughly put together, or fashioned entirely of broom straw from the old fields, bound together in ornamental shapes with hickory withes. Sometimes interlaced grapevines made a pretty and not uncomfortable chair or sofa; and the common wooden frames, bottomed with twisted shucks or oak splints, abounded everywhere. Many persons had their glass and china ware destroyed and it was almost impossible to replace it. Such articles were always eagerly sought at auction sales, but he who determined to purchase had to possess a plethoric purse. Porcelain and earthenware of a coarse kind were manufactured from kaolin found in the valley of Virginia and at other points in the South."

A Crimean Story

At Inkermann a young officer, who had learned at Eton not much from books but a good deal from its sports, was surrounded and made prisoner. While going to the rear in charge of two stalwart Russians, he looked at their long coats and said to himself:

"They can't run."

Watching his opportunity, he knocked one soldier head over heels, threw the other, by a wrestler's trick, into the mud, and took to his heels. Before his guardians were on their legs and could fire he had got over a good piece of ground. A Russian lancer made at him. He ran as if leading an Eton foot-race, and cleared a good-sized fence. The lancer cleared it after him, and with lance fixed pressed the fugitive hard. A swollen brook, running fiercely, barred his way. It was seventeen feet wide, but the Etonian had won the "long jump" when at school. He jumped the brook. The lancer refused to follow, and the young officer ran back into the English lines.

Easy Money

Visiting M. Renan's birthplace, M.

Residence 814 Grove St., S. F.
Telephone Page 81

HENRY P. TRICOU
Notary Public

Telephone Main 1880

306 Montgomery St
Bet. Pine and Bush

SOHMER
PIANO
AGENCY

WARRANTED 10 YEARS
BYRON MAUZY
The CECILIAN — The Perfect Piano Player

PIANOS
308-312 Post St
San Francisco.

Jules Simon asked the caretaker if many visitors came to see it.

"Yes, a great many English folk."

"Well, you might get a handsome little fortune from some of them by selling them the pen with which M. Renan wrote his 'Life of Jesus.'"

"Alas! I have it not! But I will go to the stationer's tomorrow and buy two hundred!"

Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers,

And I linger more and more,

And the individual withers,

And the world is more and more.

—Tennyson.

"Statistics show that we lose more fools on this day than in all the other days of the year put together. This proves, by the number left in stock, that one Fourth of July per year is now inadequate, the country has grown so." — "Pudd'nhead Wilson," by Mark Twain.

A Home with Music is a Happy One

THE EDISON
PHONOGRAPH

AND EDISON GOLD
MOULDED RECORDS

place happiness within the reach of all.
—Hear them.

PETER BACIGALUPI

Pacific Coast Headquarters

786 MISSION ST. SAN FRANCISCO

LASH'S
KIDNEY & LIVER
BITTERS
A PLEASANT LAXATIVE
NOT INTOXICATING

Visit the

Hoffman Cafe

Wm. J. Sullivan, Proprietor

Lunch, Grill and Wine Rooms

Half a block below Palace and Grand Hotels, S. F.

Fine Goods a Specialty. Merchants' hot lunch from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. An extra spread served on all holidays. Merchants' lunch served in Ladies Cafe and Grill, from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. Oysters, English Chops, Steaks and Delicacies a specialty.

Handsome Cafe in America

Open all night. Private Dining Rooms for Ladies and Escorts

601 Market St. (S. W. Cor. 2nd and Market Sts.)

POODLE DOG RESTAURANT, CORNER Eddy and Mason Streets, San Francisco—Private dining and banquet rooms. Telephone 429. A. B. BLANCO & BRUN, Proprietors

PALACE HOTEL

San Francisco, California.

TOURISTS and TRAVELERS will, now, with difficulty recognize the famous Court into which for twenty-five years carriages have been driven. This space of over a quarter of an acre has recently, by the addition of very handsome furniture, rugs, chandeliers and tropical plants, been converted into a lounging room, the

FINEST
IN THE
WORLD

THE EMPIRE PARLOR—the Palm Room, furnished in Cerise, with Billiard and Pool tables for the ladies—the Louis XV Parlor—the Ladies' Writing Room, and numerous other modern improvements, together with unexcelled Cuisine and the most convenient location in the City—all add much to the ever-increasing popularity of this most famous Hotel.

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO STATE OF CALIFORNIA

In the matter of the Estate of SAMUEL DAVIS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given that the petition of Andrew Hendrickson for an order directing the executor of the Will of SAMUEL DAVIS, Deceased, to convey to said petitioner a lot 25 by 100 feet in Protrero Block No. 145, has been set for hearing on Friday, July 22, 1904, in Department 10 of said Superior Court, at 10 o'clock A. M., at which time and place any objections that may be presented to said application will be heard and determined.

FRANK H. KERRIGAN, Judge of the Superior Court

Endorsed, Filed, June 3, 1904.

By D. J. CRANE, Deputy Clerk

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO STATE OF CALIFORNIA

In the matter of the Estate of SAMUEL DAVIS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given that the petition of Michael and Mary O'Keefe for an order directing the executor of the Will of SAMUEL DAVIS, deceased, to convey to said petitioners a lot 25 by 100 feet in Protrero Block No. 145, has been set for hearing on Friday, July 22, 1904, in Department 10 of said Superior Court, at 10 o'clock A. M., at which time and place any objections that may be presented to said application will be heard and determined.

FRANK H. KERRIGAN, Judge of the Superior Court.

Endorsed, Filed June 3, 1904.

By D. J. CRANE, Deputy Clerk.

JOHN J. GREIF Clerk.

Those who read much

are more frequently subject to eye trouble than others. There are, however, numerous modern occupations which bring on eye troubles that injure the brain and the physical system irreparably. Avoid danger by

Using GEORGE MAYERLE'S GLASSES

His Glasses insure health and a clear vision. Consultation Free. Open until 9 o'clock every evening. Geo. Mayerle's GERMAN EYEWATER makes weak eyes strong, sore eyes well, rests tired eyes. Price 50c. 62c by mail. Mail order or Wells-Fargo. Geo. Mayerle's Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers insure clean lenses without scratching.

Showing effect of George Mayerle's
Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers

GEORGE MAYERLE, German Expert Optician

1071 MARKET STREET

Two Doors from Seventh

CAFE ZINKAND

After the Theatre call at this Palace of Delights and revel in the luxuries of a spread fit for the gods, or drink of some of the best wine that ever chased the skeleton from the feast or painted landscapes within the brain of man.—Hograve.

GOODYEAR'S "GOLD SEAL"

Rubber Goods the Best Made

Rubber Hose, Belting and Packings

We are headquarters for everything made of Rubber

GOODYEAR RUBBER COMPANY

R. H. Pease, Pres. F. M. Shepard, Jr., Treas. C. F. Runyon, Sec.

573-575-577-579 Market St., San Francisco

Techau Tavern

The most unique resort in San Francisco.

There is not a more artistically appointed cafe in the country.

It is a place wherein the guest may feast the eye while dining sumptuously and being regaled with exquisite music.

The Tavern is now under new and experienced management, and patrons are assured of the constant attendance of the chief of the establishment, and of prompt service at all times.

Special attention is paid to luncheon, dinner and after-theatre parties.

OUR STANDARDS

Sperry's Best Family.
Drifted Snow.
Golden Gate Extra.

Sperry Flour Company

TOWN TALK

VOL. XII. No. 620.

SAN FRANCISCO, JULY 16, 1904.

PRICE 10 CENTS.

"Happy Days"

Sketched from life, Santa Cruz, July 4th '04.

A.P. Hotaling
& Co's

OLD

KIRK

Best Whiskey
on the Market

...THE...

German Savings & Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus $2,448,948.13
 Capital actually paid up in Cash 1,000,000.00
 Deposits June 30, 1904 36,573,015.18

Board of Directors

DANIEL MEYER, President
 H. HORSTMANN, and Vice-President
 Igo. Stein, Cashier
 I. N. Walter, Asst. Cashier
 A. H. R. Schmidt, Asst. Secretary
 Wm. Herrmann, Secretary
 Geo. Tourny, Asst. Secretary
 A. H. Muller, General Attorney
 W. S. Goodfellow, General Attorney
 H. B. Russ, N. Ohlandt
 J. W. Van Bergen, Cashier
 Asst. Cashier
 Secretary
 Asst. Secretary
 General Attorney

San Francisco Savings Union

532 California Street, Corner Webb

Deposits July 1, 1904 $33,008,594.00
 Paid Up Capital 1,000,000.00
 Reserve and Contingent Funds 935,033.00

E. B. POND, President W. C. B. de FREMERY } Vice-Presidents
 ROBERT WATT
 LOVELL WHITE, Cashier R. M. WELCH, Asst. Cashier
 DIRECTORS

Henry F. Allen, William A. Magee, W. C. B. de Fremery, C. O. G. Miller,
 Robert Watt, George C. Boardman, Fred H. Beaver, Jacob Barth,
 E. B. Pond.

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Depositors may deposit money in checks payable to the Union, or in cash, and receive a pass-book in return, which may be used for withdrawals at any time, with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

CONTINENTAL BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATION OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital $13,000,000.00
 Paid in Capital 2,500,000.00
 Monthly Income 150,000.00
 Homes built since organization 1,250

Home Office 301 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

It might be well to remember
 when making a will

THAT THE

CALIFORNIA SAFE DEPOSIT AND TRUST COMPANY

Is in a position to settle estates with the assurance that the administration will not change hands and that the estate will be prudently managed with absolute safety.

WILLS SAFELY KEPT WITHOUT CHARGE

OFFICES:

Cor. CALIFORNIA and MONTGOMERY STS.

San Francisco

Mechanics' Savings Bank

Incorporated January 21, 1904

Capital Stock paid-up $250,000.00

President, James O'B. Gunn
 Vice-President, Geo. F. Lyon

Vice-President, Geo. D. Gray
 Cashier, Frederick H. Clark

F. W. Dohrmann, Jr., Geo. D. Gray, F. M. Greenwood, Jas. O'B. Gunn
 Marshall Hale, G. W. Kline, Geo. F. Lyon, Geo. M. Mitchell,
 Chas. C. Moore, Henry T. Scott, W. F. Williamson

The Mechanics' Savings Bank is located at the S.W. corner Montgomery and Bush Sts., San Francisco, Cal.
 May 2, 1904. Open Every Saturday Evening from 6 to 8.

The Owl Drug Co.

is the largest concern of its kind in this country—it buys
 its goods in such large quantity it can sell them for less
 money than most any other
 druggist pays for them.
 Telephone orders filled at
 once and delivered free.
 South 356.

1128 MARKET ST., S. F.
 BROADWAY & 10TH ST., OAKLAND

La Grande

BRANCHES

24 Third St.
 200 Mtgy. Ave. cor. Kearny
 202 Third cor. Howard
 1738 Market opp. Eleventh

Laundry

23 POWELL ST.
 Phone BUSH 12

Sews Buttons

Ordinary Mending

Work called for and delivered

FREE of charge

Rathjen Bros.

39 Stockton St.
 Phone Main 5522

Complete Line of Imported and Domestic

GROCERIES, TEAS, COFFEES
 WINES AND LIQUORS

Special Sale Days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday

Look for Items in all the Daily Papers

J. PORCHER

HATTER

Latest
 Summer
 Styles

JOHN B. STETSON CO.

1109 Market St.
 Odd Fellows Building, S. F.

TOWN TALK

SAN FRANCISCO, JULY 16, 1904.

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

THEODORE F. BONNET - - - Editor

CHARLES S. SMITH - - - Manager

609 MISSION ST. FOURTH FLOOR Telephone BUSH 713

SUBSCRIPTION.—One Year, in advance, $3.00; six months, $1.75; three months, $1.00; one month, 40 cents; single copies, 10 cents. Foreign subscriptions (countries in postal union), $4.00 per year. Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application. For Sale by all Newsdealers.

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.
RALPH A. GROVER Manager of Advertising
New York Representative, FREDERIC M. KRUGLER, Room 918.
150 Nassau Street.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N. Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 200 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

No attention is paid to anonymous communications, but the wishes of contributors as to the use of their names will be scrupulously regarded. We cannot undertake to preserve or return manuscripts.

TOWN TALK is mailed to subscribers every Thursday and should be received in this city and vicinity every Friday. Please notify us of tardy delivery.

Two Conventions

In striking contrast to the Republican convention at Chicago was the one held by the Democracy in St. Louis. The two differed not only in temperament, principle and policy, but in the freedom of one from control and the utter subservieny of the other to a single dominating personality. Nothing was cut and dried at the Democratic convention. It was a purely deliberative body, actuated by the highest motives that could influence a great political organization. Neither the temporary nor the permanent chairman had been selected long in advance under White House inspiration. Their speeches were not polished, rhetorical masterpieces, for they were the result of hasty preparation on the eve of delivery. There had been no burning of midnight oil over those speeches, and they had not been revised and amended after long consultations. But they were honest, forceful discussions of vital issues and the speakers exposed the chicanery, hypocrisy and cant of the Republican party in language that scintillated with spontaneous epigram. The convention was pre-eminently one of discussion, deliberation and judgment, and before it was called to order it was wholly conjectural as to who should dominate it. It framed its platform after hours of tedious wrangling, and its declaration of principles emanated from no extraneous source. One of the cherished traditions of this country is that a President is expected to retire from office at the expiration of his second successive term, public sentiment being in favor of safeguarding the high office from the machinations of ambitious statesmen who might be tempted to use the machinery of government to perpetuate themselves in the White House. The objection to three successive terms may be urged with equal soundness against the man who avails himself of his political power to coerce his party into nominating him for a second term. The principle involved is the same in both cases, and the whole country knows that it has been violated by Theodore Roosevelt. National conventions should be self-governing bodies, free to pick out their own leaders. The one held in Chicago was called together merely to register a decree.

Corey's Cafe, 600 Mission. Mercantile Lunch 11 to 2. Cedar Brook Whiskey, formerly W. H. McBrayer---10 yrs. old.

By Way of Contrast

Seldom have the voters of this country been called upon to discriminate between two men so antithetic of character and temperament as are the present standard-bearers of the Democratic and Republican parties. It would be hard to find two men in whom the elements of personality differ so widely as they do in Alton Parker and Theodore Roosevelt. The contrast is even more pronounced than the one afforded by a comparison of the reposeful William McKinley and his strenuous running mate. Parker is a man in whom the judicial temperament is inherent, and the same was true of McKinley, who impressed people as being the ideal Chief Magistrate of the Republic. When President Roosevelt visited this city some months after the death of his predecessor, the effect of his presence on people who had experienced the pleasure of meeting the refined, dignified and magnetic McKinley was positively shocking. After leaving the presence of the benign McKinley they had unconsciously apotheosized the President of the United States. It was as though the high office had sublimated and sanctified his character. Later on, when those same people were confronted by the breezy and somewhat boisterous Rough Rider, they were painfully disillusioned. He brought them back to earth and showed them that the President of the United States could be an ordinary mortal, undignified of mien, and with personality unattuned to the dignity of the high office. The dissonance was by no means refreshing.

That Sensational Telegram

Ever since Alton G. Parker was suggested as an available man for the Presidency he has comported himself with true and becoming dignity. His maintenance of strict silence despite the efforts of the opposition press to force him into an expression of his views on public questions, was remarkable. He has been taunted on all sides for his reticence, but nothing could induce him to break his silence, not even the unfair inferences of his enemies. The explanation of his attitude was not hard to find. Judge Parker is the Chief Justice of one of the highest and most important tribunals in this country, and his conduct at all times is governed by the best traditions of the bench. His sense of judicial dignity restrained him from identifying himself with the political horde. He felt that as a judicial officer it did not behoove him to bid for public favor before his party selected him as its standard-bearer. Why should he have heeded the clamoring of the mob? It was sufficient for people to know that he was a Democrat, devoted to the fundamental principles of his party. His views on important questions had been expressed in his judicial opinions, and the position that he occupied showed that he had the confidence of the people of the most powerful State in the Union. It was time for him to talk when his party nominated him, and he lost no time in talking when the nomination was made. We believe that it was unnecessary for him to have sent that telegram to the St. Louis convention, giving notice of his views on the monetary question, but we are not prepared to dispute his judgment. Judge Parker has always been noted for his frankness, and he knows that the Democrats of New York are most bitter in their antipathy toward the silver faction. Though the money question has been removed for the present from party disputation, the Democrats of Judge Parker's State want no quibbling on the subject. They wish to be sure of their party's sanity, and Judge Parker was made to feel that unless he was free to express his views on the gold standard, he could not hope to carry his own State. In the circumstances it was the part of wisdom for him to have sent that telegram. It was to be expected that he would be accused of making a grand-stand play, but he can better stand that accusation than defeat.

Take care of your health! Massage improves circulation and gives strength to muscles and nerves. Lindstrom's Swedish Institute, 406 Sutter Street.

Platform Criticism

It was not to be expected that the St. Louis convention would adopt a platform that would meet with universal approbation. Neither was it to be expected that its attitude on the monetary question would escape criticism. If it had recognized the gold standard it would have been ridiculed for recanting, not praised for having seen the error of its ways. If it had accepted a Bryan plank it would have been said that the party was still hopelessly insane. As the monetary question is no longer a vital issue, having been settled without the aid of statecraft, its revival appeared to be unnecessary. In reorganizing the party it seemed foolish to do aught which would tend to fan the flames of discord. No expression of the Kansas City convention which was not reiterated at St. Louis is binding on the party today. There is no likelihood of the monetary question being revived in Congress during the next four years, and it is as absurd to hold that failure to reiterate principles implies devotion to them as to contend that failure to avow new principles implies a repudiation of them. It is likely, however, that if the Democracy of 1904 was wedded to the pet doctrine, the salient feature of its code of principles of 1900, it would not have neglected to so affirm. It behooved the convention to proclaim its disapproval of all Government policy not in consonance with the principles of the Democratic party, and that is what was done at St. Louis. If the existing monetary standard were repugnant to the majority they would have so declared. Not having expressed themselves on the subject it was to be presumed they were satisfied. Failure of expression was dictated solely by respect for the feelings of the man who had twice served as standard-bearer of the party and who was responsible for the free coinage heresy. Nevertheless the Republican press and the enemies of Judge Parker pretended to believe that by reason of the failure of the convention to recognize the gold standard the Democratic party was still committed to the free coinage doctrine. Judge Parker's telegram brought out the fact that the party was enjoying at least a lucid interval, and therefore he should be congratulated. The grand-stand play charge can do no harm, especially in view of the fact that Judge Parker's opponent is known to be a grand-stand artist par excellence. There is no reason why Roosevelt should enjoy a monopoly of the grand-stand plays in this campaign.

The Belmont Influence

Mr. Hearst has said that he will support the Democratic ticket, but there appears to be a string tied to the promise. He has called upon Judge Parker to cut loose from his friend, August Belmont. Judge Parker is not likely to do anything of the kind. August Belmont is a very rich man, with large interests in prosperous corporations, but he is also a Democrat, and has long been identified with the Democratic party. He has been active in the management of party affairs, and has devoted a great deal of his time and much of his money in the furtherance of the interests of the national organization. He is not of the calibre of his inane brother, whose wife has long been a leader of the spectacular aristocracy of Newport. He is a business man, and an enthusiastic advocate of Democratic principles. We have no reason to believe that he would exercise a reprehensible influence in State affairs in the event of Judge Parker's election. It is unfair to assume that he would. Judge Parker has spent many years in the public service, and nobody has ever accused him of being subservient to corporate influences. His record is a sufficient answer to those who object to his friends.

The Bloody Shirt Issue

The Republican platform-builders overplayed their hands when they inserted the plank demanding the enfranchisement of the negro in the South. It was a most egregious tactical blunder for the reason that the plank was unnecessary. Its purpose was, of course, to insure the negro vote in doubtful Northern States, but Roosevelt has repeatedly shown his friendship for the colored race. If there is any gratitude in that race Roosevelt should receive its united support. There was no necessity for seeking further to place the colored man under obligations to the friend of Crum and Booker Washington. In doing so the Republicans have once more revived the bloody shirt issue, and have caused alarm not only among Southerners in the South but among Northerners in the North. Banking houses in New York having intimate connections with the South are greatly disturbed by the volume of protest which comes from that section over the enfranchisement plank. According to the view which is expressed by Southern correspondents, demoralization and untold damage to business interests of the South will result from the re-opening of this issue. Many hundreds of millions of Northern capital have been invested during the last ten years in Southern industrial development and in Southern railroad enterprises, and naturally the demonstration on the part of Southern business men has produced a decided impression in the New York financial district.

A Confession of Weakness

Now comes President Wilson of Princeton with the somewhat tardy confession that scholastic honors are not

Engraved Wedding Announcements and Invitations

ROBERTSON, 126 Post Street
San Francisco

The Hub
CHAS. KEILUS & CO.
EXCLUSIVES
HIGH GRADE CLOTHIERS

Suggestions of money saving are not the incentives we offer to purchase clothes here. It's the creations we show that emanate from premier designers, whose talents with shears, needle and brain are of the highest class. Correct dressers say, "Immediate Service Clothes" for theirs.

132
KEARNY STREET
Churlow Block

appreciated by students so much as those that are won on the athletic field. We have frequently called attention to that fact, and it is comforting to learn from President Wilson that university authorities are now seeking some method of making scholarship honors seem worth as much as those so eagerly sought on the diamond, the gridiron and the cinder path. According to President Wilson the authorities are trying to think of certain special privileges and tempting distinctions which may be conferred on the men who are candidates for scholastic honors, and who appear to value brains above brawn. We do not think that the proposed remedy will prove effective. The spirit of the university itself must be changed before the undergraduates can be persuaded to show their esteem for the scholar as they show it for the athlete, and it is the distinction born of such esteem that makes scholastic honors seem worth while. To effect the desired change in the spirit of the university it would be necessary for the authorities to pursue the method of certain small colleges; that of pointing with pride to the standing of their graduates in the communities in which they live. They invite students on the strength of what the particular institution has accomplished in the way of fitting men, morally and intellectually, for the battle of life. No record is kept of the achievements of their athletes. Football victories are not perpetuated in bronze. Their alumni are invited to the commencement exercises and they do not flock to annual athletic contests carrying banners and shouting till the welkin rings with their acclamations. Their athletic teams are not permitted to support themselves at public expense and the colleges are not advertised by means of public athletic exhibitions. The traditions of these colleges deal with the intellectual triumphs and conspicuous honesty of their graduates, and the students are incited to aspire to that degree of efficiency which they know they must attain before it becomes possible for them to emulate the academic heroes that have gone before. Athletes are developed in these small colleges, and the importance of training the body as well as the mind is not overlooked, but the preponderant incentive is to personal culture, and scholastic achievement.

Virtuous Newport

It is interesting to learn that the fashionable bigwigs of Newport discriminate between divorced women. There was a time when fashionable society in Newport went mad over Mme. Lillian Nordica, and gave luncheons and tea parties for the prima donna. But this was before her divorce from her innocuous husband. She recently visited Newport and experienced a decided frost, though she was the guest of a tremendously popular hostess. One of the New York dailies took occasion to comment on the cold way in which she was treated, and remarked: "Her divorce has injured her socially beyond a doubt." In view of the number of divorces among the hostesses of Newport this alleged change in the attitude of Newport society toward the songstress is not only unreasonable but absurd. Newport society includes many divorced women, and a few of the most popular figured in very unsavory scandals. One it is said was the wife of the man who would have been named as co-respondent in the divorce suit had not the injured husband, for the sake of his children, permitted his wife to obtain the decree. If Newport society were to bar divorced women it would become necessary to completely reorganize the smart set of the fashionable resort. But it is ridiculous to contend that there is any prejudice in Newport against women who have gone through the divorce mill. If Madame Nordica was snubbed it was probably because the fashionables think that she is losing her voice.

Yankee Ingenuity

Though Marconi is given credit generally for having perfected wireless telegraphy, it is beginning to be made clear that he has obtained profitable notoriety by laying claims to the inventions and discoveries of others, and by exploiting principles and devices known for many years and rejected because their application to commercial use was found impossible. The other day the Government at Washington closed a contract with the De Forest Wireless Telegraph Company for service in this country, in the West Indies, in the Philippines and on all the vessels of the Navy. The system of the De Forest company was approved after tests extending over a period of several months, and the attuning apparatus of this company, which has been pronounced by government officials superior to all others, is the product of the inventive genius of an American, Lee De Forest, of Yale, who has been responsible for much of the progress made in wireless telegraphy in the past ten years. The Marconi people have utterly failed, it is said, in their promises to establish regular long-distance communication commercially over land and water, and Marconi has been utilizing antique devices that were invented when the Italian was in knee breeches. De Forest is now credited with being the first genius to develop attuning and the non-interference system. So it looks as though Yankee ingenuity has once more taken precedence. The Government has been guaranteed the exclusive use of the De Forest system for war vessels. The importance of wireless telegraphy in naval warfare has been amply demonstrated in the Far East, and the Navy Department has been quick to realize the advantages to be derived from it. It was by reason of wireless telegraphy that the Japanese ships were kept in close communication with one another and with their home ports, and that Admiral Togo was enabled to strike some of his most effective blows.

The Degenerate American Woman

The native-born American woman has been made the subject of discussion ad nauseam. Though she is exalted for her energy, her brightness and resourcefulness, the doctors are always finding fault with her. Now they are saying that she fails in the most important office of her sex, that of maternity, and that she fails in consequence of her cultivation to excess of those attributes which are generally thought not to be within a woman's province.

CHAS. LYONS

LONDON TAILOR

721 MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO
Branch
122 KEARNY ST.

SUITS from $17.50 up

LARGEST
TAILORING
ESTABLISHMENT
on the Pacific Coast

DO YOU WANT AN INCOME?

DIVIDENDS monthly at rate of $60.00 per year on each 100 shares. Will sell limited number shares. Oil lands and mines for sale. Also best Cuban fruit and farm lands at special prices. Printed matter free. Bank references.

DEBENTURE SURETY COMPANY (Inc.), Suit B., Rialto Bldg., San Francisco

Her physical powers, they say, suffer in proportion as her mental powers increase, and that as a propagator of the race she cannot compete with women of stronger bodies and of less highly-trained brains. Dr. Emil Reisch has written on the subject in a German periodical. He regards the overmentalization of the American woman, and the hypergalvanization of her energy, as the breaking down of American maternity and the most serious phenomena which cloud the future of the United States. It is evident that from Dr. Reisch's viewpoint President Roosevelt was all wrong in his race suicide theory. Roosevelt's idea is that the American woman is simply growing weary in her capacity as a propagator of the race, while Dr. Reisch argues that her maternal functions are becoming atrophied as a result of her cultivation of her intellect. The situation is a gloomy one to contemplate from either viewpoint. That of the German scientist is highly uncomplimentary to nature, for it involves the assumption that the weak-minded woman is the most successful propagator of her species. It is evident that the German hausfrau is his ideal woman.

Vices of a Modern System

The young son of a prominent author, who had just completed his Julius Cæsar as a school task, was asked by his mother if he thought he would know Cæsar now if he met him, to which the young hopeful responded that he was not sure, "but if I should happen to meet him, nobody else would ever know him." That is about the attitude of the average child, of either sex, towards any subject taught in school. If one wanted a patent process for making any topic hateful there need be no other method resorted to than placing it in the course of study. The decline of poetry may be definitely traced to the time when some educational genius discovered the process of transposition, parsing and explanation of what it was supposed to mean, and which of us has ever been able to enjoy book or play that was "studied"? Du Maurier, in one of his novels, has a group of French boys dumbfounded at finding that their two English classmates were reveling in Sir Walter Scott, who had been introduced to them as a text-book, and doubtless there is no one of adult years who has not had the experience of suddenly discovering interest and beauty in a book that had been loathed because it had been made part of the "course in literature" in school days. Part of this is to be attributed to the natural antipathy to tasks, but more to the manner in which studies are pursued. No one has succeeded in liking to order, and children of school age rarely comprehend, even if they are informed, the reasons why they should be interested in an author, whether it be Cæsar or the latest local scribbler. There is a difference in taste, even among the juveniles, and very often "those in authority over us" are no better judges than their charges of the good and bad. It is not the fault of teachers, or at least not altogether their fault, that pupils get so little good of their school studies. The educational mill grinds on and the grist must be turned out. Teachers are driven at high pressure and they in turn must drive. To stop for breath, for explanation or understanding is to court annihilation from the momentum of those behind, and like Alice in Wonderland it becomes a perpetual race at top speed just to hold on. Then the whole trend of modern education is to make things easy for pupils. They must be coaxed, lifted, helped, but never spurred. If any subject presents difficulties they must be removed, not surmounted, and pains and penalties are no more. A teacher in the early half of the nineteenth century might have made Cæsar interesting; he could have taught Latin or anything else in his own way, prolonging the lesson of the day if the enthusiasm of the class warranted it, and including the younger pupils in the recitation. He could have supplemented the Campaign in Gaul with the daily lesson in geography, or set his class to finding additional matter outside of school. But today he would find himself restricted by a time-schedule. The delicate brains of husky lads of fourteen and sixteen must not be employed for more than fifteen or twenty minutes without a change, and the manner and method and precise degree of progress is marked out for him. To ask a pupil to do anything at all outside of school hours is to call down the wrath of the women's clubs, and to leave him to pioneer his own path or make any discovery independent of the black and white of his authorized text-book is a crime. The result is that there is a perpetual antagonism between teachers and pupils, or perhaps one should say between the natural indifference of the pupil's mind and the necessity for learning. School, apart from athletics and secret societies, is regarded as a sort of penitentiary, made endurable only by the combined process of forgetting and shirking. Cæsar and Hannibal and everyone else, down to the late brush with Spain, are only old bores who made lessons, and had no other purpose in life. It really was much better all round when beyond the elementary requirements there was no attempt to compel pupils to learn anything they did not want to, at least not at public expense. After a child has learned to read the primer and to make the script letters all the doors of knowledge are open to him if he care to enter. Nothing is gained by thrusting him through them in spite of his resistance, for instead of giving his attention to exploring his new environment he is bent on effecting an escape. There is nothing like holding things a little beyond reach to stimulate a desire for possession, and if Latin, music, and much more were withheld, we might again find boys and girls who would study by firelight, rise with daylight, and practice every economy of time, to say nothing of walking miles to procure books or assistance in their self-chosen studies.

EMIL W. HAGBOM

C. H. REINSTROM

REHNSTROM & HAGBOM

FORMERLY SANDERS &amp; JOHNSON

..TAILORS..

PHELAN BUILDING, Rooms 1, 2, 3 Telephone Main 5387
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

For Breakfast

For Breakfast

For Breakfast

The Passing of Bryan

BY THEODORE BONNET.

Future eruptions in Lincoln are not likely to arouse much interest. With the silver faction's euthanasia at St. Louis began the passing of the great trustphobe, William J. Bryan, the man of agile tongue who battled in vain against the conservative reaction of his party. Bryan was a disappointment to his fanatical devotees when the great crisis in his political career was reached. They expected him to show his courage and exercise that great magnetic power which they believed he possessed to a high degree, but he tamely submitted to the will of the majority. The political theories for which he had stood and fought received the approval of six millions of his countrymen, and he was expected to make a gallant defense of those theories on the floor of the convention, and oppose the men whom he has always denounced as the enemies of true Democracy. Months ago it was thought that his opposition to Parker foreshadowed the New Yorker's defeat, and his friends confidently asserted that he would play a powerful part in the St. Louis convention. But instead of looming up as the great, untterrified, irrepressible and irresistible exponent of the people's rights he cut a sorry figure, floundering in a sea of uncertainty. Some there are that think that his prestige has not declined, and that he emerged from the big party pow-wow with his nimbus undimmed, but I think that another idol has been shattered. I have never been a Bryan worshiper. I have always believed that the just estimate of a man's character lies midway between the adulation of his friends and the condemnation of his enemies. In extolling the sage of Lincoln his admirers have pictured him as a specimen of the just man made perfect, one in whom all virtues and accomplishments meet. But above the frantic laudation of the silver champion, and the resounding platitudes of his followers, have been distinctly heard the criticism growing out of the Bennett will contest, and the charges of hypocrisy and self-interest stentoriously shouted by his enemies. The midway appraisal of his character and of his statesmanship does not entitle him to a very tall pedestal. He has been repeatedly pictured as a pillar of determined resolution, a great apostle of principle, but we find him at St. Louis submitting to the shelving of his pet doctrine and compromising with that cunning practical politician, David B. Hill, on the income tax proposition. It may be argued in his defense that he was in the minority, and that he had to submit, but it was his privilege to fight for his principles on the floor of the convention. He preferred to straddle and he was suspiciously docile. The man who a few years ago was shocked at the cynicism of David B. Hill, and who has frequently denounced him as an exponent of the communism of pelf, played into his hands at St. Louis, and if he did not abandon principle he failed to fight for it with characteristic aggressiveness. From the time that Judge Parker was suggested as an available man for the nomination for President down to within a week of the convention, the Nebraskan railed against him as a representative of dishonest Democracy but his tactics in St.

Louis were not those of a man intent on saving his party from the contaminating touch of the plutocracy. Of all the candidates before the St. Louis convention only one stood for the ideal, radical Democracy of the garrulous trustphobe, and that one was William Randolph Hearst. If Bryan had joined forces with Hearst, and made an aggressive fight against the Parker-Hill-Belmont combination, he would have at least been consistent, and there could have been no questioning of his honesty. The course that he adopted was plainly in the interest of the New York trio. All conservative Democrats are satisfied with the result, but did the part played by Bryan meet with the approbation of the most radical of his followers? Will posterity pay him the tribute so musically expressed by D. M. Delmas? In my opinion the great silver champion invited his own quietus at St. Louis, and it doesn't matter much whether the collapse of the erstwhile imposing personality was the result of faulty judgment or temerity. At any rate, a troublous incubus has been removed, and now the wonder is that it ever excited so much concern. In the light of his recent performance people are likely to estimate the character and virtues of Bryan nearer their true worth. In reviewing his public career it will be difficult to point out any scheme that he ever fathered that had not for its end and aim wholly and utterly his own profit and promotion. What he ever did to entitle him to the confidence of his party I have never been able to ascertain. That he possessed that intangible but potent quality of personal influence, of the character of mesmeric magnetism in its effects, one must believe in view of the influence which he long exercised in his party councils. Endowed though he is with the peculiar essence of a charm that is popularly called magnetism, that is no reason why we should exalt him. That is not a quality which should demand the highest admiration of his critics, or the subservient devotion of his fellow-citizens. There is nothing in this fairy-dower to warrant enthusiastic regard and everlasting fealty. In the case of Mr. Bryan it is accompanied with a quintessential egoism that superinduces a weariness of spirit among those who come in contact too frequently with the peculiarly constituted personality. Even his most fanatical devotees have been alienated by his persistency in impressing his views pragmatically, as well as by the rasping pique of frustrated schemes and the soreness of disappointed ambition. He will no doubt continue to scold and berate but he will never again be taken as seriously as he was in the past eight years. And though he has been denied the supreme honor that was so tantalizingly brought just beyond his reach, it cannot be said that, while one faction of his party treated him unfairly, the people failed to accord him recompense in glory.

HAVE YOU HAD LUNCH AT THE RED LION?

New Grill for Ladies and Gentlemen

WILL BE OPEN ONLY FOR LUNCHEON, FROM 10 A. M. TO 3 P. M.
DURING SUMMER MONTHS

Any Evening the Whole or Any Part of the Dining Room may be Reserved
for Banquets.

"The Red Lion" is in the San Francisco Stock Exchange Bldg. It has two entrances from Pine St., just below Montgomery, and is also readily accessible from Montgomery and Bush Sts. through the Mills Bldg.

Go to the Factory to Buy Phone Folsom 2812

TRUNKS VALISES AND SUIT CASES

You Get Your Money's Worth

J. MARTY CO.

Repairing

22 TURK STREET

Manufacturers

Sample Trunks and Bags to order

The Passing of the Gentleman

RY HARRY COWELL.

Time was when in almost every community were to be found men with an indefinable culture in the blood, a curious refinement of the flesh, a certain gentle and generous attitude towards life preserved with ease under all circumstances, a I-know-not-what gracious out-going of the heart that affected one for all the world like a fragrance from some hidden garden. Now—but is it not enough to say “Time was?”

This quite distinct variety of the species that aspires no reader of discernment will confound with various advantage-seeking mimics, such as those whose head-knowledge of good manners is on occasion operative upon conduct—persons of business urbanity; nor will the grateful reader, haply coming across a specimen (save only the pure spirit of science move him) inquire too closely into the number of generations that went to the making thereof. No; Discernment will not require as an indispensable condition of a man's being entitled to the precious qualification, “gentle,” that he eat his bread in the sweat of the brows of others; neither will it ask to see sheep skin, proof positive of his right to call some accredited college “Alma Mater.” I had myself peregrinated to but little purpose had I not by the way fallen in with more than one self-educated, self-supporting son of simple folk who was beyond question a gentleman. That such meetings should be memorable and my delight therein great is just cause for philosophical sorrow.

Not only in life, but also in literature, “the perfect expression of life,” is the gentleman becoming rare, so rare as to be almost verging upon extinction. This is true of Europe as well as of America; and pity 'tis 'tis true; for not art itself—much less life—has beauty in such abundance as to be able to spare the loveliness of gentle manners. And seeing that the province of the artist is to choose with exquisite care and to eliminate, and then by means of a power of creative synthesis to fashion a thing of beauty that shall be lifelike yet not photographic, mannerless literature is even more insufferable than mannerless life itself.

From my youth up have I myself felt intensely the peculiar charm of good breeding. I recall once, when I had seen but seven snows, weeping bitterly because, having a “previous engagement,” politeness required of me to decline an invitation to a Christmas tree party at the home of a gentlewoman whose exquisite grace of person and personality has since passed into story. And I wept—if you will believe me—not because I must needs forego much anticipated fun and many presents, but because my sense of beauty must needs miss the delight of seeing mine hostess play her role with inimitable grace. The party for which I had the previous engagement aforesaid having been postponed, without any breach of good breeding I went as invited to the house of the woman of gentle ways, and neither the joy of burning my fingers in behalf of a wee enchantress, all legs and arms and lingerie, by snapping from the maw of a dragon of fire handfuls of French plums for her delectation, nor the joy of hunting my little lady's slipper, was as anything compared with that of a game of my own invention, which was to pretend to even more shyness than I really felt, to the end of gaining special attention at the gracious hands of her whose guest I had the happiness to be. My many playmates of that memorable Christmas eve of long ago are every one of them forgotten; I now mind me of the name even of but one, her for whose sake I, fool-like, played with fire. Full five fathoms of Lethean waters roll over the rest. The house I remember not at all. My memory of the presents is even as are they themselves. But the wonder ways of mine hostess are with me as though she had entertained me but yesterday, albeit long before the ground was white again and the yule-log ablaze, her grave was green with grass and golden with flowers. All this was oversea.

Here, in the United States, especially here in California, haste has a tendency to make men harsh; they have no time to be gentle. Democracy, busy with its making of men, did it but really succeed, might well be pardoned for leaving them in the rough, omitting the work of the file; but where education is universal and what are known as “advantages” not confined to the few, one looks to see the flower of civilization blossom more abundantly. The fragrant thing, however, it seems, cannot make its gentle way against the weeds. Alas, Demos is a god of the dirt, in whose dull sight the aerial delicacies that are the distinguishing mark of the gentleman find but little favor! Among us—the courteous reader will pardon the Irish in my way of putting it—among us the gentleman is passing, as it were, before he has come to be. To be honest, there is serious question whether on such a rough and ready earth as is ours, refinement is anywhere fit to survive. The infusion of a coarser strain of blood saves the fine-feathered stock from extinction at the expense of the fineness of feather. All things savoring ever so little of heaven seem doomed to die out through lack of fertility which—philosophers will have it—grounds in the flesh that is of one stuff with the body of mother earth.

For centuries a stream of hot, adventurous blood—blood rebellious against this or that—has been steadily flowing in the direction of this Western World, where change of climate, cross-breeding, elbow-room, and no doubt other less well-known factors, all make for unwonted vigor—the “get-up” that is characteristic of the American; and by a natural selection of the already selected, much of the most adventurous of this blood found its virile way into far California. Little wonder, then—all things considered—that the feather here is not over-fine. No; young California, I assure you, need not take the least alarm at the trend of these my tearful words: he is not a gentleman in danger of dying out. To add culture to rugged virility is, as it seems to me, a more hopeful task than to add virility to effete culture. To perfect the feather and at the same time preserve the vigor—here is the problem for man-fancier and pigeon-fancier alike. Is infertility or other unfitness to be forever the destiny of the fine? Will the rough old mother ever learn better manners and this footstool of God come to be a suitable home for gentle folk? To me the face of the future is as the face of the sphinx which is as the face of woman.

GILBERT and STOLL

Movers of Household Furniture and Storage Warehouse, have removed their offices from the Murphy Bldg., to Room 43, Donohoe Bldg., Market and Taylor Sts. Storage Warehouse: Mercantile Library Bldg., Golden Gate and Van Ness ave

IMPERIAL
STUDIO
744 Market St.
San Francisco - Cal.

THE IMPERIAL STUDIO'S PARCHMENT PROOFS

Are the sweetest thing the Photographer's art has yet produced. There are plenty of imitations. The real thing is a little more expensive but it's worth the difference.

The Saunterer

Knight's Toga Dream

George A. Knight's announcement of his candidacy for the United States Senate caused quite a flurry in political circles. Knight is always to be taken seriously. The big, good-natured attorney bubbles over with magnetism, and he has admirers in every county in the State. The glory that he so recently won in Chicago would make his candidacy seem opportune were it not for the fixed notion that geography has an important bearing in such matters. If senators were chosen without regard for geographical lines, nothing could stop George Knight from stalking into the Senate. Insistent sentiment would sweep aside the claims of all other toga-chasers. But Knight is a northern man, and the politicians who conceive it to be their duty to see that the equilibrium of the party is not disturbed say that Bard's successor must come from the south. According to their notion, if Knight should be elected United States Senator the next Republican candidate for Governor would necessarily come from the south. Of such is the inexorable rule of the political game. However, stranger things have happened.

The Fight In The South

Meantime the Republican politicians are waiting for the smoke of battle to clear away south of the Tehachapi. The supposition is that when the south makes its choice the problem of Bard's successorship will be solved. But that is not altogether a sound supposition, for if the south should decide upon Bard there would be something doing, the Huceneme statesman being persona non grata to the machine. However, Bard's chances appear to be growing beautifully less. Frank Flint having entered the fight against Bard in Los Angeles has divided the latter's forces to some extent, and since Knight came into the fight the southerners have been slowly awakening to a realization of the fact that the north will not stand for the present Senator. The fight, so far as the south is concerned, will be settled as soon as Ventura county shows its hand, and that will probably eventuate within a month.

When Bard Was Indignant

If the several aspirants for the toga are to be believed, the fight for the Senate is to be made largely on wind. Each one is anxious to have it known that he does not intend to spend any money. I am prepared to believe that Knight does not intend to give up any of the three hundred thousand at which he is rated, and as for Flint, he has not any money to spend. Bard is reputed to be worth six or seven millions, and though he prides himself on being a purist, the indications are that money is being spent in his behalf. The dailies say that the sack has been opened, and I do not believe that it is the sack of any generous friend of the Senator, unless there has been some understanding as to a settlement after the contest. When Bard was elected Senator it was suggested by a representative of Irving M. Scott that he should reimburse the builder of the Oregon in the sum expended by the latter in rounding up the votes that switched to the man from Ventura. Bard indignantly declared that it was against his principles to pay for votes.

Gentleman of refinement—35 years of age—fine presence, wishes to see the world. Would act as companion or secretary to party traveling in Europe or the Orient. Highest references furnished. Address Box 9, this office.

Opposition To Ruef

Mr. Abe Ruef, having taken a hand in the legislative fight, is to be given battle by some of the Republican leaders who object to his domination of local politics. His pet fight is the re-election of Senator Nelson in a district where his strength is concentrated, but his opponents are prepared to involve him in a contest which, at this time, looks far from favorable to his interests. The opposition to Ruef in the Republican party is growing, and it is becoming most determined. Even now the leaders are preparing for the next municipal campaign. They are confident that Schmitz will be eliminated as a factor in politics by that time, and that the influence of the Citizen's Alliance will offset that of labor unionism. I hear they have already selected their candidate for Mayor, and with a view of meeting the Democracy more than half way. They are figuring on Supervisor Brandenstein's being the Democratic candidate.

Pardee's Machine

Governor Pardee is busily engaged these days in gathering together the remnants of his political machine in Alameda. The Governor's dream of a big political organization under his control long since vanished, and he would now be very well satisfied if he had a pony machine in good working order in Alameda county. Senator Knowland, having captured the Congressional committee, Governor Pardee is now after the county central committee, and that will, in all probability, become his personal machine.

Our Brave Lads

The voice of Delmas, lacking as it does the carrying quality that makes for successful spellbinding in national conventions, California's oratorical reputation was not enhanced in St. Louis. But there are other avenues to distinction, and one of them was entered by the massive Tarpey, the bellicose Hicks, the belligerent Mooser, and the pugnacious Rucker. Those warlike gentlemen added to the glory won for the State by the gallant First Regiment. Judging from the news that came over the wires the Californians were spoiling for a fight from the time that

Swan Gin.

THE FINEST HOLLAND GIN

IMPORTED SINCE 1819

CHARLES MEINECKE & CO.,
SOLE AGENTS P. O. SAN FRANCISCO

Rucker almost licked a Belmont down to the memorable hour when Tarpey showed Sheehan that he (the New Yorker) wasn't running the National Committee. Our big-fisted Native Sons did not cut much ice in the deliberations of the party, but when it came to scrapping every mother's son of them was Johnny on the spot. There was nearly a fight in their own camp when Mooser discovered that Secretary McCabe was abusing him in news despatches to the Call. But when McCabe explained that he did not know that his name was to be published as the author of the objectionable articles, but that he had expected to roast Mooser without being found out, the explanation seemed so reasonable to Mooser that he apologized for making complaint.

Where Wags the Tongue of Gossip

This is the season of the year when the feminine chairwarmer with the gossiping tongue adorns the piazza of the summer hotel, and beguiles the dull hours of the afternoon and evening tearing reputations to tatters. Oh, those summer hotels, those choice and lovely summer hotels! They look so inviting, and yet if one spends a day and night at one of them he finds that it is the resort of gossiping women; that is where the midsummer lie, the most vicious of its species, it propagated. Whenever I see the ignoble and indefatigable coterie of gossips in session I am sorely tempted to approach and beg in the name of decency, of charity, of Christianity, that an adjournment be taken for the purpose of indulging in some form of diverting dissipation. How greatly would the world be improved if the gossiping woman, who is usually a falsifier, could be prevailed upon to believe that there is no sin so hideous as the one which compasses the smirching of reputations.

Wardie Is Spring Booming

If Ward McAllister I were to return to earth and discover that Ward McAllister II had turned watering-place correspondent, he would no doubt be shocked. But the pain attending the discovery would be slight compared with the awful agony that would wrench his proud and haughty spirit on reading in the correspondence of his son that "Mrs. Captain Bennet, who has been very ill, etc." Fancy a McAllister dubbing anybody "Mrs. Captain." What will the New York Four Hundred say when they learn that a McAllister has become a Malaprop? Perhaps they will urge in palliation of the solecism that it is the result of the corrupting influence of the vulgar West. By the bye, judging from the fulsome praise which Mr. McAllister bestows on the springs at which he is hibernating, he is earning his vacation while enjoying it. He is serving in the dual capacity of press-agent and newspaper correspondent. Though a novice in the field of newspaper literature Mr. McAllister's initial performance is marked by fine fluency. He is no Thoreau or Ruskin, but it will be easy for him to sip from the invigorating waters the inspiration that drives the pen to the most radiant flights. Perhaps a little later he will go to Monterey and then we may read that the opalescent sea, kissed by the tender, amorous god of day, is daily disported in by graceful nymphs; that the wavelets gurgle in over the smooth shining sands, and the lush grass in the meadow bends before the gentle breezes, while the drowsy bees sing lullabies to the flowers and all nature is pulsating with aeolian melody. Mr. McAllister is a versatile bread-winner as well as a good fellow, and not at all like his distinguished father. There is nothing of the snob about him, and his contempt for the new rich is equaled only by his reverence of blood.

Might Have Been a Viscountess

Celia Tobin, whose engagement with young millionaire Clark has just been announced, might have figured in Debrett's Peerage had she so desired. Years ago, when she was the merest girl "where the brook and river meet," Viscount Ennismore came a-wooing in the West. The "Marchioness" Murphy, mother of the Murphy sisters, had married one of her daughters to a baronet, and she was desirous of having one of the daughters of her dearest friend, Mrs. Tobin, also marry into the Peerage. So Ennismore came to California, ostensibly to hunt and fish, but really looking for something nearer a goldfish than a trout. The fish did not fall into his net; at least Miss Tobin did not. She liked the Viscount well enough, but had no desire to wed anybody just then. So Ennismore went away, and the Marchioness wept over the miscarriage of her matchmaking manoeuvres. A few years later there was talk of Miss Tobin's marrying Tom Driscoll, but the rumor turned out to be only that and nothing more. This match is a good one from all points of view. Celia Tobin is a very popular girl, and is more like her brother Joe in disposition than are any others in the family. She is a healthy, wholesome looking young woman and very much interested in athletics of all kinds. But she is also fond of books and music, and does not give all her time to golf or riding or autoing. Though she is so English in appearance, she is a patriotic American at heart. Three years ago, when she was in New York, Sir Thomas Lipton asked her to be his mascot in the race between Shamrock II and the Columbia. But Miss Tobin said she couldn't be a mascot for any boat that wanted to win the cup from America.

There are few married Tobins. Joseph Sadoc Tobin married Mae Dimond some years ago, and Beatrice Tobin married Charles Raoul-Duval. But Agnes, the third sister, is devoted to literature. Celia is the eldest of the girls.

Hotel Richelieu

1012 VAN NESS AVENUE

Having renewed our lease, and entirely renovated this Hotel, we will continue making it the finest and leading Family Hotel of this Coast.

AND

HOTEL GRANADA

1000 SUTTER ST.

HOTEL RICHELIEU CO.

Widely imitated but never equalled
THE GENUINE

MURRAY &
LANMAN'S
FLORIDA WATER

The Perfume of Perfumes.
Refreshing, Delightful.

Without exception the best Toilet Water in the world.

Ask your druggist for MURRAY & LANMAN'S and see that you get it.

Importance of the Match

The Tobin-Clark wedding is likely to be followed by some tremendously important developments both of a financial and social nature. The Hibernia Bank is now one of the most solid financial institutions in this country, but its prestige will be greatly enhanced when the young millionaire and heir to one of the largest fortunes in the world weds a daughter of the house of Tobin. And when this powerful matrimonial alliance is consummated, its influence is likely to be felt even in the New York Four Hundred. The Clarks have not yet secured a solid footing in the Eastern Holy of Holies, but when Miss Tobin becomes the daughter-in-law of the Montana plutocrat the doors of the Newport elect will swing wide on their golden hinges. Seems singular, doesn't it, that a San Francisco girl should possess the "open sesame" to the inner circle of Eastern sweldom? In former years when a Californian girl wanted to break into New York society she had to marry a New Yorker with a social pull, but now it is different. The gold of the Comstock has long intermingled with the currency of Wall street, and now the high social sets of the Eastern and Western edges of the continent are in close touch. A daughter of the house of Tobin is now a bosom friend of Mrs. Willie K. Vanderbilt Jr., and should the future Mrs. Clark elect to make things hum in Newport she will be as welcome as the flowers that bloom in the spring.

The Clark Palace

On the heels of the Tobin-Clark engagement announcement came the report that the young millionaire's father had been secretly wedded to his pretty ward, and that the young wife had presented the aged Senator with an olive branch. Well, it doesn't matter much, for Senator Clark has money enough to go round. Senator Clark was once a peddler of clocks. He is variously known as "Billy" Clark of the Nez Perces campaign of 1878 and Senator Clark the multi-millionaire. His income is over one million five hundred thousand a month. He is now building the costliest residence in New York. A friend of the family recently told me that the mansard roof of the Clark palace is being sheathed in copper from the owner's mines, and that the walls are being constructed of marble from his quarries. In the basement are Russian and Turkish baths, and on the second floor are the art gallery and dining room. The gallery will contain many of the celebrated paintings of the world, and the house and its contents will represent an outlay of eight million dollars. The Kings of Finance have put vast sums into their New York palaces. The Carnegie residence on the Highlands of Fifth avenue cost eight millions. Charlie Schwab, a protégé of Carnegie, is building a home on the Riverside Drive at a cost of five millions. A short distance from the Carnegie home is the Phipps marble palace which cost three million five hundred thousand. The homes of the millionaires along Fifth avenue are architectural monstrosities. Not a few of the "palaces" are like jails on the outside. Others are caricatures of elevations caught sight of in Europe, Asia or Africa. They are all on a par with that copy of an Irish castle recently erected in Van Ness avenue.

DEAFNESS

Those troubled with deafness are cordially invited to demonstrations of the MASSACON and ACOUSTICON at the offices of the

HUTCHISON ACOUSTIC COMPANY

W. B. EGAN, Pacific Coast Agent Phone Priv. Ex. 216
417-418 Starr-King Bldg., 121 Geary St., San Francisco

One of the noteworthy sights of the city is at Fifty-seventh and Fifth avenue—the "richest four corners in all New York." They are occupied by the Huntington, Whitney, Oelrichs and Cornelius Vanderbilt residences.

Will Go on the Stage

I hear that the young daughter of the Maddern household is going on the stage where she hopes to follow in the footprints of her talented cousin, Minnie Maddern Fiske. Mrs. Maddern, who is a sister-in-law of Mrs. Jack London, is said to sympathize with the novelist in the present domestic upheaval. She is a woman of large mental dimensions and a masculine viewpoint. London met Bessie Maddern in the capacity of an English teacher and it was while she was tutoring him that Cupid interposed and the marriage took place. As every one who has followed London's career knows, his education was snatched between doses of hard manual labor. After he met Miss Maddern, however, he turned his thoughts entirely to literature and studied ceaselessly for that career. It was the old story of the pupil surpassing the teacher, but unfortunately in this case the teacher was also the wife.

Hoffman's Criticism of Robertson

Apropos the recent excursion of Louis Robertson's muse into ancient Greece, and his sonnetteering as a result of inspiration by the heroes and heroines of the myths of Hellas, poet Elwyn Hoffman has written me in criticism of his fellow bard. Mr. Hoffman thinks that it is waste of time, energy and talent for the modern poets to draw inspiration from the personnel of the myths of antiquity. "They should be better employed," he writes. "Grecian mythology is beautiful, but there is no life in its beauty, nor can Mr. Robertson breathe any into it. But if we must go back to Greece for poetic themes, let's bring them home with us and fit them into the life of our own age—an age that is glorious and unsung." Mr. Hoffman expresses himself further on the subject, in verse, which appears on another page. While much may be said in commendation of Mr. Hoffman's views, it would be unjust to deny the frenzied poet the privilege of bursting into the song that moves his soul. Mr. Robertson does not live in the past. None of his contemporaries has drawn more copious inspiration from live theme.

Old J.H. Cutter Whisky

FROM OLD KENTUCKY

DISTILLED AND BOTTLED BY
C.P. MOORMAN & CO.
LOUISVILLE, KY

SHERWOOD
AND
SHERWOOD
DISTRIBUTORS
212-214 MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO.
HARRY G. HOWELL
SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE

THE BEST AFLOAT OR ASHORE

The Prolific Reese

Lowell Otus Reese, the most industrious of odesmiths, has been in a hospital for some time, but not with brain fog. He underwent a severe operation, and is slowly recovering. The explanation of the wonderful capacity of the Reese muse may be found in the fact that he was born in Indiana, the birthplace of Bill Nye, Whitcomb Riley, Joaquin Miller, Booth Tarkington and a dozen other prolific writers. Mr. Reese thinks in rhyme, and metrical compositions flow from his pen whenever it touches paper. Mr. Reese is also a jokesmith whose humor is effervescent. If you don't think he's a wonder, try to grind out a column of verse and miscellaneous jokes every day for a year.

The Irwins

Will Irwin, late Sunday editor of the Chronicle, has commenced work on the New York Sun as a star reporter. He likes the Eastern city fairly well but misses the easy Bohemianism of San Francisco. He has already had some important details. Wallace Irwin, his brother, will shortly have a book out. The publishers are the Bobbs-Merrill people of Indianapolis who are making a specialty of the work of Californians. They recently published the successful "Bishop's Carriage" by Miss Michelson and "Tomorrow's Tangle" by Geraldine Bonner. Will Irwin, by the way, has made a solemn vow never more to collaborate. He has written three books in double harness. There is no truth in the report that he and Burgess are about to do a novel together. Burgess is writing in New England and no one ever read worse trash than his short story, "Mrs. Noah's Ark" in the July Harper's Monthly. The glamour of a name is still potent in magazine offices.

The Pomeroy's

The Carter Pitkin Pomeroy's are at San Rafael, occupying their country home for the summer. They entertain many week-end parties, mostly the young people of Miss Christine's set. Mrs. Pomeroy is an expert bridge player, although she has only played the game for the last few months.

Will Not Forsake The Giddy Whirl

Christine Pomeroy's bosom friend, Lucie Coleman, has decided to remain in society this winter, after all. She was so anxious to debut last winter that, though she was only "sweet sixteen," her parents permitted her to do so. But after she had attended a few dances and luncheons, her truant fancy returned to the school-room she had just forsaken. She announced her intention of continuing her work in English at Miss West's. Miss Coleman has quite a gift for composition, and her friends say it runs in the family, as witness Lucie's cousin, Winston Churchill.

The Versatility of Agnes

Another clever society girl is Agnes Buchanan, who left for an extended Eastern trip last week. One of her accomplishments is the making of furniture. I have heard that all the furniture in her house was her work, and that certain pieces would make the famous Roycroft furniture look like the proverbial treinta centavos. Very few people know that this young girl is a descendant of President Buchanan, and is connected with some of the oldest Philadelphia and Baltimore families.

A Pioneer Family

Julian Farnsworth, who married Beatrice Robinson of Benicia last week, is the son of a pioneer of California. The Farnsworths lived for years in a picturesque little home with a lovely garden, in Laurel Place near Essex street, Rincon Hill. Annie, the eldest daughter and a great beauty, married Theodore Gray. She is one of the members of the California Ceramic Club, and paints exquisite porcelains. Della, the second daughter, married D. Frank Dodge, the scenic artist formerly of the Alcazar but now of a New York theatre. The Dodges have lived East ever since their marriage.

Kept Him Under Cover

To break into the Pacific-Union Club these days one must not only have fairly good social standing, but must also look the part. The recent election of a popular young resident of San Rafael was regarded as a victory for the progressive element of the club that favors expansion. Jack Parrott and his cousin, Joe Donohoe, were on the election committee, and they were not permitted to see the candidate, though he is a fine looking fellow. It was feared that Mr. Parrott with his Oxford training might not approve the candidate's style.

There is dissatisfaction in the Bohemian Club over the location of the site of the new club building. It is thought to be too far uptown, and as the club has been offered an advance of forty thousand dollars on the purchase price of the lot, there are many in favor of selling it, and getting a corner nearer Kearny street. Meanwhile the University Club cuisine is going from bad to worse, and resignations are pouring in because it is so hard to get a good meal.

When Norris Went a-Wooing

The Norris Davises have taken possession of the big Horace Davis home, which they are to occupy during the absence of the Horace Davises in Europe. The young people have felt crowded in their small home. They have remained in town all summer, for Norris Davis is anxious to make a great success in his profession, that of an electrical engineer, and he spends a great deal of his time in his office. Though the Davises entertain in a quiet way,

We do it privately. No Sanatorium. Vest Pocket Tablets, $2.00 per Box. Try one and be convinced.

L. L. C. Company, Inc., 417 Hayward Building, San Francisco
Phone James 4191 Sample mailed Free

S. KRAMER

Suits, Jackets and Outer Garments

Made to Order

LADIES' ARTISTIC TAILORING

Phone Black 3831 218 Powell St., San Francisco

the young husband has no taste for the frivolities of the fashionable whirl. He has always been partial to the heavy, intellectual atmosphere. I have heard it related that, even when he was much younger, and used to call on girls, he generally took along a work on advanced trigonometry, and while waiting would work out a few problems. He always switched the conversation to mathematical topics. He was never an adept in rag-time love-making, or popular among girls who liked to hold hands. Mrs. Davis looks very stunning this summer in one of her many gowns, a blue foulard walking suit with a blue hat to match.

Mrs. Folger's Bereavement

Much sympathy is being expressed for Mrs. Athearn Folger in her bereavement. Mrs. Folger was born a Luning, and was first the wife of the late John M. Cunningham. The thirteen-year-old girl who has just died was Mr. Cunningham's daughter. She died from the shock of the difficult but generally successful mastoid operation. The death was a terrible surprise, as no fatal results had been suggested. Mrs. Folger is a charming woman, whose far from robust health has prevented her from taking a very prominent social position. The Folger cotillion, given some years ago in Native Sons' hall on the return of the Folgers from Europe, is still remembered as one of the most brilliant functions ever given in San Francisco.

Miss Dolbeer Reconciled the Moodys

Friends of the family will not be surprised to learn that poor Bertha Dolbeer has left the bulk of her fortune to the Moodys. It was Miss Dolbeer who mended the rift in the Moody lute caused by the elopement of the youngest daughter of the household with Douglas Watson. The family objected strenuously to Mr. Watson's suit and the young people were forced to steal away for an early morning ceremony. When the family sat up and took notice of the affair later in the day they refused to give the proverbial "God bless you, my children." The months winged by and still the olive branch was not held out—not even the advent of a baby in the Watson home served to heal the breach. The only member of the family who stood by the young wife through this period of parental discipline was Bertha Dolbeer. It was through her unceasing efforts that a reconciliation was effected before the death of Mr. Moody. The sad death of Mrs. Breedon, another daughter of the Moodys, further cemented the reconciliation. Miss Dolbeer had the satisfaction of knowing that her efforts had scattered the last vestige of family storm clouds. She was a girl to whom family ties meant much and the fact that she had united the severed bonds in her aunt's family was sweet solace to her.

Her Engagement Had Been Rumored

Miss Dolbeer was much admired by many eligibles but she was evidently heart-free up to the time of her death. At one time she took an interest in the career of "Alphabetical" Archibald, who is at present war correspondent in Manchuria for Collier's, but romance never tinged their acquaintanceship, contrary to the belief of some of the young man's friends. At one time her engagement with William Mugan, the manager of the Dolbeer estate, was rumored but evidently without foundation.

Skyscrapers Fascinated Her

That Miss Dolbeer should have leaped to her death is not surprising to the friends who knew her best. Like a great many other people, she could not look down from a great height without feeling a tremendous impulse to jump down. One day she was lunching in the Call Cafe with some friends. When the others went to the windows to enjoy the bird's-eye view of San Francisco Miss Dolbeer hung back, saying, "I know I will want to jump over if I look down, today." Her friends laughed at her, but she told them of occasions when she had felt an uncontrollable impulse to leap from a top story window, and they did not further urge her. She frequently spoke of the mad fascination of sky-scraping heights, so it is not to be wondered at that, in a moment of deepest melancholy, she chose that method of death. According to the family she was greatly troubled with insomnia during and after her Paris trip.

An Epidemic of This Mania

Miss Dolbeer had just returned from Paris where an epidemic of such plunges to death seems to have attacked society, and it may be that her mind dwelt on the gruesome results of this mania, of which the French papers have lately been full. Five French notables have recently committed suicide in this way. In three of the cases, no motive, not even that of melancholy, can be assigned as the cause. It would appear that dizzy heights lure some people to death.

"I don't see why people listen to De Bore's stupid jokes; there's never any point to them."

"Of course there isn't. It's the air of mystery to them that makes them attractive."

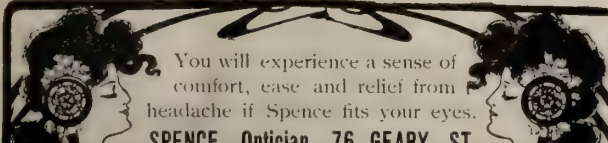

The J. J. Moores have bought a tract of land on Russian river, and will go up there to fish every summer. Mr. Moore is an enthusiastic angler. The Moores own a home at Menlo Park, but their new place will be on the "roughing it" order.

RUINART

The fascinating quality of Ruinart has made it the choice of the elite of the world's society.

Hilbert Mercantile Company
PACIFIC COAST AGENTS
V. W. GASKILL, Special Agent
San Francisco, Cal.

You will experience a sense of comfort, ease and relief from headache if Spence fits your eyes.

SPENCE, Optician, 76 GEARY ST.

The Clark Co-Respondent

Margaret Dale Owen, who was mentioned by Mrs. Harry Corson Clarke as one of the co-respondents in her divorce suit against the comedian, is a niece of Mrs. Lawrence Oliphant, wife of the celebrated English writer and war correspondent who won his spurs with "Chinese" Gordon. Miss Owen was struck with the stage fever when she was visiting her aunt in England, and Ben Greet gave her an opportunity to test her dramatic ability in one of his Shakespearean productions. She later returned to the United States, appearing with Ada Rehan, Digby Bell, and finally as Harry Corson Clarke's leading woman. She is not a beauty but has rather a pleasant way with her that captures an audience and her stage training has been of the best.

Was Mark Twain's Inspiration

James Gillis, who met his death in Stockton last week from a kick in the head by a vicious horse, figured in one of Mark Twain's books as "Truthful James." He was Clemens's partner at Jackass Hill in pioneer days and from him Mark Twain obtained many of his best stories. Gillis was an inveterate joker and while in his business dealings he was the soul of veracity, when it came to yarn-spinning he went Baron Munchausen several degrees better. He was the associate of Twain, Bret Harte, Prentice Mulford, Judge Tyler, Captain Brooks and other old-timers of Tuolumne county and was a very interesting and picturesque personality. He came to this State in '51, and was one of the men who helped build up San Joaquin county. After trying mining and farming he went into steamboating, and left quite a large estate.

The Pioneer's Widow

James Gillis's widow is one of the most remarkable women in California. She is not a typical new woman, but she holds a unique place in the world of busy women. She runs a line of steamboats, buying all the supplies, attending to the engagement of crews, and personally inspects everything relating to her charge. She was a Miss Sarah Hayes, and is relative of the Rutherford B's. It is told of her that once when she was engaged in helping out the painters on one of her boats, her tailor-made skirt tucked up while she wielded the brush, that some of her aristocratic Eastern relatives arrived without notice to pay her a visit. They were directed to the steamer and found Mrs. Gillis at her task of decorating the boat. It is said they were properly shocked, but later, when they found Mrs. Gillis in her beautiful home, exquisitely gowned and surrounded with every luxury, they forgave their cousin's eccentricities. Mrs. Gillis is very feminine in appearance, refined and gracious in manner, and a miracle of tact.

Herman Grunsky's Nerve

The Grunsky brothers, one of whom, Eugene, married a daughter of James Gillis, are very prominent in Stockton's political and social world. Otto was County Clerk for a time. Herman, the youngest brother, is a lawyer.

REMEMBERTan Shoes are Being Slaughtered

I am determined not to carry over one pair. The Best Shoes made in this country at Ridiculous Prices

GODFREY FISHER,*945 Market Street

He is noted for his courageous qualities, shown during his terms at Stanford and Harvard universities. When a student at the latter college, last year, he took the closing examination while in bed suffering from an attack of appendicitis, which later came in for surgical attention. He has a license to practice law in all the courts of Massachusetts, but he prefers California as a residence State.

The Langtry de-Bathe Marriage

Local society people were far more enthusiastic over Captain Hugo de Bathe than they were, a few months ago, over his wife, who is by far the more distinguished personage. In London the Jersey Lily occupies a more exalted social position than does her husband. As she has always enjoyed the favor of Albert Edward due deference has been shown her by people who could not afford to offend his royal highness. De Bathe is many years younger than his wife, and he has seen very little of her since their marriage. Immediately after the wedding he departed for South Africa, and both husband and wife have been widely separated most of the time subsequent to their being joined in holy wedlock. The Langtry-de Bathe marriage has the aspect of the strictly fashionable alliance—meaningless and purposeless. Some day sociologists will come to the serious discussion of the question whether it is conducive to the best interests of society for people to marry and live apart. Nowadays many fashionable husbands and wives seem to think that the close communion of married people is vulgar.

Geddes, Alias Green

Paul Geddes, on whose estate letters of administration were issued in Judge Coffey's court the other day, was one of the many early residents of this city who sunk their identity on arriving here in quest of the yellow metal. Geddes was the confidential clerk of a Gettysburg firm. He left his home on business and never returned. His relatives received no tidings of him, but some years later two members of the family came to this city and met

YOU CAN'T FOOL A GOOD JUDGE

He Knows That It's Rainier BEER

JOHN RAPP & SON, AGTS.
SAN FRANCISCO
Distributors in every town on the coast.

Talbot Green, who was none other than Paul Geddes. They did not recognize him, for they were very young when he left home. He took a great interest in them, told them that he had visited their home and knew members of their family. He questioned them about their relatives and after that whenever he met them he talked so much about the Geddes family and seemed to know so much about their people, that they began to suspect that he was the lost relative. One day they told him of their suspicions, and he confessed that he was Paul Geddes. He told them that when he left home he intended to return, but he remained away so long after transacting his business that it occurred to him that if he went back, and acknowledged that he had been wandering aimlessly, he would be regarded as an irresponsible individual. So he decided to come to California. He was a candidate for Mayor of this city in early days, but somebody discovered that he was living under an assumed name and he withdrew from the contest.

A Double Wedding Predicted

I hear that there is to be a double wedding in the Gibbons-Dorr families. Miss Marjorie Gibbons's engagement with Lieutenant Shinkle was for many months denied by the young people, and just as every one was beginning to take their word for it their betrothal was formally announced. Now it is said that Elsie Dorr, who is a cousin of the Gibbons girls, is engaged to Lieutenant Brigham, but Miss Elsie denies that there is any truth in the report. Nevertheless her friends insist that she will be married at the same time as her cousin.

What a Snap She Had

A meeting of the M. D.'s affiliated with the order of Native Daughters was called at the Native Daughters' Home to take cognizance of the action of the Grand Parlor recognizing osteopaths. In the course of discussion it came out that the principal objector was a lady doctor who, while a resident of Contra Costa county, held the post of examining physician to no less than eight different city parlors, many of them numbering one or more physicians on their membership roll. In view of the fact that the lady medico seemed to furnish in her own person some of the characteristics of a well defined trust, opposition to the osteopaths melted away, and it is probable that no further action will be taken in the matter.

Society Swimmers

Juanita Wells, the pretty young sister of Marie, is a modern naiad. She is as enthusiastic over swimming as Marie is over riding. Strong men weaken and grow pale when they follow the daring little mermaid into the cold surf, but Juanita fairly revels in the frigid sea. Ella Bender is another expert swimmer. She has received several medals in swimming contests in the East, and her diving is said to be marvelous. Miss Bender, by the way, is at present visiting her cousin, Mrs. Sloat Fassett, at her country home in New York.

A Matter Of The Heart

I am told that no one was so surprised as his own people when Robert Grayregg so unexpectedly returned to San Francisco. It was not thought that he would return here for years, as reports from England said that he had settled quite naturally into the life there. He left England when he was only five years of age, his mother being permitted to bring him up in San Francisco on condition that when prepared to enter Cambridge, his father's college, he should go back, and when he attained his majority assume control of his vast estates. When his grandmother in England, dies he will have still another fortune, and next year all the peasantry will celebrate his coming of age. As he has several homes in England he not unnaturally desires a wife to preside over them. His mother is said to possess great influence over him but whether she can prevent his taking a San Francisco bride with him when he returns to England is a question that remains to be settled.

Gerstle-Fleishhacker

The next prominent wedding in society circles will be that of Belle Gerstle and Mortimer Fleishhacker. The date, I understand, has been set, though not given out. The Gerstles are in San Rafael this summer, occupying their beautiful country home, and it was there the betrothal was announced last week. The match is considered a perfect one by the friends of both families. Miss Gerstle is one of the most popular and best-dressed girls of her set, and very clever and accomplished. Mr. Fleishhacker is equally popular in society, club and business circles. He is a member of the firm of Fleishhacker Brothers, and has extensive interests in electric plants of importance.

THE HIGHEST
Optical reputation. Most reasonable prices.
Inventors of Shark Skin Grips and Comfort Eye Glasses. Money saved you on Oculists' Prescriptions.
The Haskell & Jones Co., 243 Grant Ave.

Her Companion a Lecturer

Mrs. Moseley, who is to chaperon Susie Blanding on her trip abroad, is one of the pets of society. She gives lectures with such patronesses as Mrs. Louis Parrott, Mrs. James Otis, Mrs. Boardman and Mrs. Hopkins, and whenever society girls develop a fad for study their mothers engage Mrs. Moseley to deal out knowledge in becoming, conventional, homeopathic doses. The secret of society's liking for Mrs. Moseley is that she used to be one of them. She knows her Europe thoroughly and will therefore be an admirable guide for Miss Blanding. The latter has traveled very little, for the Blandings seldom travel. Mrs. Coleman-Blanding was five and thirty before she ventured outside the State boundaries. It has been suggested that the Blandings believe, with Emerson, that the great people of a country rarely travel.

When Arnold Died

One of Mrs. Moseley's friends was the late Sir Edwin Arnold, and she always kept up a correspondence with his family. Curiously, last winter she was billed to give a talk before her literary club on Sir Edwin Arnold's works, and she was to illustrate the lecture with letters and mementos of the poet. That morning the papers announced Arnold's death. Nevertheless Mrs. Moseley appeared, armed with her mementos, and gave her talk. But she interspersed it with sobs, which were very effective.

An Artist In The Family

The Borels will soon go abroad again, to travel on the continent and also to spend some time on their estate in Switzerland. When they return, Lucie Borel will make her debut. She is a very pretty girl of seventeen, and like her sisters is a brunette. One of the Borel girls married M. Bovet, a French artist. They live in San Mateo and are seldom seen in society. M. Bovet is a very distinguished looking man and an enthusiastic horseman. He comes of an old Swiss family. Though he is somewhat of a dilettante in his art, I have heard critics say that he possesses extraordinary talent.

Authorship of "The Breadwinners"

Another claimant for the doubtful honor of the authorship of "The Breadwinners" has popped up within the past few weeks. What there is, or ever was, about the novel, except the anonymity of its publication, to attract spurious claimants is one of the mysteries of literature. The story appeared in the Century about twenty years ago and was afterwards brought out in book form, but even at that early date, when a novel had a reasonable hope of living out the week of its publication, it attracted but little attention and that principally controversial, not on its merits as a novel but in its presentation of trades unionism. It was one of the first books to take note of the growing antagonism between employers and workmen and the trend of "higher education" for women. But it was not a great, nor a particularly good book, especially since all the virtues were segregated and bestowed on the wealthy, while the vices and imperfections were reserved for the poor. At the time of publication and for years afterward there was a well-defined opinion that "The Breadwinners" was the work of John Hay. The editors of the Century, while refusing to make an authoritative statement as to the authorship, admit that all the business negotiations in connection with the matter were transacted by Mr. Hay, though there is, of course, a possibility that he acted for a third party. The present "claimant," a Mr. Charles Frederick Adams of New York, does not say out and out that he wrote the novel, but neither will he make specific denial. He sidesteps by asserting the necessity for consulting a third person before he may speak. He is about the half-dozen who has done the same thing, but a Chicago woman, who died about two years ago, left a written statement in which she, without circumlocution or ambiguity, claimed that she was the only, original and simon-pure author—all others imitations.

Why?

Why do the writers for the dailies describe every girl who marries as a beauty, and every engaged girl, though she hail from Lorin or Madrone, as a belle? Is there a conspiracy among them to rob those words of their meaning? When a woman who is absolutely devoid of comely features is described as a beauty the description has a satirical ring. One of the June brides, who was described as a beauty, has a stunning figure, good style and graceful carriage, but nobody would tell her to her face that she was a beauty. Why could not the reporters have elaborated on her good points instead of dwelling on one which she conspicuously has not?

Why London Came Back

Jack London's friends were greatly surprised over his unexpected return from the Orient, where he was drawing six hundred dollars a week as special correspondent of the Hearst papers. It now appears that he was deported for too much energy. The Japanese officials objected to his methods. He was altogether too inquisitive, and surreptitiously sent information for publication which they preferred to have suppressed.

Mr. T. T. Williams and his family are now at the Hotel Seville in New York.

FAT FOLKS

I reduced my weight 70 pounds, bust 6 inches, waist 6 inches and hips 14 inches in a short time by a guaranteed harmless remedy without exercise or starving. I will tell you all about it. Enclose stamp. Address

MRS. E. S. RICHARDS,
226 E. 9th St., Riverside, Cal.

"Strathmill"
Scotch Whisky

an aged whisky distilled
from barley malt—not corn
CROWN DISTILLERIES CO.
GENERAL AGENTS

An Opal-Hued Wedding

Discarding traditions and hoodoos, Mary Bright Wallace wedded Lieutenant McElroy of the Thirteenth Infantry on the thirteenth of July. The bride also chose to be wed in green, which is considered the most unfortunate of all colors. It was a beautiful gown, however, made under the bride's own direction and after her own design, by a New York modiste who came West solely to build the frock. She also made the pastel blue confection worn by the maid-of-honor, Florence Hay of Fruitvale. The wedding was celebrated in the picturesque little Swedenborgian church at Lyon and Washington streets. Miss Wallace had served eight times as bridesmaid, so there was another tradition proved false when she appeared as a bride herself. She is one of the most popular girls in Oakland society and the church was filled with her friends. There was no after-reception, owing to the recent death of the bride's father, James Maxwell Wallace. Lieutenant and Mrs. McElroy will make their future home at Alcatraz, where his regiment is stationed.

Carnage In The Far East

From the lurid tales of slaughter and desperate encounter that come from the Far East the impression is given that the prediction of the "terrible destructive power of modern weapons" was being fulfilled, and that the day when this power will become such that wars must end in consequence of their terrors was not remote. But the losses in the Oriental war thus far seem trivial when compared with those in wars of the past. At the battle of Nanshan Hill, which was accompanied by the greatest loss of any of the battles, the casualties are placed at about five thousand killed, wounded and missing. Out of this the stories of terrific slaughter have been woven. In our own Civil War such losses were considered small. At Gettysburg the casualties were fifty-four thousand, at Antietam twenty-five thousand, at Chancellorsville twenty-eight thousand, at Chickamauga thirty-three thousand, at Shiloh twenty-three thousand, and eighteen thousand at Fredericksburg.

To Seek Promotion

Assistant Naval Constructor Laurence S. Adams of the Navy, who has been on duty for some time at the Union Iron Works in connection with work on the Government vessels being built there, will next week undergo his examinations for promotion to the next higher grade in his corps, that of full Naval Constructor. Young Adams will doubtless have little difficulty in passing the examinations. He stood at the top of his class at Annapolis, and has served with great credit to himself and to the service in the Construction corps for the past eight years. He is a nephew of Commander Thomas S. Phelps, of the Marblehead, and the son of Commander J. D. Adams.

The Real Thing

It is an inspiring sight to see that rugged soldier, Colonel George Pippy, riding on horseback along the Ocean boulevard of a Sunday, astride a prancing steed, and with a bearing that would put a proud British field-marshal to shame. The witness of such a vision need stir his imagination but little to picture to himself a victorious host returning from a brilliant campaign headed by this imposing figure, head erect, stern visage, expressing lofty rank in every lineament, and ease and grace of carriage stamping the veteran of many a hard fought field. The Colonel is a veteran of the Union League Club, an organization of colonels that has made many a hard fight for patronage.

Why The Generals Are Sore

Not for many a day have those stern warriors, the gallant generals of the California National Guard, been so terribly aggrieved as just now over the humiliating snub given them by the United States Government in the matter of the joint mobilization of the regulars and the militia at Rancho del Encinal, which is to take place next month. The entire guard of the State is to take part, with the exception of these generals, who have been ignominiously ignored by the War Department, which has decided that the regular army can furnish all the generalship needed for the occasion. The militia generals may stay at home. To say that the generals are sore is to put it mildly. They are hot beneath their bestarred collars. 'Od's shoulder straps and ramrods! What profiteth it a man to bear the resounding title of General and to wear the glittering epaulettes if, when a spectacular occasion arises, those proud possessions may not be exhibited to the admiration of the multitude. They hold that there is no use being a general unless they are permitted to grasp such opportunities for display. While commiseration is expressed for the disappointed generals, the War Department remains obdurate, and Major-General McArthur will be the only real thing at the encampment.

She Started a Fashion

It was Ethel Barrymore who made the big muff fashionable two years ago, when she starred in "Captain Jinks." All New York women with any pretensions to smartness of attire adopted the same style of muff that Miss Barrymore carried in that play. The muff was her own idea. She was looking up old-fashioned styles for her gowns in an old fashion magazine, and noticed that the muff of that period was a huge affair, twice the size of the little thing of the day. Miss Barrymore decided to raise the old-fashioned muff to its former high estate. Her idea was

PIERCE-RODOLPH STORAGE CO. Inc.

STORAGE, MOVING, PACKING AND SHIPPING

WAREHOUSE: EDDY ST., near Fillmore

Specially built for the Storage of Household Furniture

OFFICE: POST AND POWELL STS.

Phone Private 571

WE BUY AND SELL TONOPAH STOCKS EXCLUSIVELY

Keep posted by reading our market letters and save money by getting our prices

FRANK L. KREIDER & BRO.

332 Crossley Bldg.

San Francisco

adopted, and then New York women proceeded to enlarge upon it until their muffs soon grew to such prodigious size that they were almost big enough to sleep in.

Still Affects Jade Jewelry

Hubert Henry Davies, the author of Ethel Barrymore's play, associated chiefly with the musical set dominated by Mrs. Carmichael-Carr when he lived here. Mrs. Carr lives in London now, where she teaches the sons and daughters of dukes and earls the technic of the pianoforte. Mr. Davies is still numbered among her acquaintances. His apartments in London are luxurious in the extreme. He still wears the jade jewelry he bought during his residence in San Francisco, but has discarded his bracelet on the advice of friends. He and Elsie de Wolfe are great chums, I hear, and the playwright is always a welcome summer guest at her country place near Versailles, where Jean Richepin, Miss Marbury, the play-broker, and David Belasco are also amis-de-maison.

Will Sue for Libel

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Quinn have just left here for their Chicago home after straightening out among their friends that sensational story which appeared in some of the daily papers about the attempted suicide of a "Mabel Quinn," in St. Louis. One and all assured the young couple that never for an instant did they credit the story that it was "their Mabel." Quinn was furious over the publication of the scandalous yarn and he has placed a liber suit for fifty thousand dollars' damages in the hands of his lawyers, against the San Francisco Examiner, the Los Angeles Examiner, the Chicago American and the St. Louis papers that published the same version of the story. Quinn declares he'll make the papers smart before he finishes with them. His lawyers believe they have a cinch and expect to get heavy damages.

Dixon and His "Chaps"

Maynard Dixon is going to Arizona for his health and incidentally to make pictures. Dixon is a relative of Sallie Maynard, and he is very popular among the girls of the Southern set. By the way, I heard recently that he learned a new system of signaling while on the plains a few months ago. Passers-by along Montgomery street noticed, for several weeks, a pair of "chaps," which are rawhide trousers, hanging from the artist's windows. If on the north window they read to his friends, "Come up." Suspended from the south window they meant, "Stay away." One evening last week a crowd of revelers, friends of the artist, saw the "chaps" in the window. Arm in arm they ascended the stairs chanting a refrain that was fit only for the Bohemian Club on jinks night. They flung the door open and burst into the studio. Since that evening Dixon has never moved the "chaps" from the not-at-home window. And Montgomery street is puzzled.

He Mistook the Day

"Bob" Greer thinks he is losing his memory. Invited to a recent prominent wedding, he arose one morning, rushed to a jeweler's, bought a stunning gift, hurried home and dressed and arrived, breathless, at the bride's home at noon, the hour set for the ceremony. There were no carriages, no excitement, nothing to indicate that an important function was about to take place. Mr. Greer concluded he had mistaken the number of the house, when the door was opened by a maid.

"Is the groom here?" asked the now alarmed Mr. Greer.

"Groom? No," replied the girl.

"Isn't the bride here?" he gasped.

"Bride? Well, she ain't a bride yet, but she will be tomorrow."

And Mr. Greer fled, still grasping his jewel-box.

Members of the Oakland Golf Club were invited last week to gather once more in the home that had "sheltered our clubs, our mugs and ourselves, lo, these many years, and go over, for the last time, the stories of our victories and defeats, of our 'foozles' and 'hard luck'; tell of 'bad lies,' and 'shloofed' drives, of 'horrid hazards' and 'rimmed cups.'" About thirty responded to the invitation. Robert M. Fitzgerald was toastmaster of the occasion. Among the revelers were Professor Gayley, George de Golias, Sam Bell McKee, Tyler Henshaw, the Folgers and other wits.

The Spreading Of The Light

Of remarkable size are the chunks of wisdom that are being distributed at the Summer School of the University of California these days. The reinforcement of the native talent by the noted savants from remote corners of the globe has resulted in a symposium that for variety and

Artistic Interiors Designed and Decorated

Ideas and Estimates furnished for all classes of
Decorative Work

L. TOZER & SON

762-764 Mission St.

San Francisco, Cal.

BOHM

BRISTOL ©

WATCHES

Perfect within and without.
The finest American and Swiss movements. The most tasteful and elegant cases; plain or elaborate.
We have the most expert watch
repairers.

profundity of knowledge has never been equaled in this country. The light is being spread as it was never spread before in darkest California. If any man there be who out of a weak conceit of sobriety thinks that he can be too well studied in the book of God's work, he should hie himself to Berkeley and find that he is mistaken. It is there he will appreciate that science is a sublime and lofty thing looking down upon ignorance from an eminence. When Dr. Jordan reflects on what is being done in Berkeley he must feel that Stanford has degenerated into a backwoods college. Palo Alto has become a very small speck on the academic map since Ben Wheeler rounded up all the Class A scholars at Berkeley.

Loeb Explains Why Animals Migrate

The other day Professor Loeb entertained a large class by telling of the wonderful effects of light and chemical diffusion on animals. He disclosed the fact that the hitherto unexplainable migration of both sea and land creatures was due to light. He said that he had ascertained that when a strong light is thrown on one side of certain animals, the muscles on that side contract, causing it to turn its head toward the source of the light's rays. Marine animals are subject to this influence. They migrate in the months when the sun's rays are most direct to get as far from the light as possible, going far from the surface. They turn from and toward the light as do flowers on a stem, the mechanism in plants and animals seeming to be the same in this particular.

A New Ungulate Discovered

Dr. William J. Sinclair and E. L. Furlong, of the university, have just issued a bulletin on a new ungulate discovered by them in the Quarternary caves of Shasta, while conducting explorations for the department of anthropology, supported by Mrs. Hearst. It is an exceptionally complete specimen, but the scientists have not been able to determine whether the animal should be classed with sheep or goats. There is no animal like it in existence today. The discovery has enabled the scientists to dilate learnedly, in language that necessitates frequent digging into the dictionary for enlightenment. They say they are going to look for other specimens in ossiferous alluvial deposits.

Some Gentle Smashes

Though there has been considerable incense burning at the feet of the visiting savants, they haven't hesitated to deprecate our lack of culture. It would have been surprising and exceptional if they had got away without finding something to lecture us about. Polite foreigners usually show their appreciation of our admiration in that way. Professors de Vries and Arrhenius say that it was not worth their while to come all the way to California, because their lectures have not been so largely attended as they had expected. However, women seem to be more appreciative than men, and the great scientists do not understand this feminine thirst for knowledge. They are offended at the indifference of the professors of California and Stanford, and declare that our scientists are not sufficiently mature to receive the truths that they had come to impart. However, they are hopeful. They believe that in about fifteen years our intellectual soil will be more fertile. Professors Cooley and Turner, representing Eastern colleges, say that we do not appreciate the monuments of early Californian romance and adventure. They were impressed with our indifference when they visited Monterey. They were delighted with Del Monte, but were most enthusiastic over the old Spanish town that has not yet awakened from the drowsiness of the days of serenades beneath latticed windows. They said that if there were such a town within a hundred miles of New York it would be kept in the same picturesque condition it was in when the Spanish grandees took their departure.

The most homesick tourist from New York or Boston finds his nostalgia banished when he drops in at Moraghan's, in the California Market. Who could be homesick when eating fresh oysters, just as good as those he gets at home? The Moraghan oysters always commend themselves to the Eastern man, who finds them equal to the home product.

O'Neill Scoffs At Littlefield

There is a small but lively "scrap" under way between Professor Edmund O'Neill of the department of organic chemistry at the University of California, and Dr. Charles W. Littlefield, of Anderson, Indiana, who declares that he has been able to generate animal life spontaneously from inorganic matter. It is believed by Professor O'Neill that his colleague has rushed into print hastily, and that after he has had time for investigation he will find that he has mistaken the "Brownian

All Want the Best

in everything. In whiskey you get it in

Hunter Baltimore Rye

HILBERT MERCANTILE CO.,
213-215 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.
Telephone Exchange 313

The Key to Comfort

these days is the electrical one. Think of what benefits accrue to you from the electrical current! — light, the telegraph, the telephone, fans, call bells, annunciators, burglar alarms—lots of useful devices. See us about any or all of these if you want a cheap and real "Key to Comfort."

NATIONAL ELECTRIC CO.

455 Sutter St. San Francisco
PHONE BUSH 639

theory" for something much more complex. Indeed, the Berkeley man thinks that the whole so-called discovery is nothing but a joke of the most laughable description. "Living organisms can never be generated by so simple a process," said Professor O'Neill the other day. "If it is ever accomplished the method will be a long and laborious one." Professor O'Neill believes that the doctor was deceived in his experiments by the manner in which his solution separated in water, just as camphor or any heavy crystal will take on peculiar shapes and move about on the surface of water as if imbued with life. But the biggest blow is dealt the Indiana man by his Californian colleague when the latter declares that, "An inexperienced person with limited scientific knowledge would think the atom-like masses endowed with life. One is surprised at the number of twentieth century alchemists who are sincere enough in their work but who, with the unchangeable and radiant faith of their brothers of the dark ages, look for an essence that shall give lasting life to all created things. Really, it must be good to be so young and buoyant as the man who can have faith in such assertions, although of his own making."

Sacred Rag-Time Condemned

Albert Augustus Stanley, M.A., Professor of Music in the University of Michigan, has set the church folk of Berkeley and the surrounding towns by the ears. While delivering one of the lectures of his course at the Summer School on "Interpretation of Music and Harmony" he declared that there was too much rag-time in the choirs. He described the modern religious music as "a little religious doggerel with a poor quality of dance music mixed in, the whole dignified by the name of hymn." He remarked that the emotions are reached through the heart and not through the heels. Professor Stanley criticises not only the melody but the manner in which the religious thought is expressed. He is very emphatic in his scoring of the Methodist body and the Salvation Army, and he says that were he a young person with a tendency to give his feet full swing he does not see how he could walk decorously a-down a church aisle with the lilting measure of a two-step or waltz surging through the air. "It is neither reverent nor seemly to use the name of our Lord to the air of 'All Coons Look Alike to Me,'" says Professor Stanley.

She Hypnotized Him

In some matters Oakland is a remarkably advanced community. The wife of the Rev. Charles Wayland Hoag says that in forsaking her to levitate with one of the sisters of his congregation he was under hypnotic influence, and many good people in the community sharing in her belief palliate his weakness. But the unsympathetic husband of the woman in the case makes no excuse for his wife. He is preparing to sue her for divorce.

Mrs. F. R. Dray is visiting her daughter in Alameda during the absence of Miss Alice Dray and her brother Arthur. The latter are traveling in Germany and intend remaining in Berlin during the grand opera season.

"The Little Bank Around the Corner"

There are no people so conventional, so hidebound, so opposed to change, as bankers. Year after year, they go on in the same way, following the methods in vogue by their ancestors, and opposing anything that savors of the untried, the unusual. It is only of late years that San Francisco bankers have begun to wake up to the fact that enterprise is as necessary in running a bank as in other forms of business. This awakening has been caused by the success of banking enterprises that have dared to break away from the beaten track, and to launch out into the undiscovered country.

Two years ago a new bank was established in Sixth street, this city, just around the corner from Market. Business men thought the new bank rather a venturesome proceeding, inasmuch as its directors had cut away from the old banking district and ventured into an absolutely unexplored field for banks. At that time the City and County Bank was the only financial institution south of Market street. But that the directors builded well in striking out in the new field was shown at the second annual meeting of the City and County Bank's stockholders, on Tuesday of last week. At this meeting, when all of the old officers and directors were re-elected, a dividend of five dollars a share was declared, a remarkable showing for a two-year-old bank. Old conservative bankers, who at first looked with doubt upon the venturesome young City and County Bank when it established itself in a new district, are now most commendatory in their approval of the enterprise.

The bank, which started with a capital of $125,000, now has a paid-up capital of $250,000 and total assets of $1,000,000, enjoying the confidence of over eighteen hundred clients. The "little bank around the corner" filled a long-felt want among merchants of the uptown district, who have been saved much time and consequent worry since the City and County's establishment. In speaking of the admirable progress made by the bank in its two years of existence one of the officers said: "We have realized that our rapid growth is due to our directors, who are all well-known, wealthy, conservative financiers noted for their judicious investments; also through the personal efforts made by the officials, and to the uniform courtesy shown by them to all who come in contact with them, whether their business is large or small, and also to the merchants of that part of the city, who may well be praised for their thrift and rapid progress in trade. Business concerns who banked only in a small way last year have in many instances more than doubled the amount of their deposits with us, showing that this section has forged ahead rapidly within the past twelve months, and we look forward confidently to far greater prosperity in the year to come."

The personnel of the City and County Bank is as follows: President, A. J. Lowenberg; vice-president, L. V. Merle; cashier, A. Tonn; directors—Matthew Nunan, J. Lilienthal, C. A. Malm, L. Auerbach, A. J. Lowenberg, L. V. Merle, A. Tonn.

"Why do they call Dauber an artist?"

"Because he has a studio, I guess."

CURES

Bythinia

CONSTIPATION

FOR SALE AT DRUG STORES AND BARS

DECORATIONS For Weddings, Receptions and Stores. Flower gifts attractively arranged. Bridal bouquets artistically specialized.

Original Designs in Favors, Name Cards, Menus, Almond Dishes and Candle Shades

MISS CHARLOTTE F. WILLIAMS

121 Post Street Tel. John 1911 San Francisco

Out of Town Correspondence Solicited

At the Resorts

Salmon fishing is still at its best at Capitola. The weather is perfect and sportsmen term the place a paradise.

Trout fishing at Lake Tahoe is still the favorite pursuit, and several of the Tallac's guests report big catches. Over two hundred trout were brought in last Wednesday, Adolph Roos making the largest individual catch of the day. Mrs. E. S. Heller caught a ten-pounder on an eight ounce rod, the combined efforts of herself and husband landing the giant after one hour and twenty-five minutes of excitement. Mrs. M. Lawrence caught forty-two on Tahoe and twenty-four on Fallenleaf lake in two afternoons' fishing. A. H. Frank and Edwin Danforth are enthusiastic fishermen, also Charles Sutro and Professor Brier. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Winship nearly lost their fishing tackle several times the other day in landing twenty-three brook trout on Taylor Creek.

Recent arrivals at El Carmelo, Pacific Grove, were: G. W. Hellman, L. E. Wood, Miss Jewell, C. W. Coburn, C. J. Cox, Robert Pike, Mrs. Worthington and the Misses Worthington of Cincinnati, Mrs. Arthur Page of San Rafael, Dr. and Mrs. Mache of Madison, Wisconsin.

Among recent arrivals at Paraiso Springs were: Mrs. C. H. Joost, Mrs. I. G. Treadwell, D. D. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Riordan, Miss Isabel Murphy, F. W. M. Lange, J. McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. E. Fay, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Kohlberg, Mrs. W. Noon of Oakland, Mr. and Mrs. W. Bernard of Chicago.

At Del Monte recent arrivals include: Miss Lily O'Connor, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Worden, Mrs. Miles Baird, Mrs. A. H. Voorhies, Miss Dillon, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Dutton, Miss Gertrude Dutton, E. J. Tobin, Mr. and Mrs. Bading of Berlin, J. D. Grant, Baron and Baroness Ergolett of Vienna, Miss Eyre, Miss Kittle, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Johnson of San Rafael, Mr. and Mrs. Lamont of New York.

Arrivals during the past week at Rowardennan included: S. Castle, Miss Smith, Miss Myra Jeffers, Miss Eunice Jeffers, Mr. and Mrs. William Ede, Mr. and Mrs. Burr Eastwood, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Dixon, Mrs. Irving Scott, Miss Browne, G. H. Whipple, Miss S. Jewell, Miss C. Jewell, Mrs. Newton Rosekrans and child, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Dennett and son of San Francisco; A. von der Ropp, Mrs. H. A. Stephenson of Oakland, Miss Sinclair, J. B. Roberts, R. B. Mitchell of Alameda.

Rear Admiral O. W. Farenholt of the U. S. Navy is spending a fortnight at Byron Springs; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Morrison, Mrs. David Belasco, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Belasco are spending their vacation at the Springs. Miss Augusta D. Ames, John W. Ferris, Miss H. Ferris, Mrs. E. J. Bowen, Mrs. James Moffit, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E. Gibbs and Miss Wells are among the many visitors from San Francisco. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Magee Jr., Miss Hush, V. G. Hush Jr. and W. F. Hush came over in their touring car Saturday. Mrs. William Bartling and her daughter Louise from Salt Lake City returned to San Francisco Monday, after having spent several days at Byron. R. C. Haywood, a mining man from Denver, Colo., who is interested in mines in California, is at the Springs with his wife.

PRIMA FACIE EVIDENCE

Jones—Mrs. Brown is going to have her husband sent to an insane asylum.

Smith—Is he really crazy?

Jones—She says he's stark mad; he's been wanting to move over to Oakland.
—The Wag.

IT WAS THE LINKS

She was a college girl, and he
A college man, and both were free
Until they played at golf one day
By fair Del Monte, on the bay.

She won the score, he lost—and yet
He did not seem to feel regret;
"Del Monte's links have linked us, dear,"
That night he whispered in her ear.

FOR SALE

A BEAUTIFUL SUBURBAN HOME COMPLETE IN EVERY DETAIL

Fifteen minutes from Ross, Marin county, California.

An hour from San Francisco; half an hour from San Rafael.

Situated at the foot of Mt. Tamalpais and commanding an unsurpassed view of its crest and wooded canyons.

Comfortable, roomy residence.

Spacious grounds in a fine state of of cultivation.

Comprises over 1,000 acres of the most picturesque and accessible part of Marin county, generously watered and timbered and extending from Ross Valley nearly to Fairfax.

Is offered as a whole or in two parts.

Property of the Estate of Janet S. Porteous, deceased, offered for sale by order of the executors.

For further particulars apply to

THOMAS MAGEE & SONS

5 MONTGOMERY STREET

San Francisco, Cal.

Chartreuse—Green or Yellow

and other liqueurs for after dinner cordials are given much attention by us, as a pleasing feature of our comprehensive stock of wines and liquors. It goes without saying that during dinner wines are stacked case upon case hereabout—clarets, dry champagnes, sauternes, hocks, sherry, port, angelica, catawba and all the favorites, of fine vintages. Like a sample case?

RATHJEN WINE CO.

46 ELLIS STREET

Telephone Main 5171

NEAR MARKET

To Louis A. Robertson

Poet, would you know a truth?
Song is of eternal youth!
Though our little lives flow fast,
Aging swiftly to the Past,
Song is of the vernal spring
Ever brightly sparkling.

Poet, would you be a sage?
Sing the glories of the Age!
Drop the foolish myths of old—
Tales already too oft told.
There are glories more sublime
Here, and in the womb of Time!

What of Sicily and Greece?
Peace upon them—reverent peace!
Never breath of poet blew
Life into what Life ne'er knew.
These are dead, for all their trust
Was molded of the lifeless dust.

Greece's song and Greece's art
Is but of Greece the sadder part;
For she has fallen, and her fall
Is mightier than these live o'er all.
Her poets sang, yet sang in vain—
Why venture now a kindred strain?

Here in this new land of the West
Stirs all that Time has proven best;
Here is the dream, the august plan,
The glory and the power of man.
And here is love, and here is hate—
What more may mythic tales relate?

Life, with its message proudly prized,
Walks by you hourly undisguised;
A nation's building, day to day,
Swells up from street, and mart, and quay,
And shall we sing the legends old,
And let these pass us unextolled?

We need the virile poet's song!
In lonely field or city throng,
We need the voice of him that sings
The glory of the present things!
The good the Past knew lives today,
'Tis only ill things that decay.

But more than this—a thousand times—
We need the poet's soul that climbs
The heights before us and looks back
To warn us of the trail and track;
To guide us with its prophet-song
To choose the right and shun the wrong!

Here is a work that God shall bless!
Here need of all your tenderness;
Here room for melody and art,
For deed of hand and deed of heart;
For all that breathes life into Name
And makes it live in honored fame.

July, 1904.

Elwyn Hoffman.

In Financial Circles

The week's record of transactions shows quite a gratifying increase. Payments for July coupons and dividends as well as savings banks interest are seeking reinvestment as a consequence of which there is a strong demand for bonds.

The enormous raise in values of real estate by the Assessor is diverting money to the local security market, a condition which is apt to make its influence felt for some time to come.

Dealings amounted to $296,000 bonds, and 2,590 shares, divided as follows: 890 shares lighting, 430 shares water, 530 shares miscellaneous, 5 bank shares and 735 shares sugars.

San Francisco Gas & Electric after a long stagnation touched $60, at which price there seems to be a liberal supply. The changes along the line were insignificant with the exception of Hawaiian Commercial and Makaweli sugar, both scoring an advance of about $2.

There is considerable inquiry for sugar stocks and I expect to see them once more leading the market upwards.

—The Financier.

Accordeon and Sunburst Pleating, STEWART'S, 110 Taylor St. Phone Folsom 2121

ALASKA REFRIGERATORS

FOR GROCERS
BUTCHERS
FLORISTS AND
HOUSEHOLD -

TILE, OPAL OR
ZINC LINED—
PACIFIC COAST AGENTS

W. W. MONTAGUE & CO.
309-317 MARKET ST.

WM. WILLIAMS & SONS

(LTD.) OF ABERDEEN.

V V O

Scotch Whisky

Importers - MACONDRAY & CO.

Great Beauty Specialist

ANNA AMELIA HOLSHOUSER

121 GEARY STREET

Parlors 319-320

(STARR KING BUILDING)

Greatest Magnetic Operator upon the human body living. My treatment not only reduces obesity but develops every imperfectly formed part of the body. Fine magnetic massage to ladies and gentlemen at their homes or at her parlors by appointment. Phone Private Ex. 216.

FAT FOLKS!

YOUR WEIGHT REDUCED

By New Process I guarantee to REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT as much as you desire. No Change in Diet, no inconvenience, no bad after-effects.

MRS. E. L. RYAN, Dermatologist
Apt. 500, THE IROQUOIS, 524 Ellis Street

Wrinkles and all facial blemishes. Superfluous hair removed. Manicuring, hair dressing, scalp treatment. Phone, Private Exchange 719.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of PETER MCCARTHY, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Kate A. Schwerin and Nellie M. Hall, Executrices of the Last Will and Testament of Peter McCarthy deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within ten months after the first publication of this notice to the said Kate A. Schwerin and Nellie M. Hall, as such executrices, at Rooms 607, 611, 612 Hayward Building, San Francisco, Cal., the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

KATE A. SCHWERIN and NELLIE M. HALL,
Executrices of the Last Will and Testament of
PETER MCCARTHY, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, July 16, 1904.

J. J. LERMAN, Attorney for Estate of Peter McCarthy, Deceased.

The modish woman's stationery is as much a part of her nowadays as her dainty wardrobe. Cooper & Co., 746 Market Street, are showing the newest modes in paper and envelopes, dies and seals.

Music

[Communications addressed to this department should be received not later than Tuesday noon.]

The Tivoli Singers

It is always hard to step into another person's shoes in a stage production, especially when the predecessor in the part was a great favorite. I can imagine George Chapman approaching the footlights with fear and trembling, to sing the "Brown October Ale" song that Arthur Cunningham had been warbling for three weeks to the delight of Tivoli audiences. It is safe to say that "Brown October Ale" was never in any of the Bostonians' productions sung quite so well as Arthur Cunningham sang it. MacDonald, insouciant and delightful actor as he still is, never had the voice of Cunningham, who has just resigned from the Tivoli company, much to San Francisco's sorrow. It is therefore all the more to George Chapman's credit that he made good with his audience, tripping close on the heels of the lamented Cunningham. Chapman has a voice somewhat of the same timbre as MacDonald's, and he uses it without effort. He was somewhat nervous on his first night, but as "Brown October Ale" is one of the songs that sing themselves, the singer soon became at ease. Dunsmure, the basso of the new company, is a rarely fine singer, and his personality is magnetic. Dora de Fillippe is the best singer of the women. The Bostonians never had such an Annabel.

Miss Judd's Work

Miss M. Gertrude Judd, the siffleuse, is at Weeks' Ranch near Santa Rosa, gaining strength after quite a serious illness. Miss Judd is a very strenuous worker, and her nerves collapsed under the strain. It does not seem as if it were difficult to teach whistling, but any one who visits Miss Judd on a working day will see that it is. She has a great many pupils, for whistling has become a popular accomplishment, and to whistle properly one must study just as in mastering singing or piano-playing. Throat specialists say that whistling gives strength to the muscles of throat and chest, and aids the digestive apparatus to do its work. In New York, whistling solos have been lately introduced as a part of the church services, helping out the choir. Miss Judd teaches her pupils not only to whistle solos, but to whistle in duets and ensemble. She herself is an artist in her line of vocalism, and has been many times urged to go upon the vaudeville stage, but she prefers to stay in San Francisco. She has written a book of exercises for whistlers that has had a large sale.

Fannie Michaelson's Success

San Francisco will probably have a representative among the prima donnas to be heard during the coming season at the Metropolitan Opera House. Coureid has been making overtures to Fannie Franciscia, who is still under contract to the management of the Opera at Amsterdam. If she can secure even a temporary release she will be heard for the first time outside of Europe since she left her home in this city over ten years ago. As Fannie Michaelson she was well known here as the possessor of a fine soprano voice and her development abroad is said to have been great.

An Album of Songs

Professor Paolo La Villa, who lately came here from the East and established a vocal studio, has just issued a new set of songs. The album was published by C. Fischer of New York. The songs are titled: "If All My Love," "Sweetheart, Watch for Me," "Love is the Game," "Inspiration," "Because You are You" and "To Love but You." The first two songs are with obligato, and artistically speaking are the best. The music of the entire group is melodious, of graceful style, the harmonies modern in form and chosen with taste. Professor La Villa is an honorary member of the Philharmonic Society of Palermo, Italy, and Academician of the Royal College of Music, Florence, Italy.

Mrs. Herbert Smith of Bremerton, Wash., is in town visiting her parents. Her father is very ill, and not expected to live. Mrs. Smith is best known in San Francisco as Mary Frances Francis, the writer on musical topics. —The Music Critic.

Fancy Vests at cost; see window. Tom Dillon, Hatter, opp. Palace Hotel.

MURINE EYE REMEDY

THOSE
LUSTROUS
EYES ARE MURINE
EYES

Sunlight Intensified by Reflection

from Ocean Beach and Desert Sand unrelieved by foliage. Winds and mineral laden poisonous dust, all bring eye-troubles in their wake, Granulated Eyelids, Red, Itching, Burning, Tired and Watery Eyes, Impaired Vision and Eye Pain. Prevention, Relief and Cure are found in MURINE EYE REMEDY, mild and harmless. Murine aids those wearing glasses, doesn't smart, but soothes and quickly cures. Is an Eye Tonic. Sold by Opticians and Druggists. Fifty Cents.

EXCURSION RATES ST. LOUIS

ROUND TRIP Excursion Tickets to St. Louis and Chicago on sale August 8, 9, 10, 18, 19, and dates in other months later at the following rates: —

TO ST. LOUIS . . . $67.50
TO CHICAGO, passing one way through St. Louis . . . $72.50

RETURN LIMIT three months. Stop overs allowed on both going and returning trip.

THESE RATES GOOD ON ANY TRAIN

Ask about the Through Tourist Cars direct to the Exposition.

613 MARKET STREET

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

The Stage

Frohman's Youngest Star

Ethel Barrymore is not only the scion of a whole string of distinguished histrions, but she is also her own sweet, inimitable self. Her individuality is a delicious blend of exquisite mannerisms that are distinctly Barrymorean. Not being an anthropologist I have no desire to trace them to their source. It is sufficient to know that we have a distinctly American actress, young, talented and fascinating, with a personality all her own. There is charm in the very awkwardness of her, and Ethel Barrymore is not at all times a gazelle, though she is lithe and full of grace. She has a way of winding herself round the furniture that is most alluring, and when she comes out to acknowledge a curtain-call with a swinging stride that defies histrionic traditions, she is so ingenuously captivating that people call her out again and again. No other actress on the stage responds to a curtain-call as does Ethel Barrymore. She comes out with a rush, and at first gives the impression that she is going to walk right over the footlights, her face beaming the while like that of a child about to receive a toy. And then she hurries away as though she wished it understood that the people behind the scenes were anxious to make ready for the next act. Ethel Barrymore has matured since we saw her with her uncle in "The Bauble Shop," and she has developed into what she gave not the slightest promise of becoming—an artist of rare temperament. The keynote of her technique is simplicity, and never for a moment does she give the impression that she is acting. So like a glove does the play fit her that it seems to have been adapted not only to her temperament but to her mannerisms. "Cousin Kate" is just such a play as one might expect from a man who wore a bracelet on his pen wrist. It is like a dramatization of one of the Duchess's novels. Hubert Henry Davies had no deep philosophical inspirations when he wrote that play. It is a play that is too sweet to be true to life. Its characters live only in fiction. However its humor is dainty and at times piquant. Its sentimentality is diverting, especially in the love scene in the empty house, and it is here, in the serious passages, that Miss Barrymore, in striking the serious notes of compunctious doubts, gives a hint to her ability for emotional work. The support is satisfactory. Bruce McRae plays the Dublin artist jauntily, and he has evidently made a study of the Dublin accent. The most musical of English accents is to be heard in Dublin, and it has but a faint suggestion of the brogue.

ROSE COGHLAN, AT THE ORPHEUM NEXT WEEK.

Theodore Bonnet.

Talent Galore

The press-agent at Fischer's doesn't have to give rein to his fancy nowadays. If that press-agent were the possessor of a sensitive conscience he would have suffered some very severe twinges during the past few months when he was supplying the gullible dailies with extravagant notices about the wonderful attainments of certain job-lot comedians and vocalists at the cosy little O'Farrell street playhouse. And how he did work the newspapers that are ever ready to publish pictures of stage divinities with yards of fulsome advance gush, even though the people boomed were never heard of outside of Oshkosh prior to their San Francisco debut! But there is no longer any need of that sort of thing. Some genuine artists are now treading the boards at Fischer's. I know they are artists because they are playing a piece that even Jud Brusie could write, and yet they make good every inch of the road. Among other things they have a woman with a voice at Fischer's, and such a phenomenon is rare in the little home of the dialect burlesque. Dorothy Morton is the first prima donna that has appeared at Fischer's with a musical note in her voice. Dorothy is no longer of bewitching figure but she sings better than any of the musical comedy queens that visit us nowadays, and she has the "good fellow" style and dash and ginger that are as pleasing to O'Farrell street as to Broadway. Next in order of merit in the new company is Bobby North, the Hebrew comedian, who dimmed the lustre of Barney Bernard from the moment of his entrance last Saturday night. Bobby is less self-conscious than Barney, and he appears to have a subtler sense of humor. In the person of Nora Bayes the company has a comedienne good enough for a top-liner at the

The Dinner Setting is Incomplete
without

White Rock
LITHIA Water

A Selected Water is as Essential
as a Selected Wine

P. J. WENIGER & CO.
DISTRIBUTORS

101-103 Powell St.
SAN FRANCISCO

ETHEL BARRYMORE AS "CARROTS"

In the one-act play of that name. It is called a study from life and Miss Barrymore is said to have achieved quite a triumph when she appeared in it in New York. The star has decided to give it as a curtain-raiser to "Cousin Kate" commencing with next Monday night. She will be assisted in its presentation by the original New York cast including Bruce McRae, Beatrice Agnew and Fanny Addison Pitt. "Carrots" is by Jules Renard and was originally produced at the Antoine theatre in Paris, a playhouse devoted to the presentation of "Simple Studies of Human Life."

Oipheum and not in an off week. Nora's only fault is that she appears to be too well satisfied with herself. She hasn't cultivated the gentle art of repression, but she is young. She is so well supplied with temperament that it is unnecessary for her to reach for her audience. As for the German comedians, they are not so important in this company as were Kolb and Dill in their environment, because their associates are of a higher class. And yet Cady and Rice are breezy Germans who are bound to establish themselves as favorites when Kolb and Dill become more dim in memory. They have a humor of their own that is infectious, and when they appear in a piece better supplied with comic situations than the current one, the most ardent of their predecessors' admirers will not withhold the glad hand of approval. However, they have no reason to complain of the reception that has been accorded them. They have enjoyed an uninterrupted series of triumphs since the first night.

Gunter's Melodrama

Archibald Clavering Gunter's play, "Mr. Barnes of New York," is as yellow as the cover of the novel of the same name. Everything is exaggerated in true melodramatic style; speeches high flown and bombastic, comedy of the humorous paper variety and situations forced and unreal. In the effort to give a local flavor to the scenes, which for the most part take place in France, the dialogue is interspersed copiously with "Mon Dieu" and "Sacre bleus," delivered with the usual grimaces and gesticulation one is accustomed to from the stage Frenchman. Dark-browed Corsicans prowl around, scowling menacingly and muttering of "the vendetta." Marina Paoli, played by Edythe Chapman at the Grand, has a highly developed penchant for "the vendetta," and the terrifying word was on her lips throughout the entire play. She followed her victim throughout the four acts always dressed comme il faut in the most dazzling gowns. Opportunity for "emoting" is lavishly supplied by the author, of which Miss Chapman takes full advantage and gives it in the melodramatic manner that the lines demand. Mr. Neill is a sympathetic Mr. Barnes, which fact does him great credit, for the modern Petruccio with his starving out policy in wooing "the future Mrs. Barnes" is as caddish as Kingsearl Esq. of "Miss Hobbs." Others in the cast who acquitted themselves creditably were Faye Wallace as the enfant terrible, Donald Bowles, Sheldon Lewis, Phosa McAlister, Reginald Travers, J. W. Burton and George Bloomquist.

Inez Bauer, a San Francisco girl of sixteen, is playing at the Garrick Theatre, Chicago, and the despatches say has made a hit. Miss Bauer made her stage debut with "The Brownies in Fairyland," later going into the chorus at Fischer's as understudy to Hope and Emerson, and afterward joining Lulu Glaser's company in "Dolly Varden." She toured the Eastern circuit with Miss Glaser, and her success in the latter company secured for her her present engagement. She is a very pretty girl who has been well schooled in singing and stage dancing.

"Along the Mohawk" at the Central reminds one in its settings of Booth Tarkington's novel "The Gentleman from Indiana." It was a novel idea of the playwright to put a printing-office into his plot, with a printing-press in full operation as a scenic accessory. There are many printers in San Francisco, and it is safe to say that every one will enjoy "Along the Mohawk." The girl reporter, the heroine, is not like a real newspaper woman, and the country editor is not exactly the real thing. But they are both good from a stage point of view, and Miss Lawton and Mayall make them very interesting.

Rice and Cady, the new German Comedians, at Fischer's.

Franz Vecsey, the eleven year old violin wonder, will receive sixty thousand dollars for his American tour. Daniel Frohman, who is his impresario, says he does not expect to make great profit out of the tour, but he wants America's critics and music-lovers to hear the boy, whom Joachim considers a marvelous player.

Henry Miller's company, opening at the Columbia on July twenty-fifth, will include two actresses new to us, Jessie Busley and Grace Heyer. Hilda Spong will play the leading role in "Joseph Entangled."

Juliet Crosby will appear as Flavia in "The Prisoner of Zenda" next week.

Next Week's Bills

Ethel Barrymore will continue in "Cousin Kate" at the Columbia. Henry Miller in "Mice and Men" comes next.

"A Lucky Stone" will keep on at Fischer's, "The Whirl of the Town" being in preparation.

White Whittlesey is crowding the Alcazar every night. "The Prisoner of Zenda," in which he won success last summer, will be next week's bill, to be followed by the play's sequel, "Rupert of Hentzau," the first Alcazar presentation of this drama. Whittlesey has a five years' contract with the Alcazar management, and there is no doubt whatever that his success will be enduring. He will add new plays to his repertory during this engagement.

The Grand is packed at every performance, and the Neill season is an assured success. Clyde Fitch's comedy, "The Cowboy and the Lady," which Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott produced in the East, and Miller Kent in the San Francisco production, will be given next week. It is a play of true Western flavor. Neill will be the hero, a Harvard man who has turned cowboy, and Miss Chapman will be Mrs. Weston, a widow the cowboy falls in love with. "A Gentleman of France" comes next.

"Robin Hood" will enter upon its fifth week of popularity at the Tivoli. It is a delightful production, and worth seeing many times.

A mammoth production of "Robert Emmet," the famous Irish historical drama, will be at the Central with Mayall in the title role. There will be special features introduced—Irish jig and reel dancing, etc. The management offers a special trophy for a competition during the week in which all Irish dancers are challenged to meet the champions of the Gaelic Dancing Club. The scenery will include a panorama of Irish views, and Irish music will be a feature. "Robert Emmet" is sure to pack the theatre all the week.

Rose Coghlan makes her first vaudeville appearance in this city at the Orpheum, supported by Lynn Pratt, Agnes Roslyn and Helen Barton in "Between Matinee and Night," in which she takes the part of an actress, the action of the sketch taking place behind the scenes at Wallack's. Julian Rose, the Hebrew story-teller, will reappear. Mr. and Mrs. Julius Zarig, new arrivals from the Orient, will give a telepathic turn. Musical Kleist in an electric novelty will be new.

At the Chutes the newcomers will be Emma Cotrely and Antonio Gofre, in posturing and balancing, and Fred Leslie's trained pigs.

Folk-Songs, German and Irish

Dr. Stanger, a German physician, answers the question "Why are there no more new folk-songs?" thus: "Because the peasants and mechanics no longer sing, but smoke instead. 'In place of song, smoke now issues from their throats.'" Mrs. C. Milligan Fox has founded an Irish Folk Song Society to rescue from oblivion and preserve the hundreds of charming old Irish folk songs, that with the progress of civilization were being stamped out and forgotten. Ireland has always been the home of the folk song. Mrs. Fox is a daughter of the antiquarian, Seaton Milligan, F.R.S.A. and M.R.I.A., of Belfast. She has in contemplation a lecturing tour in the United States during the coming winter and she will be accompanied by an Irish piper and an Irish harpist.

—The Playgoer.

M. H. RICHARDSON, Opposite Phelan Building
Importer of Precious, Semi-Precious and Superior Imitation Stones
769 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO

Latest London and New York styles in Hats. Tom Dillon and Co., opp. Palace.

COLUMBIA

THE LEADING THEATRE

Second and Last Week

Beginning Next Monday, July 18th

Charles Frohman presents

ETHEL BARRYMORE

In her Greatest Comedy Success

"COUSIN KATE"

By Hubert Henry Davies

July 25—Henry Miller in "MICE AND MEN"

ALCAZAR

THEATRE

Phone "ALCAZAR"
 Belasco and Mayer
 Proprietors
 E. D. Price, Gen. Mgr.

Monday, July 18th, one week

Regular Matinees Thursday and Saturday

Evenings, 25c to 75c

Matinees Thursday and Saturday 25c to 50c

WHITE WHITTLESEY

And the Alcazar Stock Company

In Anthony Hope's Fascinating Romantic Drama

"THE PRISONER OF ZENDA"

Marvelous Scenic Effects—A Great Cast

Monday, July 25—WHITE WHITTLESEY in "Rupert of Hentzau," a Sequel to "The Prisoner of Zenda"

Orpheum

O'Farrell between
 Stockton and Powell
 Streets

Week Commencing
 Sunday Matinee,
 July 17th

VAUDEVILLE'S ZENTH

ROSE COGHLAN AND COMPANY: Julian Rose, The Mysterious Zanzig; Musical Kleist; Estelle and Rabbette D. Arville; Cunningham & Smith; Harry Seebach; Orpheum Motion Pictures and Last Week of Le Roy and Clayton

COMING—CHARMION

Regular Matinees Every Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday

Prices: 10c, 25c and 50c.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Phone "Grand Opera House"
 Grand Opera House Co.
 Lessee

Continued Success of MR. JAMES NEILL

Regular Matinee Saturday
 And the Original
 Neill Company

Week Beginning Tomorrow—Sunday—Matinee

MR. NEILL

In a Picturesque and Perfect Production of Nat Goodwin's Great Hit

"THE COWBOY AND THE LADY"

Sunday Matinee, July 24th - - "A GENTLEMAN OF FRANCE"
 Special Summer Prices, 15c, 25c and 50c

Best Reserved Seat in Orchestra, 50c

Fischer's

THEATRE

O'Farrell between Stockton and
 Powell Streets

Remarkable Success of

Phone "Fischer's"

A Hit of Gigantic Proportions

"A LUCKY STONE"

The Roaringly Funny Burlesque by Collin Davis and Frank Witmark and this Admirable Company

Dorothy Morton, Nora Bayes, Rice and Carly—German Comedians; Bobby North—Hebrew Comedian; Edwin Clark, Ben Dillon, Garrity Sisters, Great Chorus of Thirty, Fifty Things to Interest and Amuse

RESERVED SEATS: Nights, 25c, 50c and 75c. Saturday and Sunday Matinees, 25c and 50c. Children at Matinees, 10c and 25c
 Next, "Whirl of the Town"

★TIVOLI★

Cor. Eddy and Mason Sts.

Evenings at 8 Sharp

FIFTH BIG WEEK

Beginning Monday, July 18th, of the Reigning Tivoli Triumph

"ROBIN HOOD"

With the Great Cast

And the Beauty Chorus

Promenade Circle, 3rd Floor, Smokers' Paradise

Elevator Always Running
 Seats Always Selling

Usual Tivoli prices, 25, 50 and 75c
 Only Matinee Saturday

CENTRAL

Belasco & Mayer, Props. Phone South 533
 Market Street near Eighth
 Opposite City Hall

Week Starting Monday Evening, July 18th

Matinees Saturday and Sunday

Mammoth and Magnificent Production of the Greatest of all Irish Dramas

"ROBERT EMMETT"

Irish Songs, Jigs and Reels, and Panorama of Irish Scenery

Prices: Evening, 10c to 50c

Matinees, 10c, 15c, 25c

LOUIS CREPAUX

(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

SCHOOL OF TONE PLACING (PALATAL SYSTEM)

Vocal Phonetics—Besides the
"Palatal Tone Placing System"

taught in the Louis Crepau School, another and most important feature is the teaching of the English phonetic sounds. The study of the five vowels is not all that is necessary to sing in a language, and particularly so in English. Very few English-speaking people are able to sing the phonetics of their language exempt from throatiness. Fundamentally, English phonetics cannot be emitted in singing as uttered in speech. From a vocal standpoint and through ten years of experience in teaching English-speaking singers, Mr. Crepau has made a vocal classification of all the English phonetic sounds. This classification enables English-speaking singers to master all the English phonetic sounds and renders them harmonious and easy to sing.

Apply at the School Mondays and Thursdays, from 2:00 to 2:30 p. m. Y. M. C. A. Building, Ellis and Mason Sts.

LOUIS H. EATON

ORGANIST AND DIRECTOR OF THE CHOIR

TRINITY CHURCH

Teacher of Singing, Piano and Organ

Special advantages offered singers in choir training
Studio and Residence 1676 Broadway

Between Van Ness Ave. and Franklin Street

HOTHER WISMER (Violinist)

ENSEMBLE INSTRUCTION

Will resume teaching about August 8th, at his residence and studio,
844 Grove Street near Fillmore.

H. B. DASMORE

TEACHER OF SINGING

Specialty—Shakespeare's system of tone production.

1424 Washington Street

573 Fifteenth street, OAKLAND, on Thursdays after August 1st.

M. GERTRUDE JUDD

Teacher of Whistling

785 Geary St., S. F.

Phone Hyde 933

JOSEPH ROECKEL and MME. COURSEN-ROECKEL

Assisted by Mlle. Elena Roeckel, Concert contralto

NEW VOCAL CLASSES Placing of Voice and Solo Practice
1060 FULTON ST. Opposite Alamo Square

Conrad W. Fuhrer

TEACHER of Violin and Ensemble Playing. 1676 Page St.
Phone Fell 3373. Also care of Sherman, Clay & Co.

CHICKERING Best in the World
PIANOS Oldest in America

100,000 IN USE

BENJ. CURTAZ &amp; SON, 16 O'FARRELL STREET

SOLE AGENTS

Dr. H. J. STEWART

TEACHER OF VOCAL MUSIC

Pianoforte, Organ, Harmony and Composition
Special course for singers desiring church appointments

Studio, 1105 Bush St.

MR. ANDREW BOGART

TEACHER OF SINGING

METHOD of the ELDER LAMPERTI

Home Studio: S. E. corner Buchanan and Page Sts.

PHONE PARK 202

SIGNOR ABRAMOFF

The only teacher of the famous California Prima Donna, Miss Edith Decker (Dramatic Soprano), Miss Paraskova Sandelin (Contralto), Mr. Emil Arnold (Tenor) and of several other singers prominent in the profession.

VOICE CULTURE (OLD ITALIAN METHOD)

Signor Abramoff Equalizes, Beautifies and Strengthens the Tone. Corrects Nasal and Throaty Production Produces apertamentos, and Covered tones with Open Mouth.

703 SUTTER ST.

HOURS: 10 to 1 and 3 to 7 Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday

MR. THEODOR

SALMON

Concert Pianist and Teacher. Pupil of Kullak, Reinecke, Jadassohn and Richter. Studio, 546 Sutter St. Phone James 1281. Residence, "The Nordhoff."

Von Meyerinck
School of Music

Telephone, Park 223

841 FULTON STREET

Offers all the advantages of Eastern and European conservatories for a thorough musical education.

STAFF OF TEACHERS.

Voice Culture - - - MRS. ANNA VON MEYERINCK
Art Expression, Opera and Drama, MRS. MARY FAIRWEATHER
Piano Harmony and Composition MR. FRED ZECH, JR.
Violin and Viola - - - MISS MARIE H. MILLS
MR. W. F. ZECH

Competent staff of assistant teachers. Special teachers for Languages (German, French and Italian), Physical Culture, Fencing, Elocution, and Stage Dancing. Prospectus upon application.

SIGNOR PAOLO LA VILLA

(Of Florence, Italy)

N. B.—Special Terms for Professionals.

Vocal Studio: THE ROOSEVELT, 546 Sutter St.
Phone James 1282

A Romantic Marriage

She Soliloquizes:

Well, it had to be somebody, and Horace is as good as anybody else. Dreadful, the state Rufus left his business in; everything a-tangle, and mortgages up to the very roofs. Really, I had nothing to count on but the life insurance, and that would hardly buy me gowns, let alone supporting two children and schooling them properly. I simply had to marry or take in boarders. Horace will do to pay my bills at any rate. Poor Horace, I had not the heart to deceive him, and he thinks I have been head over heels in love with him all these years. I suppose it looks very romantic, my marrying so soon after Rufus's death, but really, he does not deserve that I should wear the willow very long, considering the way he has left me. Horace ought to be pretty well fixed. He has had a good salary all these years and nobody to keep out of it but himself. Always well dressed, too, the pink of neatness. I wonder why he never married? He says my image has always been in his heart, but I know better than to believe that. At any rate we have taken matters up where we dropped them twelve years ago, and before many moons I shall change my name to Mrs. Burton.

He Soliloquizes:

She must have been in love with me all these years or she would not have accepted me so quickly. How businesslike a widow is about such things, anyway. Old Mitchell left her pretty well off; there is a large life insurance and no end of real estate. Good thing, for I am pretty seedy myself—don't dare to figure out how much I owe my tailor. The races and Clara have kept my funds pretty low. I shall quit the horses now for a while—always lose anyway, and Clara will have to get her walking papers. Suppose she will make a scene, but I don't care. Poor Ethel, I suppose she thinks I have loved her to distraction all the time, and I could not have the heart to deceive her. Funny to think of becoming a Benedict at last. Wonder if the kids will call me papa! Well, Ethel always was a nice little thing, and I am sure I can not do better than settle down with her, particularly as she has a good rent roll.

Miss May Horner Writes to her chums

DEAR GLADYS:—I must tell you the latest news. Auntie, Mrs. Mitchell, you know, is going to be married again, and the man is an old flame of hers, her lover when she was a girl. Perhaps you know him, Mr. Horace Burton. He is fat and somewhat bald, and I would not have him for anything in the world, but auntie does not seem to mind his looks. Isn't it funny for two old people to be so romantic? Here is Aunt Ethel, a widow with two children, and I am sure Mr. Burton must be at least forty. I always thought he was a confirmed old bachelor. I suppose they were dreadfully in love when they were young and fate separated them. It reminds me of a play, "Rosemary," I think it was. You don't expect such lovely things from your common everyday relatives. Well, when I write again I will tell you all about the wedding. Yours as ever.

May.

Much as is said about the pernicious modern habit of "gobbling books," we are not so much worse than our forbears. It is told of Mary Russell Mitford, as though it were something to boast of, that she once "mastered fifty-five volumes in thirty-five days." Mastered!

Corona Cafe, New Montgomery and Mission St. Mercantile lunch 25c. Always good, try it.

SCHOOLS and COLLEGES

HEALD'S

LEADING BUSINESS COLLEGE of the WEST

Over 24 Post St., San Francisco, Cal.

Established 40 years. Open entire year, day and night Write for circulars (free.)

St. Mary's College

OAKLAND, CAL.

Literary, Scientific, Commercial Courses.

Studies resumed August 1, 1904.

Send for Catalogue.

BROTHER VELLESIAN, President.

Santa Clara College

SANTA CLARA CAL.

The next session will begin August 2, 1904. Send for full particulars to

(Rev.) R. E. KENNA, S. J., President.

Hoitt's

School for Boys; 14th year begins August 9th; larger and stronger faculty than ever; perfect sanitation; illustrated catalogue. W. J. MEREDITH, Vice-Principal. Menlo Park, Cal.

Irving Institute

Boarding and day school for young ladies and little girls. 2126 California St. Will reopen August 1, 1904. Accredited to the universities. REV. EDWARD B. CHURCH, A. M., Principal.

Miss Bolte's School

2174 Post St., prepares for universities and colleges. Music by graduate professor of Berlin and Leipsic conservatories. Conversational and grammatical French and German; English. Board, English, French, German, music, $30 month. Next term July 11.

San Francisco Business College

Scott & Van Arsdale Building, 738 Mission St., between Third and Fourth. We are located in our new quarters. The finest schoolrooms in the West. Come and see them whether you want to go to school or not. Business men know where we are. We had eight calls for help this week.

Callagher Marsh
Business College

is the most practical; recommended by expert court reporters. Send for catalogue.

1382 Market St., San Francisco.

The Melbourne Institute

For stuttering and stammering teaches a new scientific course for cure. It is successful. It has been established in this city for three years under teaching of Prof. F. G. Norcross, acknowledged mental expert, whose work has won the admiration of reputable physicians and other deep students of mentality. The services of the Melbourne may be enlisted with the utmost confidence. Address MELBOURNE INSTITUTE, Van Ness Ave. and Market St., San Francisco. Hours 1 to 5 P. M. Telephone Mint 2626.

THE LYCEUM

Jordan or any Stanford professor.

AN ACCREDITED PREPARATORY SCHOOL

For the University, Law, and Medical College, Etc.

This school is well known for its careful and thorough work; we prepare you well. References, President

L. H. GRAU Ph. D., Principal. Rooms,

333-346, 5th floor, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

CALIFORNIA BUSINESS COLLEGE

The largest and finest quarters in the city; refined residence locality. Position for every graduate. Thorough, modern. 75 Page Catalogue on request.

R. L. DURHAM, President.

925 Golden Gate Avenue.

San Francisco.

Kent Law School

THIRTEENTH YEAR

Day and Night. Always open. No Vacations. Book Free.

536 Parrott Building (Emporium). Phone Folsom 2631

Century Electric Corporation

SUPPLIES, CONSTRUCTION, MANUFACTURING AND REPAIRING. BUILDINGS WIRED

16 and 18 SECOND STREET

Telephone Bush 352

San Francisco

MAISON TORTONI

111 O'Farrell St.

French Rotisserie

Private Dining Rooms.

Banquet Hall.

S. Constantini, Prop.

Automobile Topics

Dr. Thomas Locker Hill sends in the following account of an automobile trip, with pointers for those desiring to duplicate it: "Take the steamer Gold, leaving Clay-street wharf every day at three P. M., though it is well to telephone and ascertain exact time of sailing, as we had an hour's wait at the wharf. Automobiles go aboard the last thing. If the Captain is notified he will reserve deck space, and see that your car is not banged up. A three hours' steamer trip lands you at Lakeville. The fare for auto is one dollar and sixty cents; passengers, fifty cents; dinner served on board, twenty-five cents. From Lakeville to Petaluma, a ride of only eight miles over a good road, can be made in twenty-five minutes, and from Petaluma to Santa Rosa, sixteen miles, will take another hour. Stay over night at Santa Rosa. Gasoline can be had at Schilling's. Next morning take the road leading out E street, over both bridges, and at the race track fence turn to the left and you are on the road, a magnificent ride to Glen Ellen, Sonoma, Napa and Vallejo. This must be taken slow, as there are many turns and bends, and Sonoma county horses are still uneducated. But with a little care Napa can be reached by ten o'clock, giving plenty of time for a ride to Yountville, the Veteran's Home, and back to Napa for lunch, at Mrs. Kundle's, in Main street. After lunch can be enjoyed a trip to Napa Soda Springs, or the Asylum, and then to Vallejo, fifteen miles, coming home on the Frishie or Cochran; fare, two dollars and seventy cents for auto, twenty-five cents for passengers. The boats leave at five thirty and six P. M., arriving in San Francisco about eight P. M." This trip was taken during the recent holidays by Dr. and Mrs. Hill, with Mr. and Mrs. Peters as their guests.

The State road over the mountains from Placerville to Lake Tahoe is reported in good condition, and a delightful trip for automobiles. W. A. Starr and wife left their home in Oakland Thursday morning, arriving at the Tallac Saturday noon for lunch; almost railroad time. Mr. Starr was the third automobilist coming over this season.

Great efforts have been made recently, by different auto enthusiasts in Southern California, for records between Los Angeles and Santa Barbara. Norman Church of Los Angeles was the first to make a record between these two cities. This was done some three weeks ago, when Mr. Church made a trip in six hours and twenty-six minutes elapsed time. This was considered exceptionally good time and several efforts were made to lower this record. All were in vain, however, until John F. McLain, manager of the Pioneer Automobile Company at Los Angeles, and Leon T. Shettler, his chief salesman, made the trip in five hours and thirty-five minutes, but it was left for H. T. Lally of San Francisco to smash that record. Mr. Lally accomplished the feat in five hours and twenty-one minutes elapsed time. This beat the record of McLain and Shettler by fourteen minutes. Mr. Lally drove a 1904 Winton touring car, with a canopy top, and four persons in the machine. John Breuner and party, who spent the Fourth of July in Santa Clara, on the return trip broke the record from Santa Clara to San Francisco. Mr. Breuner drove a 1904 Winton touring car, with six people aboard.

The Pioneer Company has been advised that Max Schwabacher's four-cylinder Winton touring car was shipped from the factory at Cleveland, Ohio, on July sixth. This will be the first four-cylinder Winton ever shown on this coast, and its arrival here will be watched with a great deal of interest by automobilists. This machine has a number of features not shown on any other in this country. The car has thirty horse-power and weighs about twenty-two hundred pounds. The tonneau is of aluminum, and the entrance is from the side, which is the first American car shown with this new feature. A number of French factories are building their 1905 cars with this type of tonneau.

Frank H. Johnson of San Rafael in his new Model B Cadillac.

There was shipped from the Oldsmobile Factory, during the month of June, to the Pioneer Automobile Company at San Francisco ten carloads of Oldsmobiles, aggregating in number eighty-

MT. SHASTA SUMMER RATES

Fishing, hunting and camping facilities make the Shasta region most satisfactory as an outing place. There are no better trout streams than those about Shasta, and you are always in easy reach of direct communication with the city.

TICKETS AT REDUCED RATES
MAKE ACCESS EASY FOR EVERYBODY

Ask for a Shasta folder. It is illustrated, and will give you full information about every part of the Shasta country. Free from any agent, or Information Bureau.

613 MARKET ST.
SOUTHERN PACIFIC

Attachments of all kinds are popular on motorcycles with sufficient power to carry double. We show herewith one made by W. E. Lee of this city. On Sunday last this was attached to the Indian of C. C. Hopkins and several miles were traveled with a rider in the "carrier" and two riders on the motorcycle proper. The two-wheeled attachments are all the go in England.

four machines. There are now seven carloads en route, all of which are sold.

Messrs. H. T. Kutzkau, A. E. Hunter and W. F. Hunt all started from San Mateo in their new Oldsmobile tonneau touring cars, on Saturday last, to try and break the record from that point to San Jose. Mr. Kutzkau carried off the honors. His time was one hour and twenty minutes, four minutes better than that made by either of the other two machines.

The first entry of the big Vanderbilt automobile cup race on October eighth is a White racing steam car now in course of construction by the White Company of Cleveland, Ohio. The same type of engine will be used as in the White touring car, although it will of course be capable of producing a much greater speed.

When an automobile can travel comfortably from San Francisco to Los Angeles without an unnecessary stop, without a puncture and without the slightest possible breakage of the car, who can doubt that the game of motoring is advancing? Two weeks ago L. P. Lowe, chairman of the executive committee of the Automobile Club of California, made the run in his White steam touring car with the purpose of mapping out the road and seeing in what condition the highways were. The car made the run down, covering a distance of five hundred and three-fourths miles, odometer reading, and the total time consumed was forty-three hours and sixteen minutes, including all stops except within controls at the end of each day's run. Bert Dingley, Mr. Lowe's chauffeur, said that upon leaving San Francisco he wrapped the tools up and stored them away in the car, and they were not unpacked until Los Angeles was reached.

Miss Dillon left last week for a run to Santa Barbara in her White. She intends to do quite a bit of touring in the Southern part of the State before her return.

A. Haas enjoyed a pleasant trip to Del Monte in his White. Ex-Governor Budd, accompanied by his niece, Mrs. Dumouriez and her daughter Lena, enjoyed the trip to San Jose in his White. Mrs. R. H. Cool has just returned from Los Gatos, having made a successful run from her country home in her White. Samuel Buckbee had a perfect run to Del Monte last week where he spent several days touring about in his White.

Frank E. Hartigan, manager of the Mobile Carriage Company, has gone East to place orders for cars for the balance of this year and 1905. The Pierce Arrow touring cars made a very good record on the coast and the prospects are such as to justify the Mobile Carriage Company in placing one of the largest orders, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, that has been placed by any automobile concern at one time outside of New York. The cars will be principally of the four-cylinder type, ranging in price from three thousand to four thousand five hundred dollars. The Mobile Company has just completed a lot of passenger cars, five of them gasoline and one steam bus. This company is branching out in the matter of building. No doubt, in due time San Francisco will have an automobile factory of considerable output. This is following the method used largely in Paris and New York where the manufacturer buys the engine and chassis and assembles the cars, giving the customers their choice of style and upholstering and general finish.

J. A. Marsh, president of the Mobile Carriage Company, and Mrs. Marsh made their usual trip to San Jose on Saturday, remaining over Sunday.

Motoeycle Items

Oscar Hedstrom of the Indian factory is building a machine that he believes will do a straightaway mile under thirty-six seconds. As Hedstrom designed the most successful small gas engine ever built his experiment will be watched with interest.

The Pacific Motoeyclists expect to give a race meet on Admission Day. It has not yet been arranged as to what track will be used, but Stockton, Sacramento and other towns are bidding for the meet. Sacramento is enthusiastic on motoeycle racing and at the recent races there the people were so well pleased with the contests that the managers were obliged to put on two more events than the program called for. On the twenty-fourth members of the club will lay out the course for the one hundred mile reliability run around the bay, which will take place on the thirty-first. The start will be from this side of the bay and the finish will be in Alameda. The pace will not conflict with any of the local speed ordinances.

—The Chauffeur.

The Hotel Richmond is to continue under the present management, the lease having been renewed for ten years. There was no foundation to the report of an impending change of management. The hotel has been entirely renovated. The Hotel Granada is under the same excellent management.

ON the HILLS NOT THE RACE TRACK

is the test of power. The Annual Hill Climbing Contest of the Minneapolis Automobile Club was held on Saturday, June 11th, on Kenwood Hill, when the

Rambler

again demonstrated its superiority over cars costing three times its price, and, for the second time, won

FIRST PRIZE

finishing the course, 2680 feet, on a 10 per cent grade, in 1 minute, 7 3-5 seconds.

ENTRIES AND TIMES

Class No. A, Machines Valued at $2,750 and over—

Owner	Make	Time
J. H. Queal,	Pope-Toledo	:59
A. F. Timme,	Pope-Toledo	1:05
Dic. Ferris,	Pope-Toledo	1:05 4-5
F. T. Heffelfinger,	Peerless	1:08 1-5
Ralph Bagley,	Packard	1:11
Bert Strong,	Stearns	1:22

Class No. B, Machines Valued bet. $2,750 and $1,750—

A. C. Bennett,	Winton	1:11
G. W. Cappelin,	Winton	1:25
George Shear,	Knox	1:41

Class No. C, Machines Valued bet. $1,750 and $1,000—

M. E. Clark,	Rambler	1:07 3-5
C. C. Pillsbury,	Franklin	1:10 1-5
Dr. A. P. Walrath,	Rambler	1:14

Send for our latest illustrated Catalogue "C"; it explains RAMBLER construction; the records prove its value.

RAMBLER AUTOMOBILE AGENCY
Tenth and Market Sts., San Francisco

AUTOMOBILE REPAIRS

81 CITY HALL AVE. Telephone South 1039

De Dion Plugs
De Dion Porcelains
Electric Cable

ANDREWS, KEENAN & BLASAUF

"Pope-Toledo"

POPE TOLEDO TOURING CAR CO.

Phone South 1142

G. A. BOYER, Manager

134-148 GOLDEN GATE AVE.

REPAIRS MADE AND SUPPLIES FURNISHED
AT THE

Hotel Vendome Automobile Garage San Jose

Stable accommodations free to guests. Record time
on road from San Francisco to San Jose, two hours.

Price, $1350 without Top; $1450 with Top

Pierce Arrow Touring Car (French) $2650
Northern Runabout, $800

MOBILE CARRIAGE CO.

GOLDEN GATE AVE. AND GOUGH ST.

Phone Private Exchange 770

San Francisco

AUTOMOBILES FOR HIRE

Downtown Offices:

Palace Hotel Occidental Hotel St. Francis Hotel

INDIAN and RAMBLER MOTORCYCLES

Absolute one-hand control.
Powerful engines. Run fast or
slow and CLIMB HILLS.
Indian won recent hill-climb in
New York against all-comers;
also won 50 mile road race at
Buffalo, June 11. Time, 1 hr.
11 min., 30 sec.—a 1:25 4-5 gait.

C. C. HOPKINS
Larkin & McAllister

"SOLUTION OF TIRE TROUBLES" FISK DETACHABLE

ONLY A WRENCH NEEDED
CAN'T COME OFF THE RIM
CAN'T PINCH THE TUBE

MORE MILEAGE
MORE COMFORT
MORE SATISFACTION

CALL OR WRITE PACIFIC COAST BRANCH
PHIL. B. BEKEART CO. 114 SECOND ST.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

One of the many letters received from our pleased
customers of the

OLDSMOBILE

Pioneer Automobile Co., June 24, 1911.
San Francisco Cal.
Friend Bringer,

I suppose that you
are anxious to know how the Oldsmobile
Tonneau is behaving.

Mr. Sawyer & myself are greatly pleased for the car unquestionably develops
much greater power and rides much easier
& smoother than we had anticipated.
I can drive it from Vallejo to Calistoga
on high speed without changing, and on the low speed can live here & on steepest & roughest grades with few passing us with ease not more than 1/2 sec.
thrilling.

It is unquestionably the prettiest car on the market admired much by all for its simplicity & beauty. Workmanship & materials used are much better than any other car in its class.

We expect to place a number of these cars in Napier & Salinas Co.

Thanking you for the many favors

Yours very truly yours

F. J. Jacker

Will send you some photographs soon.

PIONEER AUTOMOBILE CO.

901-25 Golden Gate Ave.

San Francisco

The CADILLAC

MODEL B. Price $950
With Tonneau $1050

Record from Del
Monte to Oakland 5
hours and 38 minutes.
The only successful
tour of the Yosemite made by Major Fulmer of Los Angeles
and a party of three.

CUYLER LEE, Agent. 201-203 Larkin St., S. F.

This is the White
Steam Touring Car
complete with canopy
top, curtains and glass
front, baskets, acety-
lene lamp equipment,
and extra tonneau
seat.

WHITE STEAM TOURING CAR COMPLETE

AUTOMOBILE GARAGE
SAN MATEO

PAUL L. NOISAT PHONE BLACK 111
GARAGE AND REPAIR SHOP
B ST., NEAR THIRD AVE.

SUMMER RESORTS

The following Resorts will send descriptive booklet when requested.

TUSCAN SPRINGS

Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Catarrh and Stomach, Gout, Rheumatism and All BLOOD DISEASES taken under a guarantee to be cured in a specific time, or all expenses including Ry. fare both ways refunded. Send 50cts. for a bottle of Stomach and Catarrh Salts. Reduced round trip rates. FRANK J. HELLEN, Mgr., Tuscan Springs, Cal.

GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM

A Sanitarium, cottage plan; not a hospital. Equipped for the scientific application of Water, Electricity, Massage, Tissue Oscillation, Electric Light, X-Ray, Dry, Hot Air and all minor treatments. Large grounds, 5½ acres, shade, etc. Separate treatment apartments for men and women. Fifteen minutes walk from centre of city; one block from car line. Beautiful scenery. Write for literature. GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM, San Jose, Cal.

SKAGGS

Hot Springs, Sonoma County; only 4½ hours from San Francisco and but 9 miles staging; waters noted for medicinal virtues; best natural hot mineral water bath in State; boating and swimming; good trout streams; telephone, telegraph, daily mail and San Francisco papers. FIRST-CLASS HOTEL AND STAGE SERVICE morning and afternoon; round trip from San Francisco $5.50. Take Tiburon ferry daily 7:30 a. m. or 2:30 p. m. Rates $2 a day or $12 a week. References: any guest of the past nine years. Information at Peck's, 11 Montgomery St., or of J. F. MULGREW, Skaggs, Cal.

PARAISO SPRINGS

MONTREY CO., CAL.

The most popular sanitary health resort in California. Completely renovated and improved. No winds or fogs, grand mountain and valley scenery. Hot soda and sulphur baths, large swimming tank, excellent table. Booklet and particulars of F. W. SCHROEDER, Mgr. or PECK'S BUREAU, 11 Montgomery St.

SODA BAY SPRINGS

On Clear Lake. Hunting, fishing, boating, launch, horses, tennis, croquet, dark room, warm soda geyser in bathhouse, clubhouse, etc. Rates $10 to $15. CHATFIELD & VINCENT, 228 Montgomery St., or LEE D. CRAIG, Manager, Soda Bay, Kelseyville, P. O., Lake Co., Cal.

TRUCKEE RIVER COUNTRY CLUB

Summer Resort and Sportsmen's Lodge. Fourth Season May 15. Sierra attractions. California's Largest Rainbow Hatchery and Finest Fishing.

G. H. FOULKES, Verdi, Nev., or Nevada Block, S. F.

Camp Vacation

Hotel under canvas on the Russian River below Guerneville in a grove a mile and a half long, skirting the river; tennis courts; 40 new boats. There will be a dam in the river affording 4 miles of smooth water for boating, bathing and swimming. Adults $2 per day, $10 per week; children under 10 half rates. Special rates for families. Opens May 1. Address Mrs. L. C. CNOPIUS, Camp Vacation. "Vacation" P. O., Sonoma Co., Cal.

Byron Hot Springs

Open all the year. Unexcelled climate. Luxurious Mineral and Mud Baths, and the most curative waters known for Rheumatism, Gout, Sciatica, Liver and Kidney and Nervous troubles, also Malaria.

Hotel unique in cuisine, service and appointments.

Rates $17.50 per week in Cottages. $3 per day and upwards in Main Hotel.

Reached by Southern Pacific, 2 1-2 hours from San Francisco. 3 trains daily, at 8:30 a. m., 10 a. m. and 3:30 p. m.

H. R. WARNER, Manager

Byron Hot Springs Post Office, California

Awnings, Tents, Campers' Outfits, Bags, Etc. Rented and Sold

R. McMAHON
Tel. Bush 858 35 MARKET ST.

ASK PECK, HE KNOWS

Literature and Particulars on all hotels and summer resorts in California. 11 Montgomery Street.

Free Information

Agua Caliente Springs

New attractions; open all the year round; nearest Hot Sulphur Springs to San Francisco. Temperature 115 degrees; no staging; fare $1.10. Cures rheumatism, asthma and kindred ailments. Five Hot Sulphur Springs; tub and plunge baths, largest mineral water swimming tank in State. Accommodations first class. $2.00 per day; $12 to $14 per week; rates to families, half rates to children. Peck's, 11 Montgomery St. or THEO RICHARDS, Agua Caliente Springs, Sonoma Co., Cal. We have erected a stone dining room, seats 400 guests.

Deer Park Inn

And cottages; 6 miles from Lake Tahoe; open June 1st; ideal place for rest and recreation; elevation 6507 feet. Fine mineral springs. For further information call at office of Traveler, 30 Montgomery St., or send for booklet.

J. B. SCOTT, Folsom, Cal.

Beautiful Laurel Dell

The Robson Orchestral and Dr. Monroe N. Callender will furnish the best music ever played at any resort in the state.

The Switzerland of America. The only lake resort that has its own mineral springs and a chemically pure spring. Boating, swimming, marine toboggan 160 feet in length; first class livery; saddle horses. Dining room seats 300. Bowling alley and all games free to guests. Pamphlets at Peck's, 11 Montgomery St. and Cal. N. W. Ry., 650 Market St. Address, EDGAR DURNAN, Owner and Proprietor Laurel Dell, Lake Co., Cal.

HOTEL BELVEDERE

Most attractive resort on San Francisco bay. Special rates to clubs of young men. Send for booklet. MRS. A. T. MOORE, Belvedere, Cal.

TENTS AWNINGS, BAGS HAMMOCKS

W. A. PLUMMER

Tel. Main 549 111 CLAY ST., SAN FRANCISCO

VACATION 1904

IS NOW READY FOR DISTRIBUTION.

"VACATION" is issued annually by the

California Northwestern Railway

THE PICTURESQUE ROUTE OF CALIFORNIA

and is the standard publication on the Pacific Coast for information regarding

MINERAL SPRING RESORTS, COUNTRY HOMES AND FARMS WHERE SUMMER BOARDERS ARE TAKEN, AND SELECT CAMPING SPOTS.

This year's "VACATION 1904" contains over 150 pages, beautifully illustrated, and is complete in its detailed information as to location, accommodations, attractions, etc., with terms from $7.00 per week up.

To be had at Ticket Offices, 650 Market Street (Chronicle Building) and Tiburon Ferry, foot of Market Street; General Office, Mutual Life Building, corner of Sansome and California Streets, San Francisco

Applications by mail will receive immediate response.

JAS. L. FRAZIER, Gen'l Mgr. R. X. RYAN, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

THE OAKLAND TRIBUNE

is delivered into more homes of the masses and classes of Oakland, and Alameda County than all other Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley dailies combined. Reason—it's the best newspaper.

W. E. DARGIE, Pres.

T. T. DARGIE, Secy.

A Modern Fairy Tale

The Prince Who Liked To Argue

Once upon a time there lived a Prince who was very much addicted to the habit of arguing. He reveled in controversy and was never so happy as when engaged in a heated argument, the close of which found his opponent well worsted. He delighted to meet professors, men of science and the arts, inventors, and all classes of individuals who had ideas which he could pick to pieces in a few thousand words of argument. Of course, being a Prince, nobody of his own kingdom dared fight very strongly for his own opinions. It wouldn't do to offend one of the royal family, for a man has lost his head for no more than a difference of opinion about a pudding sauce.

By and by, the Prince found himself in a predicament which he might have foreseen had he been gifted with foresight as well as a ready tongue.

There was no one left to argue with. He had exhausted the resources of his own kingdom, and those of the neighboring principalities, and there was absolutely not a soul left with whom he could cross tongues in a wordy war.

The Prince pined for his favorite pursuit, but could find no mental tonic. Finally a bright idea occurred to him. He would marry, and then he would have some one continually at hand who could not get away, in case an opportunity for argument presented itself.

In the neighboring kingdom lived a Princess who also loved to argue. She argued about the color of her gowns and hats, the proper expression of music, the subject of love, and any other thing that occurred to her.

When she learned that the Prince of arguing reputation was looking for a bride, she immediately offered herself, through an ambassador, for the position. Everything went off well in the negotiations, and the wedding was celebrated with great pomp.

The Prince and his bride passed the honeymoon happily. Instead of billing and cooing, after the usual method of lunes-de-miel, they argued. They argued over their coffee and omelettes, their morning automobile spin, their luncheon truffles, their afternoon siesta, their elaborate dinner, and their midnight supper. They brought out cook-books, automobile advertisements and medical books to prove each other's authority, and extended their researches into several dictionaries. They enjoyed a perfect feast of argument.

But by and bye, after they returned home, the Prince found the Princess less aggressive in her side of their verbal controversies. She used the feminine reason, "Because" too frequently, and what man can get in the last word when confronted by that potent reason? "Oh, because," the Princess would say when her husband asked her why and how and wherefore.

Then, she brought out another weapon, woman's most powerful tool—tears. Whenever the Prince pressed too hardly upon her in an argument the Princess fetched out her lace mouchoir, and burst into tears.

The result is easily foreseen. The Prince gave up arguing with his wife. What was the use, when the Princess threatened to flood the palace with her tears every time her logic deserted.

Thus was the most argumentative Prince in Christendom converted into a mild creature without any desire to indulge in controversy of any kind. He took to bridge whist instead, and has established a reputation for clever play at that and kindred card games.

ABOUT TOILET POWDERS.

With a toilet powder, as with almost everything else, it is essential to be sure that you get an article of real merit.

Highly scented powders are dangerous and often do permanent injury to a delicate skin.

Mennen's Toilet Powder is a trade-marked article, which has for years been recognized by physicians as the best preparation made. The absolute purity of its ingredients and the exercise of the greatest care and skill in its manufacture have given the product of the Mennen Co. a quality of uniform excellence. That is why your physician recommends it.

Inferior goods often cost you the same money, while they yield a larger profit to the dealer. For this reason dealers will often attempt to force other goods upon you.

For your protection, Mennen's face, the trade-mark of the Mennen Co., is on the cover of every box of the genuine. It will be worth your while to look for this trade-mark.

All first-class dealers carry Mennen's Toilet Powder, and will supply it if you insist.

It is used by the United States Army and Navy.

The fact that eleven million boxes were sold in 1903 is proof of the universal popularity of Mennen's.

SUMMER RESORTS

The following Resorts will send descriptive booklet when requested

Hotel Rowardennan

"IN THE MOUNTAINS BY THE SEA"

Ben Lomond, Santa Cruz County. Opened under entirely new management. Round-trip Tickets from San Francisco, $3. For booklet apply PECK'S BUREAU, 11 Montgomery St., S. F.; or to WM. G. DODGE, Lessee.

The Monterey

Most Elegantly appointed Hotel on the Pacific Coast. Hot and cold water; Electric and Gas Lights; Private and Public Baths; Telephone in every room; four Private Dining Rooms; Fine Sample Rooms. American Plan, $2.50 and upwards; European Plan, 75c and upwards. Hageman & Jones, Props., Monterey, Cal.

Hotel Ben Lomond

SANTA CRUZ MOUNTAINS—NO STAGING

Table first-class. Electric lights, boating, swimming, fishing, hunting, tennis, croquet. See booklet, S. P. Company, 613 Market St., or B. DICKINSON, Ben Lomond, Cal.

Tahoe Tavern

On Lake Tahoe, the largest and most beautiful body of water in the world at this elevation, now open. The tavern will be conducted this season by Mr. F. W. Richardson, manager of California's famous mission hotel, The Glenwood, Riverside; a guarantee that it will be strictly first class. The table supplied with all delicacies; fishermen constantly employed to furnish lake trout. For rates address F. W. RICHARDSON

Brockway

Lake Tahoe

Opens June 1st. Write FRANK B. ALVERSON, Mgr. Brockway, Cal.

The Tallac

Lake Tahoe, Cal.

Cafe European. Nurses, Maids and Children, American Plan. Prices now as low as any hotel on Lake. Service, accommodations, boating and livery superior to any. Address M. LAWRENCE & CO., Tallac, Cal.

The Grove

Lake Tahoe

Half mile east of Tallac on Lake Shore. Rates $2 per day; $10 per week; meals 50c. Good saddle horses and the best of livery; boats free to all guests. J. E. PARMETER, Prop., Tallac, Cal.

Spend Your Vacation

A great many San Francisco people are planning to spend the entire summer at Hotel Del Monte. No other resort in California offers such a combination of attractions—sea bathing, golf, automobilism, bowling, tennis, fishing, and all out-of-door sports. Instead of going from place to place seeking comforts, the wise ones of society are planning already to put in several enjoyable weeks down at Del Monte by the sea. Address Geo. P. Snell, manager, Del Monte, California.

At Hotel Del Monte

Hotel Berkeley

Dwight Way, Berkeley

Half block from Key Route and Berkeley local trains. Surrounded by beautiful lawns and flowers; an ideal summer resort hotel; quiet, restful; modern appointments; cuisine first class in every respect; large, airy rooms. M. A. GIBBS, Prop.

THE MART DOMESTIC and IMPORTED BEERS
WINES and LIQUORS, for Camping,
Picnics and Vacations, at
1348 MARKET STREET Phone South 1176 REDUCED PRICES

MOORE'S POISON OAK REMEDY

Cures Poison-Oak and all Skin Diseases
Sold by all Druggists

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST—Phelan Bldg., Rooms 6, 8, 10, 48. 806 Market St. Phone John 3841

Letters

Connolly's Fisher Folk

"The Seiners" is the first long novel from the pen of James B. Connolly, whose collection of short stories, entitled "Out of Gloucester," was one of the most favorably mentioned books of its day, and deservedly so. "The Seiners" deals with the same characters and incidents—the fishermen from Cape Ann and their boats, and the daring risks taken by the intrepid mariners in the course of their toilsome occupation. This is the first time that the author has introduced women as characters in his fiction, but though they are all three fine girls in their way, they are out-ripped by the Lucy Foster, the Colleen Bawn and the Nannie O., and when the author takes us out to the fishing ground and allows us to assist in seining a school of mackerel, we readily forget all about Nell Buckley and Alice and Minnie Arkell. Except for our interest in that fine young fellow, Maurice Blake, and all that concerns him, it makes little difference whether we meet the women when we go ashore or not. The vital matter is the question whether the new boat, the Johnnie Duncan, will prove to be the water witch, or whether her rival, the Fred Withrow, is to win all the honors. It is like a greeting of old friends to meet again Wesley Marrs, and Tommy Ohlsen, and O'Donnell, and Clancy, and Billy Simms and Steve, and we would have been glad of some assurance that that daring little Echo o' the Morn, of which no mention is made, has escaped the fate of so many fine craft. Mr. Connolly has a faculty for infusing life into his boats as well as into his men. One does not need to understand anything about seamanship to appreciate that, but if the inlander, who scarcely knows a punt from a canoe or a mast from a rudder, can be stirred to enthusiasm over the run to harbor at Delaware Breakwater, what must it mean to those who have a technical knowledge of sailing on salt water? Gloucestermen are famous all over the world, and after the catechism which Clancy puts little Johnny Duncan through with regard to courses and conduct, though the child is not destined to become a fisherman, it is easy to see how they learned their profession. The climax of interest centres in a great race among the fishing fleet, which double-discounts all the international cup-contests. There are no allowances, or handicaps, or disqualifications or excuses. Boat for boat, they start and sail over the course, and the first one home is the winner. The best boat with the best skipper and the best luck make the combination of success. Many things were made to depend on the outcome in this case, but as "the end of uncertainty is the death of interest," intending readers must discover what they were and how it all came out for themselves. Maurice Blake, Clancy, Long Steve, Wesley Marrs and the rest of the skippers and crew are as fine men and as typically American as any of the cowboys and horsemen of the plains. Were it as easy to stage "The Seiners" as it has proved to dramatize the dry-land books they richly deserve their introduction to the theatregoers who do not read, but on the whole, there is perhaps no reason to regret that the tale will not be cheapened by clap-trap contrivances and the characters thrown out of perspective in the effort to create star parts for one or two where all are star performers. As long as Mr. Connolly can write in this strain his books will be eagerly looked for. Published by Scribner.

Under the general title "The Trail Makers," A. S. Barnes & Company have issued a series of volumes dealing with the exploration of the interior of the American continent. These include the journey of Coronado from the City of Mexico to the plains of Kansas and Nebraska in 1540-42, the voyage of Alexander MacKenzie from Montreal to the Arctic in 1789-93 and the Lewis and Clark to the sources of the Missouri river, across the Rocky mountains, and out to the Pacific, besides other less celebrated expeditions. The volumes are offered at the exceedingly moderate price of one dollar, and are thus not only within the means of any one interested, as far as cost is concerned, but this is the first time of any attempt to supply the information either at moderate cost or in portable form for the average reader. Of the volumes of the series that have thus far made their appearance, at least half are of especial interest to inhabitants of our coast.

William Keith, the artist, is to be the subject of the next "appreciation" in the Impressionist Quarterly, to be followed by "John Muir."

DIVIDEND NOTICE

PHOENIX SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATION. For the six months ending June 30, 1904, dividends have been declared on deposits in the savings department as follows: On term certificates at the rate of a per cent per annum, on ordinary savings accounts at the rate of a per cent per annum, and on all payables on and after July 1, 1904. The Phoenix has a surplus fund of $200,000 and a total paid in capital of $1,200,000. Its board of directors are: A. A. Watkins, president; Charles R. Bishop, vice-president; S. Prentiss Smith, treasurer; George C. Boardman, director; Gavin McNab, director; Charles E. Ladd, director; CLARENCE GRANGE, secretary and managing director.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. —, No. 91429

ELISE KOEBSCH ) Plaintiff )
vs. )
CHARLES W. F. KOEBSCH )
Defendant )
Superior Court.

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:

CHARLES W. F. KOEBSCH, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of plaintiff; also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 8th day of July in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk.

By GEO. W. LEE, Deputy Clerk.

McCLELLAN & McCLELLAN, Plaintiff's Attorneys.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. —,

ELLA VAN BENTHUSEN ) Plaintiff )
vs. )
THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN )
Defendant )
Superior Court.

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:

THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's alleged willful and utter neglect of said plaintiff for more than four years last past, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 30th day of June, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk.

By CHAS. C. MORRIS, Deputy Clerk.

N. F. FLOOD, Plaintiff's Attorney

112 1/2 Market St., Rooms 2, 3, and 4.

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

In the matter of the Estate of SAMUEL DAVIS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given that the petition of Andrew Hendrickson for an order directing the executor of the Will of SAMUEL DAVIS, Deceased, to convey to said petitioner a lot 25 by 100 feet in Pratero Block No. 145, has been set for hearing on Friday, July 22, 1904, in Department 10 of said Superior Court, at 10 o'clock A. M., at which time and place any objections that may be presented to said application will be heard and determined.

FRANK H. KERRIGAN, Judge of the Superior Court

Endorsed, Filed, June 3, 1904.

By D. J. CRANE, Deputy Clerk.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk.

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

In the matter of the Estate of SAMUEL DAVIS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given that the petition of Michael and Mary O'Keefe for an order directing the executor of the Will of SAMUEL DAVIS, deceased, to convey to said petitioners a lot 25 by 100 feet in Pratero Block No. 145, has been set for hearing on Friday, July 22, 1904, in Department 10 of said Superior Court, at 10 o'clock A. M., at which time and place any objections that may be presented to said application will be heard and determined.

FRANK H. KERRIGAN, Judge of the Superior Court.

Endorsed, Filed June 3, 1904.

By D. J. CRANE, Deputy Clerk.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk.

DR. ROWELL'S
FIRE OF LIFE
AN UNFAILING CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA,
SPRAINS, BRUISES, AND
ALL PAINS AND ACHES.
ALL DRUGGISTS 50¢

Fire of Life, known for years as the most remarkable remedy for the cure of

RHEUMATISM

A trial of this remedy will at once show its great merit as a rheumatic cure.

ROWELL & BROWN

32 Turk St., S. F.

HATS AND BONNETS

RUMPLE & RIEDEL
221 Geary St. We have just received a few choice French novelties in Hats, Turbans and Bonnets.

HAIR GOODS

G. LEDEDERER
Wig Maker and Hairdresser. Scalp treatments, Shampooing, Manicuring, Hair dyeing, Switches, Ornaments, Toupes. Complete line of pure Hair Goods only. 123 Stockton St.

HAT RENOVATORY

PANAMA HATS
Bleached and Blocked. 423 Sutter Street. 1247, Montgomery St. Street, 1001 Market Street. Telephones Black 4616, Red 3212.

KIMONOS AND JAPANESE GOODS

KIMONOS
Silk and Cotton; Custom made and made to order; of every description at special low prices. Call and inspect our large and artistic line. The Orient, 633 Sutter St. near Taylor.

Residence 814 Grove St., S. F.
Telephone Page 81

HENRY P. TRICOU
Notary Public

Telephone Main 1880 306 Montgomery St.
Bet. Pine and Bush

For those who appreciate comfort
and attention

Occidental Hotel

SAN FRANCISCO

AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN PLAN
A QUIET HOME
CENTRALLY LOCATED

GEORGE WARREN HOOPER, LESSEE

VEUVE
CLICQUOT
PONSARDIN

The most delicious
Champagne
of the Age

Yellow Label, Dry
Gold Label, Brut

Cruse &
Fils Freres

Clarets and
Sauternes

Creme des Grands
Crus
(Creme of Cognac)

A. Vignier Co.

429 & 431 Battery
San Francisco

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy

1051 Market St., bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.

The largest of its kind in the world.
Book "The Philosophy of Marriage" mailed free.
A Valuable Book for Men.

W. SCHEPPLER & SON

Dealer in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing
and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry.
1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Other People's Ideas

From "Simon Dale," by Anthony Hope:

It irks a woman to lose a man, however little she may have prized him when he was her own.

Heaven be thanked that temptation comes sometimes at moments when virtue also has attractions, or which of us would stand?

There are many men who take their color from the times, as some insects from the plants they feed on; in honest times they would be honest, in debauched they follow the evil fashion, having no force to stand by themselves.

The Vicar A man who has seen
Fontelles: The embrace, sir, is often delightful.

When a man has loved, and sees her whom he loves no more, he will not be indifferent; angry he may be, or scornful, amused he may be, and he should be tender; but it will not be as though he had not loved.

A. H. Green A man of love is always dull, save to one woman, and she's stark mad.

Recherches Women are more expensive than profit. Although indeed the kind creatures will most readily give for nothing what is worth as much.

From "The Literary Sense," by E. Nesbit:

Most of us are mercifully ignorant of the sympathy that surrounds us.—"The Lie Absolute."

Perhaps it is not, after all, such a bad thing to be quite sure, before marriage, that the second-best happiness is all you are likely to get in this world.—"The Second Best."

At three in the morning, if ever, the gilt is off the gingerbread.—"Dick, Tom, and Harry."

The memory of evil done is (at no time, nor to anyone who ever sinned) a pleasant companion. Surely no one but a saint could have conceived of the necessity of any further hell.—From "Peter and the Vices," by Anna A. Rodgers.

From "The Battle With the Slums," by Jacob I. Riis:

Oh, for irregularity enough to throttle precedent finally and for good!

It does seem as if the chance of getting something for nothing is, on the whole, the greatest temptation one can hold out to frail human nature, whether in the slum, in Wall street, or out where the daisies grow.

As to battling with the world, that is good for a young man, much better than to hang on to somebody for support. A little starvation once in a while, even, is not out of the way. We eat too much any way, and when you have fought your way through a tight place you are the better for it. I am afraid that is not always the case when you have been shoved through.

PACIFIC COAST AGENTS

Spoehn-Patrick Company

San Francisco Seattle Denver
Salt Lake City Los Angeles

Visit the

Hoffman Cafe

Wm. J. Sullivan, Proprietor

Lunch, Grill and Wine Rooms

Half a block below Palace and Grand Hotels, S. F.

Fine Goods a Specialty. Merchants' hot lunch from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. An extra spread served on all holidays. Merchants' lunch served in Ladies Cafe and Grill, from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. Oysters, English Chops, Steaks and Delicacies a specialty.

Handsomest Cafe in America

Open all night. Private Dining Rooms for Ladies and Escorts

601 Market St. (S. W. Cor. 2nd and Market Sts.)

POODLE DOG RESTAURANT, CORNER Eddy and Mason Streets, San Francisco—Private dining and banquet rooms. Telephone 429. A. B. BLANCO & BRUN, Proprietors

WARRANTED 10 YEARS

SOHMER
PIANO
AGENCY

BYRON MAUZY

PIANOS
308-312 Post St
San Francisco

The CECILIAN—The Perfect Piano Player

PALACE HOTEL

San Francisco, California.

TOURISTS and TRAVELERS will, now, with difficulty recognize the famous Court into which for twenty-five years carriages have been driven. This space of over a quarter of an acre has recently, by the addition of very handsome furniture, rugs, chandeliers and tropical plants, been converted into a lounging room, the

FINEST
IN THE
WORLD

THE EMPIRE PARLOR—the Palm Room, furnished in Cerise, with Billiard and Pool tables for the ladies—the Louis XV Parlor—the Ladies' Writing Room, and numerous other modern improvements, together with unexcelled Cuisine and the most convenient location in the City—all add much to the ever-increasing popularity of this most famous Hotel.

Techau Tavern

The most unique resort in San Francisco. There is not a more artistically appointed cafe in the country. . . . It is a place wherein the guest may feast the eye while dining sumptuously and being regaled with exquisite music. . . . The Tavern is now under new and experienced management, and patrons are assured of the constant attendance of the chief of the establishment, and of prompt service at all times. Special attention is paid to luncheon, dinner and after-theatre parties. . . .

Those who read much

are more likely to be subject to eye troubles than others. There are, however, numerous modern occupations which bring on eye troubles that injure the brain and the physical system irreparably. Avoid danger by

Using GEORGE MAYERLE'S GLASSES

His Glasses insure health and a clear vision. Consultation Free. Open until 9 o'clock every evening. Geo. Mayerle's GERMAN EYEWATER makes weak eyes strong, sore eyes well, rests tired eyes. Price 50c. 62c by mail. Mail order or Wells-Fargo. Geo. Mayerle's Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers insure clean lenses without scratching.

GEORGE MAYERLE, German Expert Optician

1071 MARKET STREET

Two Doors from Seventh

Showing effect of George Mayerle's
Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers

CAFE ZINKAND

After the Theatre call at this Palace of Delights and revel in the luxuries of a spread fit for the gods, or drink of some of the best wine that ever chased the skeleton from the feast or painted landscapes within the brain of man.—Hogrove.

TOWN TALK

VOL. XII. NO. 621

SAN FRANCISCO, JULY 23, 1904.

PRICE 10 CENTS.

William Woff & Company

THANK THE PUBLIC FOR THEIR GENEROUS APPRECIATION AND PATRONAGE OF

MOËT & CHANDON CHAMPAGNE,

And take pleasure in announcing that after July 1st 1904

Every Club, Wine Merchant, Hotel & Restaurant will have the

New Vintage, 1898 WHITE SEAL ON SALE.

EVERY CORK
BRANDED.

Never IN THE HISTORY OF CHAMPAGNE HAS SUCH A SUPERB QUALITY OF WINE BEEN OFFERED.

A Great Revelation AWAITS
EVERY LOVER OF A SPARKLING
WINE IN THIS LATEST VINTAGE,

Moët & Chandon
WHITE SEAL

MUCH DRYER THAN MOST SO CALLED BRUT CHAMPAGNES.

...THE...

German Savings & Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus - - - - - $ 2,448,948.13
 Capital actually paid up in Cash - - - - - 1,000,000.00
 Deposits June 30, 1904 - - - - - 36,573,015.18

Board of Directors

JOHN LLOYD, President.
 DANIEL MEYER, 1st Vice-President
 H. HORSTMANN, 2nd Vice-President
 Ign. Steinhart      Emil Rohte      H. B. Russ      N. Ohlandt
 I. N. Walter      J. W. Van Bergen
 A. H. R. Schmidt,      Cashier
 Wm. Herrmann,      Asst. Cashier
 Geo. Tourny,      Secretary
 A. H. Muller,      Asst. Secretary
 W. S. Goodfellow      General Attorney

San Francisco Savings Union

532 California Street, Corner Webb

Deposits July 1, 1904 - - - - - $33,908,594.00
 Paid Up Capital - - - - - 1,000,000.00
 Reserve and Contingent Funds - - - - - 935,033.00

E. B. POND, President      W. C. B. de FREMERY } Vice-Presidents
    ROBERT WATT }
 LOVELL WHITE, Cashier      R. M. WELCH, Asst. Cashier

DIRECTORS:

Henry F. Allen, William A. Magee, W. C. B. de Fremery, C. O. G. Miller,
 Robert Watt, George C. Boardman, Fred H. Beaver, Jacob Barth,
 E. B. Pond.

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits: Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

CONTINENTAL BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATION

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital - - - - - $13,000,000.00
 Paid in Capital - - - - - 2,500,000.00
 Monthly Income - - - - - 150,000.00
 Homes built since organization - - - - - 1,250

Home Office 301 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

It might be well to remember
 when making a will

THAT THE

CALIFORNIA SAFE DEPOSIT
 AND TRUST COMPANY

Is in a position to settle estates with the assurance that the administration will not change hands and that the estate will be prudently managed with absolute safety.

WILLS SAFELY KEPT WITHOUT CHARGE

OFFICES:

Cor. CALIFORNIA and MONTGOMERY STS.
 San Francisco

Mechanics' Savings Bank

Incorporated January 21, 1904

Capital Stock paid-up $250,000.00

OFFICERS:

President, James O'B. Gunn      Vice-President, Geo. D. Gray
 Vice-President, Geo. F. Lyon      Cashier, Frederick H. Clark

DIRECTORS:

F. W. Dohrmann, Jr.,      Geo. D. Gray,      F. M. Greenwood,      Jas. O'B. Gunn
 Marshall Hale,      G. W. Kline,      Geo. F. Lyon,      Geo. M. Mitchell,
 Chas. C. Moore,      Henry T. Scott,      W. F. Williamson

The Mechanics' Savings Bank has opened its doors for a general Savings and Loan business at the S. W. corner Montgomery and Bush Sts., San Francisco, Cal.
 May 2, 1904.      Open Every Saturday Evening from 6 to 8.

The Owl Drug Co.

is the largest concern of its kind in this country—it buys
 its goods in such large quantity it can sell them for less
 money than most any other
 druggist pays for them.
 Telephone orders filled at
 once and delivered free.
 South 356.

1128 MARKET ST., S. F.
 BROADWAY & 10TH ST., OAKLAND

La Grande*BRANCHES

5 A Taylor Street
 200 Mtgy. Ave. cor. Kearny
 202 Third cor. Howard
 1738 Market opp. Eleventh

Laundry

23 POWELL ST.
 Phone Bush 12

Sew Buttons

Ordinary
 Mending

Work called for and delivered

FREE
 of charge

Rathjen Bros.

39 Stockton St.
 Phone Main 5522

Complete Line of Imported and Domestic

GROCERIES, TEAS, COFFEES
 WINES AND LIQUORS

Special Sale Days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday

Look for Items in all the Daily Papers

J. PORCHER*HATTER

Latest
 Summer
 Styles

JOHN A. STETSON CO.

1109 Market St.
 Odd Fellows Building, S. F.

TOWN TALK

SAN FRANCISCO, JULY 23, 1904.

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

THEODORE F. BONNET - - - Editor
CHARLES S. SMITH - - - Manager

609 MISSION ST. FOURTH FLOOR Telephone BUSH 713

SUBSCRIPTION.—One Year, in advance, $3.00; six months, $1.75; three months, $1.00; one month, 40 cents; single copies, 10 cents. Foreign subscriptions (countries in postal union), $4.00 per year. Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application. For Sale by all Newsdealers.

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.
RALPH A. GROVER, Manager of Advertising
New York Representative, FREDERIC M. KRUGLER, Room 918,
150 Nassau Street.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N. Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 200 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

No attention is paid to anonymous communications, but the wishes of contributors as to the use of their names will be scrupulously regarded. We cannot undertake to preserve or return manuscripts.

TOWN TALK is mailed to subscribers every Thursday and should be received in this city and vicinity every Friday. Please notify us of tardy delivery.

Our Sacred Charter

Those distinguished citizens, skilled in the science of municipal government, to whom this community felt deeply grateful about five years ago for supplying the city with a new organic law, are no longer conspicuous in civic affairs. They have become of the shrinking violet order. But their seeming modesty is not inherent. There was a time when they played a very prominent part in public affairs. They assumed the task of reforming the municipal government, and to that end graciously undertook to hasten the millennium by contributing their united talents in the framing of a charter guaranteed to cure all the ills with which this mismanaged metropolis of the Pacific was afflicted. It was their laudable purpose to give the community the incalculable benefit of their combined superlative wisdom. The people were assured that the result of the labor of this mountain of intellect would be the most perfect system of laws that was ever given to a municipality. And the people accepted the result on faith. There were some skeptics but they were scorned into silence. They were charged with being booblers and corruptionists. Indeed the test of a man's political honesty in those piping times of municipal reform was his attitude toward the new charter. The man that dared question the wisdom of the Phelans and the Lanes was put under such a cloud of suspicion that he found himself ostracized. For a long time after the adoption of the charter no man who was known to have been against it would be permitted to become a candidate for public office. The worst opprobrium that could be heaped upon a man was implied in the phrase, "enemy of the charter." Well, that sacrosanct instrument has been in operation nearly five years, and we look in vain for some evidence of its purifying influence.

Concerning Graft

The chief virtue attributed to the charter by its framers was its tendency to centralize power and responsibility. That now appears to be its worst vice. We are told that this city is now the prey of grafters; that graft pervades the whole system of government, and with the sanction and connivance of official authority extends even to private enterprise. It has become plain to students of municipal affairs that the charter affords facilities for graft that were never before known in this city. Under the charter it is possible for a corrupt Mayor to accumulate perquisites to the extent of a quarter of a million dollars a year. All that he need do is to form a combination with a shrewd lawyer for the exploiting of the field of graft. All the commissioners being subject to his control there is no limit to the opportunities for sand-bagging the public. The Police Department alone presents a field that is a veritable gold mine. Rich veins are to be found in the Health Department and in the Public Works Department, and if a combination were formed between the Mayor and the Supervisors the taxpayers would be completely at the mercy of their servants. Considering that the charter furnishes excellent facilities for the institution by the Mayor of a powerful political machine, it is quite reasonable to expect somebody to take advantage of them in the promotion of graft. So all things considered, and mindful of the great progress that has been made in an experimental way by a few political grafters, there seems to us to be occasion for serious alarm. Isn't it about time to think of plugging up the blow-holes?

A Red-Headed Candidate

Though Judge Alton B. Parker has no reputation for strenuousness, he is far from being a weakling. He is in every sense a match for Theodore Roosevelt. With his six feet of stature, deep chest, strong neck and easy, dignified carriage, he pretty nearly ranks up to the popular ideal of what a Presidential candidate ought to be. He is fifty-three years of age, weighs one hundred and ninety-six pounds, and does not know what sickness feels like. That he stands pretty well in New York where he is best known is to be inferred from the fact that, after serving one year on the Supreme bench, to which he was appointed, he was elected to the office without opposition. He was appointed to the Court of Appeals in 1889 and again in 1892, and he was elected in 1897 by a plurality of sixty thousand. He is a jurist whose character is universally respected. Incidentally it should be stated that he is a red-headed man with square jaws, a type distinguished for virility and determination. He is the sort of a man that grows in the estimation of his acquaintances.

Because He's a Sorehead

Mr. William J. Bryan is desirous of keeping himself straight on the record. Sensible of the folly of bolting he has publicly announced his intention of supporting the Democratic ticket, but makes it clear that he is not enthusiastic either over the nominees or the platform. Mr. Bryan's support will be purely perfunctory. He is not interested in the success of the Democratic party. No doubt he believes that his own political philosophy would be vindicated by the defeat of Parker, and that Republican success would hasten the renaissance of Bryanism. It was with an eye to his future prospects that the wily silver champion

Take care of your health! Massage improves circulation and gives strength to muscles and nerves. Lindstrom's Swedish Institute, 406 Sutter Street.

Corey's Cafe, 600 Mission. Mercantile Lunch 11 to 2. Cedar Brook Whiskey, formerly W. H. McBrayer—10 yrs. old.

resolved to keep within the party fold. It is not likely, however, that he will be asked to support the ticket with pen and tongue in view of the abuse that he has been hurling at Judge Parker for several months. Though he is apparently willing to stultify himself the party leaders should not regard him as a desirable advocate. The farther he is kept in the background the better it will be for the ticket. But we need not expect Mr. Bryan to maintain a discreet silence. He would die of ennui if he were compelled to give his tongue the rest cure. He is still convinced of the infallibility of the principles enunciated in the Kansas platform and in the perfectness of his judgment in all things, and he cannot resist the impulse to tell the people that the salvation of this nation and of mankind has been committed to his keeping.

Plea For a Yellow Pulpit

A plea for sensationalism in the pulpit has been made by the Rev. Dr. William Mangum Lawrence, a Baptist clergyman and lecturer in the theological school of the University of Chicago. In a lecture before professors and students he argued that a certain degree of sensationalism and exaggeration in the pulpit is necessary to success. He said that we all love sensationalism and must have it, and as everybody else is shouting the preacher must shout to be heard. To be successful the minister must acquire the trick of "featuring" a salient or dominating thought. In other words Dr. Lawrence has a high regard for the "scare-head," and he believes that deliberate distortion for a good purpose is effective. No doubt there are many preachers whose views coincide with those of the Baptist clergyman, but they are not so frank as he. We have frequently heard sermons that reeked with exaggeration, but we never considered them effective. They were addressed to reason but appealed to incredulity. An obvious falsehood told in the pulpit is no more convincing than if it were told on the curbstone. The preacher whose sermons have to be discounted is never a success. Deliberate distortion destroys the sense of logical proportion, and fills the people to whom it is addressed with disgust. Pulpit exaggeration is pleasing to none but the scoffer, and it is never stimulating to the faith of the intelligent.

A Millionaire Juror

Despite the war in the Far East and the opening of the national campaign by both the great parties, the big dailies of New York manage to find space for the doings of the spectacular rich. "Jimmy" Van Alen, one of the most conspicuous and wearisome of American aristocrats, recently condescended to serve on a jury in Newport, whereat the snob press marveled. Though there has not yet been any class legislation in this country exempting plutocrats from jury duty, the judges of New York never seek to coerce them into fulfilling one of the most important obligations of citizenship. Jury duty is regarded as menial servitude among the proud and haughty pirates of finance. Hence when "Jimmy" Van Alen responded to judicial process, and took his seat with eleven representatives of the proletariat in the jury box, the newspapers gave due prominence to the sensational news. On the opening day of the trial society flocked to the courtroom to witness the spectacle of a scion of the house of Astor sitting on a jury just like a common, ordinary citizen. Harry Lehr, the famous founder of the institution known as the monkey dinner, became so envious of Van Alen on account of the newspapericity accorded the juror, that he tried to divert attention from the courtroom to himself. So he put on a red necktie with his evening clothes in a desperate attempt to hold the centre of the stage.

Historical Fiction

There is a chance for somebody to earn undying fame, much gratitude and not a little money. This triple recompense awaits the person who shall write a true history of America and American institutions for the public schools of the country. There is demand for such a work, one that shall give an authoritative account of the Civil war and that shall lie neither for the greater glory of the South nor of the North. There is too much fiction and there are too many deliberate lies in the school histories now in use. It would be well if somebody would write a school history that did not serve to perpetuate that stupid yarn about George and his little hatchet. It would also be well if a history were written that did not strive to kindle the spirit of jingoism in the youthful breast. The glorious deeds of the men who fought and bled for the country in the Revolution, and in the war of 1812, are sufficiently inspiring, and it would be more satisfactory if those heroes were not credited with achievements in which they had no hand. There is so much that should be eliminated from school histories, that it should be worth the while of educational authorities to get together in national congress and undertake the work of emendation. Let us have a school history fair to all sections of the country, that tells the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

The New Sabbath

A "Health Sunday" is the latest religious fad hit upon for filling empty pews. Pulpits are to be given over to discourses on ventilation, sanitation, nutrition and kindred topics. Perhaps on "Health Sunday" the usual mottoes and Scriptural verses will give way to advertisements of breakfast foods, rational underwear, scientific footgear, natural form waists, new-fashioned suspenders, and other crank notions. There are no people in the world so unhealthy as those who are forever worrying about their health and if "Health Sunday" ever takes hold there will be joy in the medical fraternity. There was more truth than fiction in the old-time saying of our grandmothers

The Hub
CHAS. KEILUS & CO.
EXCLUSIVE
HIGH GRADE CLOTHIERS

Suggestions of money saving are not the incentives we offer to purchase clothes here. It's the creations we show that emanate from premier designers, whose talents with shears, needle and brain are of the highest class. Correct dressers say, "Immediate Service Clothes" for theirs.

132
KEARNY STREET
Churlov Block

Engraved
Wedding Announcements
and Invitations

ROBERTSON 126 Post Street
San Francisco

about "having no time to be sick." Ill-health is very much like grief in this particular, that it does not make an abiding place where it is not welcomed, and the less people discuss their symptoms and ailments the fewer they will have to discuss. Health talk presupposes ill health, and when preachers and deacons devote themselves to discourses on the subject of how to stave off dyspepsia and gout and rheumatism and colds and headaches and a hundred and one other afflictions, they are pretty sure to put a large percentage of their hearers in mind of what they may as well have. Diseases are like fashions; no one knows definitely where or how the minor ills, which are chiefly imaginary, have their origin, but let one woman indulge in nervous prostration or for that matter anything with a long name, and it is sure to become epidemic. If there is to be a "Health Sunday," why not also a "Beauty Sunday," with practical demonstrations of the mysteries of massage and manicuring and wrinkle exterminating, and since health and beauty are both dependent on exercise, a third Sabbath could be devoted to the practical exposition of golf, tennis, football and gymnasium work. Once or twice a year a Sunday could be given over to old-fashioned religion, just by way of variety and contrast.

Boys Wanted

There are four royal courts of Europe in which the gift of the stork is anxiously awaited during the present summer, and as none of the royal ladies has yet presented a male heir, boys are ardently prayed for. As Queen Wilhelmina of Holland has no child and her loyal subjects do not look forward with complacency to the possibilities of absorption into some minor German principality, a little girl will not fail to receive a royal welcome. The Crown Princess of Luxemburg, whose husband is the acting regent, already has six girls, the eldest of whom, who is now about eight years of age, will inherit the throne in default of a male heir. The queen of Italy has two little daughters, and the Empress of Russia three, but they are barred from the succession. The Queen of Italy is personally a favorite with her subjects, but the Czarina is unfortunate in being heartily disliked. She is even blamed by the superstitious peasantry for the unsatisfactory sex of her offspring, and should there be a fourth daughter born to her it is not unlikely that there will be a demand for some public declaration with regard to the heir apparent. It has been reported from time to time that the Czar has contemplated abdication and even retirement to a monastery. The Russian throne is an uneasy seat at best, and there have been so many precedents for murder, both by Nihilists and by court intrigues, that whatever happens there will be no surprise. Within the last few weeks the Grand Duchess of Vladimir has changed her religion, and though the event excited little comment in the world at large, it was really a matter of great importance. Most, if not all of the palace intrigues, and they have been numerous enough, have centred about the Grand Duke Vladimir and his immediate family, and they did not advance much beyond the preliminary stage because of the question of the religion of the Grand Duchess, who was a German princess and who has steadfastly refused, during the thirty years of her marriage, to forsake her Lutheran creed and accept that of the Greek Catholic church. As the Czar of Russia is the high dignitary of the church, it is obvious that he must not have an heretical wife or mother, so the long-delayed and lately consummated conversion may be looked upon as a preliminary to other events.

Advice About Swimming

It was inevitable that the Slocum disaster, through which upwards of a thousand lives, mostly those of children, were sacrificed, should be made the text of sermons and the subject of lessons. The wrath of God croakers and Job's comforters have had their turn, and the inevitable investigation into causes has proved the lack of precaution which might have served as a preventive. All this we expect. It is the aftermath of every accident and catastrophe. Behold, now cometh the fool. According to a wise man of the Hearst syndicate, in order to prevent another such occurrence, people should learn to swim—children, city children especially, should be taught swimming in school. There are not fads and fiddlesticks enough in the schools now, and of course, it is such a simple matter to provide the facilities. When children are crowded out upon the streets, or taught in draughty hallways and basements where the only illumination is a gas jet, it is the easiest thing in the world to provide swimming tanks and instructors. Parents who have all they can do to provide the necessary street garments for their offspring can find the means to supply bathing costumes too, and the class teachers have such an abundance of leisure and idle time now, what with institutes and lectures and class meetings and summer schools, that they will be overjoyed to add theoretical lectures on swimming. But let that pass. Swimming is an invigorating exercise and an amusement, but it is no more of a necessity for the preservation of life than dexterity with a revolver or expert horsemanship. Any one who goes abroad at all in these strenuous times takes life in hand, and to go aboard a crowded excursion boat is in no wise more dangerous than to cross a city street. The ability to swim is by no means a safeguard from drowning. Accidents do not happen according to the rules laid down in books, and it is only in a small minority of cases that even an expert swimmer will be able to display his skill. There is a vast difference between the conditions which surround a calm stream or a bathing tank and a turbulent sea. When accidents happen those involved in

EMIL W. HAGBOM

C. H. REHNSTROM

REHNSTROM & HAGBOM

FORMERLY SANDERS &amp; JOHNSON

..TAILORS..*PHELAN BUILDING, Rooms 1, 2, 3 Telephone Main 5387
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.For Breakfast*For
Breakfast*For
Breakfast

them, let them be never so expert in the water, are weighted down with clothing instead of being attired in correct bathing costume, and there is always confusion arising from the unexpectedness of the whole affair. The expert swimmer is just as likely as any one else to lose his head in an emergency, or to be clutched by panic-stricken neighbors, or to be struck by flying debris or sucked into a vortex. The chances are very much against even getting an opportunity to swim. Supposing him to have reached the water safely and unencumbered, he has a better chance of being saved than the individual who cannot keep afloat, but more people are drowned in consequence of swimming ability than from lack of it. Swimmers invite dangers and special accidents, and when ships are wrecked or overtaken by disaster the fatalities usually include as many swimmers as non-swimmers.

In Restraint of Fiction

Some wiseacre over in England has suggested that in order to stem the flood of fiction a preliminary tax of a hundred dollars be exacted for each novel. The theory is that if an author has not faith to that amount in the product of his pen—we will not say anything about brain in this connection—he will not persist in publication. Practically a large number of books pay a heavier birth-tax than that now, for no one but the authors and the publishers know how many are brought out at the expense of the writers, and that never return enough to wipe out the account for the mechanical work of their production. If the publishers were to add another hundred dollars to their present estimates, the only reason why it would not be forthcoming would be the impossibility of raising the additional sum. When a new and untried writer is fortunate enough to find a publisher willing to undertake his book on other terms than "owner's risk," he is frequently, if not always, given the choice of a small sum, say a hundred or a hundred and fifty dollars for his copyright, or the usual ten per cent. in royalties with other conditions. Nine times out of ten he flouts the idea of selling his rights, makes a hasty calculation of what his royalties on a quarter of a million copies a year for ten years will amount to, and seizes a pen to affix his signature to a contract before the party of the other part discovers how much he has found out. In the sweet by and by it begins to dawn upon him that publishers know a thing or two about the business, and after patiently waiting for a few checks in five figures to reach him, he makes the inquiries he should have made before, and discovers that necessary expenses in the way of expressage, advertising, and other etceteras keep the two sides of the account balanced pretty evenly, but with an unfortunate tendency to lightness on his side of the scale. Nothing but experience will teach and sometimes it takes more than one lesson. A fine for publishing works of fiction would have just the opposite effect to the one intended. It would convince the amateurs and incapables that novel writing must be a lucrative trade else it could not stand the impost, and therefore all the more reason for them to persevere. They would adopt the argument which is urged against high license for liquor selling, that it is an effort to crowd the poor man out and keep the money-making in the hands of the rich. It ought to be a sufficient argument against authorship as a means of livelihood that not one in a hundred even amongst the most successful ever earns a competence by pen work. Most writers who have appreciable means have inherited a competence or have carried on some other occupation or held salaried positions which furnished them a means of subsistence, and literary work has been the amusement and avocation of their spare hours. There is a current belief, based on the misleading calculations of the ever-ready statistician, who loves to figure out the price per word that Tennyson or Kipling has received for some poem, that there is a fixed standard for compensation in the literary market and that words—just words—can be sold for so much. Ten cents a hundred words, or twenty-five dollars a magazine page from anyone and on any subject is not an unusual estimate, and until the myth is explained away by frequent and futile efforts to prove its truth, amateurs will continue to write books, and chiefly fiction, which they can get on the market only by paying for its publication and which they cannot sell except at waste-paper prices.

Hysterical Republicans

It is evident that Judge Parker gave serious offense to the Republican press when he sent that manly and courageous telegram to St. Louis which put fire into the Democratic canvass and stimulated the hopes of Democrats throughout the country. Just as Judge Parker was writing that telegram the Republican editors were engaged in grinding out a series of ponderous leaders denunciatory of the Democratic standard-bearer who had consented to stand on a platform that was without a gold plank. The failure of the Democracy to join issue on the money question, which the Chicago convention had injected into the campaign for the purpose of diverting attention from matters of more vital interest, had suggested the Republican shibboleth, and it was consequently a great shock to the aforesaid editors when the Sphinx of Esopus was unexpectedly supplied with a voice. But having recovered from the shock the indignant editors are now lambasting Judge Parker for not having spoken sooner. In their hysterical frenzy they are accusing Judge Parker of having secured his nomination by crooked and indefensible methods, and they are calling on the American people to witness that he adroitly and purposely concealed his position. What tommyrot! To argue the soundness of the accusations against Judge Parker it must be contended that the preponderant sentiment at St. Louis was in favor of free silver, and that none but a silverite could have secured the nomination. Doesn't everybody know that such was not the case? In sending that manly telegram from Esopus Judge Parker merely brought out the sentiment of the convention on a subject which had been ignored. He took the wind out of Republican sails, and the crew of the Republican ship are consequently wrathful. Parker's bold declaration put new life into the campaign, and aroused the admiration of the country.

CHAS. LYONS

LONDON TAILOR

721 MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO
Branch
122 KEARNY ST.

SUITS from $17.50 up

LARGEST
TAILORING
ESTABLISHMENT
on the Pacific Coast

Go to the Factory to Buy Phone Folsom 2812
TRUNKS VALISES AND
SUIT CASES
You Get Your Money's Worth
J. MARTY CO.
Repairing 22 TURK STREET Manufacturers
Sample Trunks and Bags to order

When Statesmen are Tempted

BY THEODORE BONNET.

M. Combes, leader of the anti-clerical party in France, gravely blundered when he confessed that an attempt had been made to bribe him by a representative of the monks of Chartreuse. It was stated in the press despatches that, at the close of an investigation of the matter in the Chamber of Deputies, one of the members belonging to the opposition attempted to place a mock crown of laurel on the brow of the Minister. Meanwhile, no doubt, there has been considerable lampooning of the distinguished statesmen in the Parisian papers. The French journalist has a fine sense of humor, and he is not likely to let pass such a splendid opportunity to guy the Minister who disdainfully declined a bribe and then told about his virtuous action. The journalists of Paris are cynics. They have no faith in their high officials. They are always recalling the Panama canal frauds, and the scandals that arose during the regime of President Grevy over the sale of decorations. Premier Combes has not the most creditable of records, but he has many enemies in France. His downfall may not be far off.

It is hazardous even for a great man to take himself with ponderous seriousness. While the dear people admire rectitude of character in public servants they prefer to be convinced by performance. They are skeptical of aggressive honesty that courts the limelight while attesting its own invulnerability. The wise statesman jealous of his own honor avoids discussion of it. Statesmen have been frequently known to survive errors of judgment, the effects of imprudence, the criticism and abuse of enemies, but seldom the shafts of justifiable ridicule. And ridicule is most effective when aimed at ultra-respectability. When a man of high station poses on a pedestal as the incarnation of all the virtues, he is in grave danger of being toppled over. It is a pose that excites the levity of the scoffer. The world is full of cynics and cynicism feeds on lofty pretension. The sacrosanct pose is an affectation that excites incredulity, for people are prone to believe that virtue is modest; that it never beats a drum or shouts through a megaphone. Wise men of high station are loth to publicly denounce those who have sought to corrupt them. Though they may feel that the attempt to seduce a public official is a grave crime that should be punished, they have not always the inclination to let it be known that their probity was questioned. The hyper-conscientious official who exposes the assault on his probity is expected to prosecute the criminal, and failure to convict might be unjustly construed. Bacon probably had some such humiliating contingency in mind when he wrote: "A man is an ill husband of his honor that entereth into any action, the failure wherein may disgrace him more than the carrying through can honor him."

I am reminded of a notable attempt at bribery made in Illinois in 1895 by an agent of the traction company that tried to put through the legislation known as the "eternal monopoly bills." The briber was a Chicago lawyer of high standing, and the man whom he attempted to bribe was John P. Altgeld who was then Governor of the State. Never a word did Altgeld divulge of that story, and it was not made public until after his death. At the time of the incident Altgeld was on the verge of bankruptcy. Indeed it was on the day before he surrendered all his vast holdings to his creditors that he was told by an intimate friend that a million dollars had been deposited in a safe deposit box, and that the money was there for him to take. The friend had been cunningly forced into the position of making this statement which he knew to be absolutely true for he had counted the money, and the key to the box was in his possession. Altgeld's reply was: "Young man, I'd advise you to take better care of that damned scoundrel's money than you ever did of any money in your life." That night he wrote a veto message on the traction bill that fairly scorched the rails of the line. Then he began a fight that ripped up the whole State and made history. The company had votes enough to pass the bill over the veto, but he gave a few of the legislators a close range view of the penitentiary, and when action on the veto was taken he won by three votes. The next day he surrendered to his creditors property that it had taken him fifty years to accumulate. John P. Altgeld could have admitted, without cheapening his own character, that he had been subjected to a downright temptation, but he never did.

It remains to be seen whether Premier Combes was wise when he supplied a theme for the lampoon artists of the Parisian press. His downfall, it is needless to state, would be highly pleasing to the Vatican, for he is the head and front of the movement against the Catholic church in France. He has made thousands of the members of religious orders outcasts and exiles, and it was at his instigation that conditions were brought about that seriously threaten the abolition of the Concordat. Some time ago the French Ambassador to the Vatican was recalled, and last week the Pope recalled certain Bishops from France. The final clash seems imminent and should it come there will be serious trouble for the French Ministry. The force of sentimental association would be with the church in many parts of France, for there are whole regions where Protestantism is unknown. In many a village the whole social life centres about the parish church. It is only in great cities that the radical element is found, and there Combes and his followers have fostered the most bitter opposition to the church. The movement had its origin in a strong sentiment against certain influential Catholics who had been fomenting political discord, and who were strong in their allegiance to the monarchical faction. Combes took advantage of the feeling to precipitate a crusade against the institutions of the church throughout France. The Vatican did not resent the action of the Government, but kept its hands off until President Loubet added insult to injury by visiting Rome for the purpose of calling at the Quirinal, and thereby expressing his contempt for the claims of the Pope to temporal power. This is not the first time that a clash has occurred between the Catholic church and the French Government. Both will survive the present rupture, but it will be interesting to see what happens to Combes.

HAVE YOU HAD LUNCH AT THE RED LION?

New Grill for Ladies and Gentlemen

WILL BE OPEN ONLY FOR LUNCHEON, FROM 10 A. M. TO 3 P. M.
DURING SUMMER MONTHS

Any Evening the Whole or Any Part of the Dining Room may be Reserved
for Banquets.

"The Red Lion" is in the San Francisco Stock Exchange Bldg. It has two entrances from Pine St., just below Montgomery, and is also readily accessible from Montgomery and Bush Sts. through the Mills Bldg.

In Behalf of Beauty

BY HARRY COWELL.

He who is born with an instinctive preference for the fine, an innate love of the beautiful, has, as it were, a liberal education to begin life with. Lacking this, the heir to unnumbered millions, despite all the painstaking of high-priced professors, is like enough to remain to the end of his days a sorry boor, envied, it may be, of the foolish multitude, but unbeloved even of his intimates. (The wise envy but the wiser; the wisest envy not at all. Misery in a carriage the world follows with invidious eyes, and overlooks happiness a-foot. The unlovely no one loves.) If Heredity, that dread angel entrusted with distributing the momentous marks of divine favor and disfavor, fail to bestow upon us the gift of taste, the ill is well-nigh irremediable. Few indeed are they to whom it is in the power of even the highest education to impart what Walter Pater declares to be its chief function, "the art, namely, of so relieving the ideal or poetic traits, the elements of distinction, in our everyday life—of so exclusively living in them—that the unadorned remainder of it, the mere drift or debris of our days, comes to be as though it were not."

The greater part of the days of the greater part of mankind are without the least adornment; were but the remainder devoted in any wise to Beauty, it were well. But although we die of the monotonies, although the sin of our matter-of-factness is fast finding us out, not for a moment do we dream of demanding of the manufacturers of things for household use that they work after the manner of old Verrocchio, "making them all fair to look upon, filling the common days of life with the reflection of some far-off brightness." In our own city, for instance, the grass plots, little bits of living green that were wont to light up the dreary grayness of the streets, rejoicing the heart of the passer-by, are now disappearing before the building boom, giving way to the intolerable but profitable flat. No longer does the stranger from the East stand in glad amaze before the incredible wealth of Californian flowers. Everywhere, every day, is the sensitive eye being insulted, and insulted afresh.

To preach the gospel of Beauty to the Mammon-serving many, with the least expectancy of effecting a reform, is, of course, to confess oneself hopelessly under the sway of the hope-bias. To those, however, who like myself have been denied the gift of swearing, to have one's say is no little relief to the offended feelings.

But I fear I am forgetting that the optimistic pronouncements of the hope-bias make pleasanter reading than the pessimistic expletives of pique, and are, besides, no more apt to go wide of the truth.

Are the dollar-drunk men of our times as indifferent to Beauty as they seem to be? Even as many persons jest to keep themselves from tears, are flippant to hide deep feelings; just as the tender-hearted blush to be caught in a kindness, and pretend to a brutality of all things most foreign to their nature; or as artists—high priests of their professions, martyrs to their dreams—talk glibly of the money-side of their trade, laying undue stress upon it lest you should fall into the error of classifying them with those who follow art for art's sake: so may the multitude deny Beauty in public and serve her in secret, the neglect of the most immortal of the immortals may, after all, be but a seeming; her votaries may be many, masquerading in strange disguises, a curious shame preventing them from declaring their faith openly among their fellows. Often and often in the most unlikely places—among Hebrew rag-pickers and Irish ditchers; among Yankee street fakirs, and the indeterminate gamins of the street—have I come across a love of beauty like a vein of fine gold in the rudest rock.

On the other hand, much of the apparent love of beauty among the self-styled "better classes" is but love of the distinction that is the world-old due of the genuine devotee. (Herein lies the explanation of the quaint conduct of these who sham Philistinism for fear of being taken for sham children of light.) Some of these our questionable betters, originally auriferous, so besmear themselves with gold paint that at length it becomes impossible for the casual observer to discover the presence of the precious metal. I shall never forget my feelings—how my conscience pricked me, and how my eyes—as I watched a millionaire—Brummagem to the backbone, as it seemed to me—show as it were unmistakable color while looking at a masterpiece that had hung upon his wall for years. He saw it, mark you, probably for the thousandth time, and did not see it unmoved—he, the gilded bourgeois. Let no one imagine either that I mistook pride of possession for appreciation. He had preferred to look at it alone; of that, even at this late day, I am fully persuaded. In unaccountable contrast with the foregoing, I remember sitting at the table of an artist and forgetting to eat as I noted that the face of his wife—a bride of but six weeks—as fair to look upon as the hand of the Master could make it, pleased him not at all. He still loved her—and loves her now after years of married life—but her beauty no longer moved him; he had already ceased to be actively aware of it. As for me, I never loved her, nor ever saw her unmindful of her loveliness, unmoved.

At times I think that the body social is painfully conscious of the Uglinesses, as of a shameful disease which it would not confess to for worlds but would fain cure by secret remedies; that to speak in behalf of Beauty that speaks so eloquently for herself, that is, as even the high priest of pessimism himself puts it, "an open letter of recommendation," is a waste of words, a work of supererogation, an impertinence, a pose. More often I fancy myself a lone Pagan—once cup-bearer to Beauty—absurdly apostolic, preaching a dear dead religion to deaf ears in a barbaric land given over to the worship of monstrous gods; and I lament me, repeating with the poet:

"Ah yet would God this flesh of mine might be
Where air might wash and long leaves cover me;
Where tides of grass break into foam of flowers,
Or where the wind's feet shine along the sea."

Hotel Richelieu

1012 VAN NESS AVENUE

Having renewed our lease, and entirely renovated this Hotel, we will continue making it the finest and leading Family Hotel of this Coast.

AND

HOTEL GRANADA

1000 SUTTER ST.

HOTEL RICHELIEU CO.

GILBERT and STOLL.
Movers of Household Furniture and Storage Warehouse, have removed their offices from the Murphy Bldg. to Room 44, Donohoe Bldg., Market and Taylor Sts. Storage Warehouse, Mercantile Library Bldg., Golden Gate and Van Ness ave.

The Saunterer

Bard and Boodle

If more caution isn't exercised in the expenditure of money in behalf of Senator Bard somebody will go to jail. Senator Bard has conscientious scruples against the expenditure of money for the influencing of votes, and when he finds that his philanthropic friends are trying to persuade people of his eminent qualities of statesmanship by the use of the sound money argument, he will become very indignant. Bard is uncompromising in his morality, and I shouldn't be surprised to see him vindicate his purity by sacrificing his own misguided friends. And by the way, those friends are placing him in a false light. Their prodigality has given rise to the suspicion that the Senator himself has opened a barrel. His enemies sneer at the suggestion that the large bank rolls sent to Arizona to buy off the opposition which was being exerted against him through merchants in Los Angeles were put up by kind friends. Bard cannot afford to have his purity questioned. He is depending for re-election on religious sentiment, and he has already received ecclesiastical endorsement from clergymen who abominate boodle. Yet Colonel Mazuma has been carrying the Bard banner through the South, giving verisimilitude to the slanders of a malevolent political faction.

His Change of Tactics

The puritanical Senator appears to be getting desperate. Some time ago he took pains to make it clearly understood that he considered it undignified for a United States Senator to seek re-election. He was wedded to the notion that the Senatorial office should seek the man, and while he was willing to have a searchlight thrown on himself to facilitate the quest, he would not under any circumstances put forth a hand to seize the toga. Heroic indeed was the pose of the virtuous statesman of Hueneme a few weeks ago. But his attitude has changed. He has noticed that the office has not been making any strides in his direction. So lately he has been on the move. The dignified statesman with the fine ideals recently adopted a course that was never before pursued by a United States Senator in the history of California. He has been gladhanding through the State from metropolis to village, from village to water-tank. No station on the circle round which he has been swinging was deemed so unimportant as to be unworthy of a visit from the idol of the Congregational ministry.

Where Money Is Being Spent

Never before in a Senatorial fight in this State were the candidates so eager to impress people with the idea that they were resolved to spend no money, and yet from early indications it appears that the coin is to be ladled out in most generous doses. Down in Ventura county, which is to be the battle-ground next Tuesday between the Bard and Oxnard forces, money is plentiful on both sides. I have been assured on competent authority that the Bard and Oxnard factions have each put fifteen thousand dollars into the fight in their home county. As there are only three thousand voters in the county it is evident that votes are going to bring an exceptionally high price. The fight will be watched with a great deal of interest for it will result in the elimination of one of the candidates. If Oxnard should lose he would retire from the contest, and then the organization would in all probability pick out some man to beat Bard, for the latter is to be opposed to the very wind-up. If Oxnard should win the organization would then get behind him in earnest, and both Knight and Flint would probably retire. Knight and Flint are organization men, and they will not stay in the fight unless they receive the assurance of the machine's backing. They know too much about the political game to be lured into an active fight for the toga without the support of the organization. The legitimate expenses of a Senatorial canvass, such as are incurred for salaries of agents, printing and railroad expenses, exceed twenty-five thousand dollars. When a man makes the fight without the support of the organization he throws away at least that much money.

"Tim Robertson tells me he has discovered that his voice is a first bass."

"Why doesn't he join a baseball team, then?"

The Difference

How to avoid the appearance of conventionality is one of the hardest problems that confronts our provincial aristocracy. It is second only in importance to that high achievement—the simulation of well-bred indifference to what the world thinks. To prove one's right to be numbered of the caste of Vere de Vere one must be untrammelled by old-fashioned customs and moth-eaten prejudices founded on mediaeval sentiment. The distinction between the representative of the up-to-date aristocracy of wealth branded with the hall-mark of the elect, and the mere pretentious climber, is that the latter, uncertain as to his footing, is something of a hypocrite, and pauses to consider effect. He does not enjoy that freedom of restraint that gives an air of abandon to the new-rich who are already high and dry on the upper-crust.

The Most Celebrated
Brand in the World

FROM

Duff Gordon & Co.

PORT ST MARY'S, SPAIN

CHARLES MEINECKE & CO.,
AGENTS P. C. SAN FRANCISCO

IMPERIAL
STUDIO

744 Market St.
San Francisco - Cal.

THE IMPERIAL STUDIO'S PARCHMENT PROOFS

Are the swellest thing the Photographer's art has yet produced. There are plenty of imitations. The real thing is a little more expensive, but it's worth the difference.

Because He Cut It Short

When the announcement of the engagement of Celia Tobin and multi-millionaire Charles Clark was announced, the Californian girl was acclaimed from Burlingame to Pacific Heights for having made one of the greatest matches ever achieved by a native daughter. But a little later some of the old-fashioned ones remarked that it was somewhat unconventional for a girl to announce her engagement to a man whose wife had not been dead more than six months. Of course it is. But that circumstance does not supply an argument against the action of Charley Clark in cutting short the period of mourning. Miss Tobin's announcement would not be unconventional if widowed multi-millionaires were more numerous. No mere convention is sufficient to prompt a girl to unhook the best catch of the season. Brilliant matches are not to be made every day, and this is a brilliant match according to the modern notion, for the size of the purse is the test in such matters, and Charley Clark is heir to one of the largest fortunes in the world.

She Consols Him

Mrs. Clark died in New York last February, and the young widower came to this city in April, staying only a short time before leaving for Arizona to attend to his father's mining interests. He has been in Arizona ever since. So the probability is that the courtship began in April. No doubt the engagement was the outgrowth of a sentiment founded on mutual devotion to the first Mrs. Clark. A very strong bond of friendship existed between Mrs. Clark and Celia Tobin, and perhaps the widowed millionaire turned to his wife's friend for consolation in his bereavement. Miss Tobin is a woman of culture and high ideals, and Mr. Clark should find in her a companion of rare worth though their temperaments are in strong contrast. Clark is a very gay young man, of strong Bohemian proclivities, and no doubt he has felt himself occasionally in need of a restraining influence.

Collapse of the Spreckelses

An abiding faith in the accuracy of the dailies might lead one to the conclusion that the numerous Spreckels clan was destined to early extinction. First came the news that Adolph Spreckels was dying at Carlsbad. And just as his friends were engaged in reciting his many fine qualities in mournful strain, the report came over the wire that Rudolph was in a bad way and was about to be operated upon, which alarming message was followed by the cablegram about the serious physical condition of Claus Spreckels. At the same time everybody was aware of the fact that John D. Spreckels had been very ill for weeks, and was trying to regain his health at a summer resort. It is a singular coincidence—the physical decline of so many members of one family within such a short period. Claus Spreckels has been a very sick man for months, and he showed wonderful vitality when he recovered sufficiently to take the trip to Europe. So ill has John D. Spreckels been that he has not been able to give any attention to his business affairs since May. Jack Spreckels is now looking after his father's interests.

Social Progress of Mrs. Gus Spreckels

The Gus Spreckelses are to return to San Francisco early in the fall, but they will not remain long for Mrs.

Gentleman of refinement and travel—35 years of age—fine presence, wishes to see the world. Would act as companion or secretary to party traveling in Europe or the Orient. Highest references furnished. Address Box 9, this office.

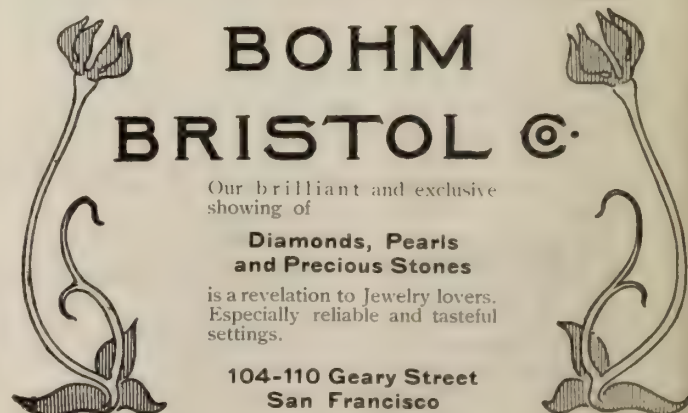

Gus Spreckels desires to be on hand when the winter's social campaign opens in New York. Her social success in the metropolis has been considerable. Last season she was identified with the Haggin set, which is far from being the most swagger of the Gotham cliques, but it does considerable spectacular splurging. During the coming season, it is thought, she will go a little higher. During her residence in Paris she has acquired such a working knowledge of French that she thinks in that tongue and interlards her conversation with French words and idioms to such an extent that her friends resent what they call her pedantic manner.

A Solecism Averted

Mrs. H. E. Huntington and her daughters Elizabeth and Marian will return about the first of September. It was their intention to spend the winter in Cairo, but all three became homesick and decided to cut their tour short. The social dissipation abroad are not more attractive to the Huntingtons than are the home product. None of the family cares much for the social whirl, and as for pater-familias—to him it is a bore. When he arrived from Los Angeles last winter to be on hand at his daughter Marian's coming out reception on a Sunday afternoon, the women of the family discovered to their horror that he had no frock coat. He was persuaded to telephone to one of the leading clothiers who was eating lunch. Huntington explained the situation, and succeeded in getting a coat in time to attend the reception in the proper glad rags.

The Picturesque Marye

The news of the marriage in Europe of George T. Marye to the widow of his brother William was a great surprise to his friends in this city. He was long ago regarded as a hopeless bachelor, and not even the members of Chris Reis's family, with whom he lived for years as one of the household, had the slightest intimation of his contemplated matrimonial venture. When Marye came to this city in the middle sixties he aroused great interest because he was always well groomed. San Francisco was just emerging from the red-shirt period, and kid gloves were regarded as a most extravagant affectation. Marye's gloves were always on or in view. He was fresh from Oxford and brought with him many little English ways of manner and speech. He was a clerk for a time in the law office of William T. Wallace, and he never missed a Sunday at old Trinity church. He had a pew well in front, and all the congregation rubbered when Marye, faultlessly attired and bearing a pot hat, walked majestically down the centre aisle. He invariably made his entrance just as the services were about to begin, and the amazing spectacle he presented was regarded as a rare treat.

BOHM
BRISTOL & CO.

Our brilliant and exclusive showing of

Diamonds, Pearls
and Precious Stones

is a revelation to Jewelry lovers.
Especially reliable and tasteful settings.

104-110 Geary Street
San Francisco

In the Uncivilized West

Ward McAllister is a past master of the gibe courteous. After reading my comments on his summer resort correspondence he said: "Town Talk is right. One should never say 'Mrs. Captain' or 'Mrs. Judge' in civilization. But this is not civilization, and my authority is my late uncle, Hall McAllister, who always did it. He said, 'It is a Western custom, and the lady will feel offended if you do not give her the title of her husband. Always do it. If the husband is a Senator, governor or judge always give the lady in California the title. She invariably calls herself so, and expects it from others.' I have found it sound advice. But on the other hand my late revered friend, Judge Hoffman, always said, 'It is bad enough to have to give the men the title without further degrading it.'"

"At All Souls' last Sunday the rector read a sermon that was written by a famous clergyman who died some years ago."

"Yes, I was there."

"What did you think of it?"

"I thought it was a pity he didn't die before he wrote the sermon."

Honor to Whom, etc.

The dailies, in mentioning the presence of Ed Cucuel in San Francisco, all spoke of "Bohemian Paris of Today" as the work of W. C. Morrow, and gave Cucuel only a minor share in the book. The fact is, as Mr. Morrow is always ready to explain, that he had very little to do in the making of that admirable presentation of modern art life in the French metropolis. He edited the letters sent by young Cucuel to his father, and arranged them in proper form to go with Cucuel's sketches.

Was Wiltsee Rejected?

The return of Ernest Wiltsee to San Francisco about the time of Edith Findley's marriage with George Gardner is regarded in some quarters as something more than a mere coincidence. And yet the ebullient spirited Wiltsee, the gay South African capitalist, who is always bobbing up as one of the characters in somebody's romance, is generally just returning to town or just leaving either on pleasure or business. The gossips have tried more than once to involve Wiltsee in a romance of his own, but whenever they thought that the affair was in full blast something occurred that proved that their speculations were not well-founded. Some years ago he seemed quite devoted to the Sausalito girl. He crossed the bay so often that he began to look like a commuter. The most conservative prophets were almost prepared to fix the date. Even now it is said that Mr. Wiltsee hoped to win Miss Findley but that his suit was frowned upon. Miss Findley's engagement to George Gardner, a fine fellow not bountifully endowed with this world's goods, caused a flutter in society. The match was the culmination of a pretty romance, that began a year before Wiltsee appeared on the scene, and Miss Findley gave her heart to the man she loved.

DEAFNESS

Those troubled with deafness are cordially invited to demonstrations of the MASSACON and ACOUSTICON at the offices of the

HUTCHISON ACOUSTIC COMPANY

W. B. EGAN, Pacific Coast Agent Phone Priv. Ex. 216
417-418 Starr-King Bldg., 121 Geary St., San Francisco

Ellinwood-Greer Match

The announcement of the engagement of Charlotte Ellinwood and Robert Greer was made just as it was becoming the theme of general gossip. Mr. Greer's devotion to the physicians's daughter has been marked for some time, but the young bachelor seemed a most elusive chap to eligible maidens. Miss Ellinwood, too, has disappointed the matrimonial prophets more than once. She has been on the engaged list several times. Society was convinced that she would marry Captain Boyd, who spent a great deal of time at her side, but when he left for the Philippines a few months ago the tabbies decided that he had been given his conge. The fair Charlotte was a great favorite in army circles. "Willie" Wilcox of the infantry seemed to be smitten with her at one time. Then there were "Merrie" England, "Jack" Haynes and other gallant sons of Mars who cast anxious glances in her direction. Among the civilian beaux the most conspicuous of her admirers for a while was George Whipple, who now divides his time between Leontine Blakeman and Edith Simpson. Some years ago it was rumored that Miss Ellinwood had secretly wedded an army officer who died in the Philippines, leaving her a fortune, but that was purely an imaginative romance such as every pretty girl figures in occasionally.

A Fortune in Ammonia

It is interesting to know that Bob Greer's large fortune was largely of his own making. He is an ammonia magnate. The Greers are St. Louis people. It was there that Greer pere planned a coup by which he expected to amass a fortune, but he died before the fruition of his schemes, and his son had nothing but his brains with which to begin his career. He discovered a method by which ammonia could be used for freezing purposes and he perfected it in Australia with splendid results. He is now operating several factories.

Charlotte Ellinwood is noted for her beautiful hands and arms, models for a sculptor. She is a clever girl and designs all her own gowns and hats. She is an expert needlewoman and is always ready to lend her needle-and-thread talent to the cause of charity.

The Ball and the Feud

According to the despatches in the dailies interest in Newport has been centred on the coming Vanderbilt ball

Old J.H. Cutter Whisky

FROM OLD
KENTUCKY

DISTILLED AND BOTTLED BY
C.P. MOORMAN & CO.
LOUISVILLE, KY

SHERWOOD
AND
SHERWOOD
DISTRIBUTORS
212-214 MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO.
HARRY G. HOWELL
SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE

THE BEST AFLOAT OR ASHORE

at which a new dividing line is to be drawn. Ward McAllister's dictum is to be ignored, and the smart set for that occasion will number only two hundred. This circumstance, according to the dailies, has put society on the tip-toe of expectancy, but a correspondent writes me that the importance of the coming function is due to an entirely different reason; the ball will show how the wind blows in the Vanderbilt feud. Ostensibly it is to serve the combined purpose of the housewarming of Sandy Point Farms and the debut of Mrs. Reginald Claypole Vanderbilt as a matron. Cornelius Vanderbilt and his wife, fresh from their triumphs in Kiel and London, will be in Newport when "the quality" dances in "Sandy Point Farms," and the question every one is asking is, "Will the Cornelius Vanderbilts be there?" Mrs. Vanderbilt Sr. is in Europe, and it is said she is fanning the feud. The Alfred Vanderbilts are not especially cordial, and though Cornelius sent Mrs. Reginald a handsome wedding gift it is doubtful that the two families will mingle. However, it is said that Reggie was too young to take part in the quarrel that followed Cornelius's marriage against the wishes of his parents. The ball will take place on the twenty-ninth and promises to be a record-breaker. It is to be an imposing entertainment and as costly as though it took place in a Fifth avenue mansion instead of a rambling frame house overhanging the sea. Though it is to be for young persons the host and hostess expect to have as guests Mrs. Astor, Mrs. James P. Kernochan, Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry and other of the older women of society. Between the older and younger classes comes the set in which Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, Mrs. Fish, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont and Mrs. Richard Gambrell are leaders, and those ladies are among the Two Hundred, I am told. The cotillion will be led by Elisha Dyer Jr. and the inevitable Harry Lehr. Mrs. Glen Collins, who rushed home from Honolulu to have her face patched up, is arranging a minuet to be danced by sixteen persons in fancy costumes of Colonial days. Of course, much is expected in the way of cotillion favors.

The Legion of Dishonor

The law prohibiting American officials from accepting decorations and other distinctions from foreign countries appears to be a dead letter so far as honorary gifts from France are concerned. A few weeks ago General Porter was elevated to the high rank of "Grand officer de la legion d'honneur," and now Secretary of State Hay is to be similarly honored. Meanwhile he might put in his time making some reflections calculated to breed humility. He might, for example, reflect that, among the high officers of the Legion of Honor are all the noted crooks who have brought disgrace on France during the past fifty years. All the military bounders of the Dreyfus affair, all the conspicuous thieves that figured in the Panama scandals, wear the insignia of the legion of dishonor.

The Blanding-Maddox Engagement

Two weeks ago I told of the gossip anent the breaking of the Blanding-Maddox engagement, but somehow my paragraph escaped the attention of the dailies for a whole

The Hotel Richelieu is to continue under the present management, the lease having been renewed for ten years. There was no foundation to the report of an impending change of management. The hotel has been entirely renovated. The Hotel Granada is under the same excellent management.

Straw Hats and Vests at cost. Tom Dillon & Co., opp. Palace Hotel.

week. I hear that Mr. Gordon Blanding did not approve of the match, not because he objected to Mr. Maddox, but on account of his being reluctant to part from his daughter at this time. However the current of true love might have flowed on had not Miss Blanding suffered an attack of "nerves." During her break-down Miss Blanding was at a sanitarium, and though her fiance was most anxious concerning her condition he was not permitted to see her. However, the entire Blanding-Tewis clan had access to the sick room, a circumstance indicating that callers had no depressing effect on the patient. During her convalescence she went riding one day with her uncle, Dr. Harry Tewis, in his automobile. Near the Cliff House the machine broke down and they were compelled to return in a car. Knox Maddox happened to take the same car, and on that occasion he obtained the first glimpse of his fiancée in six weeks.

Mrs. Blanding Coleman and her son are visiting their relatives in town. They have lived in Arizona for a long time on account of Willie Coleman's health, but occasionally they come up to get a look at civilization.

Miss Dolbeer's Will

No one who knew Miss Dolbeer well is at all surprised at her last testament. Few of her friends even knew that the Moodys were her cousins until after her death. Miss Dolbeer was a very solitary girl, even more unhappy, dissatisfied and fractious than the expression of her photographs denotes, and she cared but little for collateral kindred. She believed that to them who have not should be given and on this basis gave to those cousins who had nothing, while to the Moodys, who are tolerably well supplied with this world's goods, she gave nothing. Her mother's other relatives—that is, the brothers—were men who had long been cut off from any communication with the family. Miss Warren had devoted her life to Miss Dolbeer and the girl was fonder of her than of any one else, though she delighted to give her trouble. The will shows, though, that she was really appreciative of devotion. It has come to a pretty pass in California when a wealthy person cannot distribute a fortune as he or she desires, but must give it to next of kin whether he or she wishes or not, as witness the Isabella Clark case. The mere fact that one wishes to give money to those who are not con-

ALASKA REFRIGERATORS

FOR GROCERS
BUTCHERS
FLORISTS AND
HOUSEHOLD -

TILE, OPAL OR
ZINC LINED -
PACIFIC COAST AGENTS

W. W. MONTAGUE & CO.
309-317 MARKET ST.

tions, instead of to those who are, is taken as evidence of unsound mind though it is generally evidence of the soundest sort of judgment. Though the will was holographic it was, of course, drawn by a lawyer as its provisions well show, and Miss Dolbeer copied it. As usual, the richest charities are remembered in Miss Dolbeer's will, while those that are the most needy, with the possible exception of the Florence Crittenden Home and the Woman's Hospital, are not remembered. All of which shows the advantage of the judicious newspaper advertising in which the fashionable charities indulge, many of them having regularly paid press-agents.

The Norris Will

The will of Mrs. Norris occasioned great surprise. It was thought that Norris Davis, who was cut off with a paltry three thousand, would inherit a large slice of his grandmother's estate. But Mrs. Norris did several queer things. She practically disinherited her son Fritz King, and preferred her daughter-in-law to her daughter for an executrix. However, she was very fond of the Fritz King boys, who were devoted to the stern old lady, and quite demonstrative in their affection. Mrs. Norris was an eccentric woman with strange whims. She probably thought that her grandson, Norris Davis, was sufficiently well off in being the son of his father.

Wood in Yosemite

Dan Cupid never found a spot more propitious for the promotion of his pet game than the Yosemite valley. There the young woman's as well as the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love. When Andrew Bogart, the popular vocalist, took a trip to Yosemite some weeks ago he had no premonition of the romance that was to have its inception under the shade of the sheltering giants. But when he returned to San Francisco it was as the fiance of Lorena Hiller, of Boston, who was making a flying trip through California. Mr. Bogart's love-making was fast and furious, but never a false note did he strike in the singing of his passionate tale. Miss Hiller is a cultured Boston girl. She has returned to her home and though the wedding is to take place in October it has not yet been decided whether the ceremony shall be performed in San Francisco or the Hub.

The Plot That Failed

The four young San Francisco girls who are traveling abroad sans chaperone are having some very unusual experiences. They have a large following of foreigners in their trail. I heard of one Frenchman who followed the party through Italy. He was epris of one of the fair Californians and try as she would she could not escape his attentions. When he called one day during their stay in Venice she hit upon a scheme to discourage him. He was received by one of her friends who told him that she was in great distress over the news which she had just received of the death in America of her fiance. She was represented as being inconsolable. The plot failed. The story of the girl's sorrow over the death of her sweetheart seemed to raise her in the estimation of the emotional Frenchman. He was all sympathy and thereafter he was more devoted than ever, calling every day with large offerings of flowers.

The Newest Rumor

The gossips have it that the marriage date of Katherine Dillon and Lieutenant Emery Winship has at last been decided upon, and that the celebration will be a big event with elaborate details. Miss Dillon cares nothing for show herself, for though an heiress of millions she is unassuming in her tastes, but she is so popular that nothing but a large wedding would satisfy her friends. Of course, all this is merest rumor, but the engagement is considered an assured fact, and was so announced last season. Once upon a time a rumor connected Miss Dillon's name with that of Paymaster Skipwith, but there was nothing in it, and probably merely a confusion of names of the two navy men. Fred Greenwood, however, wooed her long and diligently, but his suit was in vain.

A Popular Southern Girl

Miss Minnie Nash, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. "Gus" Costigan, has become very popular during her stay here. Miss Nash is a charming Southern girl, her family being one of the wealthiest and most aristocratic in Fredericktown, Maryland. She is an enthusiastic automobilist, and has a fine machine which she runs herself. Miss Nash was greatly admired by some of our most eligible bachelors during her visit here last year. She is a close friend of Leontine Blakeman and Gertrude Dutton.

He Is Not a Noble

Count Grimani's friend Faccini, whom, I see, the dailies have titled, is not a nobleman nor does he make any claim to such distinction. He is a very charming gentleman, modest to a degree, but promises to become as great a favorite here as the Italian vice-consul is. Mr. Faccini is an architect and has taken a position in Willis Polk's office.

Madame Serra, wife of the Italian Consul, has returned from her visit to her husband's parents. The Seras are occupying an apartment at the Empire.

RUINART

The fascinating quality of Ruinart has made it the choice of the elite of the world's society.

Hilbert Mercantile Company

PACIFIC COAST AGENTS

V. W. GASKILL, Special Agent

San Francisco, Cal.

You will experience a sense of comfort, ease and relief from headache if Spence fits your eyes.

SPENCE, Optician, 76 GEARY ST.

Hotaling's Simple Question

The story is being told in the Bohemian Club that the incorrigible Dick Hotaling took the breath away from Richard Mansfield one evening during the actor's recent visit. "Is it true," said Mr. Hotaling, "that the other day when you were going down Market street, some one at your elbow remarked, 'Christ,' and you answered indignantly, 'Sir, I am Richard Mansfield?'" There was a long silence which Mr. Mansfield encouraged, and until Bill Hopkins coughed the interim was oppressive.

Great Expectations

Mrs. Salisbury is much improved in health, and her friends predict that she will be in fine fettle for the winter campaign. Every one expects the coming season to be more brilliant than the last, because there are so many prospective debutantes, nearly all of whom represent wealthy families. Last year only a few of the buds were well supplied with the mazuma, which is as essential to success in society as it is in politics. The ceremonies attending the launching of last year's buds were quite tame. This year competition will be keen and the entertainments sumptuous, so all those who devote themselves to the fashionable whirl are gladly expectant. Many are expressing the hope that Mrs. Salisbury will open headquarters this winter and revive her Sunday teas. The Salisbury teas were always modest affairs, which the socially elect always attended and invariably "knocked" on account of the meagre refreshments. The teas were unique in that no vulgar feed was offered.

Her Superb Trousseau

Charlotte Russell's trousseau, I hear, will surpass that of any of the other brides of the last decade. Her friends say that she has a wedding gown so magnificent that it would be suitable for a New York heiress engaged to a Duke. It is probable that the wedding trip of Clement Tobin and his bride will extend through Europe. The marriage, it is now said, will take place in September.

Langtry Reported Broke

While Captain Hugo de Bathe has been enjoying the hospitality of the incense burners of local sweldom, his distinguished wife, familiarly known as the "Jersey Lily," has been straightening out her financial affairs in London. She has lately disposed of her horses, her most valuable jewels and some of her real estate, and it has been surmised that her extravagances have been leading to bankruptcy. Mrs. de Bathe has always been a very extravagant woman. Shortly after her first marriage she made a splurge in fashionable life that brought the property of her husband under the auctioneer's hammer. Their London establishment was sold, and then Mrs. Langtry deserted her husband and took to the footlights. She is credibly reported to have earned half a million dollars on the stage, but of late her business has not been profitable. Her notoriety is no longer the valuable asset it was in the days when her private life was a worldwide subject of comment.

Her career on the turf began through her association with the dissolute "Squire" Abingdon Baird. For a while she was a great plunger and very lucky. "Squire" Abingdon boasted in a London club one night that under his advice the Lily had cleared eight hundred thousand dollars from her stables in a single season. It was about that time that he blackened her eye with a blow, and then to save her wounded feelings presented her with a steam yacht. In sporting circles the yacht was known as the Black Eye. It was renamed the Erin and is now the property of Sir Thomas Lipton. For a while the Lily deserted the stage and devoted all her time to her horses. She won the great Jubilee Stakes against the Prince of Wales and ten years ago she was credited with having one million five hundred thousand dollars exclusive of her jewels. In time luck went against her and she returned to the stage. She is now past her fiftieth year, and her claims to beauty are fast fading.

A Jack London Yarn

One sundown a few years back—I know not the exact location—along the Chillicoet Pass, two men, their heads bowed on their hands, sat facing each the other, eye gravely questioning eye and answering. Between them not a word, but the understanding perfect. (Afterwards, one looked into his heart and wrote "An Odyssey of the North," "The Children of the Frost," "The Call of the Wild," thus giving vent to his feelings; the other, no doubt some mute inglorious Kipling, did not.) They had "mushed" and "mushed" until they could "mush" no more; fain would they have filled their bellies with the husks of the parable, but no man gave unto them; the flesh was foresent, the spirit not vexed but numb; they were past swearing; neither could they weep, nor do ought but gaze piteously into each other's eyes; they half-hoped and looked for the last white sleep in the great white silence. Suddenly, however, the inglorious one lifted up his voice and wept in this wise: "I've been thinking, partner, and I'll tell you what I'll do, if ever I get back into God's country again. I'll find me a strapping white woman who'll love me for the sorrows I have borne and make me the father of a brood of nine. Then some winter's evening, after a good supper, I'll gather all the kids together

REMEMBER
Tan Shoes are Being Slaughtered
 I am determined not to carry over one pair. The Best
 Shoes made in this country at Ridiculous Prices
GODFREY FISHER, 945 Market Street

What was it
 then, that won him friends twas
Rainier
 the
BEST OF ALL

JOHN RAPP & SON,
 Agts., S. F.
 Distributors in every town on the coast

round a roaring fire and talk Klondike to them, and if they don't bawl a coyote chorus to hear what their dad has gone through, by the great suffering, I'll lick every last one of them within an inch of their lives."

The Lake Sisters

Mary Lake, who passed away this week at the home of her sister in the East, was the eldest of the late Judge Delos Lake's daughters. She did space work on the Call for a time after the loss of the family fortune, but is best known in San Francisco by her school for girls. She bought out Madame Ziska's old school in Post street and made the institution a very successful rival to Miss West's school for girls. She finally opened the Lake school in the building now occupied by the Cosmos Club in Sutter street, which was erected for her by Senator Fair. After giving up her own school she became a teacher at Miss Hamlin's seminary in Jackson street. Annie and Helen Lake (Mrs. Hunter) were Mary's step-sisters. Annie went in quite early for literature, and Helen, who was also of literary bent, wrote some good things. It was Annie who wrote "On the Verge," the first of the risque school of novels to appear in this part of the world. It was said that Gertrude Atherton was inspired to write her first erotic novel by the desire to go Annie Lake one better. "The Randolphs of Redwoods," which appeared in the Argonaut before being published in book form as "A Daughter of the Vine," was by many thought to be Miss Lake's until Mrs. Atherton acknowledged its authorship. Annie Lake married "Ned" Townsend, who of late years has accumulated fame and fortune by his "Chimmie Fadden" stories. The Lake girls were all very strenuous bread-winners, though their girlhood was passed in luxury, and they had no idea they would ever have to work for a living. Judge Lake was one of California's most noted lawyers in early days. The family lived for years in the big house at the corner of Vallejo and Leavenworth streets which later became the property of Mr. Montgomery, whose widow married Arthur F. Rodgers, the attorney. The only son in the Lake family, Fred, took up his father's profession, and has a large practice. He married Helen Otis, daughter of one of San Francisco's early Mayors.

Bank Somers's Death

There has seldom been a sadder funeral in San Francisco than that of Bank Somers last Sunday. Old college friends and fraternity chums came from all the nearby cities to attend it, for Bank Somers was universally popular. Had he not been so popular he would probably have lived longer. He had ample warning of the trouble with his kidneys and had he gone on a proper diet and denied himself the sociability and late hours of which he was so fond, he might have lived for years. But, of course, he would have always had to take care of himself and the truth is he did not think it worth while. He said he'd live as long as he could in his own way but he did not care to feel himself all patched up. So he continued to go to dinners, to haunt the clubs until the small hours, to lend his voice to every convivial and charitable occasion and to enjoy life in his own way. From his high school days Bank Somers had always enjoyed a most unusual measure of popularity with men and women alike. In college he held all the desirable offices, was a member of one of the best fraternities and was the leader of the Glee Club. But he never dissipated, being of too delicate a physique to indulge in the sweets he liked to see others enjoy. Two years ago he spent most of the winter at Coronado, his lungs having been threatened by a heavy cold which he found it difficult to rid himself of. When this difficulty had passed, the other constitutional ailment developed and Bank gave it up in disgust, feeling that if he doctored himself up again, the weakness would simply break out in another spot.

His Club Friends Wept

In the Bohemian and Family clubs, Bank Somers will be sadly missed. He was a member of the quartet and chorus of the former and of the orchestra of the latter. Mrs. Somers wished the Bohemian Club quartet to sing at the funeral, but they were absolutely unable to do so. The funeral was remarkable for the number of weeping men, for the passing of genial, lovable Bank Somers stirred up uncontrollable emotion. It was Bank Somers who used to tell with laughter of the paraphrase of the Shakespearean lines made on him by one of the Bohemian Club wits:

"I know a Bank where the wild time shows."

Poor Bank Somers! His times were not very wild after all, but a fragile constitution could not stand the strain of good fellowship. One may be sure that he would have preferred the thirty-five delightful years he knew to seventy of the ordinary humdrum kind. Who wouldn't?

DECORATIONS For Weddings, Dinners, Luncheons, Receptions and Stores. Flower gifts attractively arranged. Bridal bouquets artistically specialized.

Original Designs in Favors, Name Cards, Menus, Almond Dishes and Candle Shades

MISS CHARLOTTE F. WILLIAMS

121 Post Street Tel. John 1911 San Francisco
Out of Town Correspondence Solicited

The Bachelors' Club

It was often wondered why "Bank" Somers did not marry. He belonged to a club of bachelors that about five years ago took a solemn oath not to wed, on payment of a heavy penalty. "We Fellows of the Club," as they called themselves, were U. C. graduates, and they formed themselves into an anti-matrimonial league which I understand only a few seceded from. The members were Joseph Garber, E. J. Pringle Jr., Edward Haas, H. S. Allen, Edward Shanklin, Robert T. McHessick, Carlton W. Greene, George L. Blood, Charles Turner, Brooks Palmer and Bank Somers. The Somers family were old-timers of the Mission; only a short time ago they bought Mrs. R. T. Carroll's old home in Van Ness avenue. Mae, the only daughter, married Ferd C. Peterson, son of an old Rincon Hill family, and Dr. George, her brother, married May Hooper. Their cousin Ida, who lived with them much of the time, married Aleyne Fisher of Washington, D. C.

Ex-Californians Wedded in New York

A wedding of much interest to Californians and upon which the Bavardes have touched but lightly is that of Miss Katherine Ransome and Ira Boss which occurred in New York last week. Both young people come from old California families, but have made their homes in the East in the past few years. Two or three years ago there were few more popular bachelors in San Francisco society than young Ira Boss. Good-looking, high-spirited and the lucky possessor of a fortune, he was a welcome guest in the homes of local swelldom. I recall several occasions on which he led Mrs. Salisbury's Fortnightlies, and he was also a shining light at Greenway's and La Jeunesse. Ira Boss is a graduate of the State University and during his college life took a prominent place in his fraternity, the exclusive Chi Phi. He and his lovely fair-haired sister, Miss Helen Boss, inherited the big Boss fortune, estimated at a million or more, on the death of Boss pere. Mr. Boss is now engaged in business in New York. Pretty "Kitty" Ransome was only a little girl when her family moved East, but all the friends of the Ransomes will recall the attractive child who has, I hear, grown into a very handsome woman. The Ransomes are English people, but lived in California many years. Mr. Ransome invented patent cement sidewalks and made lots of money. The family is a large one but only one son, Bernard, who married pretty Martie Hutchinson of Oakland, now resides in this State. Another son, Wilfred, was the famous "Wolf" Ransome, Berkeley's most noted full back. He also is married, his wife being one of the Coit sisters, Claude Terry Hamilton's nieces. Mr. and Mrs. Boss are going to make their home in New York, I hear.

Her Unpopular Fiancee

It was reported in the despatches the other day that William Waldorf Astor, the expatriated American, had announced the engagement of his daughter, Pauline, to Henry Spender-Clay, formerly of the Second Life Guards. Spender-Clay's unpopularity in England is almost as conspicuous as that of Miss Astor's father. He brought about the social ruin of young Lord William Nevill, a court favorite, and King Edward has never forgiven his needless persecution of that young man. Nevill, who was the fourth son of the Marquis of Abergavenny, was sentenced to five years' penal servitude for fraud on complaint of Spender-Clay. A little later Miss Astor's future husband became involved in the "ragging" scandals at Windsor, and at the request of King Edward he was forced to resign from the Life Guards. He is one of the richest young men in London. His father owned a large interest in the Bass Brewing Company. It has always been supposed that Pauline Astor was after a title.

Mrs. Crocker's Condition

The sensational story in the dailies about the condition of Mrs. George Crocker is said by her relatives in this city to be an exaggeration. They received a despatch from Mr. Crocker, on his arrival in New York, that she was much benefited by the trip and that they were going to Newport, where all the preparations for their home-coming had been made by Mrs. Oelrichs, who had kindly volunteered to attend to all the details of hiring servants, etc. Mrs. Crocker is suffering from a cancer that cannot be operated upon. It is said that her husband offered half of his fortune to any scientist in Europe who could cure her.

A Prize for Fortune Hunters

Miss Campbell, the sister of Princess David of Honolulu, is expected to arrive from the Islands early next week. She is a great heiress but not such a beauty as her sister. She is not yet twenty years of age but has already had scores of suitors. As she will remain in California all summer our jeunesse doree will no doubt show her considerable attention.

The De Trobriands

News comes to me from France relative to the family of the Marquis de Trobriand, once the French consul at this port. His daughter was engaged to the Comte de Grammont, the younger son of Duke de Grammont, de-

BALMORAL CASTLE

JOHN BEGGS

LOCHNAGAR

Scotch Whisky

As supplied to all the Royal Palaces for over fifty years

THE HIGHEST
Optical reputation. Most reasonable prices.
Inventors of Shark Skin Grips and Comfort Eye Glasses. Money saved you on Oculists' Prescriptions.
The Haskell & Jones Co., 243 Grant Ave.

scendant of the great Duke who appears in history. However it was discovered that the young Comte had no dot, so the marriage contract was not signed. About the same time occurred the death of the younger Mademoiselle de Trobriand. The De Trobriands figure in American history, one of the family having been a general in the Northern army.

On The Whitney Ranch

The stork is hovering over the household of the young Parker-Whitneys. They are established at the big Whitney ranch in Placer county, but make occasional visits to the city. Pretty Daisy seems very happy in her country life, and she and her husband are great pals. They race around the country in the big auto which belongs to Whitney pere. Apropos of said auto, I hear that when the Parker-Whitney seniors are away the machine is carefully put under lock and key.

"Do you photograph interiors?" asked Mrs. Fashion, of the camera artist.

"No, madame," he replied, "you'll have to visit an X-ray laboratory for that."

Two New Society Partis

The Eastland boys have lately been "discovered" by society in the character of eligible partis. There are two of them, and they are sons of the late J. G. Eastland, the millionaire. One of the Eastland boys was at one time said to be quite devoted to Claudia Rodgers, the ingenue of the Republic theatre. It is only of late that the Eastland brothers have gone about much in society. One of them is with Jack Baird and "Addie" Mizner, who are soon expected to arrive in New York from Guatemala.

"Poor Tom is heart-broken."

"Did she jilt him?"

"No, she insists on going through with the engagement, and he was only joshing."

Mrs. Martin Crimmins is expected to arrive soon from Washington to visit her mother, Mrs. Cole. The latter, with her daughters, Bessie and Florence, is living in an apartment in Van Ness avenue, having rented her home. Margaret Cole (Mrs. Crimmins) is said to be a great favorite with her husband's people, and they have given her many beautiful jewels. Florence Cole is at present visiting Gertrude Joliffe at the Spreckels ranch. After Mrs. Crimmins's visit here she will go to New York and thence to Europe.

The Robinsons

Mrs. "Jimmy" Robinson is in town for a few weeks, but will return to Santa Barbara for Mr. Robinson is still very ill. He has been an invalid for five years and lately his ailment has taken a more serious turn. Porter Robinson has left Harvard and gone into business for himself. Elena Robinson is expected home from Paris shortly. Her engagement with the South African mining engineer is not regarded with satisfaction by her family, I understand, and nothing is as yet definitely settled about the marriage.

FAT FOLKS

I reduced my weight 70 pounds, bust 6 inches, waist 6 inches and hips 14 inches in a short time by a guaranteed harmless remedy without exercise or starving. I will tell you all about it. Enclose stamp. Address

MRS. E. S. RICHARDS,
226 E. 9th St., Riverside, Cal.

He Will Teach French

Guiseppe Cadenasso, who has just been appointed teacher of drawing and color in Mills College, is one of the most picturesque figures among Californian artists. He is very Italian in appearance, and wears his curly gray hair rather long. He never studied outside of San Francisco, but his paintings are really fine and sell well. He is an adept at depicting wind and fog and trees, and the still waters of pools. He has a very fine voice and had he not chosen to be a painter could have made his living as a grand opera singer. Cadenasso recently sold two paintings to "Dick" Hotaling, one of them being "The Stork," which attracted so much attention at the last Bohemian Club exhibition. He is now at work on a painting of the Campanile at Mills College. Cadenasso and Jules Mersfelder have visions of a fortune from an idea of theirs, a "block directory," for the convenience of ladies with calling lists and business men.

Donald de V. Graham is, I hear, making lots of money in London. He has a large singing class and recently gave a successful musicale. He quite naturally enjoys being among his own people again, and has no intention of returning here.

"Mrs. Cleopatra Minerva Scribble has dedicated her latest novel to 'The only man I ever loved.'"

"What remarkable business acumen! That will ensure a splendid sale."

"I don't see why."

"Why, every one will think he's the chap, and buy a copy."

Mrs. Chauncey Winslow is spending the summer in San Mateo. Mr. Chauncey Winslow is spending the summer in Portland. Mr. Winslow has business interests in the northern city, and he spends a great deal of his time there.

Off for Paris

During the absence of Madame Myers in Paris making selections for her fall exhibit, her establishment at 399 Sutter street will dispose of its present line of exclusive models in millinery at prices less than the cost of trimming.

PIERCE-RODOLPH STORAGE CO. Inc.

STORAGE, MOVING, PACKING AND SHIPPING

WAREHOUSE: EDDY ST., near Fillmore

Specially built for the Storage of Household Furniture

OFFICE: POST AND POWELL STS.

Phone Private 571

The Omnipotent Peters

Long latent dissatisfaction is now breaking out in ominous and strenuous kicks from naval officers against the demeanor of Benjamin F. Peters, the chief clerk of the Navy Department. They have not yet given publicity to their grievances but I think they will soon be heard from. Peters has been a fast developing power behind the throne at the Navy Department, and now seems to be the paramount factor in pretty nearly all things pertaining to shore stations. Naval officers say that this man, a civilian, is meddling in their spheres, and that he seems to have almost complete control over the civil personnel of the department. What puzzles them most is the source of Peter's drag. It seems to survive changes of administration and to be quite as effective with one Secretary as another. What Peters says seems to go. He snubs officers, orders clerks around right and left, fixes their pay and is generally a factotum of the Navy Department. Some vigorous protests against his conduct and his arrogation of authority are expected in the near future.

Some Promotions

Some naval promotions of local interest are now taking place, and will be followed by others before the end of the month. Lieutenant Theodore Fenton, who has been for some time the commanding officer of the torpedo flotilla on the Pacific station, and but recently returned from the important voyage of his little fleet to Panama and back, is now a Lieutenant-Commander, and will soon, I hear, be given a place commensurate with his higher rank. The same thing is true of George R. Slocum, at present on the training-ship Pensacola at Yerba Buena island, who will be a Lieutenant-Commander in a few days, to be closely followed by William G. Miller, better known as "Buck" Miller, the son-in-law of Rear-Admiral B. H. McCalla. Last month A. C. Dieffenbach, who has served long on the Pacific coast, lately on the Wheeling, was promoted to the grade of Lieutenant-Commander, being the first of his class to reach that grade. The others named are his classmates.

A Notable Class

This class, that of '85, was one of the most notable that ever went through the Naval Academy, many of its members having made unusual records. At the head of it stood Naval Constructor David W. Taylor, assistant chief of the construction bureau, a man whose record for scholarship at the academy is the highest in the history of the institution, and whose profound treatises on naval architecture are standards the world over. Among others in this famous class were: Joseph Strauss, designer of the noted "superposed turrets" for battleships, which created a stir in foreign navies as well as our own; Dieffenbach and Fenton, who are officers of the highest scientific attainments, especially in ordnance; big Captain J. T. Bootes, the giant commander of the Ohio's marine guard; Volney O. Chase, assistant chief of the bureau of ordnance, and one of the leading gunnery experts of our own or any other navy; John G. Tawresy, who has been the senior supervisor for the government in the construction of all the warships, from torpedo craft to battleships, built at the Union Iron Works for several years past; W. E. McKay, engineer of J. Edward Addicks' Great Bay State gas company of Massachusetts; Arthur H. Dutton, who was executive officer of the Colombian cruiser Bogota when that vessel's efficient work ended the revolution of 1899-1902; H. B. Mulford, who succeeded to the command of the "Fighting First" Nebraska regiment in the Philippines, upon the death of Colonel Stotsenburg, and Edward W. Tilden, for years the Pacific Mail Company's agent in Yokohama and Shanghai.

How Dewey Did It

Not for many years has the United States Navy been rent by such a scandal as that now at its height on the Asiatic station, where a chaplain, Joseph Francis McGrail, is being court-martialed for a heinous offence. I am told that this man of the cloth, who has been three years preaching gospel to the service, is charged with Wildean immorality. Whatever the verdict of the court may be, I cannot understand the action taken in bringing him before a court-martial, and giving world-wide publicity to the nauseating affair. In such cases it is far better to demand instant resignation and let the offender drop quietly out of sight. I recall a case of this nature on the European station some eighteen years ago, where a lieutenant well up on the list of his grade was involved. As soon as his practices were discovered and satisfactorily verified, his commanding officer, who happened to be George Dewey, gave him twelve hours to pack up his goods, cable his resignation and go ashore, at the same time cabling that the resignation be accepted at once, "for the good and honor of the service." The acceptance was received by wire the next day and the disgraced lieutenant disappeared. He was not heard from again by any of his naval associates until the outbreak of the Spanish war, when he appeared for examination in Washington for a commission in the volunteer navy. He was recognized in the examination room by a man who had been his shipmate at the time of

Artistic Interiors Designed and Decorated

Ideas and Estimates furnished for all classes of
Decorative Work

L. TOZER & SON

762-764 Mission St.

San Francisco, Cal.

S. KRAMER

Suits, Jackets and Outer Garments

Made to Order

LADIES' ARTISTIC TAILORING

Phone Black 3831

218 Powell St., San Francisco

his misdoings, and, knowing that he was recognized, the degenerate abruptly left and has never since shown his face to any of his old acquaintances.

Augmenting "California's" Faculty

Dr. Wolf Ostwald is the latest addition to the faculty of the University of California. He is the son of Professor Wilhelm Ostwald, of the University of Leipsic, who lectured a short time ago at the State University. The young man will be research assistant to Professor Jacques Loeb. He is quite young and holds a lieutenantcy in the German army. Last year he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from the University of Leipsic. Professor F. E. Farrington of the University of Columbia is also to join the "California" faculty. He is to supervise the work of teachers who are sent out from Berkeley to act as substitutes in schools in contiguous counties. He is a Harvard man.

Moses Opposed to Instruction

Professor Bernard Moses, of the department of History in the State University, seems to arise to the occasion with a vigor that is refreshing. After deprecating the enfranchisement of the native of Hawaii he turns his attention to the present method of electing United States Senators and declares that it is the best system that could be devised. It was at a lecture delivered before the Summer School that he expressed himself in no uncertain terms against the agitation that is being put forth in favor of electing Senators by a direct vote of the people. He also disagrees with the policy of instructing representatives sent by the people to the houses of Congress or even to conventions, believing it to be a departure from the policy pursued by the founders of the Republic.

Keeler on Keeler

Charles Keeler had the time of his life at San Jose the other day when he delivered a lecture to the students and friends of the San Jose Normal School. His theme was "California Literature" and it gave him opportunity to read selections from his own collection entitled "Songs from Sunny Land." Mr. Keeler is a very modest man but candor compelled him to cite his own poems as fine examples of genuine literature. His poems will be issued in book form shortly and although he was reluctant to herald his unpublished work he was able to prove much from his verse. Mr. Keeler has quite a vogue as a poet and he has already had published "A Wanderer's Songs of the Sea," "Idylls of El Dorado," and "The Season's Sowing." As a naturalist, Mr. Keeler was invited to accompany the Harriman expedition to Alaska in company with John Muir, and his prose work on his travels is far more entertaining than his poetry.

A Berkeley Eligible

Raymond Wilson, who is traveling abroad with his parents, is one of the richest young men in Berkeley and is regarded as one of the catches over there. His father is vice-president of the Berkeley bank and his mother is president of the Town and Gown Club. Mrs. Wilson has been in poor health for a long time, and the trip abroad was taken in the hope that it might prolong her life. The Wilsons will winter on the Nile, and the date of their return home is indefinite.

The Selby Sisters

The Selby girls, Florence and Coralie, are at home again and will stay some time in Oakland. It is Florence's first visit home after three years of absence, and Coralie's after two years. The former has been taking a course at the School of Arts and Crafts in New York and the latter was traveling in Europe with her grandmother, Mrs. Thomas Selby. While abroad she learned how to bind books artistically. Edith Selby, the third sister, is quite ill with typhoid fever.

Good Bread and Butter, Too!

Six-year-old Amy Long resided with her grandmother, Mrs. Isaac Requa, in Oakland, while her parents were in Washington. Some time ago, before her mother came West, little Amy's grandmother read her a letter saying that Mrs. Long was coming home soon, "and papa will come later." Amy inquired why her papa could not come home too, and was informed that papa had to stay and make "bread and butter." In a letter which she wrote herself to her mother, Amy said: "You tell papa to come right home and let grandpa look out for the bread and butter." And General Long, on his retirement, said, "I am now going home to have some of grandpa's bread and butter."

Charles Hawtrey, the English actor who produced "A Message from Mars" in the East, has put in a bid for Louis Robertson's drama "Montezuma." The poet is now engaged on revising the play, which will be ready for initial production by Ben Greet in the fall. It is a drama of noble proportions, and is somewhat on the plan of "Ulysses," the poetical drama that was so successful in London.

FOR SALE

One of the most beautiful homes on Oakland side of the bay. Ten rooms, attic and basement. Brand new plumbing, electric wiring and fixtures. Two bath rooms, four toilets, hot and cold water in all bed rooms, in fact all modern improvements; good barn and other out buildings. Lot 159 x 341 feet (two frontages). Located amongst the homes of the Wellman's, Hush's, Derby's and Clay's. 7 min. to local trains, 45 min. to San Francisco, 15 min. to Broadway, Oakland. Price $21,000.00. Apply to any Real Estate agent.

WE BUY AND SELL TONOPAH STOCKS EXCLUSIVELY

Keep posted by reading our market letters and save money by getting our prices

FRANK L. KREIDER & BRO.

332 Crossley Bldg.

San Francisco

In Financial Circles

The improvement on the Stock and Bond Exchange which I reported last week continued all through the present week. Transactions in bonds aggregate $355,000, and in shares 3,923, divided as follows: 1,177 Lighting, 642 Water, 779 Miscellaneous, 50 Bank and 1,275 Sugars.

The Bond market showed considerable strength attributable to reinvestments. The share market on the contrary, with the exception of Sugars which continue strong, showed considerable weakness, particularly Alaska Packers' Association, which declined about $3.00, and Spring Valley Water which declined about $1.00. S. F. Gas & Electric showed considerable strength, large orders coming in at $60.00. It looks to me as if the buying orders had only been partially filled. Mutual Electric Light scored an advance of about 3-4 of a point and closes quite strong with a continued demand.

Sugars were quite active, Hawaiian Commercial & Sugar and Makaweli Sugar leading. —The Financier.

At the Resorts

Late arrivals at Hotel El Carmelo from town included: H. H. Bell, J. C. Hodges, Miss Barbara Small, Mrs. L. Otis, E. H. Rountree, E. J. Brown, W. B. May, J. B. Kimball, Mrs. C. Wilder, Mrs. J. L. Piddell, H. Hume, Mrs. Gilmore, H. L. Small, W. H. Moore, E. H. Dunn, W. F. Nicholas, L. R. Haken, F. McConnell, W. S. Ross, Miss Walingford, Mrs. A. J. McCarthy, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, Miss M. C. Berry and Helena Barry.

Late arrivals at Hotel Del Monte included: L. M. Bettman, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Eyre, Mr. and Mrs. Flood, Miss Carmen Selby, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Taylor, Mrs. Augustus Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. McNear, E. W. Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Newhall, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Pope, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Heller, Mr. and Mrs. Funkenstein and family, Jas. Irvine, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Emery, Mr. and Mrs. Rothschild, E. M. Greenway, Augustus Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Oxnard.

Mr. C. C. Moore, who has been sojourning at Byron Hot Springs for the past two weeks, returned Sunday in his Winton accompanied by Mrs. Moore and Miss Josephine, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Morrison. Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Dana of Alameda, and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Stephens of San Francisco made the trip from Alameda in an automobile, spending Saturday, Sunday and Monday at Byron. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Marsh of San Francisco arrived Saturday in their Pierce-Arrow, making a very quick trip from the city. Everybody that makes the trip over pronounces it one of the best roads out of Oakland; best road and best scenery. On Saturday Mr. C. C. Moore organized a jolly picnic party to Marsh Creek, about eight miles distant. Among the party were Mrs. Moore, Josephine Moore, W. H. Kelly, Mrs. H. R. Warner, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Morrison, Alice Warner and Nora Hutton.

Recent arrivals at Paraiso Springs, from San Francisco, were: Mr. and Mrs. James Macky and son, Mr. and Mrs. R. S.

Browne, J. E. Brown, W. A. Tayler, W. J. Hennez, J. M. Castello, J. O. Bryen, John W. McCormick, C. T. Hamilton, W. J. Hesthal, Theo. Dierks, Mrs. T. Dierks and children, R. M. Smith, Miss E. Dorn, Mrs. I. G. Treadwell, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. O'Hara.

Arrivals at Rowdennan included: Mrs. Charles A. Grow, Mrs. W. E. Osborn, M. C. Harrison, Geo. Otis Mitchell, Robert Aitken, Mrs. J. L. Danforth, Mrs. J. B. Robinson, Mrs. J. C. Bush, M. A. de Laveaga, E. S. de Laveaga, J. G. Allen, Miss Harold, Mr. and Mrs. John Hunt, Miss Hazel Cope, Mrs. George W. Cope, Capt. J. C. Morong, U. S. N., George D. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Masten and family, Mr. and Mrs. Sam F. Pond.

Da Motta, the Portuguese pianist, has met with immense success in Berlin recently. Da Motta will appear there in several joint recitals with Ysaye. Ella Russell, the dramatic soprano, who is to sing in the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven next season under Walter Damrosch's baton, will appear with Ysaye in his concert tour.

FOR THAT TIRED FEELING

after a hard, hot day at business, there is nothing that "touches the spot" like a cold highball. But your whiskey must be good, and if it's the

Old Rose Bud

there will be no doubt of its good, pure quality. It will be the real thing.

RATHJEN WINE CO.
46 ELLIS STREET
Pacific Coast Agents NEAR MARKET

ELECTRICAL WIRING AND SUPPLIES

Lamps, Telephone Batteries, Bells, Etc.
Repairs Given Prompt Attention

National Electric Company

455 SUTTER ST., San Francisco

Telephone Bush 396

DR. NAGEL, Oculist Practice Limited to the Eye

Has Removed to 731 SUTTER ST., Atkinson Bldg.
Hours 10 to 12 A. M. and 1 to 3 P. M. Phone East 1247
Residence, 1919 VALLEJO ST.—Phone West 1103

Sarkspur

Ideal suburban property, beautifully situated in Marin county on the N. S. R. R. Completely sheltered by Mount Tamalpais from ocean wind and fogs. Extensive water works, sewerage and electric light systems. Attractions abound—such as sea-bathing, boating, groves of redwood, madrone and laurel, picturesque walks and drives, sunshine and wildwood vistas. The wonderful equability of the climate cannot be surpassed; flowers bloom perennially. The journey from San Francisco is short, enjoyable and full of interest. You can have a charming country home at a moderate price, and on easy terms.

American Land and Trust Co., 708 Market St., Mutual Savings Bank Bldg.

The Stage

A Daughter of the Stage

Ethel Barrymore, having been born to the stage, feels that she has no right to preen herself on her achievements before the footlights. With her it was a case of having the stage thrust under her, and she is everything that a born actress should be. She's a fine girl—God bless her!—a fine actress, too, the flower of a splendid family. She's like the wonderful baby whose doting parents exclaimed, "Oh, the darling—he just breathes and breathes!" Ethel, the darling, just acts and acts because she can't help it. Her family tree, growing out of the very centre of the stage, is rooted in the hearts of her countrymen and women. Though elated over her success she never boasts of her achievements as do so many stage people. "I had the path made easy for me," she said to a friend; "I had my name made for me before I was born. However, I had my troubles. I had to wait six years to get a chance to play a real part. Mr. Frohman had me handing in cards and doing other stage-maid duties in the interim. I used to hear people in the audiences fluttering their programs and I felt that they were saying: 'Poor thing, with all her stage ancestry she can't act a little bit.' All that time I knew I could. Oh, I used to be awful blue. I thought Mr. Frohman would never advance me, so I applied for a position at Weber & Fields. I could always dance." And indeed she could, as any one will attest who saw her in "Captain Jinks." And by the way, though she doesn't tell interviewers so, Ethel Barrymore's compensation in the beginning of her stellar career was partly the glory of it. Though her name was in electric lights her salary wasn't any higher than that of the leading lady of a provincial stock company. Mr. Frohman is a good business man, you know, and he knows that glory goes a great way in the theatrical profession. He isn't the only manager who has taken advantage of the circumstance. And by the way, when Ethel Barrymore was being partly paid in glory she had the burden of more than one unproductive member of her family on her young shoulders. But the hard struggle is over. Managers are prepared to bid for her now, for she has in addition to a name, youth (she is about twenty-six), genius and beauty. So far she has been delightful in dainty comedy, and bits of pathos, but this daughter of the stage has within her the power to portray the most tragic workings of the human mind and heart.

An Absurd Yarn

A New York paper is responsible for the malicious story that Blanche Bates put a small but effective spoke in the wheel of Mrs. Carter's triumphal chariot during the Du Barry visitation. "Miss Bates," says the Eastern writer, "is a great pet of the critics on the coast, and although the air is thick with 'dears' and 'darlings' and 'angels' when the two Belasco stars meet, the dark-eyed Blanche is not at all backward in expressing, when safely out of the Belasco hearing, her opinion that Du Barry as presented by the elder actress is an inexcusable defiance of every canon of art and intelligence. A few kind words to that effect may not have been without effect in 'Frisco, where empty benches sent Mrs. Carter to bed with nervous collapse." It happened that the local critics were unanimous in their praise of both Mrs. Carter and Du Barry. Somebody is probably trying to create friction between the two actresses.

Dave Belasco has decided to postpone the opening of "The Darling of the Gods" in St. Louis until later in the year, and Blanche Bates will enjoy a much longer rest than she had expected. George Lask, who is stage manager of the company, became restless during his enforced idleness, and his relatives in this city received word from him last week that he had sailed for Europe to pick up a few pointers in stage management abroad.

Entertained a Prince

Holbrook Blinn, the ex-San Francisco boy whose impersonation of Napoleon in "The Duchess of Dantzig" has been the talk of London the past year, had the honor of entertaining a real live prince at his home in St. John's Wood recently. His Highness Bhawani Singh, Ragi Rana of Jhalawar, Rajputana, is on a visit to England, as Albert Edward's guest. He attended a performance of "The Duchess of Dantzig" and was so pleased with Napoleon that he sent his aide-de-camp, Major R. E. A. Ben, to request an interview with Mr. Blinn. In true Californian style, the latter invited the prince to his home for dinner. The poten-

Accordeon and Sunburst Pleating, STEWART'S, 110 Taylor St. Phone Folsom 2121

GOODYEAR'S "GOLD SEAL"

Rubber Goods the Best Made

Rubber Hose, Belting and Packings

We are headquarters for everything made of Rubber

GOODYEAR RUBBER COMPANY

R. H. Pease, Pres. F. M. Shepard, Jr., Treas. C. F. Runyon, Sec.

573-575-577-579 Market St., San Francisco

WM. WILLIAMS & SONS

(LTD.) OF ABERDEEN.

V V O

Scotch Whisky

Importers - MACONDRAY & CO.

FAT FOLKS!

YOUR WEIGHT REDUCED

By New Process I guarantee to REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT as much as you desire. No Change in Diet, no inconvenience, no bad after-effects.

MRS. E. L. RYAN, Dermatologist
Apt. 500, THE IROQUOIS, 524 Ellis Street

Wrinkles and all facial blemishes. Superfluous hair removed. Manicuring, hair dressing, scalp treatment. Phone, Private Exchange 719.

REMOVED

Patrick & Co.

Rubber Stamps and Metal Signs

to

111 and 113 Sansome Street

That St. Louis Trip

TAKE THE BUSINESS LINE, THE

UNION PACIFIC

saving 12 hours Rate only $67.50 round trip.
Through first and second-class cars, diners and all comforts. Best road and equipment. Safest line.
Drop a postal and I will call and explain everything.

S. F. Booth, Gen. Agent U. P. R. R.

1 Montgomery St., San Francisco, California

CHARMION.

the young woman who turned New York upside down a few seasons ago with her disrobing act on the flying trapeze, and who will return to her native State and make her first appearance in nearly seven years at the Orpheum next week. Since leaving here she has become famed as the most graceful and daring trapeze performer in the world and has been the headliner in the principal places of amusement in England and on the continent. She is a small woman, only five feet one inch in height, and weighing one hundred and thirty pounds, but is so perfectly developed that her measurements have been taken as a standard for the Delsarte system and in Paris she is known as "La Mode des Gymnastiques."

tate accepted the invitation, considerably to the actor's surprise, and a dinner and garden party were hastily arranged. Among those present on the occasion beside the guest of honor were George Frampton, R. A., England's greatest sculptor, Madeline Lucette Ryley, Professor Leoni, the Mascagni of England, Forbes Robertson, Gertrude Elliott, William Faversham, Julie Opp, Edna May, Martin Harvey, and Alfred East, England's foremost landscape painter. The prince came in state, in a gorgeous robe and turban, with full suite of twenty attendants. He speaks English perfectly and is a great admirer of America, which he proposes to visit next year.

Mr. Blinn and Abbey, the artist and Academician, were the only Americans in a party including Alma Tadema and members of the Royal Academy Club that lately visited Oxford.

Dorothy's Board Bill

Though Dorothy Morton is now far away from New York she is not forgotten on Broadway. She was sued the other day by the Hotel Vendome which is located in the heart of the theatrical district on Broadway, for two hundred and seventeen dollars. That is the amount of a board bill contracted by the dashing Dorothy in the good old days of 1901 when she was playing the part of O Mimosa San in "The Geisha" during the long run of that opera at Daly's.

At the Grand

It was not very long ago that the Alcazar produced "The Cowboy and the Lady," and the California had it once upon a time. But a new company always lends new interest to an old play. Eliminated of certain exaggerations "The Cowboy and the Lady" is not a bad play, and it is peculiarly suited to presentation just now when "The Virginian" and other cowboy novels are enjoying such a vogue. It is by no means one of the best plays Clyde Fitch has written, but it contains here and there some charming touches, and the thrill comes at the end of the second act with Fitch-like accuracy. A very large audience enjoyed the play on Monday night, and my enjoyment was intensified by that of an elderly man who sat back of me. His delight over the "swear-box," the ingenuous witticisms of big Joe, and the mixolwho begins a limited engagement next Monday at the Columbia. The frequency of Mr. Miller's tours to the Pacific Coast, after his seasons in the East, has securely established him in this section in public favor. And to these repeated visits of the star have we been largely indebted for the appearance of other leading attractions that have from time to time followed in his wake. There was an interval when San Francisco and the coast were somewhat shunned by Eastern managers under the delusion that this territory was unappreciative of their wares. And it is to be added, in all truth, that it fell to Mr. Miller to prove that San Francisco and its tributary cities are not unwise in their discrimination. Charles Frohman having been persuaded that such is the fact, has arranged to send Mr. Miller to the Coast each year with a repertoire of the leading Eastern successes of the winter, together with such new play or plays as Mr. Miller is to be seen in throughout the East during the succeeding winter. This new arrangement practically begins with the present tour. Mr. Miller's Eastern novelty for next season, "Joseph Entangled," is now underlined to follow "Mice and Men."

HENRY MILLER

ogist efforts of Mrs. Weston, was so sincere that could it have been communicated telepathically to the actors in the drama it must surely have been encouraging. James Neill was breezy and full of animation as the cowboy from Harvard. Miss Chapman made a handsome and sympathetic Mrs. Weston. Faye Wallace, who promises to become one of the best ingenues Neill ever had, is a fascinating little Midge from the moment she displays her skill as a marksman to the final scene in the courtroom where she appears as an unwilling witness. Frances Slosson has only one strong scene as Mollie Larkins, but she makes the most of that. Lillian Andrews is rather too grotesque as the old maid pianist at the dance hall, but is much more lifelike in the court scene. Scott Seaton is the very gentlemanly villain, Mrs. Weston's husband, who obligingly gets killed and thereby gives opportunity for a display of oratory by the college cowboy hero, in the last act. Katherine Gilman and Ruth Hickstein have very little to do but dance and look pretty. Sheldon Lewis does a bright bit of character work as the murderer, Quickfoot Jim.

Ellis Kindly Assisted

There was a time in the history of the drama, and it was not long ago, when playwrights were encouraged in the writing of curtain-raisers by having their works produced. There was a demand for the abbreviated drama, and at many first-class theatres it was customary to precede the "main event of the evening" with a one-act piece. Clever playwrights turned their hand to that sort of work, and now that the curtain-raiser has gone out of fashion, and the vaudeville sketch has come into vogue, it is singular that mummies do not revive some of the old successful one-act pieces. This suggestion came to my mind while sitting through "Between Matinee and Night" at the Orpheum and taking note of the growing restlessness of the whole house. It is positively painful to witness the efforts of Rose Coghlan to rouse the interest of an audience in the inanities of the sketch. It has something of the bathos of the song rendered by Florence Clayton earlier in the evening; the song about mother waiting home for you when you've been shaken by your friends, and haven't a penny in your pocket. But strange to say, though the maudlin song was applauded the sketch fell rather flat. Julian Rose is one of the best hits of the week. Tuesday night he enjoyed the co-operation of Melville Ellis, who came out to show the Tivoli how "The Toreador" should be produced. Mr. Ellis had a box seat close to the stage, and he was so hysterical in his enjoyment of Rose that he seemed for awhile to be in the picture. He is a wonderful booster, and Rose was so appreciative that he gave the musical comedy artist special attention. It is seldom that one witnesses such a display of professional courtesy.

The Whittlesey Season

If the S. R. O. sign were permissible at the theatres nowadays, it would have been out at the Alcazar during the past few weeks, for White Whittlesey has duplicated his success of last season at that theatre. "The Prisoner of Zenda" was one of last season's hits, and has played to as large business this year. Whittlesey as the three Rudolfs is always dashing, daring and delightful, and in the scenes with Flavia is the Hope Rassendyll to the life. Juliet Crosby makes a fascinating Princess, and is far more satisfactory in the role than any Flavia San Francisco has ever seen, except perhaps Mary Mannering. The play is beautifully mounted.

Irish Drama at the Central

A new phase of Herschel Mayall's versatility comes to the fore this week at the Central in his portrayal of the Irish patriot, Robert Emmet. He makes a most heroic figure in the role, and wins cheers every night in the great scene in the court, where Emmet makes his famous speech. Mayall is peculiarly fitted to play parts of this nature, calling for natural eloquence as well as a magnetic personality. Miss Lawton as Sarah Curran also has a role that fits her well. She is an actress who never overdraws, never exaggerates, but is always simple and sincere. Ernest Howell does a strong bit of work as the informer, the most detestable character in Irish history. The company as a whole seems to have put much thought into the study of the various roles. The scenery is a strong point of the production, and there are many entertaining specialties introduced. The Gaelic terpsichorean champions in the Irish reels and jigs give a very interesting exhibition. The theatre has been crowded every night by enthusiastic audiences.

Ben Greet Coming

It has been definitely arranged that the tour of the Ben Greet Company of London players, under the management of Mr.

Charles Frohman, will begin in California at the Greek theatre of the University of California, Saturday afternoon, October first, with a splendid production of "Hamlet." The season in San Francisco will open Monday, October third, at Lyric hall, where the success of last year, "Everyman," will be given for one week, a second week being devoted to Elizabethan productions of Shakespeare's masterpieces. The company will then tour Southern California, giving performances at Stanford University, and open air performances in Los Angeles, returning to this city for the first production in California of the beautiful "miracle" play, "The Star of Bethlehem," by Professor Gayley of the State University. The entire Coast tour will be under the direction of Will L. Greenbaum, who is rapidly coming to the front as a purveyor of the highest class attractions. Schools, colleges, seminaries and other institutions of learning in all parts of the country can arrange special rates for the students and teachers by applying to Mr. Greenbaum.

FREDERIC BELASCO.

With characteristic boldness and enterprise Frederic Belasco is enlarging his field of operations and next month will open the Belasco theatre, one of the handsomest theatres in the West, in the beautiful city of Los Angeles, which Messrs. Belasco and Mayer will manage as a high class stock theatre with a list of plays that will insure success from the moment the doors are opened for the first performance. The Belasco theatre will be as nearly perfect in construction and detail for the comfort and pleasure of the public and play-folk as it is possible for brains and money to make. Fred Belasco is becoming a great power in the theatrical business on this Coast. He is not only an energetic business man, but also an enthusiastic promoter of art. The monument to his successful efforts is the Alcazar theatre, the foremost stock theatre in the West, with an unbroken record of years of artistic and financial success. Frederic Belasco has not confined himself to this one enterprise, but together with Mr. M. E. Mayer conducts the Central theatre of this city and is responsible for the tour of Florence Roberts, the most important traveling organization in the West, and has also conceived the tour of the clever romantic star, White Whittlesey, whom he launches this season with M. E. Mayer and E. D. Price as associate managers.

Features of Next Week's Bills

For the presentation of "Mice and Men" at the Columbia, beginning Monday night, Charles Frohman has given Henry Miller a remarkably well-balanced company in Jessie Busley in the leading role, and the other characters assigned to John Glendinning, Walter Allen, Grace Heyer, Frederick Tyler, J. Hartley Manners, Maggie Holloway Fisher, Charles W. Butler, Stanley Dark, Frederick Tieden, Bertram Harrison, Frank Willard and others. The scenic accessories that were used in the New York run of this piece have been brought on here. Mr. Miller's role is said to be admirably suited to him. "Joseph Entangled" comes next.

"Rupert of Hentzau," in which White Whittlesey appears next week, has never been acted at the Alcazar and it will have added interest because it follows in natural sequence close upon "The Prisoner of Zenda." "The Prisoner of Zenda" ends with the severance of the romance between Rassendyll and Princess Flavia; the action of "Rupert of Hentzau" follows three years later. Mr. Whittlesey again assumes the dual role of King Rudolph and Rassendyll, with Juliet Crosby as Flavia. In compliance with many requests Mr. Whittlesey will appear August first as Claude Melnotte in a special revival of "The Lady of Lyons," and Eugenie Thais Lawton will make her first appearance at the Alcazar as Pauline.

Flossy Hope is coming back to Fischer's and will appear in "The Whirl of the Town." In the meantime "A Lucky Stone" is drawing crowded and enthusiastic houses. Eldorado Parlor of Native Sons has bought out two nights, Tuesday and Wednesday, August ninth and tenth, at Fischer's, to see "The Whirl of the Town."

Scott Marble's "The Gates of Justice," which has had tremendously successful runs throughout the East, will undoubtedly make an immense hit at the Central. There is one scene in this play that has no parallel in sensationalism. The episode is in the coal mines of Pennsylvania, an attempt to murder the superintendent of a mine by hurling him down a chute leading to a coal-crusher—a machine with massive iron cylinders provided with teeth which grind the largest lumps of coal into small particles.

James Neill will produce at the Grand tomorrow matinee and all next week Harriet Ford's dramatization of Stanley Weyman's "A Gentleman of France." It was as Gaston De Marsac, the hero of this drama, that Mr. Neill last season scored one of the most brilliant successes of his career, and did some startling sword-play in which Edythe Chapman cleverly assisted. Sunday matinee, July thirty-first, "Shenandoah" will be revived. The special summer prices of fifteen, twenty-five, and fifty cents have hit the popular taste, and the Grand is crowded every night.

"Robin Hood" will continue at the Tivoli. When "The Toreador" is produced, as the attraction to follow the De Koven opera, it will have a splendid cast. The present Tivoli company is excellently balanced, and everybody is talking about the pretty girls in the chorus.

Charmion, the wonderful flying trapezist, heads the Orpheum's bill. The Empire Comedy Four, Messrs. Evans, Cunningham, Jenny and Roland, will make their initial bow here, in "What's the Answer?" Edith Decker, dramatic soprano, Domenico Russo, tenor and Sig. Abramoff, basso, will be heard in the prison scene from "Faust." Miss Decker takes a high rank among Marguerites, Russo should sing Faust splendidly and the Mephistopheles of Sig. Abramoff has been recognized as an artistic creation for years. Marcus and Gartelle, comedy skaters, will be new. Rose Coghlan has reserved for her second and last week "The Ace of Trumps," a one-act sketch by Frank A. Ferguson, founded on the characters of "Forget-Me-Not," played originally by Miss Coghlan at Wallack's.

At the Chutes will be Derenda and Green, comedy jugglers; John J. Sully and Blanche Phelps, in their original comedy skit, "The Irish Orator"; "Mike," Foster's dog; Lotta and Belle Tobin, and others.

—The Playgoer.

YE OLD ENGLISH INN.

Everybody who has visited Ye Old English Inn at 144 Mason street is delighted with the perfect menus provided, the service and the charming music of the Pan American Quartet. Bab's and Jules' new eating-place was opened on the fourteenth, and at once sprang into favor. Epicures pronounce it the cream of restaurants. The furnishing is all Old English, everything being artistic and delighting the seeker after picturesque effects. Ye Old English Inn makes a specialty of catering for smart dinners and luncheons.

★TIVOLI★

Cor. Eddy and Mason Sts.

Evenings at 8 Sharp

Last Nights. Farewell Performances. The superb Tivoli presentation of

“ROBIN HOOD”

In preparation a stupendous production of the great New York and London success

“THE TOREADOR”

With an unrivaled cast and the famous “BEAUTY CHORUS”

Usual Tivoli Prices, 25, 50 and 75c.

Only Matinee Saturday

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATRE

Matinee Saturdays Only

Seventh Annual Engagement at this theatre

Beginning Next Monday, July 25th

Charles Frohman presents

HENRY MILLER

And his company in Madeleine Lucette Ryley's London and New York success
(First time in San Francisco)

“MICE AND MEN”

“The best laid schemes o' mice and men gang aft a-gley.”—Burns.

ALCAZAR THEATRE

Phone “ALCAZAR”

Belasco and Mayer

Proprietors

E. D. Price, Gen. Mgr.

Monday, July 25th, one week

Regular Matinees Thursday and Saturday

Evenings, 25c to 75c

Matinees Thursday and Saturday 25c to 50c

WHITE WHITTLESEY

And the Alcazar Stock Company

Presenting for the first time at the Alcazar

“RUPERT OF HENTZAU”

Sequel to the Prisoner of Zenda by Anthony Hope. Monday August 1—

White Whittlesey presenting in compliance with numerous requests,

“THE LADY OF LYONS”

Orpheum

O'Farrell between
Stockton and Powell
Streets

Week Commencing
Sunday Matinee,
July 24th

LUSTROUS VAUDEVILLE!

CHARMION. Empire Comedy Four Edith Decker, Domenico Russo and Sig. Abramoff. Marcus and Gartelle. Julian Rose. The Mysterious
Zancigs. Musical Kleist. Orpheum Motion Pictures and last week of ROSE COGHLAN, assisted by Lynn Pratt and Company.
Presenting “The Ace of Trumps”

Regular Matinees Every Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday

Prices: 10c, 25c and 50c.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Phone “Grand Opera House”
Grand Opera House Co.
Lessee

Regular Matinee Saturday

Week beginning

Matinee tomorrow

MR. JAMES NEILL

And the Original
Neill Company

In Harriet Ford's dramatization of Stauley Weyman's thrilling story

“A GENTLEMAN OF FRANCE”

Special Summer Prices, 15c, 25c and 50c

Sunday Matinee, July 31, “SHENANDOAH”

Fischer's THEATRE

O'Farrell between Stockton and
Powell Streets

Phone “Fischer's”

And still they come.

Crowded at every performance.

“A LUCKY STONE”

The hit of years. Funny to the last word. These artists who can't be excelled.

Dorothy Morton, Nora Bayes, Rice and Cady—German Comedians, Bobby North—Hebrew Comedian, Edwin Clark, Ben Dillon, Garrity Sisters, A Chorus never equalled here. Jammed with Novelties and Specialties.

Matinees Saturday and Sunday. Same Popular Prices

“The Whirl of the Town” next.

A Monster Production

CENTRAL

Belasco & Mayer, Props. Phone South 573
Market Street near Eighth
Opposite City Hall

Week Starting Monday Evening, July 25th

Matinees Saturday and Sunday

The Powerful American Melodrama

“THE GATES OF JUSTICE”

A Thrilling Story of the Pennsylvania Coal Fields

Prices: Evening, 10c to 50c

Matinees, 10c, 15c, 25c

Bee and Butterfly

BY LAWRENCE MARTIN.

Pierson had never thought he was lonely until the Girl asked him about it. It struck him then that perhaps he was.

"You must be awfully lonely," she had said, "living three miles from a neighbor, all by yourself."

"I am," asserted Pierson, though the idea had not occurred to him before.

"Why don't you marry?" asked the Girl.

Her name was Helen, by the way, and she was dining at one of the ranch-houses where Pierson was always a welcome guest.

"That's easy enough," answered Pierson. "I've never found the kind of woman I wanted to marry."

"There are lots of pretty girls about here," she suggested.

"I saw several when we were driving yesterday."

"Oh, I know. But I have my ideal. I must have a woman of absolutely good morals."

"You mean one who doesn't steal, or murder, or worship false gods, of course."

"Oh, no, not that," he returned, rather impatiently. Pierson hated anything like circumlocution. "I mean a woman who is a woman—not 'up-to-date' as you call it, but—oh, well, I can't explain, but you ought to know what I mean."

"I fancy I comprehend," she answered, contemplating the smoke that curled upward from her cigarette. "Someone utterly unlike me, for instance? I am distinctly unmoral, myself."

The company was enjoying its coffee on the veranda of the bungalow, and Pierson and the Girl were sitting on the steps.

"But I'll wager you'd find her deadly dull," she added.

"Perhaps I might. I never thought of that," answered Pierson. "Why don't you marry, yourself, by the way?"

"Oh, I always imagine marriage, like too much morality, might be a bore. I'd hate to be bored."

"But you might fall in love."

"I have, lots of times. But there's a subtle difference in being in love, and loving. One can fall in love over and over, but to love—well, that comes but once in a lifetime, I imagine."

Her tone softened a bit, as she turned her dark eyes upon the man at her side.

"I don't think I'll ever love—that way," she said, rising and shaking out her skirts. "I can't think of myself tied to one man, till death do us part. Besides, all the nice men I meet are either already married, or about to be."

On his way home, tramping the three miles that led to his own ranch, Pierson resolved something in his mind. In his thirty years of life he had come across many specimens of the gentle sex. He had met and been interested in no end of girls. He had even flirted with some of them. Possibly he may have had serious thoughts of asking one of them to share his solitude on the top of that hill where his shack was situated. But certainly nothing more definite than the mere thought had ever happened. He had the real British idea of the perfect woman, a soft-voiced, fair-haired, mild-eyed, amiable creature, who looked upon the great world with eyes of entire innocence, and who would regard her husband as her lord and master, finding her happiness in loving, honoring and obeying him. Still, this American girl was very fascinating. He had met her several times before that evening's chat on the veranda, and she had interested herself in a frank, businesslike way in his ranch and the prospects of prune-raising. She did not in any way fill the picture of Pierson's ideal woman. She was tall and slim and rather athletic in build, her carriage a mixture of sensuous grace and boyish independence. She had dark eyes, that alternately reminded him of Cleopatra's or a deer's. Her hair was a burnished brown. She was rich, Pierson had heard, and when she was not traveling about she occupied a big house in town, her own property. She was evidently a girl who had enjoyed many heart experiences. Innocent, not ignorant, was the way she phrased it herself. Pierson recalled every word she had said to him, during their brief acquaintance. He was not an egotistic fellow, but even without vanity he knew the Girl liked him. She had shown a pronounced preference for his society on all the occasions when they had met.

But as he lighted his lamp, on entering his shack, his eyes fell on a photograph tacked to the wall. It was the pleasant face of an English girl with a fringe of fair hair falling over her innocent eyes.

An inspiration came to him. It would be best to banish the tantalizing image of the Girl at once. She was not his kind. "Get thee behind me Satan," was the tenor of his thoughts as he sat himself down and penned a letter to the girl of the picture.

"Dear Nell," he wrote, "it has just occurred to me that I am very lonely out here, and I do not feel that I can stand it much longer without the presence of a woman to share my solitude. Won't you come out? Your aunt will be glad to put you up for the few days before our wedding." It was rather a chilly note, he thought as he read it over, but then Nell would not mind. She was used to him, had known him all her life and probably looked forward some day to receiving a message just like this.

Pierson did not seal the envelope. He concluded to leave the letter a day or so. There was no hurry. He was not so lonely that he could not stand his solitude a few months longer if needs must be.

Pierson wended his steps toward his shack, after several hours' irksome labor in guiding the cultivator over the brown earth. The day was hot, as the days usually are in the Santa Clara valley in July, but he was not thinking of the heat. He had cooked and eaten his solitary breakfast seven hours ago, at six o'clock, but he was not considering what he should cook for his solitary luncheon. His material man was for the nonce forgotten in the mental man. A heart problem occupied his thoughts.

The letter to Nell still lay on the shelf where he had placed it. It was unsealed, and a layer of dust had settled upon it. Pierson felt sure he should send it some day, when loneliness pressed upon him, and the impulse moved him. He had not seen the Girl since that last evening, though he had heard she was still in the country visiting about at various friends' ranches. He had not dined away from his shack for a week. He felt that he must not place himself in temptation's way. What could a man who was trying to beat a living out of a California ranch, and who lived in a one-room shack with no servant to supply his wants, have in common with a gay society girl, used to a French maid, and who owned houses and lots and bonds? He underrated his own claims to consideration, for he was a healthy, wholesome-looking, clean-skinned, well-built Englishman, with the manners of the well-born and well-bred, and a neat little wit added to a college education and the culture of the well-read.

As he approached his shack, the odor of cooking greeted his nostrils. As he entered, he saw his kitchen table pulled out from its usual station by the wall. There was a white cloth on it, and some flowers, and places were laid for two. A white-frocked figure bent over the stove. There was something familiar in the pose. Pierson felt himself in a dream.

The white-frocked figure turned with a start, and dropped the egg she was about to turn into the frying-pan.

The Best Way

What do we know without trial.

Hunter Baltimore Rye

The perfect Whiskey, has stood every test. Between good and bad, trial is the test and taste the umpire.

It is particularly recommended to women because of its age and excellence.

HILBERT MERCANTILE CO.,
213-215 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.
Telephone Exchange 313.

"Oh, I've broken an egg," she cried, in a frightened way.
 "That's nothing," answered Pierson, getting a cloth and clearing up the debris, "there are plenty of eggs. I keep chickens, you know."

Neither seemed a bit embarrassed at finding themselves thus unexpectedly together. The broken egg had broken the ice.

"I know all about the chickens," said the Girl. "You were so long in coming that I explored the place thoroughly."

"That wouldn't take long," observed Pierson, drily, glancing about the room.

There was quite a cheerful air about the place. Everything had been swept and dusted.

"I didn't know people ever ate in their bedrooms," said the Girl, with a smile.

"Some people put it the other way," he replied, "they sleep in the kitchen."

"I always intended to visit you some day," she said, "though you never asked me."

"You never gave me a chance," he answered.

They both laughed gleefully, like two children, and Helen dished up the bacon and eggs, and some hot biscuits, with tea and canned fruit. Still Pierson seemed in a dream, as they ate, and chatted over their luncheon. As the hands of the clock turned to two, Helen rose from the table.

"Now you must go back to work," she said, "and I will clear up the things, and then go away."

She handed him his pipe and tobacco from the shelf.

"Must you go away?" he asked.

She did not answer, but busied herself in picking up the dishes, scraping them, and moving the table back to its former place.

"Don't you think I'd be a model rancher's wife?" she asked, laughing as she stacked the dishes in the pan and poured hot water over them.

Then, as she noticed the warmth in Pierson's glance, she hastily began to ply the mop. She began to wash the dishes, while Pierson smoked his pipe.

"What of that girl in England?" she asked, suddenly.

Pierson's eyes wandered to the shelf, where the letter lay, the letter to Nell. It was still covered with its layer of dust, though all else on the shelf was clean.

"What girl? There's no girl," he answered, but a blush deepened the red in his cheeks.

"Oh, I know all about her," she answered. "I have heard things—and then there is her picture on the wall."

She glanced at it, carelessly, and finishing her dish-washing, dried the plates and cups and put them away. She wrung out the dish-towel in clean water, washed her hands, turned her sleeves down again and buttoned the cuffs. Then she donned her hat, and looked for her gloves.

"I am going now," she said, "we've had a nice time, haven't we?"

Pierson took her little white hand in his brown one.

"It's the nicest time I ever had in my life," he said.

He seemed about to say something more, but she drew her hand from his, and was some steps down the hill before he recovered his poise.

She waved her hand at him.

"I'll come again," she cried, merrily, "if you want me to."

"It's not always what we want but what we get," he began.

"Oh, but I always get what I want," she answered. "You may if you go at it right. Just say you will, and it drops right within your reach."

She was a long way off now.

"I want you to come again, then," called Pierson.

She turned once more, and smiled at him.

"Well, wish real hard then," she said, "and I believe I'll come."

"And stay?"

"Perhaps—if you are good," and the wind wafted the last words toward him, "I'll come—and—stay."

Pierson took a long puff at his pipe. He watched the Girl until her white frock disappeared from sight, then he went back into the shack. He took the dust-covered letter from the shelf, tore it to bits and threw the remains into the stove.

"It would be a mistake," he said to himself. "I don't believe Nell would be happy out here, anyway. And I don't mind being alone. Perhaps the Girl may come again—and if Nell were here I don't think she'd like it."

He was whistling as he went back to his work again. It did not seem so hard to tramp up and down between the rows of trees, since that angel's visit.

The modish woman's stationery is as much a part of her nowadays as her dainty wardrobe. Copier & Co., 746 Market Street, are showing the newest modes in paper and envelopes, dies and seals.

SCHOOLS and COLLEGES

HEALD'S

LEADING BUSINESS COLLEGE of the WEST

Over 24 Post St., San Francisco, Cal.

Established 40 years. Open entire year, day and night Write for circulars (free.)

St. Mary's College

OAKLAND, CAL.

Literary, Scientific, Commercial Courses.

Studies resumed August 1, 1904.

Send for Catalogue.

BROTHER VELLESIAN, President.

Santa Clara College

SANTA CLARA, CAL.

The next session will begin August 2, 1904. Send for full particulars to

(Rev.) R. E. KENNA, S. J., President.

Hoitt's

School for Boys. 14th year begins August 9th, larger and stronger faculty than ever; perfect sanitation; illustrated catalogue. W. J. MEREDITH, Vice-Principal. Menlo Park, Cal.

Irving Institute

Boarding and day school for young ladies and little girls. 2126 California St. Will reopen August 1, 1904. Accredited to the universities. REV. EDWARD B. CHURCH, A. M., Principal.

Miss Bolte's School

2174 Post St., prepares for universities and colleges. Music by graduate professor of Berlin and Leipsic conservatories. Conversational and grammatical French and German; English, Board, English, French, German, music, $30 month. Next term July 25. Steiner 656.

San Francisco Business College

Scott & Van Arsdel Building, 78 Mission St., between Third and Fourth. We are located in our new quarters. The finest schoolrooms in the West. Come and see them whether you want to go to school or not. Business men know where we are. We had eight calls for help this week.

Gallagher-Matth
Business College

is the most practical; recommended by expert court reporters. Send for catalogue.

1482 Market St., San Francisco.

The Melbourne Institute

For stuttering and stammering teaches a new scientific course for cure. It is successful. It has been established in this city for three years under teaching of Prof. F. G. Norcross, acknowledged mental expert, whose work has won the admiration of reputable physicians and other deep students of mentality. The services of the Melbourne may be enlisted with the utmost confidence. Address MELBOURNE INSTITUTE, Van Ness Ave. and Market St., San Francisco. Hours 1 to 5 P. M. Telephone Mint 2626.

THE LYCEUM

Jordan or any Stanford

AN ACCREDITED PREPARATORY SCHOOL. For the University, Law, and Medical College, Etc. This school is well known for its careful and thorough work; we prepare you well. References, President professor L. H. GRAU Ph. D., Principal. Rooms, 333-346, 5th floor, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

CALIFORNIA BUSINESS COLLEGE

The largest and finest quarters in the city; refined residence locality. Position for every graduate. Thorough, modern. 75 Page Catalogue on request.

R. L. DURHAM, President.

925 Golden Gate Avenue San Francisco

Kent Law School

THIRTEENTH YEAR

Day and Night Always open. No Vacations. Book Free. 539 Parrott Building Emporium. Phone Folsom 2631

Century Electric Corporation

SUPPLIES, CONSTRUCTION, MANUFACTURING AND REPAIRING. BUILDINGS WIRED

16 and 18 SECOND STREET

Telephone Bush 352

San Francisco

MAISON TORTONI

111 O'Farrell St.

French Rotisserie

Private Dining Rooms.

Banquet Hall.

S. Constantini, Prop.

Automobile Topics

Three years ago a wheelman rode from Stockton to the Yosemite valley in sixteen hours, making what was then thought a record that would stand for many years. It will, perhaps, remain as a bicycle record for many years to come, but that will be all, for, last Friday morning, an automobile arrived in the valley after making the trip in twelve hours, actual running time. The machine was a 1904 Winton touring car, of twenty horse-power, and was driven by Fernando Nelson of San Francisco. M. Fisher and Mr. Nelson's two sons accompanied him. This was their third attempt to reach the valley. They first tried it in May, but found that there was too much snow to overcome. About a month ago they made a second unsuccessful attempt. They started on their third trip with one of the latest machines built by the Winton people and they did not have a bit of trouble. They traveled only early in the morning and late in the evening, so as to avoid meeting teams. The time made by Mr. Nelson was four hours faster than the trains and stages make.

Miss Fannie Colby is one of the latest San Francisco owners of a White. Last Sunday she made the trip to San Jose and back.

A. A. Haas now has his White touring car at Del Monte; he is using it daily and visiting all of the surrounding country.

L. P. Lowe, chairman of the Automobile Club of California, was seen spinning on the way to San Jose recently at the wheel of his royal blue White. There is hardly a Sunday that Mr. Lowe does not make some trip out of town in his steamer.

George H. Lent is enjoying the country, with the aid of his White.

Automobiles have great advantages over the horse, says a daily contemporary. They don't have their tails cut off; neither can the owners be prosecuted for cruelty to animals.

The autos are running too fast for the rancher in Marysville and the Supervisors intend to pass an ordinance regulating the operation of the machines on the country roads. In the country districts the cows and horses become badly frightened and run for miles in front of the "devil wagons" until forced to stop from exhaustion.

One of the reasons why the automobile has acquired a reputation for being unreliable and doing unexpected things is that some of those who purchase cars have no knowledge of mechanical matters and, becoming enthusiastic over their own conceptions of what a thing of steel and iron ought to do, forget that, while an automobile may be capable of doing what they think it should, it will do so only under certain conditions, and that if these are neglected it cannot be expected that the machine will do what it was built to do. After all, it is only a machine, without volition, and it is the human being behind it who must supply the intelligence without which it would become a mere mass of curiously wrought scraps of metal. The whole trouble may be summed up in one word—ignorance. Knowledge concerning the automobile has not become as widely disseminated as it will eventually, and must therefore be sought for with diligence.—The Automobile.

G. Fujushima and his son Yuawao, celebrated throughout Japan for their wonderful feats of bicycle riding, will shortly States. When only eight years old the son rode eight hundred arrive in California from the Orient for a tour of the United miles within a year and the following year covered twelve hundred miles.

H. D. Ryus, manager of the White garage at Los Angeles, was in town last Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. He was very welcome at the San Francisco garage, and was kept busy welcoming the many friends he made during the time he was engaged in business at this place. He was particularly glad to welcome the numerous people to whom he had sold White cars, and says:

NEW SUBURBAN DISTRICT.

The Whites Hill tunnel of the North Shore R. R. is nearly completed and will reduce the running time between San Francisco and stations north of Fairfax by from thirty to forty-five minutes. This will bring San Geronimo, Lagunitas, Camp Taylor, Tocaloma and Point Reyes within a reasonable distance for suburban homes. Already a portion of the beautiful Maillard estate at Lagunitas has been put on the market in villa lots and others are bound to follow. It certainly is a choice section of sunny Marin county and the demand for sites over there is growing very rapidly. The North Shore Railroad has been thoroughly equipped both on its electric and steam lines.

THE OLDSMOBILE TOURING CAR

Handsomest Lines

Greatest Power

Most Thoroughly Built

Easiest Running

Easiest Controlled

Most Satisfactory Car for the Money

Always Goes

PRICE COMPLETE WITH LAMPS, HORN AND TOOLS

$1050.00

PIONEER AUTOMOBILE CO.

901-25 Golden Gate Ave. - - San Francisco
Oakland, 355 Tenth Street

AUTOMOBILE REPAIRS

81 CITY HALL AVE. Telephone South 1039

De Dion Plugs
De Dion Porcelains
Electric Cable

ANDREWS, KEENAN & BLASAUF

"Toledo"

POPE TOLEDO TOURING CAR CO.

Phone South 1142

G. A. BOYER, Manager

134-148 GOLDEN GATE AVE.

Photo by E. A. Lathé.

A Merry Rent party in a Winton Touring Car in Golden Gate Park

"One thing pleased me, and that is, not one person to whom I sold said he wished he was quit of the bargain. They are all delighted, and the cars are doing fine work." Mr. Ryus says that Los Angeles is doing a splendid business, and the White car holding its own without any effort.

Telegrams have been flying between San Francisco and Cleveland since the departure of Mr. Schwabacher's new four-cylinder Winton touring car from the factory. The car was shipped on the eighth instant, and has been watched very closely by both Mr. Schwabacher and the Pioneer Automobile Company, who are congratulating themselves upon the fact that Mr. Schwabacher's car is one of the first finished by the factory. A number of San Francisco people who have been East recently and saw this car, have nothing but praise for it. Mr. Schwabacher's machine is due to arrive here about the twenty-fifth instant, and will be on exhibition at the Pioneer Automobile Company's store, 901 Golden Gate avenue. E. L. Ford, a millionaire auto enthusiast of Detroit, received his four-cylinder Winton touring car on the eighth, the same day that Mr. Schwabacher's car was shipped for San Francisco. These two machines were turned out of the factory on the same date. Mr. Ford writes the Winton factory as follows: "My car arrived yesterday morning, and I am very much pleased both with the appearance and the operation of it. I drove one hundred and seventy-five miles yesterday, and it worked very nicely. It has already attracted a great deal of attention, and is making quite a hit in Detroit. I wish to congratulate you on turning out the finest four-cylinder car on the market." Byron L. Jackson has just returned from an extended trip throughout the East. He visited the Winton factory and has the honor of being the first San Francisco man to ride in the four-cylinder touring car. He cannot say too much in praise of the car and especially of the absence of vibration and the ease of control. He dwells more particularly upon the tonneau, which has side entrance, being very wide and comfortable. Mr. Jackson says that while the style of the machine is very different from anything he has ever seen, it is more beautiful than any encountered in the East.

Dennis Dimond, of Fruitvale, received a new Oldsmobile tonneau from the Pioneer company last week.

E. P. Brinegar and J. F. McLain will attend the manoeuvres of the army at Paso Robles in August, at which time the Department will make a test of the usefulness of a Winton touring car especially built for army service, and when the future of the automobile for army usage will be determined.

Continued on Page 27

The Dinner Setting is Incomplete
without

White Rock
LITHIA Water

A Selected Water is as Essential
as a Selected Wine

P. J. WENIGER & CO.
DISTRIBUTORS

101-103 Powell St.
SAN FRANCISCO

M. Ella Harris has removed to 128 Geary street where she will continue to treat by her famous method all facial blemishes such as wrinkles, crows' feet, smallpox pittings, etc. A neat little booklet is issued called "Hints on Beauty" which is mailed free on application. The new location will doubtless prove very successful as it is within easy reach of all communities.

REPAIRS MADE AND SUPPLIES FURNISHED AT THE

Hotel Vendome Automobile Garage San Jose

Stable accommodations free to guests. Record time on road from San Francisco to San Jose, two hours.

PIERCE
STANHOPE

Price, $1350 without Top; $1450 with Top

Pierce Arrow Touring Car (French) $2650
Northern Runabout, $800

MOBILE CARRIAGE CO.

GOLDEN GATE AVE. AND GOUGH ST.

Phone Private Exchange 770

San Francisco

AUTOMOBILES FOR HIRE

Downtown Offices:

Palace Hotel · Occidental Hotel · St. Francis Hotel

INDIAN and RAMBLER MOTOCYCLES

Absolute one-hand control.
Powerful engines. Run fast or
slow and CLIMB HILLS.
Indian won recent hill-climb in
New York against all-comers;
also won 50 mile road race at
Buffalo, June 11. Time, 1 hr.
11 min., 30 sec.—a 1:25 4-5 gait.

C. C. HOPKINS
Larkin & McAllister

"SOLUTION OF TIRE TROUBLES" FISK DETACHABLE

ONLY A WRENCH NEEDED
CAN'T COME OFF THE RIM
CAN'T PINCH THE TUBE

MORE MILEAGE
MORE COMFORT
MORE SATISFACTION

CALL OR WRITE PACIFIC COAST BRANCH
PHIL. B. BEKEART CO. 114 SECOND ST.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

ON the HILLS NOT THE RACE TRACK

is the test of power. The Annual Hill Climbing Contest of the Minneapolis Automobile Club was held on Saturday, June 11th, on Kenwood Hill, when the

Rambler

again demonstrated its superiority over cars costing three times its price, and, for the second time, won

FIRST PRIZE

finishing the course, 2680 feet, on a 10 per cent grade, in 1 minute, 7 3-5 seconds.

ENTRIES AND TIMES

Class No. A, Machines Valued at $2,750 and over—
Owner	Make	Time
J. H. Queal,	Pope-Toledo	:59
A. F. Timme,	Pope-Toledo	1:05
Dic. Ferris,	Pope-Toledo	1:05 4-5
F. T. Heffelfinger,	Peerless	1:08 1-5
Ralph Bagley,	Packard	1:11
Bert Strong,	Stearns	1:22

Class No. B, Machines Valued bet. $2,750 and $1,750—
A. C. Bennett,	Winton	1:11
G. W. Cappelin,	Winton	1:25
George Shear,	Knox	1:41

Class No. C, Machines Valued bet. $1,750 and $1,000—
M. E. Clark,	Rambler	1:07 3-5
C. C. Pillsbury,	Franklin	1:10 1-5
Dr. A. P. Walrath,	Rambler	1:14

Send for our latest illustrated Catalogue "C"; it explains RAMBLER construction; the records prove its value.

RAMBLER AUTOMOBILE AGENCY
Tenth and Market Sts., San Francisco

The CADILLAC

MODEL B. Price $950
With Tonneau $1050

August 8th from Del Monte to 12th and Broadway, Oakland, 6 hrs, 5 min.

October 18th the same run was made in 5 hrs. 38 min., without stopping the car or refilling with gasoline or water, breaking all records.

The only successful tour of the Yosemite Valley was made by a party of four in a CADILLAC.

CUYLER LEE, Agent. 201-203 Larkin St., S. F.

This is the White Steam Touring Car complete with canopy top, curtains and glass front, baskets, acetylene lamp equipment, and extra tonneau seat.

WHITE STEAM TOURING CAR COMPLETE

AUTOMOBILE GARAGE
SAN MATEO

PAUL L. NOISAT PHONE BLACK 111
GARAGE AND REPAIR SHOP
B ST., NEAR THIRD AVE.

Music

[Communications addressed to this department should be received not later than Tuesday noon.]

At Jean de Reszke's singing school the rates are forty dollars an hour, and that is not for a private lesson. The pupils are taken in classes of four and each pays ten dollars. M. de Reszke gives a lesson to each pupil alternately and the other three listen. As he has as many pupils as he can receive now, it will be seen that his school will soon be as much a source of profit to him as his singing, even at the rates he used to be paid.

When Mendelssohn appeared in London in 1829 he gave a concert at which he played the solo part in Weber's "Concert-stuck." This was the criticism which appeared in the Literary Gazette: "A German gentleman with a long Christian name—too long for any Christian to pronounce with impunity—made his debut on this occasion, and performed on the piano a piece termed on the card a 'concert-stuck.' The pianist, however, never once stuck in his performance but on the contrary appeared to get through his work with not less satisfaction to his audience than to himself."

As the story goes, Queen Mary at one time, during a hunting trip into the highlands of Perthshire, offered her own harp as a prize in a bardic competition. It was awarded to Miss Beatrice Gurdyn, of Banchory, and later found its place in a family collection of Stuart and Jacobite relics. It closely resembles the famous harp of Brian Boru, and about a hundred years ago, when it was fitted with strings and played upon, it was found to possess a tone of remarkable sweetness.

When Fannie Francisca comes to America it will be her first visit since she left San Francisco, over ten years ago, to take up her operatic studies in Europe. She now holds a great position among the leading operatic lights of Europe. She is a dramatic soprano and in such works as "Hamlet," "Manon," "Rigoletto," "Carmen," "Faust" and "Traviata" has won special praise.

The Misses Theresa and Lily Sherwood are spending their vacation at the Hotel Rowardennan.

—The Music Critic.

Mrs. Eva B. Wallace of 139 Post street left San Francisco via the Overland for New York city on July fourteenth, going direct to Paris. Mrs. Wallace, by her thorough, earnest and persistent application, which mark the road to progress and success, has made for herself an enviable reputation, placing her in the front rank of successful milliners. Her exquisite taste and artistic designing, together with a close study of the lines of the face, has won for her the patronage of the elite of our city. Sailing on the Cunard line for Paris this month, she will give her entire attention to business while in the gay metropolis, visiting not only the Louvre and Bon Marche, but the exclusive millinery shops, among them Carlier in the Rue de la Paix, Verot, Reboux and Paquin, bringing back with her some of their world-famed creations. Living in an atmosphere of harmonious coloring, elegance and luxury of art in the millinery world such as Paris alone can give, it is safe to say Mrs. Wallace will return to our city fully qualified to cater to the most fastidious taste. Her aim is not only to display the picturesque theatre creation, but to model the tailor-made hats for the more severe street costume, designing them so as to be becoming as well as stylish. On her return from abroad Mrs. Wallace will stop a few days in New York, to study our winter fashions, arriving in San Francisco early in September with a complete line of Parisian and New York novelties.

VALUABLE JEWELRY LOST

During the summer months much jewelry is lost traveling and at summer resorts. This can be avoided by leaving yours with the Baldwin Jewelry Co., 906 Market St., who make advances on diamonds and jewelry.

Corona Cafe, New Montgomery and Mission St. Mercantile lunch 25c. Always good, try it.

MURINE EYE REMEDY

THOSE
LUSTROUS
EYES ARE MURINE
EYES

Sunlight Intensified by Reflection

from Ocean Beach and Desert Sand unrelieved by foliage. Winds and mineral laden poisonous dust, all bring eye-troubles in their wake, Granulated Eyelids, Red, Itching, Burning, Tired and Watery Eyes, Impaired Vision and Eye Pain. Prevention, Relief and Cure are found in MURINE EYE REMEDY, mild and harmless. Murine aids those wearing glasses, doesn't smart, but soothes and quickly cures. Is an Eye Tonic. Sold by Opticians and Druggists. Fifty Cents.

EXCURSION RATES ST. LOUIS

ROUND TRIP Excursion Tickets to St. Louis and Chicago on sale August 8, 9, 10, 18, 19, and dates in other months later at the following rates:

TO ST. LOUIS . . . $67.50
TO CHICAGO, passing one way through St. Louis . . . $72.50

RETURN LIMIT three months. Stop overs allowed on both going and returning trip.

THESE RATES GOOD ON ANY TRAIN

Ask about the Through Tourist Cars direct to the Exposition.

613 MARKET STREET

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

LOUIS CREPAUX

(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

SCHOOL OF TONE PLACING (PALATAL SYSTEM)

Vocal Phonetics—Besides the
"Palatal Tone Placing System"

taught in the Louis Crepau School, another and most important feature is the teaching of the English phonetic sounds. The study of the five vowels is not all that is necessary to sing in a language, and particularly so in English. Very few English-speaking people are able to sing the phonetics of their language exempt from throatiness. Fundamentally, English phonetics cannot be emitted in singing as uttered in speech. From a vocal standpoint and through ten years of experience in teaching English-speaking singers, Mr. Crepau has made a vocal classification of all the English phonetic sounds. This classification enables English-speaking singers to master all the English phonetic sounds and renders them harmonious and easy to sing.

Apply at the School Mondays and Thursdays, from 2:00 to 2:30 p. m. Y. M. C. A. Building, Ellis and Mason Sts.

LOUIS H. EATON

ORGANIST AND DIRECTOR OF THE CHOIR

TRINITY CHURCH

Teacher of Singing, Piano and Organ

Special advantages offered singers in choir training
Studio and Residence 1676 Broadway

Between Van Ness Ave. and Franklin Street

H. B. PASMORE

TEACHER OF SINGING

Specialty—Shakespeare's system of tone production.

1424 Washington Street

573 Fifteenth street, OAKLAND, on Thursdays after August 1st.

M. GERTRUDE JUDD

Teacher of Whistling

785 Geary St., S. F.

Phone Hyde 933

JOSEPH ROECKEL and MME. COURSEN-ROECKEL

Assisted by Mlle. Elena Roedel, Concert contralto

NEW VOCAL CLASSES Placing of Voice and Solo Practice
1060 FULTON ST. Opposite Alamo Square

Conrad W. Fuhrer

TEACHER of Violin and Ensemble Playing. 1676 Page St.
Phone Fell 3373. Also care of Sherman, Clay & Co.

CHICKERING Best in the World
PIANOS Oldest in America

100,000 IN USE

BENJ. CURTAZ &amp; SON, 16 O'FARRELL STREET

SOLE AGENTS

TONKIN, Photographer

1490 MARKET ST.

Bet. 7th and 8th Sts.

San Francisco, Cal.

GROUND FLOOR STUDIO

Dr. H. J. STEWART

TEACHER OF VOCAL MUSIC

Pianoforte, Organ, Harmony and Composition
Special course for singers desiring church appointments

Studio, 1105 Bush St.

MR. ANDREW BOGART

TEACHER OF SINGING

METHOD of the ELDER LAMPERTI

Home Studio: S. E. corner Buchanan and Page Sts.

PHONE PARK 202

SIGNOR ABRAMOFF

The only teacher of the famous California Prima Donna, Miss Edith Decker (Dramatic Soprano), Miss Paraskova Sandelin (Contralto), Mr. Emil Arnold (Tenor) and of several other singers prominent in the profession.

VOICE CULTURE (OLD ITALIAN METHOD)

Signor Abramoff Equalizes, Beautifies and Strengthens the Tone. Corrects Nasal and Throaty Production Produces apertamentos, and Covered tones with Open Mouth.

703 SUTTER ST.

HOURS: 10 to 1 and 3 to 7 Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday

MR. THEODOR

SALMON

Concert Pianist and Teacher. Pupil of Kullak, Reinecke, Jadassohn and Richter. Studio, 546 Sutter St. Phone James 1281. Residence, "The Nordhoff."

Von Meyerinck

School of Music

Telephone Park 223

841 FULTON STREET

Offers all the advantages of Eastern and European conservatories for a thorough musical education.

STAFF OF TEACHERS.

Voice Culture - - - MRS. ANNA VON MEYERINCK
Art Expression, Opera and Drama, MRS. MARY FAIRWEATHER
Piano Harmony and Composition MR. FRED ZECH, JR.
Violin and Viola - - - MISS MARIE H. MILLS
MR. W. F. ZECH

Competent staff of assistant teachers. Special teachers for Languages German, French and Italian, Physical Culture, Fencing, Elocution, and Stage Dancing. Prospectus upon application.

SIGNOR PAOLO LA VILLA

(Of Florence, Italy)

N. B.—Special Terms for Professionals.

Vocal Studio: THE ROOSEVELT, 546 Sutter St.
Phone James 1282

SUMMER RESORTS

The following Resorts will send descriptive booklet when requested.

TUSCAN SPRINGS

Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Catarrh and Stomach, Gout, Rheumatism and All BLOOD DISEASES taken under a guarantee to be cured in a specific time, or all expenses including Ry. fare both ways refunded. Send 50cts. for a bottle of Stomach and Catarrh Salts. Reduced round trip rates. FRANK J. HELLEN, Mgr., Tuscan Springs, Cal.

GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM

A Sanitarium, cottage plan; not a hospital. Equipped for the scientific application of Water, Electricity, Massage, Tissue Oscillation, Electric Light, X-Ray, Dry, Hot Air and all minor treatments. Large grounds, 5½ acres, shade, etc. Separate treatment apartments for men and women. Fifteen minutes walk from centre of city; one block from car line. Beautiful scenery. Write for literature. GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM, San Jose, Cal.

SKAGGS

Hot Springs, Sonoma County; only 4½ hours from San Francisco and but 9 miles staging; waters noted for medicinal virtues; best natural hot mineral water bath in State; boating and swimming; good trout streams; telephone, telegraph, daily mail and San Francisco papers. FIRST-CLASS HOTEL AND STAGE SERVICE morning and afternoon; round trip from San Francisco $5.50. Take Tiburon ferry daily 7:30 a. m. or 2:30 p. m. Rates $2 a day or $12 a week. References: any guest of the past nine years. Information at Peck's, 11 Montgomery St., or of J. F. MULGREW, Skaggs, Cal.

PARAISO SPRINGS

MONTREY CO., CAL.

The most popular sanitary health resort in California. Completely renovated and improved. No winds or fogs, grand mountain and valley scenery. Hot soda and sulphur baths, large swimming tank, excellent table. Booklet and particulars of F. W. SCHROEDER, Mgr. or PECK'S BUREAU, 11 Montgomery St.

SODA BAY SPRINGS

On Clear Lake. Hunting, fishing, boating, launch, horses, tennis, croquet, dark room, warm soda geysers in bathhouse, clubhouse, etc. Rates $10 to $15. CHATFIELD & VINCENT, 228 Montgomery St., or LEE D. CRAIG, Manager, Soda Bay, Kelseyville, P. O., Lake Co., Cal.

TRUCKEE RIVER COUNTRY CLUB

Summer Resort and Sportsmen's Lodge. Fourth Season May 15. Sierra attractions. California's Largest Rainbow Hatchery and Finest Fishing.

G. H. FOULKS, Verdi, Nev., or Nevada Block, S. F.

Camp Vacation

Hotel under canvas on the Russian River below Guerneville in a grove a mile and a half long, skirting the river; tennis courts; 40 new boats. There will be a dam in the river affording 4 miles of smooth water for boating, bathing and swimming. Adults $2 per day, $10 per week; children under 10 half rates. Special rates for families. Opens May 1. Address Mrs. L. C. CNOPIUS, Camp Vacation. "Vacation" P. O., Sonoma Co., Cal.

Byron Hot Springs

Open all the year. Unexcelled climate. Luxurious Mineral and Mud Baths, and the most curative waters known for Rheumatism, Gout, Sciatica, Liver and Kidney and Nervous troubles, also Malaria.

Hotel unique in cuisine, service and appointments.

Rates $17.50 per week in Cottages. $3 per day and upwards in Main Hotel.

Reached by Southern Pacific, 2 1-2 hours from San Francisco. 3 trains daily, at 8:30 a. m., 10 a. m. and 3:30 p. m.

H. R. WARNER, Manager

Byron Hot Springs Post Office, California

Awnings, Tents, Campers' Outfits, Bags, Etc. Rented and Sold

R. McMAHON
Tel. Bush 858 35 MARKET ST.

ASK PECK, HE KNOWS

Literature and Particulars on all hotels and summer resorts in California. 11 Montgomery Street

Free Information

Agua Caliente Springs

New attractions; open all the year round; nearest Hot Sulphur Springs to San Francisco. Temperature 115 degrees; no staging; fare $1.10. Cures rheumatism, asthma and kindred ailments. Five Hot Sulphur Springs; tub and plunge baths, largest mineral water swimming tank in State. Accommodations first class. $2.00 per day; $12 to $14 per week; rates to families, half rates to children. Peck's, 11 Montgomery St. or THEO RICHARDS, Agua Caliente Springs, Sonoma Co., Cal. We have erected a stone dining room, seats 400 guests.

Deer Park Inn

And cottages; 6 miles from Lake Tahoe; open June 1st; ideal place for rest and recreation; elevation 6507 feet. Fine mineral springs. For further information call at office of Traveler, 39 Montgomery St., or send for booklet.

J. B. SCOTT, Folsom, Cal.

Beautiful Laurel Dell

The Robson Orchestral and Dr. Monroe N. Callender will furnish the best music ever played at any resort in the state.

The Switzerland of America. The only lake resort that has its own mineral springs and a chemically pure spring. Boating, swimming, marine toboggan 160 feet in length; first class livery; saddle horses. Dining room seats 300. Bowling alley and all games free to guests. Pamphlets at Peck's, 11 Montgomery St. and Cal. N. W. Ry., 650 Market St. Address, EDGAR DURNAN, Owner and Proprietor Laurel Dell, Lake Co., Cal.

HOTEL BELVEDERE

Most attractive resort on San Francisco bay. Special rates to clubs of young men. Send for booklet. MRS. A. T. MOORE, Belvedere, Cal

Kenilworth Inn

Mill Valley

One of the most popular resorts in Mill Valley, situated at the foot of Mt. Tamalpais; only 30 minutes' ride from the city; rates reasonable.

MISSES PALMER & HULETT.

VACATION 1904

IS NOW READY FOR DISTRIBUTION.

"VACATION" is issued annually by the

California Northwestern Railway

THE PICTURESQUE ROUTE OF CALIFORNIA

and is the standard publication on the Pacific Coast for information regarding

MINERAL SPRING RESORTS, COUNTRY HOMES AND FARMS WHERE SUMMER BOARDERS ARE TAKEN, AND SELECT CAMPING SPOTS.

This year's "VACATION 1904" contains over 150 pages, beautifully illustrated, and is complete in its detailed information as to location, accommodations, attractions, etc., with terms from $7.00 per week up.

To be had at Ticket Offices, 650 Market Street (Chronicle Building) and Tiburon Ferry, foot of Market Street; General Office, Mutual Life Building, corner of Sansome and California Streets, San Francisco

Applications by mail will receive immediate response.

JAS. L. FRAZIER, Gen'l Mgr. R. X. RYAN, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

THE OAKLAND TRIBUNE

is delivered into more homes of the masses and classes of Oakland, and Alameda County than all other Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley dailies combined. Reason—it's the best newspaper.

W. E. DARGIE, Pres.

T. T. DARGIE, Secy.

Automobile Topics

(Continued from Page 28)

Motocycle Items

The first five positions in the endurance run from New York to Cambridge, Maryland, the first of the month, were won by the Indian riders. These were the only machines to obtain perfect scores. The ride both from New York to Albany and return and from New York to Cambridge are described as something terrific. The little machines proved themselves wonders and convinced the most skeptical as to their reliability. The riders who participated are particularly anxious to have some automobilists cover the same routes. The Albany road for miles is a succession of rocks and in Delaware and Maryland the "road" for fifty miles is simply a sand patch, so deep in places that a machine will stand alone. Through all of these trying conditions the riders kept up their average of fifteen miles an hour.

Tomorrow the officers of the Pacific Motocyclists will lay out the course for their one hundred mile reliability run on the thirty-first. The start will be made from this side of the bay about eight a. m.

The road to Walnut Creek (Fish ranch road) has recently been oiled and a number of the club members who started on the "blind" run last Sunday refused to ride the "tar hill" and instead went to San Jose by way of Mission San Jose and came home on the city side of the bay. Captain Kenna and a few members went to Walnut Creek by the old road and had a pleasant time, returning by way of Haywards.

C. C. HOPKINS.

Officer of the Pacific Coast Motocyclists' Club and member of the Federation of American Motocyclists. Mr. Hopkins has been identified with the wheel trade on the Pacific Coast for many years. Previous to coming to California he was for several years in Colorado, of which State he was for a considerable time the champion. In Denver in 1887 he established a world's unicycle record for one hour's ride—1211-16 miles—and the following year he made a trip across the country on an ordinary. He owned the first pneumatic-tired bicycle ever shipped west of Chicago. Mr. Hopkins is a most enthusiastic motocyclist and he predicts great things for the small machines as soon as the people fully understand their great capabilities.

SUMMER RESORTS

The following Resorts will send descriptive booklet when requested

Hotel Rowardennan

"IN THE MOUNTAINS BY THE SEA"

Ben Lomond, Santa Cruz County. Opened under entirely new management. Round-trip Tickets from San Francisco, $3. For booklet apply PECK'S BUREAU, 11 Montgomery St., S. F.; or to WM. G. DODGE, Lessee.

The Monterey

Most Elegantly appointed Hotel on the Pacific Coast. Hot and cold water; Electric and Gas Lights; Private and Public Baths; Telephone in every room; four Private Dining Rooms; Fine Sample Rooms. American Plan, $2.50 and upwards; European Plan, 75c and upwards. Hageman & Jones, Props., Monterey, Cal.

Hotel Ben Lomond

SANTA CRUZ MOUNTAINS—NO STAGING

Table first-class. Electric lights, boating, swimming, fishing, hunting, tennis, croquet. See booklet, S. P. Company, 613 Market St., or B. DICKINSON, Ben Lomond, Cal.

Tahoe Tavern

On Lake Tahoe, the largest and most beautiful body of water in the world at this elevation, now open. The tavern will be conducted this season by Mr. F. W. Richardson, manager of California's famous mission hotel, The Glenwood, Riverside; a guarantee that it will be strictly first class. The table supplied with all delicacies; fishermen constantly employed to furnish lake trout. For rates address F. W. RICHARDSON

Brockway

Lake Tahoe

Opens June 1st. Write FRANK B. ALVERSON, Mgr., Brockway, Cal.

The Tallac

Lake Tahoe, Cal.

Cafe European. Nurses, Maids and Children, American Plan. Prices now as low as any hotel on Lake. Service, accommodations, boating and livery superior to any. Address M. LAWRENCE & CO., Tallac, Cal.

The Grove

Lake Tahoe

Half mile east of Tallac on Lake Shore. Rates $2 per day; $10 per week; meals 50c. Good saddle horses and the best of livery; boats free to all guests, J. E. FARMETER, Prop., Tallac, Cal.

Spend Your Vacation

A great many San Francisco people are planning to spend the entire summer at Hotel Del Monte. No other resort in California offers such a combination of attractions—sea bathing, golf, automobilism, bowling, tennis, fishing, and all out-of-door sports. Instead of going from place to place seeking comforts, the wise ones of society are planning already to put in several enjoyable weeks down at Del Monte by the sea. Address Geo. P. Snell, manager, Del Monte, California.

At Hotel Del Monte*Hotel Berkeley

Dwight Way, Berkeley

Half block from Key Route and Berkeley local trains. Surrounded by beautiful lawns and flowers; an ideal summer resort hotel; quiet, restful; modern appointments; cuisine first class in every respect; large, airy rooms. M. A. GIBBS, Prop.

THE MART DOMESTIC and IMPORTED BEERS
WINES and LIQUORS, for Camping,
Picnics and Vacations, at
1348 MARKET STREET Phone South 1176 REDUCED PRICES

MOORE'S POISON OAK REMEDY

Cures Poison-Oak and all Skin Diseases
Sold by all Druggists

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST—Phelan Bldg., Rooms 6, 8, 10, 48. 806 Market St. Phone John 3841

Letters

Millard's Rattling Story

Bailey Millard has written a rattling good story in "The Lure o' Gold." It is at once a tale of adventure by sea, a bit of amateur detective work and a treasure hunt brought up to date. There isn't a girl in it from cover to cover, and the youth who doesn't pass it on to his chum with the time-honored endorsement of "bully book" doesn't deserve his good luck. John Morning, aged eighteen, is the hero of the adventures. John is a boy miner who has been into the Klondike with his father, an old-time miner and prospector, but they made their start too late to strike a fortune, and it was on their return trip empty-handed that they were lured aside to the new diggings at Nome. Here they secured a beach claim and were in the midst of their work when the elder Morning was stricken down with malarial fever and ordered back to the South. So the business of clearing up the claim and transporting the gold was left to John, and he had just completed his task, paid off his men, and secured the proceeds, over forty thousand dollars, when we are introduced to him, lying sleepless in his bunk in the Great Northern Hotel, unable to close his eyes because of his uneasiness regarding the other tenant, who has not yet come in and who may be any sort of a desperado. It turns out, however, that he is Dr. Quaritch, ship surgeon of the steamer Modesto, an old friend of the Morning family and as much pleased to meet John as he is surprised to find a loaded rifle pointed at him when he succeeds in lighting the bit of candle which is to show him his way to bed. Dr. Quaritch tries to induce John to go home by the Modesto, where he can be sure of decent accommodations and place his treasure in the purser's safe, but the impatient lad has already made his arrangements to leave by a schooner which is to sail the following morning and by which he expects to reach San Francisco in ten days, whereas the Modesto will not reach port for sixteen. Next morning John has his treasure chest conveyed to the beach expecting to go aboard the Sea Mist at once, but he soon discovers that his plans are not so easily carried out. He mounts guard over his gold and before long begins to doubt the wisdom of his plans. However, having engaged his passage, and being certain that the Sea Mist will be the first vessel to leave Nome Harbor, he makes the best of things, and after many hours of delay is at last on board the lighter which is to convey passengers and freight to the vessel. Here he makes a new discovery, which is that, there being no shipping or express company, all freight of whatever description is accepted at the owner's risk. While the lighter is being towed out to the schooner, and apparently there is no possibility of disaster, the heavy chest which contains the treasure and which is as much as two men can lift, suddenly disappears. Where it went and how and why, together with the plans for discovering the thieves and recovering the gold is what Mr. Millard has told and told well. How it came about that John Morning eventually took passage on the Modesto and reached San Francisco before the Sea Mist, and how he verified his suspicions and made a single-handed and successful fight against the robbers is a part of the story. There is a most exciting search after the lost gold in which a score and more take part under the belief that finders are keepers and any one who gets possession has a right to it. The Modesto had been sent north with an insufficient supply of coal and practically no ballast in order to save every available inch of space for cargo. On her way back, before she reaches a coaling station she encounters a storm, and setting so high above water, without fuel to make headway against the wind, she is blown far out of her course. It is necessary for her to make port on time, since she is chartered for a voyage across the Pacific and must be ready for her new cargo or forfeit her commission. How her captain managed to keep the contract for her owners and make a substantial sum in addition is another part of the tale, and it would be no easy task to tell which part of the narrative is the most interesting. Heretofore it has been claimed for "Treasure Island" that it is the one good tale of sea adventure that is not loaded to the guards with slang and profanity, but that honor must now be shared with "The Lure o' Gold." The illustrations, which are by Arthur William Brown, are uncommonly satisfactory. The dedication is to William Randolph Hearst. The publisher, E. J. Clode of New York, has turned out a very satisfactory volume.

—The Bookworm.

NELSON'S AMYCOSE

Infallible Remedy for Catarrh
Sore Throat and Inflammations of the Skin

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. —.

ELLA VAN BENTHUSEN Plaintiff
vs.
THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN Defendant

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:
THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's alleged willful and utter neglect of said plaintiff for more than four years last past, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 30th day of June, in the year of our Lord; one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk.
By CHAS. C. MORRIS, Deputy Clerk.
N. F. FLOOD, Plaintiff's Attorney
1122 Market St., Rooms 1, 2, 3 and 4.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. —. No. 91429

ELISE KOEBSCH Plaintiff
vs.
CHARLES W. F. KOEBSCH Defendant

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:
CHARLES W. F. KOEBSCH, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of plaintiff; also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 8th day of July in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk.
By GEO. W. LEE, Deputy Clerk.
McLELLAN & McLELLAN, Plaintiff's Attorneys.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of PETER MCCARTHY, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Kate A. Schwerin and Nellie M. Hall, Executrices of the Last Will and Testament of Peter McCarthy deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within ten months after the first publication of this notice to the said Kate A. Schwerin and Nellie M. Hall, as such executrices, at Rooms 607, 611, 612 Hayward Building, San Francisco, Cal, the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

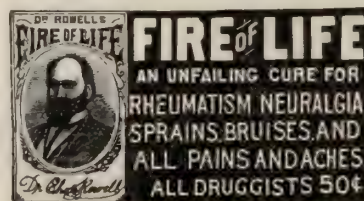

KATE A. SCHWERIN and NELLIE M. HALL,
Executrices of the Last Will and Testament of
PETER MCCARTHY, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, July 16, 1904.

J. J. LERMEN, Attorney for Estate of Peter McCarthy, Deceased.

DIVIDEND NOTICE

PHOENIX SAVINGS, B. and L. ASSOCIATION. For the six months ending June 30, 1904, dividends have been declared on deposits in the savings department, as follows: On term certificates, at the rate of 5 per cent per annum; on ordinary savings accounts at the rate of 4 1/2 per cent per annum, free of taxes and payable on and after July 20, 1904. The Phoenix has a guaranteed capital of $200,000 and a total paid in capital of $1,200,000. Its board of directors are: A. A. Watkins, president; Charles R. Bishop, vice-president; S. Prentiss Smith, treasurer; George C. Boardman, director; Gavin McNab, director; Charles E. Ladl, director; CLARENCE GRANGE, secretary and managing director.

Fire of Life, known for years as the most remarkable remedy for the cure of

RHEUMATISM

A trial of this remedy will at once show its great merit as a rheumatic cure.

ROWELL & BROWN
32 Turk St., S. F.

HATS AND BONNETS

RUMPLE & RIEDEL
221 Geary St. We have just received a few choice French novelties in Hats, Turbans and Bonnets.

HAIR GOODS

G. LEDERER
Wig Maker and Hairdresser. Scalp treatments, Shampooing, Manicuring, Hair dyeing, Switches, Ornaments, Toupees. Complete line of pure Hair Goods only. 123 Stockton St.

KIMONOS AND JAPANESE GOODS

KIMONOS
Silk and Cotton; Custom made and made to order; of every description at special low price. Call and inspect our large and artistic line. The Orient, 633 Sutter St. near Taylor.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR REMOVED

BEATRICE ST. JOHN
Hair, Face and Scalp Specialist. 426 Sutter St. Phone Black 153. Superfluous Hair killed root and branch by absorption—guaranteed permanent, $1.00.

Residence 814 Grove St., S. F.
Telephone Page 81

HENRY P. TRICOU
Notary Public

Telephone Main 1880

206 Montgomery St.
Bet. Pine and Bush

VEUVE
CLICQUOT
PONSARDIN

The most delicious
Champagne
of the Age

Yellow Label, Dry
Gold Label, Brut

Cruze &
Fils Freres

Clarets and
Sauternes

Creme des Grands
Crus
(Creme of Cognac)

A. Vignier Co.

429 & 431 Battery
San Francisco

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy

1051 Market St., bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.

The largest of its kind in the world.
Book "The Philosophy of Marriage" mailed free.
A Valuable Book for Men.

Other People's Ideas

From "The Queen's Quair," by Maurice Hewlett:

Ah! how can you be offended with Love and his masterful ways? Or with the blithe lover, who laughs while he spoils you? It is son naturel; and must we not follow our nature?

Here is the difference between a boy's kisses and a man's. The one sort implies itself, the other all the furious empery of love.

Des-Essars: You may say, if you choose, that a vain man is a gross feeder, to whom flattery is but a snack; but the old half-truth takes me nearer, which says that every man is dog or cat. If you stroke the dog, he adores the stooping godhead in you. The cat sees you a fool for your pains.

French Paris: If you drink to get courage you must pay for it. Your wind goes, and then where is your courage? In the bottle, in the bottle. You drink again—and so you go the vicious round.

Greater pride hath no woman than this, to brave the old love for the sake of the new.

To be kind to a servant, nine times in ten, means that you make him rich at your own charges, and then he holds cheap what his own welfare has diminished.

A man is sane at thirty, rich at forty, wise at fifty, or never; and what health exacts, wealth secures, and wisdom requires, is the orderly, punctual performance of the customary.

If there is one baser than he who takes heart to do wrong from his wife's tenderness, it is, I suppose, the man who grows rich upon her dishonor. There is mighty little to choose.

Des-Essars: Boys' secrets are truly but a mode of communicating news, which, when it is particularly urgent to be spread, is called a secret.

Here is one difference between imagination and fancy, that the first will leap full-fledged into the life of the upper air from the egg of its beginning, while the second crouches long callow in the nest, and must be fostered into plumage before it can take its pretty flights.

Love—in the great manner of it—should be a conflet for generosity; either lover should be emulous of pain or loss.

Des-Essars: There are two kinds of lovers' joys, as I think—the mellow and the sharp. The one is rooted in the heart, and the other in the sense, but both alike need leisure of mind if they are to bear fruit; for in the contemplation of our happiness lies the greatest happiness of all.

French Paris: Women can only be trusted to do a thing, and never to cause a thing to be done. They will always find a thousand reasons why it should not be done, or why it should be done another way—their way, an older way, a newer way, any way in the world but yours. Burn the boats when you need a woman to help you, as you constantly do in delicate affairs.

If the creature of your use starts quivering at the touch of your hand, how are you served if by your whip and spurs you set her plunging madly into the dark, shying and swerving and cracking her heart? You wear out your tool before your time. (Apropos jealousy.)

The joys of love—love's moment of victory, love's rest, and possession of the spoils—are gossamer things: an adverse breath may shred them away. As for Love, himself, you may call him a Lord or a Beast, give him his roseate wings or his cloven hoofs and tail: certainly there never was in the world so refined a glutton. Perfection is what he claims, no less; perfection of leisure to obtain, perfection of content, and all according to that standard of mind which, in a field without limit, grudges the stirring of a filament as a hindrance to the enormous calm he covets, and sees in a speck of sand a blemish upon his prize.

AN EDISON PHONOGRAPH

and
EDISON GOLD MOULDED RECORDS

make a musical combination that leads the world. They make music possible in every home.

PETER BACICALUPI

Pacific Coast Headquarters
786 Mission St. SAN FRANCISCO

For those who appreciate comfort and attention

Occidental Hotel

SAN FRANCISCO

AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN PLAN
A QUIET HOME
CENTRALLY LOCATED

GEORGE WARREN HOOPER, LESSEE

Visit the

Hoffman Cafe

Wm. J. Sullivan, Proprietor

Lunch, Grill and Wine Rooms

Half a block below Palace and Grand Hotels, S. F.

Fine Goods a Specialty. Merchants' hot lunch from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. An extra spread served on all holidays. Merchants' lunch served in Ladies Cafe and Grill, from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. Oysters, English Chops, Steaks and Delicacies a specialty.

Handsomest Cafe in America

Open all night. Private Dining Rooms for Ladies and Escorts

601 Market St. (S. W. Cor. 2nd and Market Sts.)

POODLE DOG RESTAURANT, CORNER Eddy and Mason Streets, San Francisco—Private dining and banquet rooms. Telephone 429. A. B. BLANCO & BRUN, Proprietors

W. SCHEPPLER &amp; SON

Dealer in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry.
1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

WARRANTED 10 YEARS

SOHMER
PIANO
AGENCY

BYRON MAUZY

The CECILIAN—The Perfect Piano Player

PIANOS
308-312 Post St
San Francisco.

PALACE HOTEL

San Francisco, California.

TOURISTS and TRAVELERS will, now, with difficulty recognize the famous Court into which for twenty-five years carriages have been driven. This space of over a quarter of an acre has recently, by the addition of very handsome furniture, rugs, chandeliers and tropical plants, been converted into a lounging room, the

FINEST
IN THE
WORLD

THE EMPIRE PARLOR—the Palm Room, furnished in Cerise, with Billiard and Pool tables for the ladies—the Louis XV Parlor—the Ladies' Writing Room, and numerous other modern improvements, together with unexcelled Cuisine and the most convenient location in the City—all add much to the ever-increasing popularity of this most famous Hotel.

Techau Tavern

The most unique resort in San Francisco.

There is not a more artistically appointed cafe in the country.

It is a place wherein the guest may feast the eye while dining sumptuously and being regaled with exquisite music.

The Tavern is now under new and experienced management, and patrons are assured of the constant attendance of the chief of the establishment, and of prompt service at all times.

Special attention is paid to luncheon, dinner and after-theatre parties.

Those who read much

are more frequently subject to eye trouble than others. There are, however, numerous modern occupations which bring on eye troubles that injure the brain and the physical system irreparably. Avoid danger by

Using GEORGE MAYERLE'S GLASSES

His Glasses insure health and a clear vision. Consultation Free. Open until 9 o'clock every evening. Geo. Mayerle's GERMAN EYEWATER makes weak eyes strong, sore eyes well, rests tired eyes. Price 50c. 62c by mail. Mail order or Wells-Fargo. Geo. Mayerle's Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers insure clean lenses without scratching.

Showing effect of George Mayerle's
Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers

GEORGE MAYERLE, German Expert Optician

1071 MARKET STREET

Two Doors from Seventh

CAFE ZINKAND

After the Theatre call at this Palace of Delights and revel in the luxuries of a spread fit for the gods, or drink of some of the best wine that ever chased the skeleton from the feast or painted landscapes within the brain of man.—Hograve.

MT. SHASTA SUMMER RATES

Fishing, hunting and camping facilities make the Shasta region most satisfactory as an outing place. There are no better trout streams than those about Shasta, and you are always in easy reach of direct communication with the city.

TICKETS AT REDUCED RATES
MAKE ACCESS EASY FOR EVERYBODY

Ask for a Shasta folder. It is illustrated, and will give you full information about every part of the Shasta country. Free from any agent, or Information Bureau.

613 MARKET ST.
SOUTHERN PACIFIC

OUR STANDARDS

Sperry's Best Family.

Drifted Snow.

Golden Gate Extra.

Sperry Flour Company

TOWN TALK

VOL. XII. No. 622

SAN FRANCISCO, JULY 30, 1904.

PRICE 10 CENTS.

BEAUTY THAT DEFIES TIME

DR. L. WILLIAMS
Specialist

Can the Lines written upon Women's Faces by Time, Sickness and Grief be erased?

Can beauty, once lost, be restored in all its freshness of color and loveliness of outline so that years drop from a woman's face like a mantle from her shoulders? Dr. L. Williams, the eminent Austrian dermatologist, with hundreds of clients in this city, says "Yes." Repeated and severe tests of his treatment all aver the same. A woman's beauty should last her lifetime. Ladies come to Dr. Williams from distant states and even from foreign lands. They bring wrinkles, crow's feet and the frightful pittings of smallpox. After treatment they take away faces so smooth and fair that the mother passes as her budding daughter's sister. Dr. Williams guarantees that the effects of his treatment are permanent. Many ladies would like to consult Dr. Williams in person but are unable to do so. For these he has prepared "Tissue Builder" to be used at home in accordance with short, plain directions. Wrinkles are caused by a shrinkage of the tissues beneath the skin. If this can be nourished in advanced life the folds in the skin will disappear and the face will be smooth and young again. "Tissue Builder" does this very thing and also acts as a tonic, softening and freshening the skin so that the tints of rose and lily are blended in a face once dull and faded. Every superficial blemish that mars the complexion is removed by "Tissue Builder."

Mme. Violet Barnes of Van Ness avenue writes: "I take great pleasure in testifying to the merits of 'Tissue Builder.' I find it the best of any I have ever tried." Thousands of similar testimonials all speak in the highest terms of "Tissue Builder," and facial treatment. The sincerest flattery is that of imitation, therefore Dr. Williams' "Tissue Builder" has many imitations, but there is nothing like it on the market. It has stood the test of twenty years and is now recognized as standard by the medical profession and thousands of grateful men and women who have rounded out, with firm, healthy flesh, thin cheeks and necks. For developing the bust and treating them to their beauty and contour it gives perfect satisfaction.

SPECIAL OFFER

THE REGULAR PRICE OF DR. WILLIAMS' "TISSUE BUILDER"

is $2 a bottle, but to introduce it into thousands of new homes, I have decided to send two bottles to all who answer this advertisement and send me $2. All packages are sent in plain wrapper, postage prepaid.

Hair on the Face,

Scars, moles, warts, etc., destroyed forever; positively guaranteed never to return or no charge; absolutely harmless; physicians' reference. Call or write

DR. WILLIAMS 369 Sutter St.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

...THE...

German Savings & Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus . . . . . $ 2,448,948.13
 Capital actually paid up in Cash . . . . . 1,000,000.00
 Deposits June 30, 1904 . . . . . 36,573,015.18

Board of Directors

JOHN LLOYD, President.
 DANIEL MEYER, 1st Vice-President
 H. HORSTMANN, 2nd Vice-President
 Ign. Steinhart      Emil Rohde      H. B. Russ      N. Ohlandt
 I. N. Walter      J. W. Van Bergen
 A. H. R. Schmidt,      Cashier
 Wm. Herrmann,      Asst. Cashier
 Geo. Tourny,      Secretary
 A. H. Muller,      Asst. Secretary
 W. S. Goodfellow      General Attorney

San Francisco Savings Union

532 California Street, Corner Webb

Deposits July 1, 1904 . . . . . $33,908,504.00
 Paid Up Capital . . . . . 1,000,000.00
 Reserve and Contingent Funds . . . . . 935,033.00

E. B. POND, President      W. C. B. de FREMERY } Vice-Presidents
    ROBERT WATT
 LOVELL WHITE, Cashier      R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier

DIRECTORS:

Henry F. Allen, William A. Magee, W. C. B. de Fremery, C. O. G. Miller,
 Robert Watt, George C. Boardman, Fred H. Beaver, Jacob Barth,
 E. B. Pond.

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits: Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

CONTINENTAL BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATION

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital - - - - $17,000,000.00
 Paid in Capital - - - - 3,500,000.00
 Monthly Income - - - - 250,000.00
 Homes built since organization - - - 1,500

Home Office 301 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

DR. WASHINGTON DODGE, President
 WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

It might be well to remember
 when making a will

THAT THE

CALIFORNIA SAFE DEPOSIT AND TRUST COMPANY

Is in a position to settle estates with the assurance that the administration will not change hands and that the estate will be prudently managed with absolute safety.

WILLS SAFELY KEPT WITHOUT CHARGE

OFFICES:

Cor. CALIFORNIA and MONTGOMERY STS.

San Francisco

Mechanics' Savings Bank

Incorporated January 21, 1904

Capital Stock paid-up $250,000.00

OFFICERS:

President, James O'B. Gunn      Vice-President, Geo. D. Gray
 Vice-President, Geo. F. Lyon      Cashier, Frederick H. Clark

DIRECTORS

F. W. Dohrmann, Jr., Geo. D. Gray, F. M. Greenwood, Jas. O'B. Gunn
 Marshall Hale, G. W. Kline, Geo. F. Lyon, Geo. M. Mitchell,
 Chas. C. Moore, Henry T. Scott, W. F. Williamson

The Mechanics' Savings Bank has opened its doors for a general Savings and Loan business at the S.W. corner Montgomery and Bush Sts., San Francisco, Cal.
 May 2, 1904.      Open Every Saturday Evening from 6 to 8.

The Owl Drug Co.

is the largest concern of its kind in this country—it buys
 its goods in such large quantity it can sell them for less
 money than most any other
 druggist pays for them.
 Telephone orders filled at
 once and delivered free.
 South 356.

1125 MARKET ST., S. F.
 BROADWAY & 10TH ST., OAKLAND

La Grande*BRANCHES

5A Taylor Street
 200 Mtgy. Ave. cor. Kearny
 202 Third cor. Howard
 1738 Market opp. Eleventh

Laundry

23 POWELL ST.
 Phone Bush 12

Sews      Buttons

Ordinary      Mending

Work called      for and delivered

FREE
 of charge

Rathjen Bros.

39 Stockton St.
 Phone Main 5522

Complete Line of Imported and Domestic

GROCERIES, TEAS, COFFEES
 WINES AND LIQUORS

Special Sale Days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday

Look for Items in all the Daily Papers

J. PORCHER*HATTER

Latest
 Summer
 Styles

JOHN A. STETSON CO.

1109 Market St
 Odd Fellows Building, S. F.

TOWN TALK

SAN FRANCISCO, JULY 30, 1904.

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

THEODORE F. BONNET - - - Editor
CHARLES S. SMITH - - - Manager

609 MISSION ST. FORTH FLOOR Telephone BUSH 713

SUBSCRIPTION.—One Year, in advance, $3.00; six months, $1.75; three months, $1.00; one month, 40 cents; single copies, 10 cents. Foreign subscriptions (countries in postal union), $4.00 per year. Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application. For Sale by all Newsdealers.

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.
RALPH A. GROVER Manager of Advertising
New York Representative, FREDERIC M. KRUGLER, Room 918,
150 Nassau Street.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N. Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 200 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

No attention is paid to anonymous communications, but the wishes of contributors as to the use of their names will be scrupulously regarded. We cannot undertake to preserve or return manuscripts.

TOWN TALK is mailed to subscribers every Thursday and should be received in this city and vicinity every Friday. Please notify us of tardy delivery.

The "Sane and Dangerous" Democracy.

According to Senator Tom Platt, the Republican boss of New York, the Democratic party has once more become "sane and dangerous." In characterizing the party as dangerous Senator Platt means, of course, that it menaces Republican interests. During the preceding eight years the party was insane and harmless. Now it is in a fair way of regaining its lost prestige and driving the Republican jobholders out of office. Hence it is dangerous to the Platts and to the men who figured in the Post Office scandals and who were spared exposure for the sake of the Administration. The most significant of the phenomena that augur Democratic success this year is the alienation of elements that have always been identified with the party in the years when it suffered most humiliating defeat. Mr. Roosevelt and his friends do not view with satisfaction the animosity of the Populists and radicals to the Democratic party. The noisy fanatics did the party more harm than good. Many of the most hysterical leaders of Organized Labor have also deserted the Democracy, and at the same time the party is receiving the support of many of the reputable representatives of the moneyed interests, men of wealth who have no infant industries to be nursed into gigantic monopolies under the wing of a maternal tariff. The situation is decidedly embarrassing to Mr. Roosevelt, but his friends are seeking to make capital out of the defection of some of the Wall-street financiers, by representing that the President has been too strenuous a trust-buster to suit them. Unfortunately for Roosevelt his trust-busting was scarcely effective enough to appeal to the masses. He did not alienate the financial interests by attacking any of the trusts, but he disgusted many representatives of large commercial interests by establishing several very dangerous precedents touching legislation and contravening constitutional authority. Wall street does not regard Roosevelt as a dangerous man on account of his trust-busting proclivities but rather because of his tendency to foster industrial disturbances, and his apparent susceptibility to intemperate clamor. In other words, it is thought in some quarters that he lacks the repose and the calm judicial temperament so essential to the successful administration of state affairs.

Mrs. Oelrichs' Generosity

We have been told by one of the dailies that Mrs. Oelrichs expects San Franciscans to appreciate her enterprise in erecting the new Hotel Fairmount. We certainly do appreciate her enterprise, though we do not feel that it was prompted by affection for this community. There was nothing of a philanthropic nature in connection with the erection of the beautiful monument to the Fair family on the hill. The Hotel Fairmount is not in any sense a benevolent institution. Mrs. Oelrichs has erected and equipped the building because she expects to get at least as good a return, and in all likelihood, a better one for her investment than she would otherwise. She will see to it that she gets a good round sum for the leasehold and the manager will make his prices accordingly. San Franciscans will be accorded no special privileges. All they get, beyond the permission to look at the outside walls, they will pay for in good hard coin of the realm. When Mrs. Oelrichs disposed of the bulk of her San Francisco holdings it was evident that she was not influenced by mere sentiment. The price at which she sold indicated that she did not have much faith in the future of San Francisco. However her action should not have inspired feelings of resentment. On the contrary we should have rejoiced. San Francisco has suffered much from absentee landlordism. We should be pleased if all our non-resident millionaires parted with their local possessions. There is too much San Francisco property paying tribute to Eastern and European capitals. Non-residents care for nothing but their net profits and there are whole blocks of buildings which are expected to produce the same revenues today which they did in the seventies, in spite of dilapidation and lack of modern improvements. Local agents have the utmost difficulty in screwing out the cost of a coat of paint or the renewal of the absolutely necessary plumbing. Nothing short of a long spell of standing idleness ever brings the owners to their senses and even then they dispute the expense of every separate nail. London and Paris and Monte Carlo get entirely too much of the profile of San Francisco business. There is no element of sentiment about the Hotel Fairmount. It was put up to make money, and indeed it is hinted that if it fail in that respect Dutch treats will be more in vogue than monkey dinners at Newport and on Fifth avenue.

An Oversight

Some months ago when Judge Kerrigan decided the Fresno rate case a wail of dissent went up from the editorial sanctums of certain dailies wherein are ensconced some of the brightest judicial minds that never illuminated a court-room. The distinguished journalistic jurists threw a series of connotation fits when informed that Judge Kerrigan had rendered a decision in favor of the railroad company. Of course they did not read the decision. It was in favor of the despised corporation. Being versed in the fundamental principles of demagogic jurisprudence they apprehended at once that Judge Kerrigan had erred and erred most grievously. The opinion of the court was, in our judgment, a most plausible exposition of the law of the case. As explained by the court, we understood that the legislative enactment invoked against the corporation was fatally defective, but in the opinion of the profoundly learned and dissenting journalists it was all wrong for Judge Kerrigan to take judicial cognizance of the mistakes of the legislature. According to their view he should have smothered his convictions in the face of an opportunity to smash a railroad company. And for failing to do so Judge Kerrigan was fulminated against as an enemy of the people. Believing that for the best interests of the people judges should be unswayed by public clamor and uninfluenced by public prejudice, and that they should interpret and not make law, we applauded the decision in the Fresno rate case. The reasoning was so logical, clear and forcible that we could not conceive of a contrary decision being rendered except through cowardice or downright dishonesty, and yet we knew that there were judges on the bench who, sensible of the adverse criticism bound to be inspired by a proper judgment, would have preferred to distort the law. But Judge Kerrigan has been vindicated, not by the press but by the Supreme Court. That tribunal has affirmed his judgment by a unanimous vote. And yet it is not contended even by the most radical of trust-busters that there are not a few men on the Supreme Bench who are beyond the reach of corporate influence. But not one of the Justices agreed with the learned journalists who took exception to Judge Kerrigan's ruling, and not one of the newspapers that condemned him has had the grace to call attention to the fact that the decision which has been affirmed is the one rendered by him and for which he was brutally abused. Journalism is a strenuous occupation and in it oversights occur every day.

The Booming of Copper Range

Thomas W. Lawson, the Boston millionaire who is exposing the methods of the Standard Oil pirates of finance in Everybody's Magazine, is at the same time engaged in booming Copper Range Consolidated. He is spending thousands of dollars in advertising the stock of that corporation as a first-class investment, and represents that he has no interest in it, but merely wishes to let the world know of a "good thing." It will be interesting to watch developments. If Lawson is to be believed he is unselfishly taking the world into his confidence to put money into the purses of strangers. That is a most unusual proceeding. The very plausibility of his advertisement is suspicious. He explains that he fathered the Amalgamated Copper scheme and secured the backing of Standard Oil. He says that if the public had been fairly dealt with the thousands of people who invested on his advice would have made money. The public lost over one hundred millions, and he resolved to devote his time, energy and capital to showing how it was lost, that it may be regained by those who had lost it. He believes he can compel restitution of at least sixty dollars per share. Meanwhile he desires to call attention to "one of the best properties I have ever found"—Copper Range Consolidated—which is producing forty million pounds of copper per annum. Its plant is complete and it is earning two million four hundred thousand per annum, or six dollars a share, "which will steadily increase even at the lowest price of copper." It will begin paying dividends next September or October, at which time the stock will sell at one hundred dollars per share, and it is bound to go to four hundred. Its present selling price is forty-four dollars. Lawson also states that he invested two million dollars in Copper Range two years ago and that two weeks ago he sold out at cost, because he did not think it right to call down on the property attacks from the mighty interests he is now combating. "If it had been safe," he adds, "to delay selling until next January, I believe I would have received double the price I did, or two years hence, four times the price." In other words, Mr. Lawson would have the world believe that rather than postpone his magazine articles six months he sacrificed over two million dollars. If this conspicuously honest millionaire doesn't watch out some solicitous relative will petition for letters of guardianship over him, and secure them on the strength of his confession. However, he is unquestionably creating a big stir in the financial world, and at the same time he is taking serious chances with his own reputation, for if Copper Range doesn't prove a good investment it will be hard for him to explain why he so enthusiastically recommended it. He says: "I unqualifiedly advise its purchase by those necessarily conservative classes—estates, widows and orphans," and he further states unqualifiedly that the chance of profit is greater than any investment or speculation he ever knew. If the Standard Oil magnates wished to counteract the effect of the testimony Lawson is now giving against them, what better course could they pursue than one calculated to destroy Copper Range?

The Elusive Title

The newspapers of this country have given considerable prominence to the fate of the Miss Morton recently divorced from her French count and obliged by a decree of the court to discontinue the use of the title, but there is really nothing especially harsh about the matter. It is the law of most of the continental nations of Europe and has been for some time, and France has simply fallen into line. To make matters worse for the title-hunters the publishers of the Almanach de Gotha have lately decided to revise that precious volume, omitting the names of all who cannot show a clear right to recognition. Consequently a good many American princesses, countesses and baronesses will soon have nothing to show for their money or to recompense them for a bitter experience. In the circumstances, perhaps, in time, American heiresses may consider the probability of retaining the purchased commodity before

The Hub
CHAS. KEILUS & CO.
EXCLUSIVES
HIGH GRADE CLOTHIERS

Suggestions of money saving are not the incentives we offer to purchase clothes here. It's the creations we show that emanate from premier designers, whose talents with shears, needle and brain are of the highest class. Correct dressers say, "Immediate Service Clothes" for theirs.

132
KEARNY STREET
Churlow Block

Engraved Wedding Announcements and Invitations

ROBERTSON 126 Post Street
San Francisco

making the bargain. A title that depends on the fidelity of the titled husband, who is usually a cad, is very much of the character of a gold brick.

A Revolt Against Climbers

London has grown weary of the society beggar who devotes her time to the cause of charity in the hope of winning social recognition. The pestiferous charity climber is a great nuisance in this country, but she is not half so active here as she is in London where she has a much larger field in which to operate. A plan has been proposed in London for the endowment of hospitals from the public funds, and there is great indignation among the American wives of titled men who are eager to gain royal favor, and who found a royal road to that goal in the ostentatious giving of money to public charities. They now view with dread the prospect of no longer seeing their names in the newspapers as "generous donors." Not that they care for publicity itself; it is the effect of their "great benefactions" upon the King that is in their thoughts. So the plan to stop the begging for public subscriptions and obtain endowments from the public funds will be fought tooth and nail by all who haven't yet had the beatitude of bowing to King Edward. The climbers of London, like those of San Francisco, have created charitable institutions for the purpose of supplying a pretext for activity, and the consequence is that a great deal of money goes to the support of numerous managers, and superintendents and their staffs of assistants. If the institutions were supported out of the public funds there would be fewer of them but they would be of sufficient number to meet the demand. So keen has become the competition fostered by the charity beggars that appeals for aid have wearied the public. As a consequence a recent "charity concert" in London was a failure. Royalty was present and famous artists appeared, but the net profits were less than forty-five dollars. The charity concert as a "money raiser" for hospitals is practically dead in London, and we have lately remarked a growing indifference to it in this city.

Vanity of The Tin Soldiers

There is no doubt that the new law dealing with the organized militia of the various States, frankly accepted and honestly applied, would transform the National Guard into a valuable adjunct to the regular army. It is the desire of the War Department, of course, to perfect the organization and equipment of the militia with a view of utilizing it as a second line of defense in time of trouble, to make of it an effective, workable "citizen army," but it is not easy to ignore traditions. Many of the military gents of the militia have long been accustomed to regard the National Guard as a combination social and political club, an excuse for flaunting gold braid and a military title. The most onerous of their military duties consisted in parading on holidays and playing "soldier" at annual encampments. Consequently there is observable at this time a tendency to resent radical changes calculated to make membership in the militia a serious proposition. It is certainly to be hoped that the militia will be made an integral part of the military system of the Republic, but in substituting the new order of things for the old the War Department is finding it somewhat difficult to triumph over the obstacles of personal vanity and ambition. It is the belief of the tin soldier that he has rights which the Government is bound to respect, and he wishes to prepare for war in his own way. He doesn't care whether the staff is top-heavy so long as there are titles to go round. The more titles there are the more enthusiasm there is in the National Guard.

William Calls a Halt

Germany has declared herself in opposition to another American industry. Henceforth the globe-trotters who make wagers that they will travel around the world on nothing are to be treated like common tramps if they are caught in the domain of Emperor William, and they will go to jail or be fined, transported or otherwise made unwelcome. It is high time that some such treatment were meted out to them. The post office authorities long ago put a stop to the perambulating envelopes and post cards which used to be sent out on useless pilgrimages with instructions to postmasters to forward them. Tramps traveling on wagers have played their game until it has ceased to amuse. At first there was some novelty in the matter of expedients, and some curiosity to know whether a man willing to work could find occupation, but the novelty has long since worn off. The irresponsible gadders are just the ones to make trouble, for they are possessed of sufficient effrontery to attempt anything, and are apt to be proportionately ignorant of local customs and requirements. When they get beyond the beaten track they do not hesitate to invade sacred enclosures, to touch what it is believed will thus become defiled, and do a thousand other things which they have no right to do. The result is that though they may escape death or chastisement they arouse distrust and suspicion against respectable travelers. If we, in the United States, have enacted laws by which we endeavor to keep out paupers, idiots and others who show a lack of brains and the means of sustenance, we cannot complain when other nations follow our example. So the impecunious American who starts out to beat his way around the world has no grievance if he find himself put on the same level as the professional beggar. The energy which is wasted might better be directed to some useful purpose. Most of these ambitious travelers have means enough at

EMIL W. HAGBOM

C. H. REHNSTROM

REHNSTROM & HAGBOM

FORMERLY SANDERS &amp; JOHNSON

..TAILORS..

PHELAN BUILDING, Rooms 1, 2, 3 Telephone Main 5387

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

For Breakfast

For Breakfast

For
Breakfast

their disposal; they want to play at being poor, so it is just as well to let them play the whole game to the very end, tramp, prison and all the rest of it.

Melodrama and Farce

The disagreement of the Eppinger jury was no surprise to those familiar with the perversity of juries and the tendency of jurors to ignore the law and the evidence. Though Judge Lawlor took every reasonable precaution to secure for the defendant a fair and impartial trial, at the same time safeguarding the interest of the State by sequestering the jury between sessions of the court, it was impossible for him to prevent theatrical plays calculated to appeal to maudlin sentiment. The defendant's physical condition was such as to awaken sympathy, and no available accessory to the stimulation of pity was overlooked during the tedious course of the protracted trial. The jury was systematically impressed with the feebleness of the aged defendant. When he was not actually in a state of collapse, his affectionate sons were industriously engaged in making it appear that he was in great distress. And his attorneys made the most of their client's unfortunate condition when addressing the jury. Indeed the attorneys were fully as effective in their important roles as were the other actors in the bathetic drama. On the whole it may be truthfully said that nothing was omitted that might conduce to the justification of such jurors as were inclined to palliate the sleight-of-hand financiering of the Eppinger clan. Even one of the jurors kindly lent realism to the scene in the interest of the defendant by shedding copious tears. Thus did he (an ex-police officer, by the way) attest the skill of the attorneys, and at the same time vindicate in advance his merciful vote against conviction. The disagreement was a triumph of theatricism, vindicating the importance of atmosphere, scenic realism and emotional histrionics.

The Folly of Best Books

The "best books" contest is reopened, but this time it has been extended to five hundred. The selection of "best books" is quite as harmless an occupation as calculating the age of Ann and also as useless. The best five or the best five hundred or the best five thousand books is a matter in which the age, temperament, occupation, library privileges, housing and length of the bank roll enter as factors of vastly more moment than the approved opinion of an editorial committee or a college faculty. There are circumstances in which Mother Goose and the primer are best books and others in which mental philosophy and the Greek classics ought to be placed first. If one is going to be practically isolated from libraries an encyclopedia, an atlas and a biographical dictionary might take precedence of all else, and there are circumstances when a light novel is worth all the stored knowledge of the universe. People who have unusually retentive memories have less occasion to accumulate books than those who have not trained themselves not to forget, and people with short purses and long demands on them, who are yet lovers of books, have to learn to tarry not by the way and to avoid passing book stores lest they fall into temptation. Any one who has ever packed a library for transportation is apt to be of the opinion, at least between the periods of disturbance and final settlement, that the best books are those not yet published. There are certain volumes which have become, in a way, canonized, and it is taken for granted that not to own them, or at least express a desire to, is a species of infidelity which must not pass unrebuked, and there are others than Mr. Howells' heroine, Irene Lapham, who, finding that the architect has included library shelves in the new house, have wit enough to know that they mean books, but what to buy or where to look for them is a puzzle. Like that young lady, they remember some author whom they "had in school," and therefore, are unshaken in their faith that he must be "good," but whether he was historian or poet is as far beyond their capacity to remember as whether he was named Gibbon or Gibbons. One of the hallucinations of the "best book" listers is the idea that no one can exist without the "standard poets" though there have been some fairly intelligent minds, George Washington and Nathaniel Hawthorne amongst them, not afraid to admit that they cared nothing at all for poetry. It is a current belief that to set out for a walk in wood or field without a volume of Tennyson or Wordsworth tucked into one's pocket is to leave out the only excuse for venturing abroad, and yet—who was it that said he never could look at a picture of Wordsworth without experiencing a desire to offer him a thistle? and who that has read the anecdote is not seized with the same desire? At the rate that books are marked off, labeled, corralled and otherwise segregated as proper pocket companions for this or that occasion, summer veranda and hammock books, books for wood and field, for fishing trips and hunting camps, for sea voyages and railroad travel, for fireside and for reading in bed, for summer and winter and between seasons, to say nothing of those with covers of the fashionable color to harmonize with the costumes of those who affect a literary pose, one would think that the only object for which we are put on earth is to be eternally and forever poring over print. We must be so absorbed in what Burns or Shakespeare or some one else has condescended to say about daisies and grasses that we must not look at them and say or see for ourselves. Neither must we listen to bird songs unless we have a ready quotation to fling at them, and mountains, rivers and all else, must be viewed through a page of print. It would be more to the purpose if instead of making our best lists for the further bewilderment of befuddled brains, books should be confiscated and no one who has not proved a right to possession by showing some capacity to do a little independent thinking and observation be allowed to read, much less possess them.

IMPERIAL STUDIO

744 Market St.
San Francisco • Cal.

THE IMPERIAL STUDIO'S PARCHMENT PROOFS

Are the swellest thing the Photographer's art has yet produced. There are plenty of imitations. The real thing is a little more expensive, but it's worth the difference.

FOR THAT TIRED FEELING

after a hard, hot day at business, there is nothing that "touches the spot" like a cold highball. But your whiskey must be good, and if it's the

Old Rose Bud

there will be no doubt of its good, pure quality. It will be the real thing.

RATHJEN WINE CO.

46 ELLIS STREET

Pacific Coast Agents

NEAR MARKET

Rockefeller Retiring

BY THEODORE BONNET.

That smug pirate of the financial main, the preposterously rich John D. Rockefeller, has suddenly abridged his sphere of activity. The Associated Press informs us that he has withdrawn from the directory of numerous corporations in which he holds large interests, and that he has retained directorship in none but the Standard Oil Company. It is intimated that he intends devoting more of his time to the enjoyment of life, and participating less strenuously in the struggle for possession of the world's wealth. Like Russell Sage, the Standard Oil magnate has always found money-grubbing an exhilarating pastime, and he does not crave the relaxation so dear to the heart of the average toiler. The sound of the stockticker is sweet music to his ear; nothing could be more refreshing to his mind than the sense of his growing financial power. But it is more than likely that John D. Rockefeller is eager to get as far as possible into the background. For many years he enjoyed immunity from criticism, but of late abuse has been heaped upon him. Despite the thickness of his hide repeated application of the lash has drawn blood. The most hideous of all the vampires of the financial world has turned towards his nest but not because he has gorged himself to repletion. The Rockefeller greed is impossible of satiety.

It is evidence of the beneficent influence of public opinion if this most rapacious and unconscionable of all the predatory Captains of Industry has been shamed into retirement. That he is not devoid of a wholesome regard for public opinion is evident from his efforts to silence criticism by posing as a philanthropist. While holding up consumers and corrupting legislators and courts he has appealed to the unsophisticated by endowing universities and churches and ostentatiously invoking the blessing of Him who set the seal of condemnation on such methods as are employed by the millionaire in augmenting his ill-gotten hoard. It was clearly his purpose not only to silence criticism but to purchase popular acclaim. The solicitude of reputation and glory has always been one of the irrational humors of men, and wherever we find it most keen, there also is the tender skin sensitive to deserved reprobation. If Rockefeller were indifferent to public opinion he would never have concerned himself about the approval of the multitude. But in winning the time-server and the sycophant by surrendering a paltry portion of his wealth ostensibly for the promotion of the social welfare, he attracted the attention of the skeptics and cynics, the men and women who despise cant and Pharisaism. By them his protestations of religious fervor were regarded as blasphemy; to them his zeal for the social weal was rank hypocrisy. If he had not been eager to court public favor he might have gone to the end of his days without experiencing the humiliation of wholesale and widespread condemnation such as has been visited upon him of late. Croesus overestimated the purchasing power of wealth. He labored under the delusion that public opinion could be purchased as easily as legislation or judicial decree. For awhile the sycophants acclaimed him a public benefactor, a notable Christian, a man of high ideals, a genius as remarkable as Shakespeare. In time the disgust of right-thinking men was aroused, and then the floodgates of just criticism were opened.

A few weeks ago in discussing "The Voice of Culture" I remarked that the intellectual men of our universities are the true moulders of public opinion; that they "are the men upon whom we must depend for a second preaching of the gospel to a nation of money-grubbers." It now occurs to me that a university man was the first to protest against the apotheosizing of John D. Rockefeller, and it was in all probability from him that Miss Tarbell caught the suggestion which prompted her to expose Standard Oil methods. Two years ago Professor Bascom of Williams College said:

John D. Rockefeller's dollars have sealed the lips of every instructor at the Chicago University, and that institution will never become a truly great place of learning. I know that he has done more to foster commercial immorality than any man that now lives. First Rockefeller gained much of his money by discriminating in freight rates. Then he squeezed the smaller fellows out of business. He deliberately ruined them when necessary. Now what are we to think of money that is gained in that manner? Rockefeller daily causes untold misery and trouble. A discriminating beggar would not accept a penny from Rockefeller if he could get one anywhere else.

A bold utterance of that sort gives pause to the pusillanimous that fawn on wealth. By incessant repetition of such sentiment more of the speculative buccaneers might be shamed into retirement. It is important that men of Bascom's type should lift up their voices against the irrational coveting of gold, point out its follies, denounce its criminal tendency, and teach the Rockefellers and their predatory associates that they cannot wash away dishonor in that golden stream that pours from their coffers into the treasuries of educational institutions; that they cannot repair the damage done to governmental institutions by generous endowments of churches and universities. Some there are who hold it to be puerile to inveigh against love of money in its sordidly selfish form, and expect to eradicate it from the human heart. We are told that opportunity metamorphoses the idealist into a cringing devotee at the feet of Baal, and that therefore we should despise wealth only when we have it not. Unquestionably love of gold is the ruling passion, but all men are not of the Rockefeller temperament. There are numerous men in this country content with moderate riches that were accumulated honestly. They are not envious of Rockefeller, and they despise his methods in the fullness of their own incorruptible na-

CHAS. LYONS LONDON TAILOR

721 MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO
Branch
122 KEARNY ST.

SUITS from $17.50 up

LARGEST TAILORING
ESTABLISHMENT
on the Pacific Coast

Go to the Factory to Buy

Phone Folsom 2812

TRUNKS VALISES AND
SUIT CASES

You Get Your Money's Worth

J. MARTY CO.

Repairing

22 TURK STREET

Manufacturers

Sample Trunks and Bags to order

ture. Rockefeller's daily income is ninety thousand dollars. Nobody is so foolish as to imagine that it is the fruit of strictly personal and legitimate moral effort. Such wealth bespeaks the operation of an infinity of sinister influences. The Standard Oil Trust has long been managed by unscrupulous men enjoying confidential relations with politicians in control of legislative machinery, and who have been ruthless and cruel in their dealings with competitors. The Standard Oil magnates achieved their wealth by all sorts of chicanery, dishonesty, trickery and oppression, and by debauching legislators and courts—they are men conspicuous among the moneyed aristocracy. Some of them shine in the haute volée and engage in the ridiculous, fatuous rivalry of display of extravagance. All of them are eager for the respect of their fellow citizens, but it is in the power of the Bascoms of the country to drive them into seclusion by fostering a wholesome public sentiment against such practices as those by which they achieved their wealth. Morgan has gone to Europe, Rockefeller is shunning the limelight, and Tom Lawson is supplying material for jeremiads galore against the predatory crew. No wonder there is uneasiness in Wall street.

The Pleasures of Introspection

BY HARRY COWELL.

He who seriously undertakes to master "the proper study of mankind" soon finds himself in desperate straits. At the very outset he is confronted with the impossibility of passing through the appearances of any life into the realities beyond. Even the secret heart of her, his beloved who nestles in his bosom, is hidden from him, and that, too, whether she will or no. The most ingenuous of men has a world side which is not the outward and visible sign of his inward and spiritual existence; and this is the side that is inevitably turned not only to the stranger within his gates and without, but also to his familiar friend and to his more than friend. The awful pathos of the resulting solitude I have before now touched upon; but like love it can never become a commonplace. Repetition leaves it new. Think of it for the thousand time and with the thought comes the tear. And the fact that many a man dies without realizing the extent of his loneliness does but make the actual state of our mortality all the more pathetic.

Baffled in the study of man without him—baffled but still fascinated—the student turns in desperation to the study of man within. "Am not I of the selfsame human stuff with my fellows?" he asks himself; and makes up his mind to direct honest eyes inward upon his own heart, and note what goes on behind the scenes, which is not infrequently the most interesting part of the play.

Blameless though his life be in the sight of men, he needs but little power of observation to discover that already in his heart has he broken the commandments from the least even unto the greatest. With the plummet of imagination he sounds the depths of human depravity.

But there is nothing, nor shall be,
So sweet, so wicked, but my verse
Can dream of worse.

Thoughts unbidden pass through the minds of the most virtuous of us which to express aloud were to declare oneself a moral monster. Be a maiden never so maidenly, and she has imaginings that put her to the blush. This one—your daughter, madame—by chance overheard what the spring wind was a-saying, and her ears were atingle and her face was aflame until the time of snow. Do you not mind observing something of the sort yourself—something strangely amiss with her—now that I recall the circumstance?

Frankly he doubts, too, on the other hand—does your student—whether the angels of heaven have ever experienced more exquisite emotions than has he himself upon occasion; with no little delight, he finds that, to the honor of humanity at large (he is studying mankind, remember), he has more than once foregone great advantage because of scruples ridiculously fine. At rare intervals, moreover, he catches luminous glimpses of the mysterious ways of women that so elude objective study. Of course, there must be no posing for himself: the entertainment consists in watching the antics of mankind as it really is. Yes, I am well aware that one of the walls of our prison is made of the adamantine fact that no two men are alike, to say nothing of the unlikeness of man and woman.

Reader dear (masculine or feminine) I differ from you, that I know—indeed I do; but not so much nor in such wonderful wise as my vanity would have me believe. Your folly is not far for me to seek, I assure you, nor your sin; no, nor for that matter, your astonishing wisdom or virtue. You are human; I am human; so is this gallow-bird; so is the saint.

The prevalent notion that the introspectivist is of all men most egotistical, self absorbed, self-indulgent, must be classed among "popular fallacies." The "I" of the inward-gazer is almost purely impersonal; it is in mankind as disclosed in himself that he is absorbed; and the observing "I" is in no little danger of becoming unduly hard on the observed "me"; it is long before the student learns to compassionate the erring humanity he thus sees in all its pitiable nakedness, long before the sententious "I" has the grace to say to the repentent self: "Not another word, my dear fellow; you are but human, and I like you all the better for it." Surely, the man who, holding his heart in his hand and regarding it, is moved to exclaim: "Poor bit of sinning mortality, what am I that I should not forgive you as freely as I forgive those other mortal bits, your brethren?" has passed beyond the narrow confines of self-indulgence. Such conduct is nothing short of showing loving kindness to man.

It is this dualism, which we all feel, though not all of us give it our philosophical approval, that makes possible the rare divertimento of introspection. Many a mystery of the great world without us is best solved by a critical and unprejudiced survey of that strange microcosm, me.

Your Rousseaus, your Bashkirtseffs—all they who

HAVE YOU HAD LUNCH AT THE RED LION?

New Grill for Ladies and Gentlemen

WILL BE OPEN ONLY FOR LUNCHEON, FROM 10 A. M. TO 3 P. M.
DURING SUMMER MONTHS

Any Evening the Whole or Any Part of the Dining Room may be Reserved
for Banquets.

"The Red Lion" is in the San Francisco Stock Exchange Bldg. It has two entrances from Pine St., just below Montgomery, and is also readily accessible from Montgomery and Bush Sts. through the Mills Bldg.

make open confession of their sinning selves—give us at best but expurgated editions of the lyrics, the epics, the tragedies, the comedies, they have lived. The least page of the most commonplace life, were it but inedited, would make more interesting reading. But to tell your story to priest or public, to man or God, is to edit it. In the day of reckoning, if I mistake not, men with one accord will question the accuracy of the recording angel's unbelievable book. Be his will never so good, his mind never so unbiased, no man can read his past life as it was originally written. The "I" that reads today is not the "I" that wrote yesterday. Moreover, our past is as our memory of it, changing as we change. And again, to feel intensely a passion and at the same time observe it closely is not possible. From our present point of view, this is unfortunate; for it is the emotions of man that the introspectivist most desires to analyze. As for me, I never meet one of those quaint imitations of myself—a man—who is no doubt the centre of a universe not altogether identical with mine, without wondering what the life of the feelings means to him. In vain I look inward for answer. Are there not states of consciousness with a sharp delight in them which my nature is incapable of experiencing? Then am I but part man—I who would fain know the fulness of life. To study man in myself is to deprive him of his just proportions.

Accordingly, the student is driven back again to the objective study of his kind; and though he see many days and persevere to the end, Death finds him still very ignorant of man; but his ignorance differs, as it seems to me, from that of the unthinking herd, and he has, moreover, fallen in with no little pleasure by the way.

The Saunterer

The Anti-Graft Crusade

The Bulletin is deserving of congratulation for having started a crusade against the organized grafters who now control the municipal government. It is to be hoped that it will bring all its resources into the fight against the criminals and blacklegs that infest this metropolis. If, in view of the bold practices reported by the Bulletin, the grafters cannot be ousted from power and put into prison stripes, then the situation is indeed desperate, and popular government would seem to be the tragic failure that it has been adjudged by certain sociologists. Assuming that the condition of affairs is half as bad as my daily contemporary insists, and the laws against gambling, vice and indecency are being shamefully and openly violated, the situation imperiously demands something more radical than a strict enforcement of law for the future, and something more salutary than the conviction and punishment of a few insignificant offenders. What the city needs now is an organization of men possessed of civic pride intent upon running the rascals to earth, not the mere tools of the big grafters but the big grafters themselves. The District Attorney being reluctant to take aggressive action against the offenders, a competent and brave lawyer should be employed to prosecute on the strength of evidence that could be procured by honest, trustworthy men employed for the purpose. The District Attorney would surely not refuse to authorize the employment of special counsel to do work which political courtesy demands that he should refrain from doing.

Hearst's Forced Silence

Meanwhile it is to be regretted that the Examiner has its hands tied, and is compelled to sit idly by and view the efforts of its evening contemporary to awaken public sentiment in the interest of clean and wholesome government. There was a time when the Examiner was best qualified of all the dailies to lead in such a campaign as the one instituted by the Bulletin. That was before Mr. William R. Hearst was obsessed with the fatuous notion that he was available Presidential timber. While rainbow chasing Mr. Hearst placed himself under obligations to Eugene Schmitz, and as a consequence the erstwhile kingpin reformer is now compelled to view complaisantly the looting of the town. The Examiner, that won its prestige by its vigorous crusades against indecency and graft, is constrained to keep out of a field that it formerly exploited in the highest style of the journalistic art. It must be a sore trial to Mr. Hearst—this paying of political obligations by vouchsafing grafters immunity from legitimate journalistic criticism, especially at a time when the whole community is on the qui vive for startling developments. It is in such piping times as these, and by the stern exercise of the legitimate journalistic functions, that newspapers increase their circulation on a solid basis.

When Lankershim Opened Wine

When a Californian millionaire is seized with political ambition and resolves to wear the toga of a Senator in Washington, there is usually much rejoicing among the gentlemen who consider themselves qualified to point the way. As the millionaire Senatorial aspirant has seldom anything but money to justify his yearnings he is naturally expected to put some of it in circulation. The toga is one of the luxuries of American life that come high, and when a millionaire craves it the presumption is that he is pre-

"White Horse Cellar"

Scotch Whisky

FROM

MACKIE & CO., Islay, Scotland

Never in Bulk

CHARLES MEINECKE & CO.,
AGENTS P. C. SAN FRANCISCO

GILBERT and STOLL

Movers of Household Furniture and Storage Warehouse, have removed their offices from the Murphy Bldg. to Room 43, Donohoe Bldg., Market and Taylor Sts. Storage Warehouse: Mercantile Library Bldg., Golden Gate and Van Ness ave pared to pay the price. Hence the politicians were pleased when they heard that there would be a little competition this year. And when Jim Lankershim shied his castor into the ring after Bard and Oxnard had announced their candidacy, it looked as though everybody would soon have money to throw to the birds. Lankershim is in the millionaire class, and as he inherited his wealth it was thought likely that he would be more liberal than the men who had a keener appreciation of the value of a dollar. But the news has reached San Francisco that Jim Lankershim is no spendthrift. One evening a week or two ago he was seated in a restaurant in Los Angeles when a hold-over Senator entered. The senatorial aspirant promptly assumed his most affable air and ordered a small bottle of wine. Just as the wine was brought on a third gentleman entered and joined them. Lankershim ordered another glass. Before the wine was opened another friend made his appearance on the scene. Lankershim ordered another glass. Just as the waiter was about to pull the cork two more friends came in and joined the group. Lankershim ordered two more glasses. The small bottle was served to six men and then the party broke up.

Autocratic Abe

Every day the rumblings of dissension in the Republican organization are becoming more and more distinct. Several of the men near the throne are grievously offended at the autocratic bearing of Abe Ruef, the Pooh-Bah of the Tenderloin, and the fidus Achates of Mayor Schmitz. Not content with the rich harvest of the municipal administration, the astute boss wishes to extend his power and dictate nearly all the nominations to be made by the next convention. His claims are being disputed, but he is insistent. Notwithstanding the fact that he bolted the last Republican convention, he feels that in view of his control of nearly all the patronage in the city he is entitled to more consideration than any other individual. And it cannot be denied that his claims are well founded. But at his present rate of speed Abe is bound to get winded. He is the most dictatorial boss that ever came down the political pike, and he has offended people who are eagerly waiting for the day when his hold on the municipal government will be released. They are already predicting his early downfall, and are hoping that he will soon give himself another banquet and parade. But meanwhile Abe is not losing any sleep over the growls of his enemies. His hands are glued to the teats of a fat udder and there are no prospects of a drought.

The Congressional Program

A few short weeks ago it was thought that Ruef would secure the nomination for Congress in the Fifth district for his friend Countryman, the attorney, but now it looks as though Charley Shortridge is to be the favored one. Wynne will be given the Democratic nomination, and then the Schmitz-Ruef Labor Party will nominate a dummy to insure the election of the Republican. Some similar deal will be put through in the fourth district to beat Livernash, but the latter will probably decline to be gold-bricked. If he cannot obtain the nomination of both the Democratic and Labor parties he will keep out of the fight. Ruef and Schmitz will probably see that he keeps out.

Her Pedantic Pastime

I hear that Agnes Tobin, the highly intellectual representative of the Tobin clan, is now engaged on translations of the early Italian poets. As Miss Tobin is an intimate friend of Mrs. Meynell and a Yeats worshiper, I am surprised that she should waste her time adding to the stock of translations when she could do so much worth while along the Celtic revival lines. There should be great inspiration for the sympathetic mind in the San Francisco Celtic revival. But perhaps she has come to the conclusion that it were utterly impossible for the Irish to make practical the theory that they are sufficient unto themselves, or that they could give throbbing life to a decadent branch of letters. Even Yeats, who has written much that breathes of the Irish hedgerows, has been drifting straight away from Ireland. His "Hour Glass" shows that he is being influenced by the big outside world, and that he is absorbing much of the spirit of Continental writers. And now the word comes from London that his latest play, "Where There Is Nothing," shows that he is more English than Irish. The names of the characters are Irish but the play is said to be an "international stew."

Miss Tobin's Catch

No date has yet been fixed for the marriage of Celia Tobin and Charles Clark. It was at first reported that they would be married in August, but now I hear the wedding will be deferred until October. There will be no waiting for the expiration of the conventional year of mourning to expire. An income of four hundred thousand a year elevates its possessor above the conventions. The engagement is still the main topic of discussion all along the social pike, and it has been remarked that until the match was made it was generally supposed that the biggest fish accessible to local maiden anglers were Harry Tevis and James D. Phelan, but Miss Tobin landed one that makes those two look as though they just came out of the hatchery. I hear that he has an income of four hundred thousand a year, but somebody recently made the discovery that his property at Burlingame is in his father's name, a circumstance that has excited much speculation.

The Senator's Timidity

Now that Senator Clark has announced himself the husband of Anna La Chapelle, the supposition is that he will soon open his white marble palace in New York and do some entertaining on an extravagant scale. His friends are speculating as to the probable attitude of his most self-assertive daughter, Mrs. Everett Culver, who was recently divorced. Though the Senator bravely led the

DEAFNESS

Those troubled with deafness are cordially invited to demonstrations of the MASSACON and ACOUSTICON at the offices of the

HUTCHISON ACOUSTIC COMPANY

W. B. EGAN, Pacific Coast Agent Phone Priv. Ex. 216
417-418 Starr-King Bldg., 121 Geary St., San Francisco

Hotel Richelieu

1012 VAN NESS AVENUE

Having renewed our lease, and entirely renovated this Hotel, we will continue making it the finest and leading Family Hotel of this Coast.

AND

HOTEL GRANADA

1000 SUTTER ST.

HOTEL RICHELIEU CO.

Butte battalion in the Nez Perce campaign, for three years he was afraid to tell his snappy daughters that a step-mamma much more youthful than they, and a little step-sister younger than their own offspring, would be ready to walk into the Fifth avenue palace on its completion.

Democratic Reorganization

Another effort is to be made to reorganize the local Democracy, and the movement is to receive the support of the Examiner. As Mr. Hearst has no political irons in the fire at present the probability is that he will stand pat this time. Last year after the anti-McNabites were assured of the Examiner's support, and just as they were threatening to sweep the boss of the Phelan machine off his feet, Hearst was persuaded of the advisability of a compact with his arch enemy, and the plans of the reorganizers went to smash. Notwithstanding the withdrawal of the Examiner's support, however, James H. O'Brien, the leader of the reorganizers, carried all the districts in the kid-glove section of the city, which was believed to be McNab's stronghold, and came within a few votes of capturing the convention. With the support of the Examiner he should have no difficulty in winning, for despite the disfavor in which that paper is held by many practical politicians who resent journalistic interference, few of them have the courage to oppose its policy. They know that it was the Examiner that drove Buckley to cover and invested McNab with the prestige of a boss. They also know that the Examiner will survive the wreck of numerous political machines to come. Politicians are keen to their own interests, and they are not inclined to jeopardize them. McNab will of course make a desperate fight for control, and he has the better of the situation in the circumstance that his followers are entrenched in public office.

Toga Chasing

The Senatorial fight is becoming beautifully complicated, and if the organization doesn't watch out it will again be confronted with a situation similar to the one which arose when Colonel Burns was backed for the toga, and which was repeated when George C. Pardee captured the gubernatorial nomination. The defeat of Bard is the consummation devoutly to be wished by the organization, and all its energies are to be devoted to that end, but its forces are being divided and pledged and there is undoubtedly a tangle ahead. Frank Flint, an organization man, is in the fight to stay, and he is having legislators instructed for him. In the north, men are being instructed for Knight, another organization man. Oxnard is also favored by the organization and he will land in Sacramento with a good bunch of votes. Meanwhile Bard is securing votes in the south and he is assured of some in the north. It was reported that Oxnard would retire from the contest if he did not win in Ventura, but now his friends say that it would have been absurd to stake all on the county in which Bard has resided for thirty-five years. Some wise politicians think that Bard's strength in the fight is a circumstance most propitious for Oxnard, for the reason that the organization will never stand for the Hueneme statesman, and will always exercise a dominating influence. Oxnard is today in the middle of the road, and antagonistic to neither side in the fight of the organization against Bard.

Colonel Mazuma was There

If the prodigality of the contestants in the Ventura campaign is a criterion of what Colonel Mazuma will do as the battle progresses, the virtuous people of California will throw up their hands in holy horror before the legislature meets. All the contemporary toga chasers have announced that they would not spend any money but up to date Knight is the only one that has not loosened up. Surely he cannot expect to win in the face of such great financial odds as are bound to arise. If Bard and Oxnard were prevailed upon to throw forty thousand dollars to the voters of Ventura county, what will they do when they reach San Francisco? Twenty thousand dollars represented the financial backing of each of the Senatorial candidates at the Ventura primary, and the big caucus five months away. Shades of Colonel Brady! Also of Colonel Mazuma! Tradition tells us that in the days of Stanford it was not unusual for a candidate to spend a quarter of a million for the senatorship, but even in those days our provincial statesmen were not enthused by any such spectacle as the one presented in this prosperous year of our Lord—two multi-millionaires spending forty thousand dollars between them in a little county remote from the metropolis, and a third candidate in an adjacent county ready with his hundred thou to throw into the fight.

Devlin for Chairman

Just before the last Republican State Convention there was much curiosity concerning the probable attitude of Judge Burnett, the slate candidate for chairman. There will be no curiosity in Santa Cruz, however, when the next convention meets, for Robert Devlin of Sacramento is tipped for the chairmanship. Nobody has any doubt as to how Mr. Devlin feels toward the organization.

High Grade Knitted Wear

FORM FITTING UNDERWEAR

Made in Lisle, Linen, Wool and Silk

Fits the form perfectly, and gives great comfort to the body.
Made for both men and women.

LADIES' KNIT JACKETS

Beautiful patterns in pure worsted goods, made to order or from stock, as desired.

Men's and Boys' Sweaters and Jerseys

All pure worsted goods, in an infinite variety of patterns.

Bathing Suits

Gymnasium Suits

Athletic Supplies

Tennis Goods

J. J. Pfister

KNITTING CO.

60 GEARY ST.
San Francisco, Cal.

Catalogues freely furnished upon application

Miss Olga Widrin of 958 Geary street has returned from a business and pleasure trip to the East, where she visited all the large cities, including St. Louis. After seeing the different cities Miss Widrin says that there is only one place, and that is San Francisco. Some of the pattern hats and trimmings which she bought in New York, and through the Paris agents, are the handsomest ever seen in San Francisco, and will prove a delightful surprise to our modish women.

Mrs. George Crocker

Notwithstanding the newspaper reports of Mrs. George Crocker's precarious condition her relatives in this city were surprised at her death, for, as I stated last week, they were informed by wire that she had been greatly benefited by the European trip. Deep sympathy is felt for George Crocker in his bereavement, for his friends know how devoted he was to his wife. Their affection for each other seemed to grow with the years. Mrs. Crocker was Emma Hanchett of Sacramento, and her first husband was Alexander Rutherford. The Rutherfords lived for years in a pretty cottage in Bush street near Mason, where they entertained in a modest fashion. At Mr. Rutherford's death his widow and three children were left in comfortable circumstances. George Crocker fell in love with the widow, and when he won her she devoted herself to the task of reforming him, for he was a gay and most convivial young blade. Through her efforts he was enabled to secure the fortune which would have gone to his relatives had he not abstained from liquor for a year immediately preceding a fixed date. He won out with only a few hours to spare, and he has been a model husband ever since. Mrs. Crocker was a most amiable and charming woman, and she was very much admired in New York society for her graciousness and tact.

Her Modish Trousseau

I hear that Mrs. Will Crocker is thinking of again returning to Europe before many moons. She has been staying at Burlingame and has entertained at a few quiet dinners. It is her intention now to remain for the wedding of her niece, Anna, and Lieutenant Corrigan, which will take place some time during the month of September. Mrs. Crocker bought the trousseau in Paris, and I am told that it is so modish that it actually looks old-fashioned to San Franciscans.

Sarah Collier is expected to return some time during the middle of August. She has been the guest of her relatives, Secretary and Mrs. Hitchcock, in Washington during the winter, and is at present visiting at their country home. The Colliers are just now living at their country home in Lake county, where they give house parties continually.

Guernewood Park is a favorite camping ground this year. It is here the H. K. Fields have their camp, which is the finest for miles around. They have eight tents, and three servants in attendance. Mr. Field has not been in good health for some months so the family has not entertained quite so lavishly as during previous camping summers. However, many of their friends have visited them in week-end parties.

Always insist upon having
The Genuine

MURRAY &
LANMAN'S
Florida Water

The most refreshing and delightful perfume for the handkerchief, toilet and bath

Despite His Paunch

In his younger days Hermann Oelrichs was a noted amateur athlete. He was a strong swimmer and his feats in the water were frequently the subject of newspaper comment. He was also a good boxer, and he has not forgotten how to use his "mits." Though he has not kept himself in good fettle of late years, his muscles have not become atrophied, a fact that he took occasion to demonstrate recently at his home in Ross Valley. He discharged his coachman one day, much to the indignation of that individual, who became very abusive and threatened to become violent. Oelrichs anticipated a collision and brought matters to a climax with a straight left to the jaw which he followed up with a few jabs that rendered the coachman innocuous. Mr. Oelrichs was a little winded after this violent exercise. When William Greer Harrison hears about it he will no doubt write to his friend Oelrichs expressing surprise that despite his paunch he was able to accomplish so much.

"I hear that Mrs. Brassey is getting gay."
"Merely arriving at years of indiscretion."

She Kicked Her Slipper Off

Del Monte has once more taken on the true spice of life. There has been a lift in the smart atmosphere of the place, revealing a tinge of that Parisian coloring which was characteristic in the years ago, when the middle-aged matrons of today were the frisky belles and buds of yesterday. In those gala days of the long ago Del Monte was the scene of many startling episodes that supplied topics for lively chatter over the teacups, but of late the fashionables who have spent their time at the famous resort have been true to the conventions. The slightest departure from the commonplace seemed to shock even the sophisticated. I recall that a few years ago, when one of the Hager girls bowled backwards, she was regarded with amazement. The incident was considered positively startling, but compared with a high-kicking stunt that took place on the veranda of the hotel one night, a few weeks ago, it was a tame proceeding. The performer was a very much admired young matron of the smart set, who kicked so hard that she lost a dainty little slipper, and it has not yet been returned. I hear that it is now treasured as a prize by a Berkeley professor.

ALASKA
REFRIGERATORS

FOR GROCERS
BUTCHERS
FLORISTS AND HOUSEHOLD -

TILE, OPAL OR
ZINC LINED -
PACIFIC COAST AGENTS

W. W. MONTAGUE & CO.
309-317 MARKET ST.

Merely a Love Match

Pure, unadulterated love matches have become so hopelessly old-fashioned that when a girl in society permits herself to become sentimental, and decides to marry the man she loves, regardless of his inability to splurge, her friends are annoyed. The only legitimate romance now-a-days is the one that has gilt-edge security. Hence it is that Edith Findley's engagement with George Gardiner is regarded with positive astonishment. Her friends say that she is a clever girl, who had the "best advantages" and was always expected to make a brilliant match. But she is going to marry George Gardiner, a young man from Oakland, who has no fortune. The Findleys are not rich. They have a fine home in Sausalito, where they are among the leaders of society. Sausalito society is divided into two factions, and the Findleys and Mrs. Sperry are prominent in the dominating set. Miss Findley is a great friend of Mrs. Rudolph Spreckels, and of all the women of that set on this side of the bay.

Mizner May Become Melancholy

Some people are wondering what effect the death of Bertha Dolbeer will have on "Addie" Mizner. Some there are who fear that it will either plunge the ebullient spirited Mizner into melancholia, or drive him to hard drink. "Addie" is such a gallant chap, always willing to immolate himself on the altar of duty for the relief of feminine distress, that he has been suspected of sordid designs on unattached young women burdened with more money than they can conveniently care for. In other words his activity as a promoter of social gayety is believed to have been inspired by the hope of some day annexing an heiress. And it is said that he felt very kindly disposed toward Bertha Dolbeer, and was inclined to honor her with a proposal. Indeed, when he started off on his junketing trip with young Baird and young Eastland, the gossips said that he had laid out his plans with a view of intercepting Miss Dolbeer in New York. Fortunately Mizner is a volatile chap, and he is not likely to brood very long over a disappointment. He has seen buds blossom to be plucked by rivals for many seasons, and he has never shown signs of discouragement.

H. R. Bloomer, the artist, is up in Inverness, where he is transferring to canvas some choice bits of landscape which will likely be shown at the next Bohemian Club exhibition.

The Burro Didn't Appreciate Art

John Cantrell is down at Pacific Grove this summer. The other day he was expressing his delight because he had just finished his masterpiece, Cypress Point at its best. He placed the canvas in the bushes to dry. Three hours later he returned to take a peep at his painting, to see how it was getting along. To his amazement he discovered that a burro had swallowed his chef d'oeuvre. However, though a burro is supposed to be able to digest anything, Cantrell found he had expectorated the canvas, which led the artist to think less of his beloved masterpiece. He is now at work upon another.

DECORATIONS For Weddings, Dinners, Lunches, Receptions and Stores. Flower gifts attractively arranged. Bridal bouquets artistically specialized.

Original Designs in Favors, Name Cards, Menus, Almond Dishes and Candle Shades

MISS CHARLOTTE F. WILLIAMS
121 Post Street Tel. John 1911 San Francisco
Out of Town Correspondence Solicited

The Holluschickies

Only members and members-elect of the Holluschickie Club will be permitted to attend the third annual picnic of the club, a week from Sunday on Marin island. Wilberforce Williams and Howard Veeder are to be invited, and young Chesebrough and Prescott Scott have been proposed. With one or two exceptions the thirty Holluschickies are all college men, and they cherish in their organization the same spirit of camaraderie that animates a college frat. Professor Setchell of the U. C. is a member of the club, and he is due here in a few days from his year's absence in Europe, returning via Australia. He has been studying microscopic plants, his specialty being botany. Hiland Baggerly of the Bulletin is another member. He is just back from a six weeks' visit in the East, where he attended the tenth anniversary of his class, '94, at Union College, Schenectady, New York. He was elected vice-president of the alumni.

The Bohemian Club's camp will be open for members a week from Tuesday and the midsummer jinks will be held on Saturday night, August twentieth. Some of the members went up this week to take a look about the grove, and inspect the new bungalow lately erected. Several of the tents are already up.

"Is your husband a bear or a bull?" asked Mrs. Fashion of Mrs. Stockexchange.

"Well, at home he is sometimes a little of both," answered the latter.

A Trilby Type

Leta Gallatin, whose engagement with Dr. Harvey is announced, is a handsome girl of the Trilby type of beauty, tall and blonde. She is a half-sister of Mrs. Ernest Thompson-Seton and Mrs. Frank Powers. She has a double in the person of young Mrs. Siebe, who was Miss Cressy of Modesto before she married Howard Taylor, from whom she was divorced. Miss Gallatin and Mrs. Siebe are always being mistaken, by slight acquaintances, one for the other.

The Harry Jeromes are contemplating a return to town within a few weeks, and the Alphonse Duperus will probably then occupy the Jeromes' Belvedere home for the autumn.

Ruinart

The champagne of exquisite quality which fits the fancy of those who appreciate a contrast.

HILBERT MERCANTILE CO.
Pacific Coast Agents

V. W. GASKILL, Special Agent
SAN FRANCISCO

Scheffauer in the East

Herman Scheffauer wrote me from New York, last week, on the eve of his departure for Glasgow whence he will go to Liverpool and perhaps to London a-wheel. After leaving England he will go through Holland, Belgium, Germany, France, Switzerland and Italy, and will then return to London and do some hard work that he has planned. Mr. Scheffauer recently spent a week in Washington with his old friend Ambrose Bierce and he writes, "The old lion has seemingly not aged a year since he left California. He is still the same hale, courtly, handsome and dignified old gentleman; his sweet and kindly voice is as it ever was, his manner just as gracious and affable as ever and Time has not reft him of a curl of his fine grav hair." With Bierce, Scheffauer journeyed to New York and later the two spent a few days with Percival Pollard at Saybrook, Connecticut, a quaint, historic place on the Connecticut river, directly opposite the lovely village of Lynn, the haunt of all the New England artists. While there he met Henri Drunay, a French litterateur and opera-writer, formerly editor of the Criterion, who wishes him to write some lyrics for an opera he is engaged upon with Robertson Sloane. In New York Scheffauer realized what is meant by that larger field of appreciation which has lured so many Californians away from their State but which lured not him.

Miss Barrymore's New Role

Ethel Barrymore, who is now having her mane stroked by the lion worshipers of San Francisco's smart set, will soon begin studying her role for next season. It is a part that will provoke a deal of discussion. The play is a Chinese comedy drama and Miss Barrymore is to be "a beautiful courtesan." Fred Gresac and Paul Ferrier, the authors, present their heroine for approval with the avowal that "the courtesan of the Celestial Empire lives in absolute chastity." She is quite different, therefore, from the transplanted Chinese courtesan, known in San Francisco's Chinese quarter. It will be somewhat difficult for American theatre-goers to understand an "absolutely chaste courtesan," and Miss Barrymore may have some difficulty in assisting them to differentiate the giddy charmers of the Orient from their sisters of the Occident. The authors wish us to believe that the sole purpose of their heroine is to charm and divert her admirers by singing and dancing for them without once listening to a word of love. To charm and divert but never to listen to a word of love! Surely the life of the Oriental courtesan as depicted for dramatic purposes is a hard one.

A Brick of Fine Quality

Sir Lambton Lorraine, the English Admiral (retired), who is on his way here, is not paying San Francisco his first visit. In December, 1867, Sir Lambton, then flag lieutenant to Admiral Joseph Denman, arrived here on H. M. S. Sutlej, remaining in town a fortnight. Another officer on the Sutlej was Lord Charles Beresford, then a gay young midshipman, who had figured shortly before in the sensational pulling down of the American flag at Honolulu. Sir Lambton was always faultlessly attired. His brother officers said that during the cruise from England, when at one time they were six weeks at sea without touching port, Sir Lambton appeared at dinner in the Admiral's cabin every night in a fresh shirt. Sir Lambton was next heard of two years later when, as captain of the Niobe, a British man of war, he saved several survivors of the Vesuvius from Cuban butchers by threatening to bombard Santiago de Cuba if they were put to death. For this act of humanity he was presented with the freedom of the city of New York, and a silver brick from the miners of Nevada bearing the inscription, "You are a brick—here is another."

The Baron Needs Hop Pickers

Captain Frederick Johnston departed for New York this week. Baron von Horst gave several affairs in his honor before his leaving, as did Mrs. Eleanor Martin and Mrs. Malcolm Henry, who dined him. Baron von Horst left his baroness in London where the lady will remain permanently, I hear, as she prefers that city to San Francisco. The baron returned to look after his hop interests. The hops are ready for picking but I believe there is a scarcity of pickers. There was talk among a certain set in society of forming a party to go to the baron's hop ranch and help him out with his crop.

The Tevis Monument

The report that Dr. Harry Tevis has decided to establish an aquarium in Golden Gate Park at a cost of several millions, in memory of his father, is not credited by his friends in society. I have been told that Dr. Tevis himself pronounced it a good fish story. A friend of the family remarked that if Dr. Tevis were inclined to establish a belated monument to the memory of Lloyd Tevis, he could not be induced to favor a repository for sharks and other things.

REMEMBER
Tan Shoes are Being Slaughtered
 I am determined not to carry over one pair. The Best
Shoes made in this country at Ridiculous Prices
GODFREY FISHER, 945 Market Street

I HAVE A
BEER OF QUALITY

IT'S
Rainier
BEER

JOHN RAPP & SON, Agts., S. F.
 Distributors in every town on the coast

A National Disgrace

Though the Maine has been embedded in the mud of Havana harbor for six years it is constantly bobbing up for discussion. The Cuban Government, having adjudged it an obstruction and a menace to shipping, contracted for its removal. The contractors have referred to Washington the question of their right to acquire and dispose of the property, formerly belonging to the American navy. In the opinion of the Judge-Advocate-General of the Navy the vessel may not be raised without express authority from the American Congress. What right has this Government to maintain an obstruction and a nuisance in a foreign harbor? That question appears to be involved and it should be speedily settled. How long would the Cuban Government be permitted to maintain an obstruction in this harbor? It has long been quite obvious that the authorities at Washington were disinclined to have the Maine raised, being pretty certain that it would show that it was blown up from the inside, and that we were involved in a war with Spain through the negligence of American naval officers. If the authorities had been certain that the Maine was blown up by a crazy Cuban or by a cowardly Spaniard, the costly vessel would have been raised and repaired long ago. It has been urged that the ship should be raised by the authorities on sentimental ground, but sentiment waits on politics. The inaction of the American authorities is a disgrace to the nation.

"That was a singular and risky remark for Jones to make to his wife just as she was starting off for Europe."

"What was it?"

"He told her that when she reaches Paris she must do as the Parisians do."

Gossip From London

"Americans are still popular in London," writes an occasional correspondent. "One of the Americans who gives elaborate entertainments, approaching in lavishness those of Mrs. Mackay, is Mrs. Frank J. Mackay of Chicago, no relation, I understand, of the California Mackays. Mrs. Fred's husband is the famous polo player who has won so many silver cups. She lives in Upper Grosvenor street, having leased the beautiful home of Prince Dolgorouki, which is filled with valuable portraits, magnificent plate and articles de vertu. At one of her recent affairs four of the reigning operatic stars sang, and dukes and duchesses, earls and countesses were among the guests. The Mackays have money to burn and their equipages are among the smartest in London. Mrs. John Mackay, the widow, and ex-San Franciscan, mother of Mrs. Clarence Alexander, has extended her patronage to another Californienne, Clara Alexander, the darky dialect reader, and is introducing her to some of her influential friends. Miss Alexander has caught on here, and has recited at several swell affairs. She recited at the American Embassy the other day at one of the big receptions, and at an affair given at Miss Douglass's school, which is attended by daughters from aristocratic families, besides appearing at several smart charity entertainments. One of the private houses where she appeared was the country place of Ernest Beckett, M. P. The other entertainer was Dani, a tenor who has been singing with Melba at Covent Garden. Among the twelve guests present was Mrs. Jack Leslie, sister of Mrs. Cornwallis West. Mr. Beckford is considered one of the biggest catches matrimonially in England, for though a commoner he is immensely rich, and clever beside. Mrs. Bonyng gave a luncheon for Miss Alexander, and her daughter, Lady Maxwell, followed suit, the guests at the latter being Lady Cheyslemore, Lady Deerpur, Lady Decies, Mrs. Granville Alexander and Mrs. Frank Mackay. Lady Maxwell lives in a luxurious home in Halfmoon street, Mayfair. She is very pretty, quite as lovely indeed as Lady Deerpur, and is noted for her amiable manners. Another American who is exceedingly well liked here is H. C. Chamberlain, who manages the New York Sun's interests on this side of the big pond. Mrs. Chamberlain gives delightful Sunday evening at homes. Her sister, Mrs. Stockbridge, who is visiting her, is also a charming woman. She is a graduate of Mills College. When Mrs. Birmingham, the contralto, was in London she was often at Mrs. Chamberlain's and her photograph is in the Chamberlain drawing-room. The Chamberlains entertain all the ultra-Bohemian set, artists, actors and writers, and the fashionables, too, love to be invited to their receptions. Leonora Jackson, the violinist, was a star guest at their last Sunday evening. Another popular American hostess is Mrs. Draper of New York, a Louisianan by birth and a beautiful woman. She is a friend of Mary Anderson Navarro and Sargent, the American artist."

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Mauzy and family are at Del Monte.

The Angelus

LOS ANGELES

NEW MANAGEMENT

Summer Rates to December 1st

LOOMIS BROS., Proprietors

When Fitch Comes To Town

Clyde Fitch, I hear, intends visiting this city some time within the next few months. A friend of the distinguished playwright informs me that he is coming out to get local color for one of his new plays. Fitch is strong on atmosphere, and as he deals mainly with the conceits and foibles of smart society it will no doubt be his aim to mingle with the local "quality," and get the sense of some of their characteristic traits. There is abundant material here for a distinctively Californian comedy. Miss Robinson's salon is highly suggestive of a unique motif, and there is fine inspiration in a Burlingame wedding or christening. If Mr. Fitch, believing that such themes belong to the domain of the burlesque, rejected them, Ethyl Hager might be prevailed upon to give a rough-house dinner with a food-throwing scene between the soup and the fish.

Magnetic Mrs. Gerstle

The acquaintances of Mrs. Mark Gerstle are beginning to marvel at what they consider her wonderful tact and her capacity for adapting herself to all sorts of atmosphere. To become persona grata to all the conflicting cliques in society is no small achievement. Few women are able to identify themselves with more than one. But Mrs. Gerstle appears to be in demand in all. Born and married into the most exclusive Jewish set, she is welcomed by all the exclusive Christian cliques, and invited to all the most fashionable homes in the city. She has unquestionably been invested with that subtle quality called magnetism. And what a strenuous social life she leads!

Maud—If Jack proposed to you what would you say?
Bell—It depends upon what he would propose.

The Growing Hill Colony

Livingston Jenks is one of the latest acquisitions of the Russian Hill colony. Mr. Jenks is one of the richest of San Francisco attorneys and he will have the most beautiful residence on the hill. Its site is on the brow near the junction of Taylor and Green streets. It commands a magnificent view. Mr. Worcester, the clergyman, lives a short distance away, and Piazzoni, the landscape artist, is just across the street. Cadenasso, who has a house that was brought around the Horn in pieces and put together in this city, is in the same neighborhood. Property on the hill has trebled in value since its excellence as a viewpoint was discovered a few years ago.

Despite His Beautiful Accent

Madame Barrios, who was arrested in London for intoxication, was well known in this city when her husband was President of Guatemala. She was then a very beautiful woman and wore stunning dresses and gorgeous jewels. She passed one summer at the Hotel Rafael, but rarely appeared in public, eating all her meals in her apartment. Mrs. Warfield once gave a large dinner for her and invited only those who could speak French or Spanish, assuming that the guest of honor knew no other tongue. Ward McAllister was asked to take her in to dinner because he boasted a French accent that was said, in San Rafael, to be almost Parisian in its purity. But as he had not been in Paris in many years his accent was slightly tainted. It excited the risibles of Madame Barrios, who finally explained: "I should prefer to speak English; you know I was born in New Orleans."

Gentleman of refinement and travel—35 years of age—fine presence, wishes to see the world. Would act as companion or secretary to party traveling in Europe or the Orient. Highest references furnished. Address Box 9, this office.

The City's Quacks

It is positively dangerous for a man who has had a cocktail and then an accident to be taken to one of our emergency hospitals. Every unconscious man with the smell of whisky about him is pronounced a victim of alcoholism by the city's medical quacks. Men who never touched liquor voluntarily, but who had whisky poured into them on the occasion of an accident, in the hope of reviving them, afterwards died of neglect at the emergency hospital, the doctor on duty having pronounced them sufferers from alcoholism and ordered them thrown into a cot. The administration of our emergency hospitals is criminally careless.

The Navy Jag

I note with some amusement that members of the crew of the station-ship Adams, at Tutuila, Samoa, in their mad hunt for a jag, broke open the liquid compasses and appropriated the alcohol they contained. There is nothing startling in this expedient to one who knows the sailor and his ways. It has been said that a boat's crew of seasoned sailors can be put on a desert island of sand in the centre of the ocean, and in an hour's time find something there upon which to get roaring drunk. Robbing the compasses became such a persistent practice years ago that the Navy Department was compelled to put jalap in the alcohol to discourage the practice, although even the jalap had no terrors for some of the sturdy tars. The shellac used for the decks is much in demand from the thirsty, and when it is being used a guard generally has to be placed over the sailors applying it. Many jags, and many deaths, have occurred in the Navy from drinking the crude wood alcohol used for various purposes on board ship, and cases are on record where officers who were collectors of reptiles have lost their specimens owing to sailors drinking up the alcohol in which they were preserved and substituting water in the jars. Cologne, when obtainable, is an acceptable beverage.

"Strathmill"

Scotch Whisky

an aged whisky distilled
from barley malt—not corn

CROWN DISTILLERIES CO.

GENERAL AGENTS

age, and every experienced sailor knows how to make an intoxicant from the yeast belonging to the ship's cook. These desperate remedies for thirsts became less common in the navy when the canteen system was in vogue, or at least permitted on some of the ships, the men being allowed to have their beer regularly, but during Secretary Long's administration of the Navy Department the temperance cranks got in their work and the beer was forbidden, with the result that shellac, wood alcohol and other poisons are regaining their popularity, as in the case of the Adams's crew.

Concerning Contraband of War

It is amusing to see the wry faces that the trans-Pacific steamship companies are making now that there is a possibility of the Russian Vladivostok squadron seizing some of their vessels and interrupting the profitable traffic in contraband goods upon which these companies have been waxing fat for several months. Ever since the Port Arthur and Vladivostok squadrons were reported bottled up, these companies, openly ignoring the rules of neutrality issued by the President at the opening of hostilities, and in defiance of the well-established regulations of international law, have been shipping huge quantities of contraband of war to Japan. They well know that they are violating the law, and they do so at their own risk, yet, now that there is a prospect of being bitten, they are raising a great howl, and demanding the aid of the Department of State. The Department can give them no help. Every ship that carries military stores or foodstuffs in large quantity, or coal, to a belligerent's port is liable to seizure and there is no redress. It is one of the cardinal principles of international law that belligerents, for self-preservation, must subject neutral commerce to inconvenience in war, and, if that neutral commerce, by carrying contraband of war to a belligerent, ceases to be neutral in fact, it renders itself liable to confiscation without redress.

The Malacca Incident

In the case of the Malacca, seized in the Red Sea, the Russians were wholly in the right. There was absolutely no reason for the release of the steamer, which was done entirely as a matter of courtesy. Not only did the Malacca carry military stores bound for Japan, exclusive of those for British posts, but her captain refused to show his manifest to the boarding officer. That refusal alone justified the seizure of the steamer, even if she were innocent of other offense. As for the claim that military goods consigned to a private individual secures immunity from seizure, it is utter absurdity. It makes no difference whether the goods are consigned to an individual, a firm or a government, if they are contraband evidently, and destined for the enemy, they may be seized and a prize court determines the disposition of the vessel carrying them. These things are all as well known to military and naval men as the law of petty larceny to a police judge. If the Mongolia, or the Korea, or the Gaelic be stopped on the high seas, and found to have supplies that would give aid and comfort to the Japanese, the Russians would have every right to seize them and their owners could not in equity or the established prac-

FAT FOLKS

I reduced my weight 70 pounds, bust 6 inches, waist 6 inches and hips 14 inches in a short time by a guaranteed harmless remedy without exercise or starving. I will tell you all about it. Enclose stamp. Address

MRS. E. S. RICHARDS,
226 E. 9th St., Riverside, Cal.

tice of nations say a word in protest. Ample warning was given out when the President issued his neutrality manifesto months ago.

The Army Boor

Apropos of the remarks I made some weeks ago regarding the relative manners of army and navy officers, much testimony has reached me of late in support of my contention that the average army officer is much less of a gentleman than the average navy officer. My attention has been called particularly to the reception that has been accorded civilians who, themselves courteous enough, have been compelled to call at the artillery headquarters at the Presidio, upon their legitimate business. From all accounts the boorishness encountered at this place is suggestive of that which characterizes the conduct of a pompous policeman. Just what an army officer expects to gain by being at once a snob, a boor and a cad, it is difficult to imagine. If he had the intelligence of a jack-rabbit he might know that instead of impressing the civilian with an idea of his supposed importance, he is merely evoking ridicule and contempt. I have never heard of any well behaved, well mannered person ever visiting a United States man-of-war without being received with every courtesy and leaving impressed with the manliness and good breeding of the American naval officer. It is no wonder that the navy is vastly the more popular of the two services.

Cupid and a Bell Button

Two years ago, beneath a big tree on the Patton lawn in Washington, a little girl poured tea for her dolls and entertained a boy admirer, a West Point cadet at home on leave. A year later the girl, her short frocks lengthened, visited West Point and enjoyed a rollicking time, the cadet still being in her court. One day he cut a bell button from his gray uniform and, attaching it to a slender gold chain, begged the pretty girl to wear it always. She has that chain and bell button today, I am told. The sequel to that episode was the announcement, the other day, of the engagement of Miss Lottie Patton of Berkeley and Lieutenant Russell Eastman, assistant surgeon U. S. A. Miss Patton is the daughter of Colonel W. S. Patton of the Quartermaster's Department, at present stationed in San Francisco. She has two brothers in the army, Lieutenant W. T. Patton, Thirteenth Infantry, and Captain Hudson Patton of the Coast Artillery. A younger brother, George Patton, is a cadet at West Point. Lieutenant Eastman's company is stationed in the Philippines. The wedding is to be a military function and will be celebrated on the thirtieth of August.

BOHM

BRISTOL & C.

Our brilliant and exclusive showing of

Diamonds, Pearls and Precious Stones

is a revelation to Jewelry lovers. Especially reliable and tasteful settings.

104-110 Geary Street
San Francisco

The Slipper Hurt Her

The only excitement at the beautifully arranged wedding of Frances Grow of Berkeley and Lieutenant Beverly C. Daly, U. S. A., which was solemnized the other night in the Church of the Advent, East Oakland, occurred when a tiny white satin slipper, intended for the bride, missed her and hit the first bridesmaid, Maud Clark of San Diego, on the head. The slipper was as tiny as Titania's own and Miss Clark was not really hurt, only chagrined that she should have been made the mark of such a trifling thing as a white satin shoe. And when the bride threw her bouquet from the landing to the eager group of girls below, it was also caught by Miss Clark. It is supposed that catching a bridal bouquet is a balm for all woes, but the San Diego girl only shook her head adorably, and said, "I seem to be in line to catch everything in sight tonight." "Better be vaccinated," suggested a military man.

Captain Rowan's Fiancee

Another of my predictions has been verified by the announcement of the engagement of Mrs. Josephine Morris de Greayer and Captain Rowan. Though I mentioned no names people in touch with social affairs knew to whom I referred when I told of the impending engagement of the hospitable widow of St. Dunstan's and an army officer. Mrs. de Greayer is one of the most active club women in San Francisco. She belongs to more clubs than any other woman in town. She is also an earnest worker in several charitable organizations. Her pet charity is the free library for the blind. Her fad is the entertaining of visiting celebrities.

"Is Jones much of a deer hunter?"

"I should say he is. He belongs to a country club that has taken a lease of a canyon five miles long. The members sit around a campfire night after night telling of their exploits in the years ago."

"Do they kill many deer?"

"Nary a one, but they have a lot of fine hounds and fine guns, and they have a fine time swapping lies."

A Ship with a History

Much interest will no doubt be aroused by the arrival on this coast of the converted cruiser Buffalo, when something of that swift vessel's dramatic history is known. She is destined, it is said, to take the place of the Adams in the Pacific training squadron, or else to become the station-ship at Panama. The Buffalo has served in two navies. Originally the merchant steamer El Cid, plying between New York and South American ports, she was purchased by the Brazilian government about fourteen years ago to form part of the improvised navy manned by Americans, intended to subdue the rebellious navy under Admirals Mello and De Gama. She did her part and remained in Brazil until just before the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, when the United States purchased her, changing her name from Nichteroy, which the Brazilians christened her, to Buffalo. She reached this country too late for active service against the Spaniards, but proved very serviceable later, her last and most conspicuous service having been the convoying to Cavite of the torpedo flotilla under Lieutenant L. H. Chandler. She had reached Singapore, on her return trip to New York, when cabled orders recalled her and directed her assignment to the Pacific station.

The Deerings Greet the Stork

The friends of the Frank Deerings are flooding the house of that happy couple with felicitations anent the visit last Saturday of the long-legged bird. The Deerings now have a little daughter, and since the arrival Mr. Deering has retired from the active practice of his profession. Legal affairs are altogether too prosaic to harmonize with his feelings nowadays. Mrs. Deering (Mabel Craft) is rejoicing over the home-made atmosphere for a juvenile, which will probably be her next magazine contribution.

"Why does Miss Crowsfeet always look so sad?"

"Poor thing, she has long been grief-stricken over a terrible contretemps."

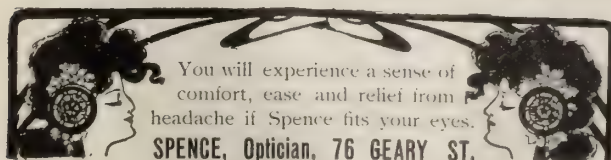

"Indeed! What was it?"

"She was born fifteen years too soon."

Four hundred guests enjoyed the reception given to Dr. Orlow at the Arts and Crafts on Tuesday night. A musical program was rendered by Miss Amalia Jacoby, Mary Morton Rice and others, Dr. Orlow and his private secretary, Charles E. Reidlinger, contributing numbers. A dainty supper was served in the workshop, on the benches and boxes, and the affair was delightfully informal and genial in every way.

Loeb's Big Talk

Professor Jacques Loeb of the University of California, is of the opinion that death is not inevitable providing we keep all the organs of our body intact. This is not a new theory, but Professor Loeb dilated on it for an hour before a large audience, and convinced many people that he had made a great discovery. If Professor Loeb should prosecute his researches further and discover some process for generating water possessing all the virtues of the fluid that flowed from the spring mislaid by Ponce de Leon a lecture on the subject would be worth while. Though I am no scientist I have always believed that if I could discover some absolute safeguard against organic decay I could live until I grew tired of life. And yet I have never spent any time trying to make the discovery. Probably because I am convinced that God ordained otherwise.

You will experience a sense of comfort, ease and relief from headache if Spence fits your eyes.

SPENCE, Optician, 76 GEARY ST.

Old J.H. Cutter Whisky

FROM OLD KENTUCKY

DISTILLED AND BOTTLED BY
C.P. MOORMAN & CO.
LOUISVILLE, KY.

SHERWOOD AND SHERWOOD
DISTRIBUTORS
212-214 MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO
HARRY G. HOWELL
SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE

THE BEST AFLOAT OR ASHORE

The Gallant Professor To The Rescue

The ever-busy co-ed is to the front again. This time she has complained to Frederick Jackson Turner, Professor of American History and director of the School of History at the University of Wisconsin, who is lecturing in the Summer School of the University of California. She told him that the men in attendance at the classes were rude to her. The Eastern man was properly scandalized, and with the true spirit of the country beyond the great divide, he read the men a lecture on their evil proclivities. "I will not have the girls teased," asserted the professor, in no uncertain tone. "If there is to be a wild west circus in this school, I want you to understand right here that I am its ring-master, owner, and in fact, to use your Western vernacular, the whole thing." "Goodness," exclaimed a young woman, "he is splendid, isn't he?" "Yes," agreed her companion, hesitatingly, "but I hope the men won't think that they must not speak to us at all. These Easterners are so radical and so unimaginative."

High honor has been paid to Jerome Barker Landfield, an instructor in the department of history in the University of California, who has been elected a foreign member of the Imperial Geographical Society of Russia. This post carries with it a great many privileges not often granted to foreigners, who are not permitted as a rule to wander at will over the realm of the Czar. Professor Landfield is thoroughly familiar with both Russia and Siberia and knows the language well. He stands high with the Government at St. Petersburg and will now be able to prosecute his researches without molestation from any of the petty officials who can retard these matters so signally. He intends to go to Russia almost immediately for the purpose of resuming his studies there.

Gossip From Alameda

It is on the cards that Evelyn Gowing and Robert Valteau will be married in September. Their engagement was the outcome of an attachment that was begun years ago when both were schoolmates and that was fanned into a passion in the tennis court later on. By the way, Bessie Valteau, "Bob's" young sister, is also coming to the fore as a tennis champion. She is an athletic, nut-brown maid, and the best woman swimmer in Alameda.

Her Beautiful Lace Gown

Mrs. J. W. Burnham of Clinton avenue, who is chairman of the entertainment committee for the Knights Templars triennial conclave, will wear an exquisite lace gown at the reception to be given the Knights. It is of Point de Venise lace and is every stitch the work of Mrs. Burnham's needle. It has been variously valued at one thousand and at fifteen hundred dollars. With the gown she will display a number of costly diamonds, in the form of tiara, necklace, stomacher and bracelets. Mrs. Burnham, by the way, is a very beautiful woman, of stately and graceful carriage.

S. KRAMERSuits, Jackets and Outer GarmentsMade to OrderLADIES' ARTISTIC TAILORING

Phone Black 3831 218 Powell St., San Francisco

WE BUY AND SELL
TONOPAH STOCKS
EXCLUSIVELY

Keep posted by reading our market letters and save money by getting our prices

FRANK L. KREIDER & BRO.

332 Crossley Bldg.

San Francisco

IF YOU WANT THE WINNERS
GET THE
TELEGRAPH HANDICAP

OUR RECORD SPEAKS FOR ITSELF

For sale at Scott's News Emporium, Ellis street; Ferry News Stand and Sausalito Ferry.

FIRE OF LIFE
AN UNFAILING CURE FOR RHEUMATISM NEURALGIA,
SPRAINS, BRUISES, AND
ALL PAINS AND ACHES.
ALL DRUGGISTS 50¢

Fire of Life, known for years as the most remarkable remedy for the cure of

RHEUMATISM

A trial of this remedy will at once show its great merit as a rheumatic cure.

ROWELL & BROWN

32 Turk St., S. F.

TONKIN, Photographer*1490 MARKET ST.

Bet. 7th and 8th Sts.

San Francisco, Cal.

GROUND FLOOR STUDIO

MT. SHASTA

SUMMER RATES

Fishing, hunting and camping facilities make the Shasta region most satisfactory as an outing place. There are no better trout streams than those about Shasta, and you are always in easy reach of direct communication with the city.

TICKETS AT REDUCED RATES
MAKE ACCESS EASY FOR EVERYBODY

Ask for a Shasta folder. It is illustrated, and will give you full information about every part of the Shasta country. Free from any agent, or Information Bureau.

613 MARKET ST.
SOUTHERN PACIFIC

Rumored Engagement

Tongues are busy just now over the rumored engagement of Charles Paxton, broker and clubman, and Susie Darneal, daughter of H. Clairborne Darneal of Alameda. Some months ago Susie Darneal was divorced from Allen Bowen, and since then she has kept out of the limelight and in the seclusion of the Grand street mansion of her parents. For awhile it was rumored that she contemplated abandoning the pomps and vanities of the world for the cloistered life of a religieuse, but that was before Charles Paxton, the debonair and rich widower, happened along to awaken renewed interest in terrestrial diversions. Several years ago Charles Paxton was severely shocked by the tragic death of his wife who was drowned in a collision between a pleasure yacht and a big steamer, in the bay. She was one of a jolly party on board the yacht that scarcely left its moorings at the wharf when the collision occurred. The bereaved husband employed divers who worked night and day until they brought the body of the unfortunate woman to the surface. With the body was recovered jewelry of great value worn by Mrs. Paxton when she started on her pleasure trip. Though no announcement has yet been made of the engagement, the gossips are sure that it will not long be deferred.

He Has a Way With Him

The Rev. William Carson Shaw, the East Oakland rector, is away on his vacation and is greatly missed by the brides who hoped to have him officiate at their weddings. Mr. Shaw "has a way with him" and no Oakland bride thinks she has had the full benefit of the service unless he has read it. The fees must have amounted to as much as his salary during the past few years, for he has married the very richest people in Oakland.

The Hill Set

Mrs. John Valentine, who was Jacqueline Moore, is at home in her new abode out in the Piedmont hills and she is beginning to entertain in the lavishly hospitable way characteristic of the Moores and Valentines. Mrs. Barton is a near neighbor and she has many an amusing incident to relate of the trip to Egypt, from which country she recently returned. Miss Caig, who was her companion on the journey, is still with her as a guest, and time is passing pleasantly these summer days for the coterie out on Linda Vista terrace. Among the "hill set" are the Havemeyers, who are never as happy as when they have a house, or perhaps it were more correct to say a veranda, full of visitors.

ART IN SAN FRANCISCO.

Of late years San Francisco's claims to be regarded as an art centre have forged steadily forward and may now be regarded as an accomplished fact. Especially in the field of photography does San Francisco go ahead of the other American cities. This fact the writer found very strongly illustrated during a visit last week to the studio of J. C. Rasmussen, the well known photographer of this city, where were learned many things new to the layman. The studio is in the Liebes building, 139 Post street, and is indeed worthy the name. The reception room is furnished in Louis Fourteenth style, containing many antique pieces. Delicate and harmonious colorings make a most pleasing effect. The walls are hung with some of the best efforts in oils and water colors of well known local artists, such as Clawson, Whaite, Hill and Best, and many beautiful photographs taken by Mr. Rasmussen show what giant strides photography has taken in the past few years. Mr. Rasmussen has designed his operating room after those of the famous Steffens of Chicago and McDonald of New York, inasmuch as using prism light to gain the desired effects. This is not generally known, but it has been demonstrated that in no other way can such delicate, soft tints and effects be produced in photography as by the use of prism lights. At the Rasmussen studio nothing is done in a hurry. The paramount idea is to produce an artistic and lifelike photo, and this can only be done by taking the necessary time. For instance, should you desire a sitting, an appointment should be made at, say, two o'clock p. m. At that hour your work begins and it is not ended until Mr. Rasmussen is satisfied that he has done everything desired. In this way the expression is highly developed and the work is of exceptional value. "We do not value time here," said Mr. Rasmussen; "what we do value is our ability to produce photographs unlike others in style, character and effect. In order to do this we must give our patrons lots of time to regain their natural repose. Our idea is not to produce an enormous amount of pictures, but to make what we do produce something worthy of being looked up to. Every style of photo is made here, from a delicate carbon to the bold impressionist style. The same care and thought is given every individual piece of work in the studio." It is indeed a pleasure to know that New York and Chicago are not the only cities where the finest work is produced. The Rasmussen studio will compare favorably with any work in this country, and a visit to the studio will well repay those who love the artistic in photography. Here it can be seen upon a high plane, worked out upon the lines of real art. Mr. Rasmussen has indeed made an enviable reputation for himself in this city.

Artistic Interiors Designed and Decorated

Ideas and Estimates furnished for all classes of
Decorative Work

L. TOZER & SON

762-764 Mission St.

San Francisco, Cal.

M. H. RICHARDSON, Opposite Phelan Building

Importer of Precious, Semi-Precious and Superior Imitation Stones

769 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO

The Tragedy of Queretaro MURINE EYE REMEDY

BY FRANCES BLACK.

Through the press despatches, the other day, came the news of the death of Admiral Baron Schaffer, "the last living witness of the tragedy of Queretaro, on the Austrian side." If Schaffer was a witness to the execution there is no record of the fact in history. On the morning of the execution Maximilian looked about for a friendly face but found only his Hungarian servant, Tudos. He asked, "Is no one else here?" and none answered. It is said that Baron Magnus, the Prussian Minister, and Consul Bohnsen were present, but if so they kept out of sight. However, Schaffer was a friend of Maximilian, and among his papers was found a letter in the Emperor's handwriting dated the day before the execution, acknowledging his gratitude for generous service.

The death of Schaffer has revived interest in that historical tragedy of a generation ago. It preceded by such a little while the downfall of the French Empire that, looking backward, it seems surprising to consider that Napoleon III, so near the end of his own career, could have seriously attempted to lend support to the establishment of an empire in Mexico. But a doubt of the ultimate ascendancy of his own star was the last question to intrude itself upon the attention of that monarch, who regarded himself as great a military genius as his illustrious uncle, and depended on the success of the Mexican venture to make it clear to all the world. He frequently referred to the project as "the conception of my reign," and his hope was to establish a sort of protectorate over Maximilian and to do the actual governing at long distance. The actual conditions which existed in Mexico were but little understood in Europe, and to tell the truth, there was little effort made to understand them. It was much easier to believe what was most comfortable. Napoleon was not alone in his impression that the Latin and Anglo-Saxon races were irrevocably opposed to one another by nature, and that it was the intention of the Creator that they should remain so. The conception of a Mexican empire was not original with him, however, for in 1821, when the principle of constitutional monarchy was accepted by the Mexicans under Iturbide, a convention known as the "plan of Iguala" was drawn in which it was agreed that the crown should be tendered the Infante of Spain, brother of Ferdinand VII, and should he refuse, to the Archduke Charles of Austria. Later, in 1854, when Santa Ana was dictator for life, he gave full powers to Gutierrez de Estrada to treat with the courts of Paris, London, Vienna and Madrid, for the establishment of a monarchy in Mexico under a European prince. At that time the crown was offered, with the consent of the French Government, to the Duc de Montpensier, who very wisely declined. In 1859 General Miramon confirmed the power given by Santa Ana and it was then that attention was drawn to Maximilian for the first time.

It is needless to refer to the practical anarchy which reigned in Mexico in the early sixties. Nor is it necessary to go into particulars with regard to the various excuses found ready to hand as reasons for making French intervention necessary. Religion and finance each had a part. Speculation and fraudulent transactions were a matter of course and the repudiation of bonds by the Juarez government and a little clever financial juggling by the Swiss banker, Jecker, together with dark days of our own Civil war, were a combination of circumstances which favored the imperial scheme. The sharp-tongued Princess Matilda once remarked that since there had been one soldier in the family, every Bonaparte regarded himself as a military genius, and assuredly Napoleon III, at that time, just after the Crimea, and Solferino and Magenta, had no doubts about his own martial greatness.

There is no more pathetic chapter in the history of the world than that which relates to the career of the unfortunate and sadly deceived Austrian Archduke who was put up as a figurehead. He was led to believe, what he was perhaps only too willing to credit, that the people of Mexico had called him and that once landed all opposition would melt away. Instead, it was only a few malcontents and reactionaries, many of them greedy for power and position which they hoped to get through imperial favor, who wanted an empire. The French soldiers sent to prepare the way by putting down the insurrectionaries found what our own army has encountered in the Philippines, and what the Spaniards found in Cuba, only a small force at any one point, conducting a sort of bushwhacking campaign, and then a silent melting away into the forests, to reunite at some other point. They were not used to armies organized on a military basis, and they could neither understand nor overcome them. The Austrians, sent to reinforce the French, had not forgotten Magenta and Solferino, and they were as much inclined to go to war with each

THOSE
LUSTROUS
EYES ARE MURINE
EYES

Sunlight Intensified by Reflection

from Ocean Beach and Desert Sand unrelieved by foliage. Winds and mineral laden poisonous dust, all bring eye-troubles in their wake, Granulated Eyelids, Red, Itching, Burning, Tired and Watery Eyes, Impaired Vision and Eye Pain. Prevention, Relief and Cure are found in MURINE EYE REMEDY, mild and harmless. Murine aids those wearing glasses, doesn't smart, but soothes and quickly cures. Is an Eye Tonic. Sold by Opticians and Druggists. Fifty Cents.

EXCURSION RATES ST. LOUIS

ROUND TRIP Excursion Tickets to St. Louis and Chicago on sale August 8, 9, 10, 18, 19, and dates in other months later at the following rates:

TO ST. LOUIS . . . $67.50
TO CHICAGO, passing one way through St. Louis . . . $72.50

RETURN LIMIT three months. Stop overs allowed on both going and returning trip.

THESE RATES GOOD ON ANY TRAIN

Ask about the Through Tourist Cars direct to the Exposition.

613 MARKET STREET
SOUTHERN PACIFIC

other as with the inhabitants. When Maximilian and Carlotta arrived at Vera Cruz, the escort sent to receive them failed to be on hand, and they landed, two strangers in a strange land, hardly noticed or recognized. Those about them were self-seeking and selfish, each faction and each individual of a faction being anxious for profit.

It would have taken a wiser and stronger man than Maximilian to have ruled his "allies." The French, having furnished the money and the nucleus of the army, naturally expected to receive all the favors; the Austrians, being the countrymen of the Emperor, looked upon the honors as theirs by right, while the Belgians were equally clamorous because they were of the nationality of the Empress, and the Mexicans, with perhaps the best right of all, thought they alone should be considered. Maximilian had fallen out with the Pope when he recognized the anti-clericals, so he could count on no assistance from that quarter, and of course Napoleon threw him over as soon as the United States took a hand in the game. When he accepted the imperial crown of Mexico his brother, Francis Joseph, made him resign all claim to the Austrian throne as well as promise to drop the Mexican title if he returned, so he was out all around. There was one time when he might have retreated from the situation with honor; when the French support was withdrawn he could have abdicated since his position was untenable, with neither finance nor an army. But Carlotta clung to her crown, and he felt expatriated. Then the crowd around him did not want to lose what they had hold of, so he was beset by a lot of mercenaries who persuaded him to make a stand, but who, one and all, deserted him in the end. If he had abdicated when the foreign support was withdrawn, and told the plain truth that he had been offered the crown under false pretenses, he might have saved both life and honor. Prince "Plon Plon" once said that you could do anything with bayonets but sit on them, and that is what Maximilian tried to do. Napoleon III told him he was going to find a bed of roses in a gold mine, but he found only thorns.

At the Resorts

On Wednesday morning of last week a fire broke out in the barn of the San Luis Hot Sulphur Springs, and destroyed the stage and some valuable stock, including several spans of horses and mules. There was the usual excitement attending such events, and one of the women guests who was taking a plunge before breakfast parted with her presence of mind, and not only ran out sans stockings and other necessary articles of apparel but also had the misfortune to lose her keys in the bath. The San Luis Hot Springs were formerly known as Sycamore Springs, but the property has recently been purchased by Mr. A. M. Smith of Minneapolis, who has made extensive improvements in the way of new cottages and bath houses. It is a popular resort with the Southern California contingent who naturally think the resorts of the north very far away. The guests at the springs this year included several from San Francisco, among them Miss Scott, Mrs. Baker, L. S. Chapman, F. T. Green and Mrs. Green with their daughters, G. E. Bailey, F. L. Mullen, J. A. Deering, Charles Von Tager, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bybee.

Late arrivals at Paraiso Springs from San Francisco were L. Crocker, Mr. and Mrs. M. Duvall, Mrs. William Griswold, Ed. F. Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. James Mackey and son, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Byrne and others.

Arrivals at Rowardennan during the past week included Mrs. H. M. Hastings, Miss Hastings, Miss Ethel F. Hanks, Mrs. A. R. Kelly, Mrs. J. C. Nolan, Geo. D. Collins, J. A. Hendrick, Miss Margaret McDevit, Mrs. F. M. Elmendorf and daughter, Mrs. Carrie Van Vorst, Miss Lillian Van Vorst, John Anderson, C. A. Sands, Chas. A. Sands Jr., A. J. Seiberlich, Mr. and Mrs. Richardson, Mrs. Robt. H. White and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Carl Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. de Laveaga, M. S. Jeffers, Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Maxwell of San Francisco; A. G. Dick, Mrs. H. P. Carlton, A. E. Clark and Mrs. Wm. E. Miles of Oakland.

Among the many recent arrivals at Byron Hot Springs are Brig. Gen. Geo. B. Rodney, U. S. A., and Mrs. Rodney, A. T. Wagner and daughter of Stockton, Mrs. T. Goodman of San Francisco, Mrs. M. H. Hankel of Santa Rosa, William Land, the millionaire hotel man of Sacramento, Mr. and Mrs. J. Schmidt, Mrs. G. D. O'Neil of San Francisco, Geo. J. O'Neil and W. H. Hoogs of Honolulu, A. B. Thompson of San Rafael, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Talcott of Fruitvale, Mrs. J. Baumgaertner, Rockford, Ind., H. P. Baumgaertner of Fresno, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Herrscher, Miss Herrscher, Mrs. S. W. Marsh, Nevada City, E. B. Pond and Mrs. Pond, Dr. Chas. E. Parent, Frank M. Leland, and Mrs. D. Peckerman of San Francisco.

Late arrivals at Del Monte included: Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Steel, Sacramento; D. J. Davis, Sacramento; Mrs. Thos. Strong, Miss Mattell, Miss Phillips, C. T. L. Krogmann, New York; R. Matthies, Mrs. J. B. Schroeder, Dr. C. G. Levison, Mrs. Gerstle, Mrs. Irvine, Jas. W. Byrne, Rose Keilus, Mrs. Keilus, Mr. C. J. Wilder, Mrs. J. L. Ridell, Mrs. A. N. Towne, Mrs. C. E. Worden, J. B. Schroeder, Miss Eugenie Hawes.

Arrivals at El Carmelo included: J. P. Thorn, J. Smith and wife, H. H. Bell and wife, J. A. Percy and wife, Louis Dore, H. J. Furley, Mrs. David Handerson, Miss Reta Handerson, Mrs. F. C. Shurnard, Gladys Shurnard, Mrs. V. Klofeld, Mrs. A. T. Smith, A. T. Dresser, C. Baigley, R. E. Pever, E. R. Cheadle, C. E. McPlurson, E. R. Chandler, W. H. Cobb and son, W. E. Luis.

YOSEMITE VALLEY.

SEVEN ADVANTAGES IN GOING SANTA FE.

1. A low rate of fare: The Santa Fe round-trip to Yosemite Valley, first-class, costs only $28.50. This saves the traveler $10.00.
2. No sleeping-car berth required: The rail journey is made entirely in the day time and the traveler is not put to the expense of a Pullman berth. This saves $3.00.
3. California Big Trees seen without side ride: Santa Fe Yosemite stages pass directly through two groves of giant sequoias without side ride or extra expense. This saves $2.00.
4. Good meals at a moderate price: Meals along the Santa Fe line to Yosemite are most toothsome and cost only 50c. and 75c. each. These prices are reasonable and save the traveler on the round-trip about $15.00.
5. Modern stage coaches: Santa Fe coaches are new-built and especially for Yosemite service. They are the newest and most comfortable running into the Valley.
6. The Merced Canyon entrance to Yosemite Valley: Santa Fe stages go up into Yosemite Valley the way the river comes down. This is by far the grandest entrance to the Valley and passes cliffs and waterfalls seen on no other line.
7. The "Double Loop": By an unique routing Santa Fe passengers are taken into the Valley one way and out another, giving a complete change of scenery for over fifty miles. This makes the grandest stage ride in the world.

'TIS WORTH WHILE TO TRAVEL ON THE SANTA FE.

VALUABLE JEWELRY LOST

During the summer months much jewelry is lost traveling and at summer resorts. This can be avoided by leaving yours with the Baldwin Jewelry Co., 906 Market St., who make advances on diamonds and jewelry.

PIERCE-RODOLPH STORAGE CO. Inc.

STORAGE, MOVING, PACKING AND SHIPPING

WAREHOUSE: EDDY ST., near Fillmore

Specially built for the Storage of Household Furniture

OFFICE: POST AND POWELL STS.

Phone Private 571

CURES

Bythinia

CONSTIPATION

FOR SALE AT DRUG STORES AND BARS

Dreams

Lips there are that crave the touch of lips they may not press,
That laugh above the heart's dead weight of hopeless weariness,
That sometimes paler grow beneath the starved soul's futile cry
And tremble with the fervor of desires that will not die.

Hands, there are, 'press other hands but love's wild thrill is dead,
Lips speak to lips but hearts no more are reached by what is said,
There come sad dreams, like transient mist, of joys that fate
withholds,

And longing is such bitter pain that hopelessness consoles.

No rose so red but fragrance from one redder blows afar,
No night so fair but that another shows a brighter star,
Old wines we crave but old love sometimes fails the one athirst;
No virtue breathes in constancy when vagrant dreams are nursed.

—Mabel Porter Pitts.

The Stage

Why They Don't Enthuse

It is all well enough to prate in condemnation of the drama that jolts some preconceived notion of what is or is not moral, but give us a play that does not pose one of the important sexual problems and we are bored. Such a play is "Mice and Men," a nice, clean, wholesome, lady-like play with just a touch of sin to spice it! Just such a play as the moralists would have when they emerge from the theatre after sitting through one of the other kind—when they have that bad taste in the mouth which they smugly speak about. But for some reason they do not enthuse over the clean, wholesome play. Why? It is bright and sparkling in spots, and tells a pretty love story; the craftsmanship is all right, and the interest is accumulative up to the essential climax, but there is something lacking. The fact is that the play though full of poetic sentiment is absolutely prosaic. It has not sufficient of the wicked element. There is little chance for drama in the meek and lowly, and of such is "Mice and Men," with a hero obsessed with an insane idea about raising a wife as he would carrots. Good men and good women on the boards are bores. Strong sinning men and women are interesting. Why try to convince ourselves of the contrary, and why imagine that the function of dramatic criticism is to expound the Ten Commandments? Henry Miller is always welcome. He has many friends in San Francisco and they are joyous over his coming. People are inclined to contrast his present support with his companions of the past, but though he has no all-star cast he has some talented men and women, capable of good work. Miss Jessie Busley is an actress of unusual temperament, and I am confident that the more local theatre-goers see of her the more they will like her.

Hit of the "Faust" Trio

For variety and general excellence the Orpheum has never presented a better program than the one it offers this week. Charmion is the most alluring gymnast of the age and her disrobing act is as dainty and bewitching as any I have seen in the "bedstead drama." In spite of her brawn she is feminine from the top of her coiffure to the tip of her chic little boot. Abramoff, Russo and Miss Decker surprised every one by their rendition of the trio from "Faust." Miss Decker has developed a great deal under Abramoff's tutelage and her voice has gained much volume. Abramoff's voice is not heard to advantage in the trio for the reason that the music was written to bring out the top notes of the soprano and tenor. This is one of the few scenes in the opera not dominated by Mephisto. This is where he takes a back seat vocally, as it were. If curtain-calls mean anything then the act is the feature of the bill. On Monday night the trio was repeated three or four times. Musical Kleist has a unique turn, consisting for the most part of optical illusions. The Empire Comedy Four are always funny and sometimes tuneful. Julian Rose comes in for his share of the plaudits and sings several new parodies that effectively tickles the risibles. Rose Coghlan gives a version of her old play of "Forget Me Not," and makes every one regret that there is not a whole evening for her. The two comic skaters fall about the stage in a way that would break the average person's neck, but each time they bob up serenely, and end their act with a few fancy figures that are unique as well as difficult. The Zancigs with their weird mind reading and the Orpheum motion pictures complete an excellent bill.

Mrs. S. Kramer of 218 Powell street will return to town on August seventh, after an extended visit to New York and other Eastern cities. Mrs. Kramer has been very busy selecting the new styles and goods for the fall trade and has obtained some very handsome novelties.

★TIVOLI★

Cor. Eddy and Mason Sts.

Evenings at 8 Sharp

Beginning Monday Evening, August 1st
First Production in San Francisco of the London and New York Musical Comedy Success

"THE TOREADOR"

By Ivan Caryll and Lionel Moncton

With a Stupendous Cast and the Beauty Chorus

Usual Tivoli Prices, 25, 50 and 75c.

Seats always selling

Only Matinee Saturday

COLUMBIA

THE LEADING THEATRE

Matinee Saturdays Only

Beginning Next Monday, second and last week

Charles Frohman presents

HENRY MILLER

In Madeleine Lucette Ryley's London and New York success

"MICE AND MEN"

Monday, August 8th—Henry Miller in "JOSEPH ENTANGLED"

ALCAZAR THEATRE

Phone "ALCAZAR"

Belasco and Mayer

Proprietors

E. D. Price, Gen. Mgr.

Monday, Aug. 1, one week

Regular Matinees Thursday and Saturday

Evenings, 25c to 75c

Matinees Thursday and Saturday 25c to 50c

WHITE WHITTLESEY

And the Alcazar Stock Company

Present a Magnificent Scenic Revival of

"THE LADY OF LYONS"

First Appearance of Eugenie Thais Lawton at the Alcazar

Monday, Aug. 8—White Whittlesey in SHERIDAN, or THE MAID OF BATH

Paul M. Potter's Comedy of Manners of a Century Ago

Orpheum

O'Farrell between
Stockton and Powell
Streets

Week Commencing
Sunday Matinee,
July 31st

Second and last week of CHARMION

4—BIG NEW ACTS—4

OLIVE MAY and J. W. ALBAUGH JR. McCabe, Sabine and Vera. Les Olopas. Hughes Musical Trio. Empire Comedy Four. Marcus and Gartelle. Orpheum Motion Pictures and Last Week of EDITH DECKER, DOMENICO RUSSO and Sig. ABRAMOFF.

Regular Matinees Every Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday

Prices: 10c, 25c and 50c.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Phone "Grand Opera House"

Grand Opera House Co.

Lessee

Regular Matinee Saturday

Week beginning tomorrow
(Sunday) Matinee

MR. JAMES NEILL

And the Original
Neill Company

In Bronson Howard's Famous Military Drama

"SHENANDOAH"

Special Summer Prices, 15c, 25c and 50c

Fischers THEATRE

O'Farrell between Stockton and
Powell Streets

Phone "Fischer's"

The EVENT of EVENTS

Commencing Monday, August 1st

Gigantic Spectacular Burlesque Production

"THE WHIRL OF THE TOWN"

Most Beautiful and Funniest of all New York Casino Successes

Cast of Unexcelled Artists

Dorothy Morton, Nora Bayes, Flossie Hope, Rice and Cady, Bobby North, Edwin Clark, Ben Dillon, Lionel Lawrence. Prize Singing Chorus of Forty

30 Novelties and New Specialties.

Reserved Seats—Nights 25c, 50c and 75c.

Saturday and Sunday Matinees 25c and 50c.

Children at Matinees 25c and 10c

CENTRAL

Belasco & Mayer, Props.

Phone South 533

Market Street near Eighth

Opposite City Hall

Beginning Monday, August 1st

Matinees Saturday and Sunday

Kirke La Shelle's Powerful American Heroic Drama

"SERGEANT JAMES"

Prices: Evening, 10c to 50c

Matinees, 10c, 15c, 25c

August 8—"A BUNCH OF KEYS"

OLIVE MAY

who, with John W. Albaugh Jr., will make her first appearance in this city at the Orpheum next week, presenting Grant Stewart's amusing comedietta, "The Girl from Kansas." "The Girl from Kansas" tells the story of a breezy young Western girl trying to exploit woman's rights in Mexico, but her femininity ruins her cause when she meets a handsome young Mexican. Miss May scored her greatest success in Augustus Thomas's "Arizona" and Mr. Albaugh made his big hit in "Colorado," by the same author.

The Situations Are Great

The gallery yelled itself hoarse on Monday night at the Central. Scott Marble is a man who knows how to write melodramas. Of the four acts of "The Gates of Justice" three have climaxes that are simply stunning. The first act ends with a murder, in a fight for fortune, the wrong man—one not in the quarrel—being shot. The second act sees the heroine, a fearless maid of the mountains, railroaded off to an insane asylum, the climax showing how she made her escape after a series of thrilling episodes. The third act ends with the hero's rescue, by the heroine and the ingenue, from a terrible death in a coal-crusher. It is situations such as these that bring joy to the gallery god's heart, and truth to say are equally well appreciated by the auditors in the orchestra and box seats. Mayall has the role of the hero, a mine superintendent, a manly and strong character, and Miss Lawton is the brave heroine. She keeps the audience's sympathies at white heat all along, up to the last scene, where she downs the conscienceless villain with the very chloroform he had intended for herself, and rescues the lost papers that are the motif of the drama. Lawrence Griffith is the conscienceless villain, and he is every inch the part. He is egged on to his wicked work by the villainess, a heartless adventuress, played by Miss Ellsmere, and is aided by Lloyd Edwards as a ne'er-do-well. Webster, who passes away in the first act, does a good bit of work as the profligate horse-doctor, and Verne Castro, a piquant and plump brunnette, is his daughter. Miss Castro made her first appearance as the Central's ingenue on Monday night and received an armful of bouquets and a huge floral piece. The comedy element is furnished by Booth, Howell, Nicholls and Julia Blanc. Miss Blanc as a patient at the asylum is very amusing in her phase of insanity. Nicholls is a walking delegate and Booth a gay city chap. The latter is a comedian who would be a prize to a musical comedy company, for he has a fine idea of farce and a pair of clever illustrative legs. Howell as a colored veteran of the war is as much a hero in his way as the mining superintendent, and the applause bestowed upon his efforts was every whit deserved.

Anthony Hope's Sequel

It were better had Anthony Hope never written his sequel to "The Prisoner of Zenda," but since he chose to do so I am glad to have seen Luke Conness in the title role of "Rupert of Hentzau." Count Rupert is a villain, of course, and a cad, but Mr. Conness is so dashing, so handsome, so shapely, so debonair in the role that one almost forgives the Count his faults. "Rupert of Hentzau" carries on the tale of Rassendyll and King Rudolph from the point where "The Prisoner" left off. Very few sequels to love stories are successful artistically. I should much rather remember the exquisite climax to "The Prisoner" with Flavia murmuring, "If love were all," and standing by the honor of her high condition, than to see the climax of "Rupert of Hentzau" with the bold Rassendyll dying in her arms, after giving her up for the second time. It is well to leave something to the imagination in these romantic dramas. However there are some good things in the Hope sequel—the duel in the cellar, for instance, where Whittlesey and Conness do some brave fencing, with words before they come to the foils and the more deadly pistols. Whittlesey is very clever in his quick changes from the King to the Englishman. It is really remarkable how he springs from one role to the other, completely changing costume, walk, manner and speech. Richard Vivian, the new juvenile, is a manly youth and does well with Fritz von Tarlenheim. Stanley Johns is also praiseworthy in the part of Von Bernenstein. Maher as Rassendyll's servant, Walter Belasco as the King's huntsman and Earle Williams as Rupert's cousin, all show admirable art in their portrayals. But just as Ernest Howell's old negro overtops in interest the major characters in the Central's play, Butler's Colonel Sapt is by far the strongest acting part in the Alcazar's drama this week. He is the old sturdy, good-hearted constable to the life. Juliet Crosby has some intense scenes as Flavia, and she is fully equal to all the delicate points the author has interwoven with the character. Oza Waldrop makes a pretty, sweet Helga and Marie Howe finds a congenial part in Mother Holf. Annie Miffin, in the small part of Rose, reveals genuine dramatic talent.

The Grand also has a romantic drama. The Neills appeared in "A Gentleman of France" last season, and the production is rather better this year. It is a genuine swashbuckling drama and the best scene is the one where, on the staircase, Neill as the Gentleman keeps several enemies at bay by his cunning sword-play.

WM. WILLIAMS & SONS

(LTD.) OF ABERDEEN.

V V O

Scotch Whisky

Importers - MACONDRAY & CO.

Straw Hats and Vests at cost. Tom Dillon & Co., opp. Palace Hotel.

Barrett on Hamlet

Wilson Barrett, the English actor who died last week, was a great student of the drama. He had remarkable individuality and his Hamlet was different in interpretation from that of any other actor. He had made a special study of the character. He wrote an article that was published in Lippincott's, and afterwards issued in circular form, to support his theory of Hamlet's character, and to point out the mistakes he considered had been tolerated on the stage for one hundred and fifty years at least. He studied Hamlet as if the play had been written but yesterday, and casting aside other commentator's ideas discussed Hamlet entirely by the light of the author's words, freely quoting from Shakespeare to prove his assertions. Barrett said that Shakespeare repeatedly spoke of Hamlet's youth, and therefore rejected the commonly accepted idea that the Prince of Denmark was a man of thirty-five. He also rejected the idea that Hamlet was insane, pointing out that Shakespeare never intended to make both his hero and heroine insane, for Ophelia was undoubtedly so. He said that the words of the drama show conclusively that Hamlet merely feigned insanity for reasons easily understood. Another "absurd mistake," as Barrett called it, was the idea that Hamlet's revenge was delayed over a period of some years, when the whole action of the play only extends over four months. Barrett discussed at length in his article the question of Hamlet's age, already referred to. "If his father and mother were married only thirty years," wrote Barrett (referring to the usual idea of the Prince's mature years) "and he is over thirty years of age, why does not Shakespeare allude to his illegitimacy at some portion of the play?" "It is obvious," he concluded, "that the tragedy gains in attractiveness if Hamlet is played as a young man. By representing the king and queen as beings in the very prime of life they interest the audience instead of boring it, and thus the balance of the play is preserved." When Barrett appeared in this city in 1890, I saw him in several short plays, one of them "Chatterton," the sketch of the unfortunate poet which is so rarely played nowadays. There was something in the English actor's refined personality and delicate physique singularly appropriate to the portrayal of the poet hero of the sketch.

Daniels Has Forgiven Us

When Frank Daniels was here about a year ago he pronounced this "a jay town," and told Ashton Stevens that he would never return. The little comedian bubbles over with conceit, and if an audience vouchsafes applause to any other member of his company he regards it as a personal affront. He was very much offended at Columbia theatre audiences, and vowed that they should never enjoy the light of his presence again. But he is booked for another visit. I have received a letter from his press-agent, Mr. Louis Nethersole, informing me that the clever little comedian will visit us in the fall. Nethersole will also pilot Maxine Elliott in "Her Own Way" to this city.

A Russian Officer in the Chorus

Notable people frequently drift into the Tivoli chorus. The latest acquisition of that organization is D. Alexander Adler, formerly a lieutenant in the Russian army. In 1885 and 1886 he was one of the body guard of Alexander III. After serving his time in the army he joined a company at the Moscow Grand Opera House and toured his native land. He has sung all through Europe and in several languages. He has a tremendous bass voice.

Not Stage Thunder

Ethel Barrymore was in the cast of "Peter the Great" when Sir Henry Irving produced the play in London. She tells an anecdote of how, at a rehearsal of a certain climax, where thunder and lightning were to add to the effect, the Lyceum's stage carpenter was given his order. A noise like a series of pistol shots was heard in the wings. Sir Henry rushed behind the scenes.

"Do you call that thunder?" he said to the carpenter, "it's not a bit like it."

"I'm awfully sorry," answered the stage mechanic, "but I didn't hear your order because of the storm. That was real thunder, sir."

Mary Van Buren, the beautiful, statuesque Mary, once leading lady for Mr. Timothy Daniel Frawley, is in London. She is however coming back to California this autumn. Oliver Morosco, I hear, is to star her on the Pacific coast circuit.

Scene from second act of "The Lady of Lyons"—White Whittlesey as Claude Melnotte and Eugenie Thais Lawton as Pauline

Next Week's Bills

When "The Toreador" goes on at the Tivoli next Monday, I can guarantee that at least three of its songs will be whistled over town the next day, from south of the slot to Pacific Heights. These are "Archie," "Keep off the Grass" and "The Toreador Song" which Broderick sang in the New York production. This will be the first production here of the musical comedy and the cast will include Dunsmure as the toreador, Webb as Sammy Gigg, Kate Condon as Teresa, Dora de Fillippe as Nancy, Willard Simms as Slackitt and Bessie Tannehill as Mrs. Hoppings. Four new principals have been added to the company—Mary Young, Carrie Reynolds, Melville Ellis, who was a member of the original cast of "The Toreador" in both New York and London, and John P. Kennedy, also a member of the original "Toreador" cast in New York. Ellis is a San Francisco boy who has had a most successful career, supporting Harry Woodruff, May Irwin, Francis Wilson and others. He was Mrs. Carter's musical director for awhile, and also gave drawing-room entertainments with Maurice Farkoa at the homes of New York plutocrats. He was the Duke of Manchester's private secretary for a time. He is a composer, and did the incidental music for Marie Tempest's "Vanity Fair," some of the music for "The Chinese Honeymoon" and the music for "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall." Mary Young, who will have the part of Dora Young, is a New York girl who is said to be a beauty, and a clever singer, dancer and actress. She was in Augustin Daly's company, also with Charles Frohman and George Lederer.

"The Whirl of the Town," which goes on Monday at Fischer's, ran for a whole season at the New York Casino. It is in three acts, and was written by Gustav Kerker and Hugh Morton, who endowed it with a real plot and some catchy music. Many of the newest songs will be introduced, and Dorothy Morton will sing the latest song successes. The strength of the company will be in the cast, with the addition of Lionel Lawrence, said to be the only man who ever successfully essayed the late Dan Daly's roles, and Flossie Hope. Pretty Flossie will be welcomed by the johnnies. She will have some new dances and for the first time in her life will appear as a real premiere danseuse. The scenic part of the piece has been localized, and among the scenes are Third and Market streets at one a. m., the Mermaid's Cave near the Cliff House, the Cave of Jewels and Neptune's summer home. "Anheuser Push," by Carleton and Johnson, comes next.

"Mice and Men" will go another week at the Columbia. On August eighth "Joseph Entangled" will be produced, for the first time in America. Hilda Spong will appear in the leading feminine role. Kyrle Bellew, also "The Sultan of Sulu," are on their way to the Columbia.

Neill will begin the fifth week of his engagement tomorrow matinee with Bronson Howard's "Shenandoah." Mr. Neill will play the hero, Kerchival West, and Edythe Chapman will be Gertrude Ellingham. The Grand has large houses every night.

Special interest attaches to the production by White Whittlesey of "The Lady of Lyons" at the Alcazar, by reason that it will mark the first Alcazar appearance of Eugenie Thais Lawton, as Pauline. Miss Lawton has won a large following by her varied and successful work with the Frawleys and then at the Central. She will remain at the Alcazar during the rest of the summer and will then accompany Mr. Whittlesey upon tour as his leading woman. On August eighth Whittlesey will give the first San Francisco production of Paul M. Potter's romantic comedy, "Sheridan; or the Maid of Bath," in which Sothorn starred for two years.

"Sergeant James" by Kirke La Shelle, "a romance of the enlisted man," will be at the Central. It is said to be a play full of bright color contrasts, the scenes laid in Montana. In addition to the regular cast, there will be an auxiliary corps of cavalry, horses, etc. Juliet Crosby has been specially engaged for the week of "Sergeant James." Next will come Jim Corrigan in "A Bunch of Keys"; then the new Central leading woman, Ethel Clifton, will appear in Kremer's "For Her Mother's Sake."

Olive May and J. Albaugh Jr. head the Orpheum program. McCabe, Sabine and Vera, eccentric comedians of renown, will also be new, in "The Arrival of Kitty McCarthy." Les Olopas, direct from Berlin, will give a musical equilibristic novelty. Mr. Olopas balances an upright piano on his head while playing a cornet solo. Florence, George and John Hughes, refined musical artists, will be other novelties.

At the Chutes will be Campbell and Johnson, comedy bicyclists, late of the Zarrow trio; Charles P. Lowe, xylophone soloist; James T. Dervin, mimic and ventriloquist, and Edna Grant, character dancer. Mabel Lamson will reappear after an extended and successful Eastern tour, in new illustrated songs.

—The Playgoer.

Automobile Notes

W. C. Douglass, Secretary of State, Reno, Nevada, has started for Reno in a new Pope-Toledo touring car. E. R. Dimond has just received a new royal blue Pope-Toledo.

On July third in Cincinnati Dr. A. C. Wendel drove a twenty-four horse-power Pope Toledo in a five-mile race in the wonderful time of five minutes and thirty-seven seconds, beating the famous 999. The Pope-Toledo used in this race is owned by Dr. Wendel of Cincinnati and had been driven over five thousand miles. It was driven by him from Toledo, arriving in Cincinnati the morning of the race and was started without a moment's preparation, the tonneau only being removed in the five-mile race. On July third the Pope-Toledo covered itself with glory in the Heberton hill climbing contest at Pittsburg, five hundred and forty-five yards long, being of a seven per cent to twenty-two per cent grade at the top of the hill. There were forty-two entries and the best time was made as follows: 24 horse-power Pope-Toledo driven by A. C. Webb, 0.38; 24 horse-power Pope-Toledo driven by H. C. Fournes, 0.52 2-5; 24 horse-power Pope-Toledo driven by T. B. Writer, 0.51; 24 horse-power Pierce driven by W. C. Warner, 1; 24 horse-power Pierce driven by F. T. Lovejoy, 1.00 1-5; 24 horse-power Pierce driven by W. C. Temple, 1.06 3-4; Richard-Brasier driven by A. O. Vestel, 0.50. The Pope-Toledo seems easily to win all the hill climbing trophies offered. Other cars of the same rated horse-power do not seem to develop the speed and hill climbing qualities.

COTTAGES FOR RENT—VACATION TRIPS.

August and September are excellent months for outing trips. Cottages for rent, good hotels and boarding houses, camp sites, hunting and fishing, boating and bathing at Camps Taylor and Tocaloma on the Lagunitas; also at Inverness and Camp Pistolesi on Tomales Bay; Camp Meeker, Monte Rio, Mesa Grande and Duncans Mills on the picturesque Russian River; or Cazadero redwoods on Austin Creek. Fine camp trips beyond Cazadero. Full information and copy of "Summer Outings" at Ticket Office, North Shore Railroad, No. 626 Market street.

There seems to be a general, but erroneous impression, that the Parisian jewelers are superior to all others in craftsmanship, and that those fortunate ones whose jewelry was "made in France" are to be congratulated upon possessing articles of superior beauty and finish.

However near to the truth this may have been formerly, it is by no means the case today. In this art, as in so many others, the American craftsman has advanced to the highest grade of efficiency. The most delicate and graceful designs are executed in a masterly manner, which combines strength and utility, while sacrificing nothing conducive to lightness and daintiness of effect.

There can be found no better illustrations of the high standard to which American jewelers have attained, than in the tasteful assortment of jewelry shown by the Bohm, Bristol Co. in their new Geary street store. Many of their pieces are marvels of skillful workmanship, which may well stand comparison with the best French productions.

In Financial Circles

The week under review shows a fair amount of business and a mild sensation, created by the rapid decline in one of the leading investment securities. Alaska Packers' Association, after weeks of liberal offerings on the Exchange, followed by small declines, finally decided on a good break of its own. At the time of my last report it closed at $134; since then it sold down to $121.50 and reacted to $125.

What is the matter with Alaska Packers' Association? is what "The Street" is asking. I hear the indebtedness of the company has been assuming alarming proportions, but the company has ample assets. I also hear this year's pack reported unsatisfactory. In cases of sensational declines of the stock of well managed concerns it is better not to be too hasty in selling.

Total transactions during the week aggregate $347,000 bonds and 2460 shares, divided as follows: Seven hundred and seventy lighting, 610 water, 645 miscellaneous, 120 bank shares and 315 sugars.

S. F. Gas and Electric showed considerable firmness, advancing about one point and closing firm at that.

—The Financier.

Automobile Topics

Cuyler Lee of the Cadillac agency reports the receipt of twenty-four model B touring cars received this week, four of which were sent to Fresno and two to San Jose. Dr. Conrad Weil, who recently purchased a Cadillac, has become an automobile enthusiast and drives a great deal.

Mrs. E. A. May, Mrs. John L. Bradbury and Edson Bradbury left Saturday for Del Monte and an extensive tour south. Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Valentine of Oakland went to San Jose in their Cadillac this week. H. H. Owens and party returned from Del Monte last week.

S. C. Hammond and party of four ladies have just returned from a twenty days' tour through California in Mr. Hammond's 1904 Winton touring car, having covered fifteen hundred miles and passed through twenty different counties. Mr. Hammond had some varied experiences and is full of information as regards roads in different parts of the State. He will, later on, give a detailed report of his trip.

Palmer Fuller of San Mateo, in company with Mr. Green, drove his Winton touring car from San Mateo to San Francisco on Sunday last in one hour and six minutes.

John Barry, who has been driving one of the new Oldsmobile light tonneau touring cars, writes that he has been making some very successful and extended trips through San Mateo and Santa Cruz counties. He recently made a trip by way of Half Moon Bay and Pescadero to Santa Cruz. Mr. Barry has been driving the car about a month and, while he has always believed that for touring purposes it was necessary to have a large, high-priced touring car, after his experience with the Oldsmobile tonneau he is satisfied that with one of these machines a person can travel over any part of the country and any kind of roads. He reports the roads over the Coast Range in good condition, although the grades are quite heavy, averaging fully fifteen per cent. Mr. Barry has covered one hundred miles of ground every day since he has been driving the machine, and it has never been laid up at any time.

R. P. Schwerin, president of the Automobile Club of California, who recently returned from New York, has his two Winton touring cars again in commission and during the past fortnight has made a number of runs through the bay counties.

J. H. Durst, the well known hop-grower of Wheatland, has placed his order with the Pioneer Automobile Company for a four-cylinder Winton, due to arrive here about the middle of August.

"All that the driver of the Winton Quad has to do is to steer and look happy." So writes H. P. Dyer, of Cleveland, who knows whereof he speaks, because he is an experienced motorist. This is what he says: "I have been operating my Winton Quad something over one week, a week of as hard usage as it is possible to give a car in Cleveland and vicinity. I contemplate making the St. Louis run in August and, therefore, with a view of developing weak points, I am subjecting the car to the hardest runs in this territory. Up to the present time I have not found any weak points, and I feel confident that none exist. I wish to congratulate you on the Quad. You have a car that is as nearly automatic as it is possible to make one; the driver has nothing to do but look happy and steer. The car rides like a Pullman sleeper, and the rear seat is a dream. This seat, being directly over the rear axle, does away with that peculiar motion that is so noticeable in seats that overhang the rear axle. I have made no attempt to ascertain what the actual gasoline consumption has been. The first few days, owing to my inexperience, it was quite high, but now it is very low and is steadily decreasing in direct proportion to my experience. The car will climb any hill when directly connected, and will go up the side of a house when running with the low gear thrown in. I have no idea how fast the Quad will go and never expect to, as it is altogether too speedy for a poor man with a large family. I find that with a little attention as to the position of the spark lead the car runs almost noiselessly, and you could conscientiously add to your coat of arms the phrase 'sub silentio.'"

Mr. Logan of Hollister purchased an Oldsmobile light tonneau touring car from the Pioneer Company last week.

Webb Jay of Cleveland, Ohio, established quite a remarkable record recently in his White steamer, driving the auto from Rochester to Cleveland, a distance of about two hundred and seventy-five miles, in fourteen hours and fifty minutes, and he said he was compelled to stop over a hundred times in order to avoid frightening horses.

Swedish massage and movements cure other diseases than rheumatism. Ask of Lindstrom & Einarson, 406 Sutter Street.

SCHOOLS and COLLEGES

HEALD'S

LEADING BUSINESS COLLEGE of the WEST

Over 24 Post St., San Francisco, Cal.

Established 40 years. Open entire year, day and night Write for circulars (free.)

St. Mary's College

OAKLAND, CAL.

Literary, Scientific, Commercial Courses.

Studies resumed August 1, 1904.

Send for Catalogue.

BROTHER VELLESIAN, President.

Santa Clara College

SANTA CLARA, CAL.

The next session will begin August 2, 1904. Send for full particulars to

(Rev.) R. E. KENNA, S. J., President.

Hoitt's

School for Boys; 14th year begins August 9th; larger and stronger faculty than ever; perfect sanitation; illustrated catalogue. W. J. MEREDITH, Vice-Principal. Menlo Park, Cal.

Irving Institute

Boarding and day school for young ladies and little girls. 2126 California St. Will reopen August 1, 1904. Accredited to the universities. REV. EDWARD B. CHURCH, A. M., Principal.

Miss Bolte's School

2174 Post St., prepares for universities and colleges. Music by graduate professor of Berlin and Leipsic conservatories. Conversational and grammatical French and German; English. Board, English, French, German, music, $30 month. Next term July 25. Steiner 656.

San Francisco Business College

Scott & Van Arsdale Building, 738 Mission St., between Third and Fourth. We are located in our new quarters. The finest schoolrooms in the West. Come and see them whether you want to go to school or not. Business men know where we are. We had eight calls for help this week.

is the most practical; recommended by expert court reporters. Send for catalogue.

1382 Market St., San Francisco.

The Melbourne Institute

For stuttering and stammering teaches a new scientific course for cure. It is successful. It has been established in this city for three years under teaching of Prof. F. G. Norcross, acknowledged mental expert, whose work has won the admiration of reputable physicians and other deep students of mentality. The services of the Melbourne may be enlisted with the utmost confidence. Address MELBOURNE INSTITUTE, Van Ness Ave. and Market St., San Francisco. Hours 1 to 5 P. M. Telephone Mint 2626.

THE LYCEUM

Jordan or any Stanford

AN ACCREDITED PREPARATORY SCHOOL For the University, Law, and Medical College, Etc. This school is well known for its careful and thorough work; we prepare you well. References, President professor. L. H. GRAU Ph. D., Principal. Rooms, 333-346, 5th floor, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

CALIFORNIA BUSINESS COLLEGE

The largest and finest quarters in the city; refined residence locality. Position for every graduate. Thorough, modern. 75 Page Catalogue on request.

R. L. DURHAM, President.

925 Golden Gate Avenue.

San Francisco

Kent Law School

THIRTEENTH YEAR

Day and Night. Always open. No Vacations. Books Free.

536 Parrott Building (Emporium). Phone Folsom 3031

Century Electric Corporation

SUPPLIES, CONSTRUCTION, MANUFACTURING AND REPAIRING. BUILDINGS WIRED

16 and 18 SECOND STREET

Telephone Bush 352

San Francisco

MAISON TORTONI

111 O'Farrell St.

French Rotisserie

Private Dining Rooms.

Banquet Hall.

S. Constantini, Prop

Oscar Grothe, who has been selling White touring cars here in San Francisco during the winter and made a trip through Oregon, Washington and British Columbia for the White Company, has gone East to take charge of the new White garage just being completed by the White agent, J. W. Cassidy, at Quincy, Ill. Oscar Grothe is one of the most experienced men the White Company has had and is a brother of Walter Grothe, who has won so much racing fame here.

R. N. Halstead was in this city recently from Honolulu and stated that the automobile game in the islands has been very poor but is just picking up now. The White Company reports from Hawaii that the steamer is catching on in great style in the Islands. The White people last week shipped their second touring car to The Von Hamm-Young Company of Honolulu and have an order for a third to be delivered as soon as possible.

G. Lambert of San Francisco is a recent purchaser of a White touring car and enjoyed his first run in his auto this week, when he made without a hitch the run to San Jose. A. Haas returned to San Francisco a few days ago in his White from Del Monte, having spent two weeks touring about Monterey. L. P. Lowe, who probably tours more extensively than any motorist hereabouts, steamed up his beautiful blue White last week for a run to Monterey. If any one has had pleasure and comfort in auto touring this season it is Mr. Lowe, and on all his trips, even on the extensive run down the coast to Los Angeles, the car has never failed to bring him to his destination and on time. Last Saturday Mr. Lowe's brother, who has had no instruction whatever in automobiling, took a party of friends on a run to Santa Cruz.

Motocycle Items

The Federation of American Motocyclists at its recent meeting in the East decided to assume absolute control of motocycle racing and it adopted a weight limit of one hundred and ten pounds for machines in open events.

The one hundred mile reliability run of the Pacific Coast Motocyclists will take place tomorrow around the bay, starting from this side and finishing in Oakland. Checking stations have been established in San Mateo, San Jose and Centerville and at several points unknown to the contestants there will be "secret controls" to check the riders and see that they ride over the correct course. There will probably be ten starters from this city and two or three from Sacramento in the reliability run tomorrow.

A squad of police in New York will be mounted on motorcycles.

Messrs. Langworth and Litchfield and Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Carroll rode around the bay on Sunday last on their double Indians.

—The Chauffeur.

The People's Land

A BIT OF COLD-BLOODED PHILOSOPHY.

Kinghorn-Jones.

Government is about to sell two million acres, in one hundred and sixty acre lots, at not less than four dollars per acre. If government were for the protection of the workers, and the poor, and the weak—such a government never did, nor ever will, exist—it would not sell the people's land. The book of fables, etc., by which the parsons pretend to guide their sheep, says: "The land shall not be sold."

If equal rights were lived as much as it is mouthed, the government would treat the workers as well as it does the bankers—and as poor workers do not possess six hundred and forty dollars with which to buy one hundred and sixty acres, the government would loan them that amount, and charge them half of one per cent, as it does the bankers. This would be three dollars and twenty cents a year—or in other words, perpetual leases should be granted to workers on one hundred and sixty acres at three dollars and twenty cents per annum, use and occupancy being the only condition of ownership.

The three dollars and twenty cents to be used for public improvements in the county in which the land lay.

The good NEED no law.

The bad HEED no law.

Were we living under such conditions, the improvement fund would be voluntary and would exceed three dollars and twenty cents per annum for each one hundred and sixty acres.

The Hotel Richelieu is to continue under the present management, the lease having been renewed for ten years. There was no foundation to the report of an impending change of management. The hotel has been entirely renovated. The Hotel Granada is under the same excellent management.

THE OLDSMOBILE TOURING CAR

Handsome Lines

Greatest Power

Most Thoroughly Built

Easiest Running

Easiest Controlled

Most Satisfactory Car for the Money

Always Goes

PRICE COMPLETE WITH LAMPS, HORN AND TOOLS

$1050.00

PIONEER AUTOMOBILE CO.

901-25 Golden Gate Ave. - - San Francisco

Oakland, 355 Tenth Street

AUTOMOBILE REPAIRS

81 CITY HALL AVE. Telephone South 1039

De Dion Plugs
De Dion Porcelains
Electric Cable

ANDREWS, KEENAN & BLASAUF

"Pope Toledo"

POPE TOLEDO TOURING CAR CO.

Phone South 1142

G. A. BOYER, Manager

134-148 GOLDEN GATE AVE.

REPAIRS MADE AND SUPPLIES FURNISHED
AT THE

Hotel Vendome Automobile Garage San Jose

Stable accommodations free to guests. Record time
on road from San Francisco to San Jose, two hours.

Price, $1350 without Top; $1450 with Top

Pierce Arrow Touring Car (French) $2650
Northern Runabout, $800

MOBILE CARRIAGE CO.

GOLDEN GATE AVE. AND GOUGH ST.

Phone Private Exchange 770

San Francisco

AUTOMOBILES FOR HIRE

Downtown Offices:

Palace Hotel Occidental Hotel St. Francis Hotel

INDIAN and RAMBLER MOTOCYCLES

Won first five places in endurance contest in East, July 2 to 7, and were the ONLY machines making perfect scores in ALL events. In ONE-PINT economy test—Indian first; distance 31 miles, 1400 yds.; time, 1:16:39.

C. C. HOPKINS
Larkin & McAllister

"SOLUTION OF TIRE TROUBLES" FISK DETACHABLE

ONLY A WRENCH NEEDED
CAN'T COME OFF THE RIM
CAN'T PINCH THE TUBE

MORE MILEAGE
MORE COMFORT
MORE SATISFACTION

CALL OR WRITE PACIFIC COAST BRANCH
PHIL. B. BEKEART CO. 114 SECOND ST.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

ON the HILLS NOT THE RACE TRACK

is the test of power. The Annual Hill Climbing Contest of the Minneapolis Automobile Club was held on Saturday, June 11th, on Kenwood Hill, when the

Rambler

again demonstrated its superiority over cars costing three times its price, and, for the second time, won

FIRST PRIZE

finishing the course, 2680 feet, on a 10 per cent grade, in 1 minute, 7 3-5 seconds.

ENTRIES AND TIMES

Class No. A, Machines Valued at $2,750 and over—

Owner	Make	Time
J. H. Queal,	Pope-Toledo	:59
A. F. Timme,	Pope-Toledo	1:05
Dic. Ferris,	Pope-Toledo	1:05 4-5
F. T. Heffelfinger,	Peerless	1:08 1-5
Ralph Bagley,	Packard	1:11
Bert Strong,	Stearns	1:22

Class No. B, Machines Valued bet. $2,750 and $1,750—

A. C. Bennett,	Winton	1:11
G. W. Cappelin,	Winton	1:25
George Shear,	Knox	1:41

Class No. C, Machines Valued bet. $1,750 and $1,000—

M. E. Clark,	Rambler	1:07 3-5
C. C. Pillsbury,	Franklin	1:10 1-5
Dr. A. P. Walrath,	Rambler	1:14

Send for our latest illustrated Catalogue "C"; it explains RAMBLER construction; the records prove its value.

RAMBLER AUTOMOBILE AGENCY
Tenth and Market Sts., San Francisco

The CADILLAC

MODEL B. Price $950
With Tonneau $1050

"Canopy Top Extra"

August 8th from Del Monte to 12th and Broadway, Oakland, 6 hrs, 5 min.

October 18th the same run was made in 5 hrs. 38 min., without stopping the car or refilling with gasoline or water, breaking all records.

The only successful tour of the Yosemite Valley was made by a party of four in a CADILLAC.

CUYLER LEE, Agent

201-203 LARKIN ST., S. F.

This is the White Steam Touring Car complete with canopy top, curtains and glass front, baskets, acetylene lamp equipment, and extra tonneau seat.

WHITE STEAM TOURING CAR COMPLETE

AUTOMOBILE GARAGE
SAN MATEO

PAULL. NOISAT PHONE BLACK 111
GARAGE AND REPAIR SHOP
B ST., NEAR THIRD AVE.

Music

[Communications addressed to this department should be received not later than Tuesday noon.]

A Letter from Leipzig

Joseph Beringer, director of the Beringer Conservatory of Music in San Francisco, has been sojourning in Leipzig for several weeks. He sends me the following interesting notes of some musical happenings in that musical centre. The first tells of the great Reinecke Festival, which was given on the composer's eightieth birthday and which Mr. Beringer attended. Carl Reinecke is one of the few living of the great composers and musicians. "The concert," writes Mr. Beringer, "took place on the twenty-second of June in the concert hall of the beautiful Gewandhaus. The program contained only compositions of the great master, who was heartily greeted and was received with a storm of applause from the orchestra as well as the audience. The first part of the program contained the symphony in C minor which Reinecke wrote under the impressions of Oehlenschläger's poem 'Jakob Jarl.' One of the best known and most popular compositions of Reinecke is the overture to the opera 'Manfred' which shows throughout his genius. It was exquisitely played and well conducted by Prof. Hans Sitt. The second part was made up of vocal and instrumental numbers. Miss Helene Stagemann, who is the possessor of a most sympathetic voice, sang four songs, Nachtigallen, Barbarazweige, Am Felsenborn and Frau Mutter Erde, in a very artistic manner. Being obliged to sing an encore, she gave the charming little song, Klein Anna Kathrein. Prof. Julius Klengel, one of the greatest cello virtuosos I have ever heard, played Reinecke's D minor violoncello concerto, and Von Bose, a former pupil of Reinecke, played two movements of the difficult F sharp minor concerto for piano. An ovation followed at the end of the concert and Prof. Reinecke again and again appeared to bow his acknowledgements. The banquet in the evening took place at Bonorand's establishment. Congratulations, salutations and honors may have been almost too much for the aged master, for directly after the banquet he departed for home. The banquet hall was filled to the last place. There were ten rows of tastefully decorated tables and many of the guests being ladies they formed a beautiful scene with their dainty gowns. Reinecke and his wife sat at the table of honor, whence they could overlook the crowd of guests. Next came the Mayor of Leipzig, Dr. Frondlin, Hofrat Rud. von Gottschall and men of fame and prominence. The three daughters and two sons of the master musician were present. One of his daughters had come from America to be with her father on this eventful day. Numerous former pupils of Prof. Reinecke from all parts of the world gathered together in this way that they might spend a few hours in the presence of their adored master. During the banquet were given recitations, songs by the ladies' choir, speeches, etc. The official part of the banquet closed at half-past twelve o'clock. The next day the military orchestra played a morning serenade at Reinecke's home, and flowers, telegrams and congratulations came from everywhere. The festival committee had sent to the master his bust made by the artist Seffner. Reinecke seemed to take great pride in this gift, as he drew my special attention to it. The third day Reinecke's opera "The Gouverneur von Tours" was given in the Neue Theatre. After the performance the composer appeared on the balcony of the theatre and the 'Teutonia' singing society sang Beethoven's 'Die Himmel rühmen des Ewigen Ehre'; 'Nun brechen aller Enden' by Reinecke; 'Aus der Jugendzeit' by Radecke, and 'Noch ist die blühende, goldne Zeit' by Perfall. Reinecke is still full of humor, his amiability is bewitching, and he shows an intense interest in his art. At the visit I paid him a few days after the banquet I had the pleasure of spending one whole hour with him alone. He was much interested in the musical progress in America. Hundreds of telegrams and letters with congratulations came from all parts of the world and smilingly he said that it would be weeks before he could send all his letters of thanks, although he, his wife and both his daughters were busily engaged in writing and mailing letters. Reinecke during our call spoke of our mutual friend, Sir Henry Heyman of San Francisco, who had sent congratulations from Santa Cruz."

During a stroll through an old cemetery, Mr. Beringer gathered these impressions: "In the old cemetery at Leipzig, called Johannis-Friedhof, are two graves which show no tombstones and no inscriptions. To the passerby they are only two green elevations on the ground, but the one who is looking for the graves knows how to find them for they are covered with ivy, and the acacia tree with the birds singing in its branches will tell you of the place. Here are interred Johanna Geyer, the mother of Richard Wagner, and his oldest sister, Rosalie Marbach, the distinguished artiste who was to Wagner, after the death of his noble stepfather, Geyer, a true guardian in his youth. Commerce and traffic threaten to come nearer and nearer the old cemetery, but it is hoped that this green isle will be saved from the invasion of modern intercourse. Leipzig with the fame of being the guardian of antiques, science and especially all treasures that are connected with the tonal art, will surely save the graves. It might be that some day this peaceful place will be changed into a monumental one. It is in our modern time only too often the case that inoffensive, quiet beauty will be more recognized, if art distinguishes what was half forgotten and only known to pilgrims of a certain type."

Many think Swedish massage and movements are only useful for nervous disorders. Inquire of Lindstrom & Einarson; 406 Sutter Street.

Mr. Beringer expects to return home early in August.

Dr. H. J. Stewart wrote the stirring musical setting for "Grand Order of the Earth," the song dedicated by Lucy Long, the author, to the Knights Templars, and which will be sung during their conclave in this city next month.

Henry Heyman is back from his vacation, and has resumed his work for the season. —The Music Critic.

DR. NAGEL, Oculist. Practice Limited to the Eye.
Has Removed to 731 Sutter St., Atkinson Bldg.
Hours 10 to 12 A. M. and 1 to 3 P. M. Phone East 1247
Residence, 1919 Vallejo St.—Phone West 1105

ELECTRICAL WIRING AND SUPPLIES

Lamps, Telephone Batteries, Bells, Etc.
Repairs Given Prompt Attention

National Electric Company

455 SUTTER ST., San Francisco

Telephone Bush 396

FAT
FOLKS!

YOUR WEIGHT REDUCED
By New Process I guarantee to REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT as much as you desire. No Change in Diet, no inconvenience, no bad after-effects.

MRS. E. L. RYAN, Dermatologist
Apt. 500, THE IROQUOIS, 524 Ellis Street

Wrinkles and all facial blemishes. Superfluous hair removed. Manicuring, hair dressing, scalp treatment. Phone, Private Exchange 719.

REMOVED

Patrick & Co.

Rubber Stamps and Metal Signs
to

111 and 113 Sansome Street

The Dinner Setting is Incomplete
without

WhiteRock
LITHIA Water

A Selected Water is as Essential
as a Selected Wine

P. J. WENIGER & CO.
DISTRIBUTORS

101-103 Powell St.
SAN FRANCISCO

LOUIS CREPAUX

(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

SCHOOL OF TONE PLACING (PALATAL SYSTEM)

Vocal Phonetics—Besides the
"Palatal Tone Placing System"

taught in the Louis Crepau School, another and most important feature is the teaching of the English phonetic sounds. The study of the five vowels is not all that is necessary to sing in a language, and particularly so in English. Very few English-speaking people are able to sing the phonetics of their language exempt from throatiness. Fundamentally, English phonetics cannot be emitted in singing as uttered in speech. From a vocal standpoint and through ten years of experience in teaching English-speaking singers, Mr. Crepau has made a vocal classification of all the English phonetic sounds. This classification enables English-speaking singers to master all the English phonetic sounds and renders them harmonious and easy to sing.

Apply at the School Mondays and Thursdays, from 2:00 to 2:30 p. m. Y. M. C. A. Building, Ellis and Mason Sts.

LOUIS H. EATON

ORGANIST AND DIRECTOR OF THE CHOIR

TRINITY CHURCH

Teacher of Singing, Piano and Organ

Special advantages offered singers in choir training
Studio and Residence 1676 Broadway

Between Van Ness Ave. and Franklin Street

H. B. PASMORE

TEACHER OF SINGING

Specialty—Shakespeare's system of tone production.

1424 Washington Street

573 Fifteenth street, OAKLAND, on Thursdays after August 1st.

HOTHER WISMER (Violinist)

ENSEMBLE INSTRUCTION

Will resume teaching about August 8th, at his residence and studio,
844 Grove Street near Fillmore.

M. GERTRUDE JUDD

Teacher of Whistling

785 Geary St., S. F.

Phone Hyde 933

JOSEPH ROECKEL and MME. COURSEN-ROECKEL

Assisted by Mile. Elena Roeckel, Concert contralto

NEW VOCAL CLASSES Placing of Voice and Solo Practice
1060 FULTON ST. Opposite Alamo Square

Conrad W. Fuhrer

TEACHER of Violin and Ensemble Playing. 1676 Page St.
Phone Fell 3373. Also care of Sherman, Clay & Co.

CHICKERING Best in the World
PIANOS Oldest in America

100,000 IN USE

BENJ. CURTAZ &amp; SON, 16 O'FARRELL STREET

SOLE AGENTS

Dr. H. J. STEWART

TEACHER OF VOCAL MUSIC

Pianoforte, Organ, Harmony and Composition
Special course for singers desiring church appointments

Studio, 1105 Bush St.

MR. ANDREW BOGART

TEACHER OF SINGING

METHOD of the ELDER LAMPERTI

Home Studio: S. E. corner Buchanan and Page Sts.

PHONE PARK 202

SIGNOR ABRAMOFF

The only teacher of the famous California Prima Donna, Miss Edith Decker (Dramatic Soprano), Miss Paraskova Sandelin (Contralto), Mr. Emil Arnold (Tenor) and of several other singers prominent in the profession.

VOICE CULTURE (OLD ITALIAN METHOD)

Signor Abramoff Equalizes, Beautifies and Strengthens the Tone. Corrects Nasal and Throaty Production Produces apartamentos, and Covered tones with Open Mouth.

703 SUTTER ST.

HOURS: 10 to 1 and 3 to 7 Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday

MR. THEODOR

SALMON

Concert Pianist and Teacher. Pupil of Kullak, Reinecke, Jadassohn and Richter. Studio, 546 Sutter St. Phone James 1281. Residence, "The Nordhoff."

Von Meyerinck
School of Music

Telephone Park 223

841 FULTON STREET

Offers all the advantages of Eastern and European conservatories for a thorough musical education.

STAFF OF TEACHERS.

Voice Culture - MRS. ANNA VON MEYERINCK
Art Expression, Opera and Drama, MRS. MARY FAIRWEATHER
Piano Harmony and Composition MR. FRED ZECH, JR.
Violin and Viola MISS MARIE H. MILLS
MR. W. F. ZECH

Competent staff of assistant teachers. Special teachers for Languages German, French and Italian), Physical Culture, Fencing, Elocution, and Stage Dancing. Prospectus upon application.

SIGNOR PAOLO LA VILLA

(Of Florence, Italy)

N. B.—Special Terms for Professionals.

Vocal Studio: THE ROOSEVELT, 546 Sutter St.

Phone James 1282

SUMMER RESORTS

The following Resorts will send descriptive booklet when requested.

GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM

A Sanitarium, cottage plan; not a hospital. Equipped for the scientific application of Water, Electricity, Massage, Tissue Oscillation, Electric Light, X-Ray, Dry, Hot Air and all minor treatments. Large grounds, 5½ acres, shade, etc. Separate treatment apartments for men and women. Fifteen minutes walk from centre of city; one block from car line. Beautiful scenery. Write for literature. GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM, San Jose, Cal.

SODA BAY SPRINGS

On Clear Lake. Hunting, fishing, boating, launch, horses, tennis, croquet, dark room, warm soda geyser in bathhouse, clubhouse, etc. Rates $10 to $15. CHATFIELD & VINZENT, 228 Montgomery St., or LEE D. CRAIG, Manager, Soda Bay, Kelseyville, P. O., Lake Co., Cal.

TRUCKEE RIVER COUNTRY CLUB

Summer Resort and Sportsmen's Lodge. Fourth Season May 15. Sierra attractions. California's Largest Rainbow Hatchery and Finest Fishing. G. H. FOULKS, Verdi, Nev., or Nevada Block, S. F.

Camp Vacation

Hotel under canvas on the Russian River below Guerneville in a grove a mile and a half long, skirting the river; tennis courts; 40 new boats. There will be a dam in the river affording 4 miles of smooth water for boating, bathing and swimming. Adults $2 per day, $10 per week; children under 10 half rates. Special rates for families. Opens May 1. Address Mrs. L. C. CNOPIUS, Camp Vacation. "Vacation" P. O., Sonoma Co., Cal.

Byron Hot Springs

Open all the year. Unexcelled climate. Luxurious Mineral and Mud Baths, and the most curative waters known for Rheumatism, Gout, Sciatica, Liver and Kidney and Nervous troubles, also Malaria.

Hotel unique in cuisine, service and appointments.

Rates $17.50 per week in Cottages. $3 per day and upwards in Main Hotel.

Reached by Southern Pacific, 2 1-2 hours from San Francisco. 3 trains daily, at 8:30 a. m., 10 a. m. and 3:30 p. m.

H. R. WARNER, Manager

Byron Hot Springs Post Office, California

That St. Louis Trip

TAKE THE BUSINESS LINE. THE

UNION PACIFIC

saving 12 hours Rate only $67.50 round trip. Through first and second-class cars, diners and all comforts. Best road and equipment. Safest line. Drop a postal and I will call and explain everything.

S. F. Booth, Gen. Agent U. P. R. R.

1 Montgomery St., San Francisco, California

ASK PECK, HE KNOWS

Literature and Particulars on all hotels and summer resorts in California. 11 Montgomery Street.

Free Information

Agua Caliente Springs

New attractions; open all the year round; nearest Hot Sulphur Springs to San Francisco. Temperature 115 degrees; no staging; fare $1.10. Cures rheumatism, asthma and kindred ailments. Five Hot Sulphur Springs; tub and plunge baths, largest mineral water swimming tank in State. Accommodations first class. $2.00 per day; $12 to $14 per week; rates to families, half rates to children. Peck's, 11 Montgomery St. or THEO RICHARDS, Agua Caliente Springs, Sonoma Co., Cal. We have erected a stone dining room, seats 400 guests.

Deer Park Inn

And cottages; 6 miles from Lake Tahoe; open June 1st; ideal place for rest and recreation; elevation 6507 feet. Fine mineral springs. For further information call at office of Traveler, 30 Montgomery St., or send for booklet.

J. B. SCOTT, Folsom, Cal.

Beautiful Laurel Dell

The Robson Orchestral and Dr. Monroe N. Callender will furnish the best music ever played at any resort in the state.

The Switzerland of America. The only lake resort that has its own mineral springs and a chemically pure spring. Boating, swimming, marine toboggan 160 feet in length; first class livery; saddle horses. Dining room seats 300. Bowling alley and all games free to guests. Pamphlets at Pecks, 11 Montgomery St. and Cal. N. W. Ry., 650 Market St. Address, EDGAR DURRAN, Owner and Proprietor Laurel Dell, Lake Co., Cal.

Kenilworth Inn

Mill Valley

One of the most popular resorts in Mill Valley, situated at the foot of Mt. Tamalpais; only 50 minutes' ride from the city; rates reasonable.

MISSSES PALMER & HULETT.

VACATION 1904

IS NOW READY FOR DISTRIBUTION.

"VACATION" is issued annually by the

California Northwestern Railway

THE PICTURESQUE ROUTE OF CALIFORNIA

and is the standard publication on the Pacific Coast for information regarding

MINERAL SPRING RESORTS, COUNTRY HOMES AND FARMS WHERE SUMMER BOARDERS ARE TAKEN, AND SELECT CAMPING SPOTS.

This year's "VACATION 1904" contains over 150 pages, beautifully illustrated, and is complete in its detailed information as to location, accommodations, attractions, etc., with terms from $7.00 per week up.

To be had at Ticket Offices, 650 Market Street (Chronicle Building) and Tiburon Ferry, foot of Market Street; General Office, Mutual Life Building, corner of Sansome and California Streets, San Francisco

Applications by mail will receive immediate response.

JAS. L. FRAZIER, Gen'l Mgr. R. X. RYAN, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

THE OAKLAND TRIBUNE

is delivered into more homes of the masses and classes of Oakland, and Alameda County than all other Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley dailies combined. Reason—it's the best newspaper.

W. E. DARGIE, Pres.

T. T. DARGIE, Secy.

The End of the Dream

The Woman sat, straight and still, in the boat, which indolently drifted with the tide, the oars lying idle in their sockets. The boat rose and fell with the movement of the waves, on which the white caps appeared from time to time. But the Woman gave no heed to the swelling waters. Straight and still she sat, gazing before her with eyes that saw nothing of the beauty of sky or sea.

The Woman was thinking. For a long time she had meditated a step that at first was a mere impulse. But as we ponder for days, weeks and months sometimes and then do the thing contemplated almost unconsciously, so today the Woman was irresistibly driven to the deed.

She lived in a conventional world that bored her to the utmost. She was rich, beautiful, adored by a good husband and revered by a circle of friends who looked up to her as an exemplar of all the virtues. And many times had she rebelled and longed to disillusion her friends. For in her heart she knew that she was not what her world thought her. She longed to go forth to a place where no one knew her, and where she could indulge the desires that sometimes pressed upon her with such vigor that she felt as if she would go mad if kept in restraint.

"To be free," she cried to her soul, "to be Myself. To do what I wish, to go where I list, to do as those do who were not born rich, and who are not of the circle that are constantly looked at and carped at and criticised. To be loved, not for what I seem to be, but for what I am!"

Many times had she cried this cry to her soul. And she had added:

"Some day I will do what I now only think about. I will die to my world, and be born again in a new one. I will follow my inclination."

Of course there was a Man in her thoughts. When woman meditates doing and daring, she rarely pictures the future without a Man. This Woman knew the Man who would live the new life with her. She had met him years before, and many times since. She knew that he loved her, though because he was her husband's friend, and a man of honor, he had never expressed his feeling for her in words.

The sea swelled about the boat, and tossed it like a shell upon the crests of the waves. The Woman's hands reached for the oars, to guide the craft to security. Then to her mind leaped the thought:

"The hour is come! What so easy as to drown—now? To slip out of the old, dull life and leave an unblemished reputation? To die—his wife; to live—with the other?"

The thought that had been caressed for years now sprang into life as a deed. On the impulse, she sprang from the boat, which overturned in the action. She was a bold and fearless swimmer, and it was easy for her to swim to the opposite shore, which was not far away. She threw her hat on the shore, and wringing out her skirts so that walking would be rendered easier, was soon on her way to the haven her heart suggested.

* * * * *

The Man greeted the Woman with surprise as she stood at the door of his cabin in the heart of the woodland, his favorite summer retreat.

She told her story in short, hurried sentences, punctuated by passionate gasps.

"I knew you loved me," she said, "and I have come to you. I am dead—they will never know. My husband will mourn my loss—his good wife's death. My friends will respect my name. But I—I will live!"

The Man took the Woman's hand and led her to a seat.

"You are hysterical," he said. "When you are calmed I will take you back."

"No, I was never less hysterical than now—never more myself," she answered, twining her arms about his neck.

Her damp garments clung to her beautifully molded limbs. Her lips breathed the truth of her feelings.

But the man turned away.

"Do you not love me, then?" she asked.

"I loved what I thought was you," he said, after she had repeated the question in various forms.

"But I am the real woman," she said, pleading her cause with intensity. "That marble image was not I."

"You have shattered my ideal," he said. "I believed in you above all women, but now—"

He took her hand.

"Come," he said, "I will take you back to your husband and friends. They still believe in the ideal."

—The Impressionist.

The modish woman's stationery is as much a part of her nowadays as her dainty wardrobe. Cooper & Co., 746 Market Street, are showing the newest modes in paper and envelopes, dies and seals.

SUMMER RESORTS

The following Resorts will send descriptive booklet when requested

Hotel Rowardennan

"IN THE MOUNTAINS BY THE SEA"

Ben Lomond, Santa Cruz County. Opened under entirely new management. Round-trip Tickets from San Francisco, $3. For booklet apply PECK'S BUREAU, 11 Montgomery St., S. F.; or to WM. G. DODGE, Lessee.

The Monterey

Most Elegantly appointed Hotel on the Pacific Coast. Hot and cold water; Electric and Gas Lights; Private and Public Baths; Telephone in every room; four Private Dining Rooms; Fine Sample Rooms. American Plan, $2.50 and upwards; European Plan, 75c and upwards. Hageman & Jones, Props., Monterey, Cal.

Hotel Ben Lomond

SANTA CRUZ MOUNTAINS—NO STAGING

Table first-class. Electric lights, boating, swimming, fishing, hunting, tennis, croquet. See booklet, S. P. Company, 613 Market St., or B. DICKINSON, Ben Lomond, Cal.

Tahoe Tavern

On Lake Tahoe, the largest and most beautiful body of water in the world at this elevation, now open. The tavern will be conducted this season by Mr. F. W. Richardson, manager of California's famous mission hotel, The Glenwood, Riverside; a guarantee that it will be strictly first class. The table supplied with all delicacies; fishermen constantly employed to furnish lake trout. For rates address F. W. RICHARDSON

Brockway

Lake Tahoe

Opens June 1st.

Write FRANK B. ALVERSON, Mgr.

Brockway, Cal.

The Tallac

Lake Tahoe, Cal.

Cafe European. Nurses, Maids and Children, American Plan. Prices now as low as any hotel on Lake. Service, accommodations, boating and livery superior to any. Address M. LAWRENCE & CO., Tallac, Cal.

The Grove

Lake Tahoe

Half mile east of Tallac on Lake Shore. Rates $2 per day; $10 per week; meals 50c. Good saddle horses and the best of livery; boats free to all guests, J. E. PARMETER, Prop., Tallac, Cal.

Spend Your Vacation

A great many San Francisco people are planning to spend the entire summer at Hotel Del Monte. No other resort in California offers such a combination of attractions—sea bathing, golf, automobilism, bowling, tennis, fishing, and all out-of-door sports. Instead of going from place to place seeking comforts, the wise ones of society are planning already to put in several enjoyable weeks down at Del Monte by the sea. Address Geo. P. Snell, manager, Del Monte, California.

At Hotel Del Monte

Hotel Berkeley

Dwight Way, Berkeley

Half block from Key Route and Berkeley local trains. Surrounded by beautiful lawns and flowers; an ideal summer resort hotel; quiet, restful; modern appointments; cuisine first class in every respect; large, airy rooms. M. A. GIBBS, Prop.

THE MART
1348 MARKET STREET

DOMESTIC and IMPORTED BEERS
WINES and LIQUORS, for Camping,
Picnics and Vacations, at
REDUCED PRICES

MOORE'S POISON OAK REMEDY

Cures Poison-Oak and all Skin Diseases
Sold by all Druggists

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST—Phelan Bldg., Rooms 6, 8, 10, 48. 806 Market St. Phone John 3841

Letters

"The Silent Places"

An Indian trapper of the Hudson Bay Company had obtained credit from one of the posts, and in contradiction to the race characteristic, he did not return to pay his debt. The sum involved was insignificant but the principle was great, for if Jingoss could escape without payment others would do likewise and the business would become demoralized. Therefore, for the sake of example and discipline it was necessary to apprehend and punish the defaulter. To this end two of the most trusted woodsmen in the employ of the company were sent out to trail the embezzler and bring him back to the post from which he had absconded, and it is this great man-hunt which makes the story of "The Silent Places." With no other information than that the man must be caught and brought back, and nothing but their intuitions and observations to guide them, Sam Bolton and Dick Heron set out on the long chase. They could ask no information nor give none in return for inquiries, since their success depended not only on absolute secrecy, but on conducting their expedition in such a manner as to divert suspicion from their real errand, and the proverbial needle lost in a haystack would not seem to be more hopelessly beyond recovery than a man with the whole of Canada for a hiding place. Bolton, sixty years of age or thereabouts, with a lifetime of experience, was the brains of the expedition, and his patience was sorely tried by his assistant, whose indiscretions more than once brought disaster to the enterprise. His ill-timed and unmeaning gallantry resulted in attaching a young Indian girl to their camp, and her silent devotion, undiminished by his surly unresponsiveness, and her death from exhaustion and cold add a touch of romance to a tale which is otherwise grim enough. Jingoss, the pursued, having been warned that the trappers were on his trail, and having only himself to think of and provision, turned to the frost-bound northern plain, desolate, uninhabited and shelterless, and with no game, trusting to be able to out travel his pursuers until the spring snows, and then to turn southward, leaving Nature to complete his battle. The description of the desperate battle they fought with cold, hunger and fatigue, but with never a thought of abandoning their quest, is powerful and impressive. Nothing in recent literature approaches it except the flight of Frank Norris' McTeague into the desert of Death Valley, and his struggle there with heat and thirst. The search after the recalcitrant red-skin occupied a little more than a year of time, during which the travelers encountered every species of risk and hardship. Not the least impressive part of the narrative is that which describes their return to Conjurer's House to find that during the year in which they have lived so much everything has apparently stood still there, and the same group of officials sits on the porch in the twilight, and the same trappers and couriers lounge in the grass by the guns as though it had been but a minute since they were called to their conference with the factor. But the influence of "the silent places" goes deep, and the men who do things are not cursed with loquacity. In about three hundred words the report of the year's wanderings is made to the chief, and the episode is at an end. It is a tale of wonderful sagacity and endurance, wholesome and bracing as winter itself, good reading for young and old. Published by McClure, Phillips & Company.

The August Sunset

There are some especially interesting features in the August Sunset, the magazine edited by C. S. Aiken, and which now ranks with the best of the Eastern magazines. The leading article is a sketch of Victor Metcalf, the new Secretary of Commerce and Labor, together with stories concerning him, pictures of his family, and residences in California. Another article worthy of note is "California's Army Camp," by Major Cassius E. Gillette, one of the umpires of the regular army encampment to be held near Paso Robles, August thirteenth to twenty-seventh. This is the first authority of the announcement concerning the object of this assembly of regular army and national guard men, and its publication was authorized by Major-General MacArthur. "Bill Magee of Pine Nut," an epic of a Nevada mining camp, by Sam Davis of the Carson Appeal, is one of the best stories in verse ever written by the sage brush wit. Nevada's latest bonanza is a study of Goldfield and the big strike south of Tonopah, in the region where mining experts say quartz runs from two thousand to sixty thousand dollars a ton. The miscellany includes a short story, "Her Secret Heart," by Juliet Wilbur Tompkins, a study of "Over the Kearsarge Trail," by Mary Austin, author of "The Land of Little Rain," and a poem by the late Professor Marius J. Spinello of the University of California. Gifford Hall's serial is concluded in this number. The "Sunset Rays," edited by A. J. Waterhouse, include some bright verse by Harry Fee, Barrett Franklin, Elwyn Hoffman and others, and some equally bright jokes and bits of philosophy.

—The Bookworm.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. —.

ELLA VAN BENTHUSEN
Plaintiff
vs.
THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN
Defendant

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:

THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's alleged willful and utter neglect of said plaintiff for more than four years last past, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 30th day of June, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk.

By CHAS. C. MORRIS, Deputy Clerk.

N. F. FLOOD, Plaintiff's Attorney

1122 Market St., Rooms 1, 2, 3 and 4.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. —. No. 91429

ELISE KOEBSCH
Plaintiff
vs.
CHARLES W. F. KOEBSCH
Defendant

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:

CHARLES W. F. KOEBSCH, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of plaintiff; also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 8th day of July in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk.

By GEO. W. LEE, Deputy Clerk

McCLELLAN & McCLELLAN, Plaintiff's Attorneys.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of PETER MCCARTHY, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Kate A. Schwerin and Nellie M. Hall, Executrices of the Last Will and Testament of Peter McCarthy deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within ten months after the first publication of this notice to the said Kate A. Schwerin and Nellie M. Hall, as such executrices, at Rooms 607, 611, 612 Hayward Building, San Francisco, Cal., the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

KATE A. SCHWERIN and NELLIE M. HALL,
Executrices of the Last Will and Testament of
PETER MCCARTHY, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, July 16, 1904.

J. J. LERMEN, Attorney for Estate of Peter McCarthy, Deceased.

NELSON'S AMYCOSE

Infalible Remedy for Catarrh
Sore Throat and Inflammations of the Skin

VERUS GUARANTEED TO CURE PILES
OR $50. FORFEITED. One application relieves. Cures while you work. Price $2.
Send only 25¢. with your druggist's name and we will send a $2 package of Verus prepaid. Send us the balance when cured. VERUS REMEDY COMPANY, Dept. E, Los Angeles, Cal.

HAIR GOODS

G. L E D E R E R
Wig Maker and Hairdresser. Scalp treatments, Shampooing, Manicuring, Hair dyeing, Switches, Ornaments, Toupes. Complete line of pure Hair Goods only. 123 Stockton St.

KIMONOS AND JAPANESE GOODS

K I M O N O S
Silk and Cotton; Custom made and made to order; of every description at special low price. Call and inspect our large and artistic line. The Orient, 633 Sutter St. near Taylor.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR REMOVED

B E A T R I C E S T. J O H N
Hair, Face and Scalp Specialist. 426 Sutter St. Phone Black 153. Superfluous Hair killed root and branch by absorption—guaranteed permanent, $1.00.

HAT RENOVATORY

P A N A M A H A T S
Bleached and Blocked, 423 Sutter Street. 424½ Montgomery, Street. Telephones Black 4616, Red 3212.

Residence 814 Grove St., S. F.
Telephone Page 81

HENRY P. TRICOU
Notary Public

Telephone Main 1680 206 Montgomery St.
Bet. Pine and Bush

VEUVE
CLICQUOT
PONSARDIN

The most delicious
Champagne
of the Age

Yellow Label, Dry
Gold Label, Brut

Cruse &
Fils Freres

Clarets and
Sauternes

Creme des Grands
Crus
(Creme of Cognac)

A. Vignier Co.

429 & 431 Battery
San Francisco

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy

1051 Market St., bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.

The largest of its kind in the world.
Book "The Philosophy of Marriage" mailed free.
A Valuable Book for Men.

About Books

The fabulous prices paid by bibliophiles for old books and rare early editions has caused many uneducated people to believe that any old book is a fortune in itself. A pathetic story comes from London of a consignment sent by a young man in New Zealand, who wished to dispose of his treasures in order to build a cottage for himself and his mother. There were thirty-seven volumes, many of them odd numbers of multi-volume editions, and none of them of any value beyond their selling price in the waste paper market. The proceeds of the sale netted one dollar and seventy-five cents.

That is the test to which I have urged that all books must at last be brought: if they do not bear it their doom is fixed. They may be light or heavy, the penny sheet or the vast folio; they may speak of things seen or unseen; of Science or Art, of what has been or what is to be; they may amuse us, weary us, flatter us, scorn us; if they do not assist to make us better or more substantial men, they are only providing fuel for a fire larger and more utterly destructive than that which consumed the library of the Ptolemies.—Frederick Denison Maurice.

Books are legacies that a great genius leaves to mankind, which are delivered down from generation to generation.—Joseph Addison.

Books constitute capital. A library book lasts as long as a house, for hundreds of years. It is not, then, an article of mere consumption, but fairly, of capital, and often, in the case of professional men setting out in life, their only capital.—Thomas Jefferson.

Of a truth, he who would deprive me of books, my old friends, would take away all the delight of my life, nay, I will say all desire of living.—Corasius.

When evening has arrived I return home, and go into my study. . . I pass into the antique courts of ancient men, where, welcomed lovingly by them, I feed upon the food which is my own, and for which I was born. For hours together, the miseries of life no longer annoy me; I forget every vexation; I do not fear poverty, for I have altogether transferred myself to those with whom I hold converse.—Niccolo Machiavelli.

The reason why borrowed books are seldom returned is that it is easier to retain the books themselves than what is inside them.—Gillis Menage.

Let every man, if possible, gather some good books under his roof, and obtain access for himself and family to some special library. Almost any luxury should be sacrificed to this.—William Ellery Channing.

My money I will freely lend;

My books I must refuse,

For each I count as a dear friend,
And I've no friends to lose.

—Joe Allgood.

W. SCHEPPLER & SON

Dealer in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing
and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry.

1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

SOHMER
PIANO
AGENCY

WARRANTED 10 YEARS
BYRON MAUZY
The CECILIAN—The Perfect Piano Player

PIANO
308-312 Post St
San Francisco

THE CLUB

are the original bottled Cocktails. Years of experience have made them THE PERFECT COCKTAILS that they are. Do not be lured into buying some imitation. The ORIGINAL of anything is good enough. When others are offered it is for the purpose of larger profits. Insist upon having the CLUB COCKTAILS, and take no other.

G. F. HEUBLEIN & BRO., Sole Proprietors
29 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, N. Y.
HARTFORD, CONN. LONDON

PACIFIC COAST AGENTS

Spohn-Patrick Company

San Francisco Seattle Denver
Salt Lake City Los Angeles

For those who appreciate comfort
and attention

Occidental Hotel

SAN FRANCISCO

AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN PLAN
A QUIET HOME
CENTRALLY LOCATED

GEORGE WARREN HOOPER, LESSEE

Visit the
Hoffman Cafe

Wm. J. Sullivan, Proprietor

Lunch, Grill and Wine Rooms

Half a block below Palace and Grand Hotels, S. F.

Fine Goods a Specialty. Merchants' hot lunch from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. An extra spread served on all holidays. Merchants' lunch served in Ladies Cafe and Grill, from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. Oysters, English Chops, Steaks and Delicacies a specialty.

Handsome Cafe in America

Open all night. Private Dining Rooms for Ladies and Escorts

601 Market St. (S. W. Cor. 2nd and Market Sts.)

POODLE DOG RESTAURANT, CORNER
Eddy and Mason Streets, San Francisco—Private dining and banquet rooms. Telephone 429.
A. B. BLANCO & BRUN, Proprietors

PALACE HOTEL

San Francisco, California.

TOURISTS and TRAVELERS will, now, with difficulty recognize the famous Court into which for twenty-five years carriages have been driven. This space of over a quarter of an acre has recently, by the addition of very handsome furniture, rugs, chandeliers and tropical plants, been converted into a lounging room, the

FINEST
IN THE
WORLD

THE EMPIRE PARLOR—the Palm Room, furnished in Cerise, with Billiard and Pool tables for the ladies—the Louis XV Parlor—the Ladies' Writing Room, and numerous other modern improvements, together with unexcelled Cuisine and the most convenient location in the City—all add much to the ever-increasing popularity of this most famous Hotel.

Techau Tavern

The most unique resort in San Francisco. There is not a more artistically appointed cafe in the country. . . . It is a place wherein the guest may feast the eye while dining sumptuously and being regaled with exquisite music. . . . The Tavern is now under new and experienced management, and patrons are assured of the constant attendance of the chief of the establishment, and of prompt service at all times. . . . Special attention is paid to luncheon, dinner and after-theatre parties. . . .

GOODYEAR'S "GOLD SEAL"

Rubber Goods the Best Made

Rubber Hose, Belting and Packings

We are headquarters for everything made of Rubber

GOODYEAR RUBBER COMPANY

R. H. Pease, Pres. F. M. Shepard, Jr., Treas. C. F. Runyon, Sec.

573-575-577-579 Market St., San Francisco

Those who read much

are more frequently subject to eye trouble than others. There are, however, numerous modern occupations which bring on eye troubles that injure the brain and the physical system irreparably. Avoid danger by

Using GEORGE MAYERLE'S GLASSES

His Glasses insure health and a clear vision. Consultation Free. Open until 9 o'clock every evening. Geo. Mayerle's GERMAN EYEWATER makes weak eyes strong, sore eyes well, rests tired eyes. Price 50c. 62c by mail. Mail order or Wells-Fargo. Geo. Mayerle's Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers insure clean lenses without scratching.

Showing effect of George Mayerle's
Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers

GEORGE MAYERLE, German Expert Optician

1071 MARKET STREET

Two Doors from Seventh

CAFE ZINKAND

After the Theatre call at this Palace of Delights and revel in the luxuries of a spread fit for the gods, or drink of some of the best wine that ever chased the skeleton from the feast or painted land escapes within the brain of man.—Hograve

HOUSEHOLD NUMBER

TOWN TALK

VOL. XII. No. 623.

SAN FRANCISCO, AUGUST 6, 1904.

PRICE 10 CENTS.

WALKOVER

$3.50 SHOES

The greatest line of low shoes and Oxfords for Men shown in San Francisco. All the latest styles in tan shoes, same as you pay $5.00 to $7.00 for elsewhere.

When "Walk-Overs" go on, shoe troubles go off. The perfection of shoe-leather, shoe-skill and shoe-style. The handsome tans for summer wear duplicate every elegant charm of $5 and $6 shoes. The Walk-Overs are

The World's Shoes

Soles of oak-tanned leather, rendered tough but flexible by a secret process. Sixty different styles for men and women, and over two hundred and fifty foot-forms. Made and sold on the honor of a world-wide reputation, at the rate of 10,000 pairs per day. The San Francisco store seats and fits 100 men at a time, with enlarged and remodeled parlors for ladies. Every patron is a life-long customer.

Walk-Over Shoe Store

F. F. WRIGHT & SON, Proprietors

924 Market Street, Opposite Emporium
San Francisco

NEWITT, L.A.

...THE...

German Savings & Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus	$ 2,448,948.13
Capital actually paid up in Cash	1,000,000.00
Deposits June 30, 1904	36,573,015.18

Board of Directors

JOHN LLOYD, President.
DANIEL MEYER, 1st Vice-President
H. HORSTMANN, 2nd Vice-President
Ign. Steinhart	Emil Rohte	H. B. Russ	N. Ohlandt
I. N. Walter		J. W. Van Bergen
A. H. R. Schmidt,		Cashier
Wm. Herrmann,		Asst. Cashier
Geo. Tourny,		Secretary
A. H. Muller,		Asst. Secretary
W. S. Goodfellow		General Attorney

San Francisco Savings Union

532 California Street, Corner Webb

Deposits July 1, 1904	$33,908,594.00
Paid Up Capital	1,000,000.00
Reserve and Contingent Funds	935,033.00

E. B. POND, President	W. C. B. de FREMERY	} Vice-Presidents
LOVELL WHITE, Cashier	ROBERT WATT
	R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier

DIRECTORS:

Henry F. Allen, William A. Magee, W. C. B. de Fremery, C. O. G. Miller, Robert Watt, George C. Boardman, Fred H. Beaver, Jacob Barth, E. B. Pond.

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits: Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

CONTINENTAL BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATION

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital	$17,000,000.00
Paid in Capital	3,500,000.00
Monthly Income	250,000.00
Homes built since organization	1,500

Home Office 301 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

DR. WASHINGTON DODGE, President
WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

It might be well to remember
when making a will

THAT THE

CALIFORNIA SAFE DEPOSIT AND TRUST COMPANY

Is in a position to settle estates with the assurance that the administration will not change hands and that the estate will be prudently managed with absolute safety.

WILLS SAFELY KEPT WITHOUT CHARGE

OFFICES:

Cor. CALIFORNIA and MONTGOMERY STS.
San Francisco

Mechanics' Savings Bank

Incorporated January 21, 1904

Capital Stock paid-up $250,000.00

OFFICERS:

President, James O'B. Gunn	Vice-President, Geo. D. Gray
Vice-President, Geo. F. Lyon	Cashier, Frederick H. Clark

DIRECTORS:

F. W. Dohrmann, Jr.,	Geo. D. Gray,	F. M. Greenwood,	Jas. O'B. Gunn
Marshall Hale,	G. W. Kline,	Geo. F. Lyon,	Geo. M. Mitchell,
Chas. C. Moore,	Henry T. Scott,	W. F. Williamson

The Mechanics' Savings Bank has opened its doors for a general Savings' and Loan business at the S. W. corner Montgomery and Bush Sts., San Francisco, Cal. May 2, 1904. Open Every Saturday Evening from 6 to 8.

The Owl Drug Co.

is the largest concern of its kind in this country—it buys its goods in such large quantity it can sell them for less money than most any other druggist pays for them. Telephone orders filled at once and delivered free. South 356.

1128 MARKET ST., S. F.
BROADWAY & 10TH ST., OAKLAND

La Grande

BRANCHES

5A Taylor Street
200 Mtgy. Ave. cor. Kearny
202 Third cor. Howard
1738 Market opp. Eleventh

Laundry
23 POWELL ST.
Phone Bush 12

Sews Buttons

Ordinary Mending

Work called for and delivered

FREE of charge

Rathjen Bros. 39 Stockton St. Phone Main 5522

Complete Line of Imported and Domestic

GROCERIES, TEAS, COFFEES
WINES AND LIQUORS

Special Sale Days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday
Look for Items in all the Daily Papers

J. PORCHER*HATTER

Latest
Summer
Styles

JOHN A. STETSON CO.

1109 Market St
Odd Fellows Building, S. F.

"FIRST NIGHTERS."

TOWN TALK

SAN FRANCISCO, AUGUST 6, 1904.

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

THEODORE F. BONNET - - - Editor

CHARLES S. SMITH - - - Manager

609 MISSION ST.

FOURTH FLOOR

Telephone BUSH 713

SUBSCRIPTION.—One Year, in advance, $3.00; six months, $1.75; three months, $1.00; one month, 40 cents; single copies, 10 cents. Foreign subscriptions (countries in postal union), $4.00 per year. Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application. For Sale by all Newsdealers.

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

RALPH A. GROVER Manager of Advertising
New York Representative, FREDERIC M. KRUGLER, Room 918,
150 Nassau Street.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N. Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 200 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

No attention is paid to anonymous communications, but the wishes of contributors as to the use of their names will be scrupulously regarded. We cannot undertake to preserve or return manuscripts.

TOWN TALK is mailed to subscribers every Thursday and should be received in this city and vicinity every Friday. Please notify us of tardy delivery.

Graft and Blackmail

It is a delusion of the legal profession that every wrong has its remedy. The fallacy is being illustrated in this city every day. We have a police commissioner in the insurance business and another in the cigar business, and both, we are told, profit handsomely through their dealings with saloon keepers. The saloon business is conducted under a license issued at the will of the Police Commission. Obviously it is to the interest of saloon keepers to enter into commercial relations with the commissioners. We know that they do so. Moreover, we know that the laws of the city are being flagrantly violated night and day by saloon keepers who apparently enjoy the protection of the authorities. It is not unfair to assume under the circumstances that the authorities vouchsafe the violators of the law immunity from punishment in consideration of the money paid ostensibly in the regular course of legitimate business. It appears that the system in operation is conducive to fraud and graft and blackmail; that it serves to intimidate saloon keepers, and results in the flaunting of vice and the demoralization of the community. But where lies the remedy? Unquestionably there is ample law to punish crime, but a system of government that is inherently wicked, and that empowers public officials to practice blackmail, is responsible for a wrong for which there appears to be no remedy. Since we license saloon keepers we should deal fairly with them. If Mr. Drinkhouse solicits the trade of a saloon it cannot be said that he has any intention of blackmailing the proprietor, but the latter would be a very foolish man if he refused the commissioner an order. Assuming that he would not have his license revoked for declining to do business with Mr. Drinkhouse, the probability is that he would at least escape drastic treatment in the event of his violating the law.

Amend The Charter

The only remedy for the humiliating state of affairs is one impossible of prompt application. The people must wait until they have an opportunity to elect a Mayor who will turn the rascals out. In time, perhaps, by the enactment of proper legislation, the nefarious practices now indulged will be prohibited. Some day it may be made a crime for any officer of the city government to deal commercially with people whose business is subject to his official control. And then perhaps it may be thought advisable to safeguard the community against a combination of the character of the one now existing between Mayor Schmitz and Abe Ruef. That is a colossal evil for which there appears to be no remedy. There is nothing in the law prohibiting the Mayor's mentor and political creator from earning fees from people intent on persuading the Mayor's commissioners. An attorney of refined nature, self-respecting and sensible of the proprieties, would not assume the role so enthusiastically filled by Abe Ruef. Neither would a self-respecting Mayor, jealous of his own honor, continue confidential relations with a man who capitalized those relations in a way that brought disgrace on his Administration. But human nature is weak, and it must be safeguarded against temptation. The charter should be amended, and the penal code should be amended for the protection of this city from grafting officials, for who knows but that the next Mayor may be a grafter himself and insist on his attorney dividing his fees. The present Mayor is said to be an unsophisticated chap who is satisfied with hot air, and who is occasionally escorted to the top of a high mountain to view the panorama of the exalted stations that he is to occupy.

Passing of a Pest

It is currently reported and fondly believed that the days of the piano-pounder are no more, and that dwellers in flats and apartments can now count on a reasonable security from the interminable scales, five-finger exercises and nerve-racking practice of the uncounted thousands never destined by nature to comprehend even the rudiments of harmony. The cheapening of travel and shortening of routes has so compacted the world that it is possible for practically any community musically inclined to hear the best professional performers, and as a natural result the standard of comparison has been raised. Musical taste has been educated beyond the point where any jingly little tune hammered out without pause is sufficient to cause the performer to be hailed as a genius. Perhaps, too, the present generation of parents has learned something by experience. It was only during the lifetime of the last two generations that pianos were low enough in cost for people of ordinary means to be able to afford "an instrument," and the possession of a piano, no matter how much of a tin kettle it might be, was in certain circles prima facie evidence of prosperity. The music teaching was too often on a level with the rest of it, and it was no uncommon occurrence for girls who had taken half a dozen lessons to set up as teachers themselves. One was often amused by the boasting of some fond mother, equally ignorant of music and foreign languages, that Mamie was so precocious as to be already able to play French or German music, and with both hands at that. Of the hundreds of thousands of girls whose parents made efforts, albeit mistaken ones, to have them taught to strum the piano, not a tenth really cared a jot for music. The majority loathed the thought and found every excuse to shirk practice, and just as soon as they could get matters into their own hands they closed the piano lid for all time. Now these same girls are mothers, and looking back at the waste of time and money, the countless annoyances and vexations, and the small amount of satisfaction or pleasure which they derived, they are not inclined to insist when their own children show signs of rebellion. The professional pianists have carried the art to such a degree of perfection that the amateur needs to be little short of a genius in order not to appear ridiculous, and moreover, the countless mechanical devices which are on the market render useless the long apprenticeship of mediocrity. The mechanical piano player produces more satisfactory results without practice or any other expense beyond the purchase price, and the cost of the perforated rolls, than does the average human being after years of expensive lessons.

The College Athlete

A few weeks ago President Wilson of Princeton was talking of the necessity for some plan which would make scholastic honors as highly appreciated as those won on the athletic field. Now comes Professor Alfred E. Stearns of Phillips-Andover Academy, declaring in plain words that under present conditions athletics are positively detrimental to the moral stamina of students. In the effort to beat opponents and make records a premium is placed upon trickery. Much is said about clean sport, honor, fair play and all that, but actually, the thing to do is to get the decision, to break the record, to come out on top. All over the country parents are stinting themselves to give their husky sons a chance for an education, and the sons are spending their time and energy in beating a ball or in some equally puerile occupation. There is no objection from any quarter to the necessary exercise which health or recreation demands, or even to the natural rivalry between two scholastic institutions, but athletics as now treated are no longer a pastime but an occupation. There are in the finality just two positions open to the athlete who elects to make sport the main business of life, and it makes not a particle of difference whether he call himself amateur or professional. Nominally, the professional makes large sums of money, but actually he does not secure a fair living. He may attach himself in some menial capacity to a newer god, and become a rubber or a sparring partner for his successor in the championship, or, when the time comes to write ex- before his title, he may become a bartender in some saloon where the last flickers of his fame will help to draw a crowd, and where the inevitable subscription list may be passed round to send him to some health resort to end his days and to bury him. Though the sensational journals are quick to seize upon every possible case where over-study or "brain fog" may be held up as a warning, there is silence as to the end of the sport, college or otherwise, but if Professor Wilson of Princeton is serious in his idea that it is time to think of heading off the stampede towards athletics he could not devise a better plan than a complete history of the last years of the famous ones who have kept to the course.

To Avert Affliction

The Swiss government has decided to interfere in the matter of naming children, so as to head off the folly of sentimental parents who are not wise enough to look into the future and see how absurd their fanciful designations will render their offspring by and by. Just what the Swiss mothers have been up to we cannot guess, but if they have been able to light on anything more absurd than have the Americans, they richly deserve the supervision. We seem to pass through epidemics of name diseases in this country. There was a time when floral nomenclature was the rage, and there were whole gardens of Lillies, Roses, Violets, Daisies, Ferns, Pansies, Pinkies, Floras, and even an occasional Dahlia. At another time it was Madeleine, Emmeline, Ellaline, Florestine, Adeline, and one was inclined to expect Listerine, Kerosene and Vaseline. At still another period the favorite style was something boyish, and Frank, Georgie, Joe, Willie, Freddie and Harry held the fancy. There is always a call for something uncommon, and there are those who search the Saint's Calendar or the back of the dictionary for the uncommonplace. The result is apt to be that Imhaldia or Dietta or Elodia or Swynoth is placed before some such distinguished patronymic as Jones, Smith or O'Brien. Another foolish fashion which held sway for a time is the invention of names such as Willa, or Dicka, or Jacka or Gaya, concocted by tacking an a to the tail of the father's title, for it is almost invariably the girls who are victimized in this style. Dearestine and Treasurine are other specimens of maternal composition which are as much deserving of immortalization as the Morleena of the celebrated Mrs. Kenwigs, or the Jurilda which Mrs. Matchin of "The Breadwinners" bestowed on one of her offspring in order to match the Matilda already conferred on another. One ingenious matron dubbed her twin sons AB and CD respectively, and an admiring relative immediately bethought of Abcdilla as a fitting tribute for her little girl. The latest popular novel and the presidential election invariably leave their mark, so that one can make a tolerable guess not only at a man's name but even his age when his initials are identical with those of some old-time candidate. It used to be the custom to use the Christian virtues in naming children, and Patience, Truth, Hope, Faith, Trust, Wisdom, Honor, and many more are sometimes handed down even yet in families. The pious Puritans used exhortations and whole verses of Scripture, and the little negro lad who rejoiced in the jingling rhyme—

"Andrew Jackson Gordon James Buchanan, Raise the flag and fire the cannon."

The Hub
CHAS. KEILUS & CO.
EXCLUSIVE
HIGH GRADE CLOTHIERS

Suggestions of money saving are not the incentives we offer to purchase clothes here. It's the creations we show that emanate from premier designers, whose talents with shears, needle and brain are of the highest class. Correct dressers say, "Immediate Service Clothes" for theirs.

132
KEARNY STREET
Churlow Block

Engraved Wedding Announcements and Invitations

ROBERTSON 126 Post Street
San Francisco

was not so much worse off than the famous Parliamentarian, "Praise God that you are not damned Barebones," or the other good man whose worthy parents made him a living text by calling him "Through many trials and tribulations we come at last to the kingdom of Heaven." It would seem at first glance as if there were some subtle connection between frivolous names and frivolous conduct, but the child descended from parents so irresponsible as to search out freak names or invent silly combinations of sound cannot well help inheriting a share of the folly. At all events, the Swiss government is not acting so unwisely in saving children from the humiliation which parental idiocy often unthinkingly inflicts.

The Democracy's Pitiful Plight

The Democratic party in California appears to have gone to the demeriton bow-wows. Several years ago Phelan, McNab, Gould, Simms, Braunhart, Walsh and a few other kindred spirits secured control of the organization. In order to insure their grip on the machine they repeatedly snubbed all the old leaders and enthusiastic hustlers who had long been identified with the Californian Democracy. Because such men as Bill Foote, Bill English, Frank Moffitt, Jim Budd, William T. Jeter, Tom Clunie and Mike Tarpey were not subject to the dictation of the Braunharts and the Walsh's they were systematically driven out of the party. They were never invited to participate in any of the party councils, and when any one of them was invited to address a meeting during a campaign it was at the request of some friendly candidate. All men who owed allegiance to them or who were likely to be influenced by them were snubbed, too, and thus was the party gradually disintegrated. A petty, narrow-gauged spirit dominated the party organization, and all the new leaders were men lacking in magnetism and devoid of those qualities that inspire confidence, command loyalty, arouse enthusiasm and attract friends. Their only followers were job-chasers with eyes glued to the public trough. For awhile the organization prospered. With Phelan and Reform as their shibboleth they rallied the Democrats of the State and gave promise of achieving great triumphs. But in time Phelan proved a false idol. When he found that the toga was beyond his reach he retired from the political arena and devoted himself once more to his first love—the flesh-pots. What a sorry spectacle his little band of political exclusives now presents! Phelan is splurging in Europe, unmindful of the down-at-the-heel condition of his devoted snobs, and they are suffering humiliation at the hands of creditors, who are clamoring for money due on bills contracted in the campaign four years ago. When they established headquarters for this campaign, the telephone company refused to put in a telephone until the old bill was paid. It was paid by the secretary out of his own pocket. The telegraph companies refused to send out telegrams, and the State Committee could not raise sufficient money to buy a cord of wood with which to make a bonfire for the ratification meeting. The poverty of the committee is pitiful. However they have learned the all important lesson. When it came to inviting prominent Democrats to the meeting they ignored all the old war-horses. Even James H. Budd, the last Democratic Governor of the State, was not favored with an invitation. Under such auspices it is not surprising that the meeting was a frost. D. M. Delmas and Tom Geary were invited to speak but begged to be excused. The star spellbinder was James G. Maguire, the most successful soporific ever used at a public meeting. It is high time to rescue the party from the wreckers, and restore some of the prestige that it once enjoyed. It has been abandoned long enough to the mush-head management of a mutual admiration coterie who spend all their time sounding their own praises and deriding all who decline to take them seriously. There can never be a united Democracy in California while the organization is under the control of the envious gang that reduced it to its present pitiful plight.

The Hearst-Bryan Motive

There is remarkable similarity in the character of the support vouchsafed Judge Parker by Mr. William R. Hearst and Mr. William Jennings Bryan. And it is natural that similarity should be discernible in the attitude of those distinguished citizens toward the Democratic standard-bearer; there is an affinity of motive. Mr. Bryan is as solicitous about the subscription list of his weekly paper as Mr. Hearst is about the subscription lists of his dailies. However, Hearst's insincerity is not so palpable as that of the Nebraskan. He has done Parker some harm, but he is inclined to make reparation, and to enter into the campaign with some of the zeal that characterized his work in other days. But Bryan is playing the part of the snake in the grass. He has been supplying excellent material for a Republican campaign document. And yet he has not alienated all his old-time touts and admirers. There are Democrats that still believe in him, notwithstanding his dissimulation and treachery. It is apparent that Bryan is remaining in the Democratic party for his own benefit, not because he is satisfied with the principles set forth in the St. Louis platform. His ukase in favor of State ownership of railroads, government control of telegraphs and other Populistic flub-dub, shows that he is not in sympathy with Democratic ideals, and that he belongs in the long-haired fraternity. His radical pronunciamento was doubtless intended to injure the Parker cause. It is Bryanism pure and simple, and appeals only to the cranks and fanatics.

Scriptural Costuming

A forthcoming new book by an English author, Elliott Stock, is to be entitled "The Divine Idea in Human Dress."

EMIL W. HAGBOM	C. H. REHNSTROM
REHNSTROM &amp; HAGBOM
FORMERLY SANDERS & JOHNSON
..TAILORS..
PHELAN BUILDING, Rooms 1, 2, 3 Telephone Main 5387
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

	For Breakfast
	For Breakfast
	For Breakfast

The author promises to "so clearly interpret the Biblical teachings that it will be a sin hereafter to dress except according to Scriptures." There is nothing much simpler than to make out lists of sins. The old Pilgrims and Puritans were adepts at it, and the laws of the early colonies were chiefly efforts to enforce penalties for the commission of "sins." But the world has moved on considerably since that time, and there are a good many people in every community who not only will not consent to be catalogued with sinners while following the bent of their own minds, but who do not admit that there are such things as sins at all. Time was when we had sumptuary laws which declared authoritatively what material each class of the community might display in its wardrobe, but we have long since reached the point where people may wear without interference anything they can pay for, or induce shopkeepers to believe they will pay for. As to the style of garmenture, use will modify it in spite of Scriptural interpretations or legal enactments. Just at the present moment the British sailors are undergoing an uncomfortable time because the naval regulations have made certain changes in the details of their costume, such as the place for the pocket in their blouses, the depth of the collar, the length of the opening in the neck, and the distribution of the fullness in their trousers. Doubtless the shore-tailors imagine they are adding smartness to the appearance of the rig, but Jack tar has evolved his costume out of the exigencies of his occupation, and the cut and fit and arrangement are all such as experience has proved to be the best. So it is with the cowboy. To the novelist and the tourist his costume is simply picturesque and donned for effect, but in fact every article he wears and the manner of wearing it is dictated by expediency. Dame Fashion may decree trains or short skirts, skin tight gores or balloon skirts, colored shirts or white linen, long light overcoats or short dark ones, and the dictum may be followed without a protest at no matter what inconvenience, but the prevailing costume of any class of workers will follow certain lines no matter what the mode may be. The Quakers and the Mennonites have adopted certain styles of dress which they think conform to Scriptural tradition, and the old-world Jews, the men with their gabardines and side curls, and the women with shaven heads and wigs, probably come just as near to it. Every now and then some fervent apostle makes a declaration against clothing of any kind, and if the fire of verbal wrath had any potency the very name of corset would have disappeared with the first garment called by it. Some there are who hurl anathema at the head and others at the feet, but hats and shoes are still with us. The Latin peasants are said to feel the full force of example in their donning of gay colors, led by the belief that the representations of saints in the pictures in the churches are actual portraits in habit as they lived, though they do not seem particularly anxious to emulate them in other respects. If we take the human race in a state of nature as a guide to what the Divine idea is in connection with clothing, housing, food or anything else, it will seem to vary with the climate, necessary occupation and other circumstances. Elliott Stock will probably furnish a little amusement to those who read his book, but that will be about all.

A Two-Edged Sword

Some enterprising residents of Los Angeles, taking advantage of the labor troubles in San Francisco, have attempted to cause a scare in the East, in the hope of persuading people who contemplate visiting the Knights Templar conclave in this city, to come no farther than the southern city. Several anonymous letters have been sent to Eastern publications warning people against coming to the metropolis. A fair sample of those communications was published by The Keystone, a Masonic journal of Philadelphia. The writer signed himself "A Penna Knight Templar," and told of the dangers to be encountered from union thugs in this "union-cursed town." He said that if the Eastern commanderies are accompanied by brass bands, the musicians will receive rough treatment. He also stated that owing to the strike of the Hackmen's Union women who ride in carriages are insulted. "My advice," he added, "is to stop off at Los Angeles and only come to San Francisco individually or in bodies to transact the Grand Commandery business." The knockers evidently do not appreciate the fact that they are injuring Los Angeles as well as San Francisco. People to whom the Conclave is the only attraction are not likely to make the journey to Southern California.

Where Race Suicide Is Threatened

The Royal Commission of New South Wales has just reported the result of its inquiries on the subject of birth and death rates, and unless there are some circumstances which modify the apparent results of their investigation, the matter of race suicide is one of more vital importance to that section of the world than to anywhere else that the subject has invited attention. The shortening of work hours and the increase of wages are two of the arguments most strenuously insisted upon as tending to improve the condition of the proletariat, and especially in the matter of providing for offspring. According to the findings of the Royal Commission, the shorter hours and higher wages which have been granted in New South Wales have had no such effect. The people have taken to out-door sports, and the additional time and money add nothing appreciable to domestic comfort, while as to children, there is less time to spare to the rearing and bearing of them, so that not only has the birth rate fallen off amazingly, but owing to the use of artificial foods and consequent neglect, the death rate has risen. Women are not only unwilling to have offspring, but unwilling to spare time and attention for such as persist in being born in spite of the parental protest. As a curious commentary and side light on this state of affairs, two professional wet nurses recently filed statements of their liabilities as bankrupts and gave as the cause of their insolvency the falling off in the birth rate.

WM. WILLIAMS & SONS
(LTD.) OF ABERDEEN.

V V O

Scotch Whisky

Importers - MACONDRAY & CO.

HAVE YOU HAD LUNCH AT THE RED LION?

New Grill for Ladies and Gentlemen

WILL BE OPEN ONLY FOR LUNCHEON, FROM 10 A. M. TO 3 P. M.
DURING SUMMER MONTHS

Any Evening the Whole or Any Part of the Dining Room may be Reserved
for Banquets.

"The Red Lion" is in the San Francisco Stock Exchange Bldg. It has two entrances from Pine St., just below Montgomery, and is also readily accessible from Montgomery and Bush Sts. through the Mills Bldg.

Vice in the Drama

BY THEODORE BONNET.

When Mrs. Patrick Campbell was in this country she discussed the problem play, and she said that in her opinion the feminine theatregoer demands a dash of poisonous bitters in almost every production, and the stronger the bitters the greater the chance of generous patronage. Whatever one may think of Mrs. Campbell's views regarding the kind of play that appeals to women it is certain that a drama which fails to meet with feminine approval has small chance of financial success. Woman's sway in the theatre is now undisputed. It is as potent as in the church, and the tendency of managers has been to cater more and more to feminine tastes. They have, it is said, garnered their harvest of plays for next season with a view almost solely to insuring feminine patronage, and there is consequently a mild suspicion that they will seek to vindicate the judgment of Mrs. Campbell. Scenting danger, the moralists of the press, the virtuous critics, are already phrase-making in preparation for a rip-snorting campaign against the demoralizing, prurient drama.

Unfortunately many of these well-meaning gentlemen do not differentiate sincere art from subtle salacity. All right-thinking people applaud their condemnation of the playwright who chaffs at woman's chastity and deals approvingly with adultery as a social diversion or derides the most sacred of society's institutions, but their objections frequently go to unwarranted extremes. They seem to think that every drama is demoralizing that depicts the perversities of a too well-fed society. Not only do they execrate the playwright who appeals deliberately to the morbid and prurient by reproducing phenomena of the lupanarian order, but they wish to discourage everything that approximates sculptural distinctness in the counterfeiting of the frivolities, the vagaries, the sins and miseries of modern life and society. No drama is clean and wholesome, in their opinion, unless it reeks of sentimental distortion as in "Cousin Kate," or deals with the ideally impossible as in "Mice and Men." A play is to them revolting in its realism if it dissects the seared soul of an erring woman as in "The Joy of Living," though the art be perfect, the sincerity convincing and the moral lesson overwhelming. These industrious censors are always searching plays for their moral value, forgetting that if Shakespeare were subjected to the same scrutiny he too would be suspected of a demoralizing influence. Indeed, to be consistent they should urge that all the Elizabethans and many of the Greek and Latin writers be barred from polite society. They lose sight of the fact that playwrights are impelled by quick susceptibility to their environment, and that the drama of all periods is an accurate reflex of the morals and manners of the people. The dramatist is not responsible for the conditions which he seeks to counterfeit picturesquely for stage purposes. This work is harmful when it exults in such things as the unchastity of wives, and the lechery of men, and makes a pasquinade of domestic loyalty. But it is within the power of the discerning, honest, dramatist to disgust people with the in-iquities of a rotten social system by exposing them with a merciless hand. Naturally such a man deals with both sin and virtue, for they are the material from which the drama is woven. And the art that employs such material unsparingly, that exploits the foibles, follies and unuttered emotions of human beings, is the art that moves, compels and inspires.

To argue that the heroine who loved not wisely but too well is not a fit person to engage the attention of a refined audience is downright cant, and I have heard it uttered, not by a newspaper critic, but by an intelligent clergyman. The sentiment is, of course, a legacy from the religious fanatics who came over on the Mayflower, and it is the sentiment that is responsible for the persistent preaching of our critics so amusing to foreign observers. The woman of easy virtue was employed in the Bible for a salutary purpose, and she may and does serve the same purpose on the stage. In some instances the Philistines view her complacently, as in "Camille," a play that affronts the artistic sense as much as others that are tolerated insult womanhood. It is a play that symbolizes the obvious, and that reeks of false sentiment and weak logic. But it is not considered demoralizing because, forsooth, it represents its heroine as punished for her sins. She is punished because she dies of consumption, yet there are many good women that die from that disease, and many bad ones that die of old age. Many of the French heroines are false fabrications made alluring by romantic glamour, and therein lies the peril of much of the Gallic drama.

It is the privilege of the dramatist to limn and color any individuality, even that of the harlot, and he does not prostitute his art when he makes vicious women fascinating in the dazzle of their conquests, for so they are. It is not debasement of art for a playwright to revel in the creation of a repulsive character. Creation of character is the aim of his art. Glozing deeds that God and Truth condemn is another matter. It is as demoralizing as minute photography of nasty details. However, the dramatist should not be asked to bind himself to the realities of life and deal only with its banalities. A German philosopher once argued that there should be an art for artists and an art for inferior intelligences. If such distinction obtained in the

IMPERIAL STUDIO

744 Market St.
San Francisco - Cal.

THE IMPERIAL STUDIO'S PARCHMENT PROOFS

Are the swellest thing the Photographer's art has yet produced. There are plenty of imitations. The real thing is a little more expensive, but it's worth the difference.

FOR THAT TIRED FEELING

after a hard, hot day at business, there is nothing that "touches the spot" like a cold highball. But your whiskey must be good, and if it's the

Old Rose Bud

there will be no doubt of its good, pure quality. It will be the real thing.

RATHJEN WINE CO.

46 ELLIS STREET

Pacific Coast Agents

NEAR MARKET

drama there would be no more preaching against those plays that give recognition to the world, the flesh and the devil; the advocates of scarlet protests against frigid virtue would revel in the works of D'Annunzio, Pinero and the lascivious Frenchmen, and the admirers of stiff scholasticism, the lovers of that classicism which presents literary works to people in a way that gives the greatest possible pleasure to their grandfathers, would rejoice in those chocolate caramel plays which exploit the innocuously ideal.

No one will deny that some of the Pinero plays are as shocking as they are fascinating; that their rampant lubricity is designed for the subjection of the ignoble senses, but Pinero is not one of the sincere craftsmen. He is not of the Sudermann or of the Ibsen class. He is interested mainly in writing successful plays for strictly commercial purposes, and he drags in his moral to save his face. The Pinero moral is often far-fetched. He mirrors the worst phases of fast society, but in doing so he sets forth vice with an insidious polish of word, splendor of situation and spice of episode. His spangled presentments of social decadence are too often irresistibly vicious in their tendency. The gilded belswaggers with whom he peoples the stage, are, perhaps, the expression of a rotten social system, but they give the impression that they are the inevitable offspring of culture, the essential creatures of esthetic environment. The audacity or bizarrie of the Pinero motive is not always to be commended, but he should not be under eternal suspicion.

Perhaps in time we shall all grow weary of the horrors of vice dissection, the ghastly realism of Ibsen, the morbidity of D'Annunzio, and the cynicism of Shaw, but meanwhile let us not insist that because truth is repulsive it should be eliminated from stage productions. Let us not flout the playwright who dares be naked and natural, and who is sincere enough as an artist to refrain from impressing with vice to the exclusion of everything else.

Life, the Supreme Art

BY HARRY COWELL.

Choose well; your choice is Brief and yet endless.—Goethe.

The sculptor, the painter, the musician, the man of letters, if he have but attained to the requisite proficiency in his profession, is admitted by all the world to be an artist; and this title, despite a curious smiling on the part of highly practical persons, as of street gamins at one conspicuously foreign, is now generally regarded as an honorable distinction. Not least among the great is the great artist. Furthermore, Robert Louis to the contrary notwithstanding, even Philistine natures, when once the thing has been pointed out to them, can be brought to understand "that the business of life is mainly carried on by means of this difficult art of literature"; that every man is called upon to be at least an amateur in the use of words—words whereby we social animals, creatures of strange sympathies and infinite wants, try—often with heart-breaking results—to make ourselves understood of our fellows. But what none but choice children of light—even among artists themselves—seem to understand this; that life is nothing less than an art, is in fact the supreme art, that for it the others exist, to it are subordinate. And here we find sad botches, bungling pitifully from cradle to coffin, knowing nothing of the art, not even, as I have said, that there is an art; here too is talent of every variety up to that talent touched with infinite fire that elsewhere wins for itself the name of genius, most worshipful of earthly names. Yes; there are geniuses in this art of life, persons it may be without a special gift in any of the accredited arts or sciences, but who select with unerring taste from the immeasurable mass of material to hand the beauty that belongs to them and fill this brief day of ours with exquisite emotions. The world is not over likely to do them late honor as is its wont with their fellows; for these leave behind them no objective evidences of their genius—naught but a memory of surpassing fragrance that grows fainter year by year.

In this as in other arts the beginner, if he be born with what is known as "natural aptitude," following his instinct more or less blindly, goes deathward with a freedom of movement, an unstudied grace, the charming way of a child. But before he reach perfection in this art also, he must needs become self-conscious, take the purposive road, work according to well-understood principles, lose for a little while his first delightful spontaneity, his graceful movements grown hesitating, awkward, every step painfully considered, to win finally that higher spontaneity born of bitter-sweet intimacy with knowledge, the unconscious self-consciousness of the great artist. He who leads the "examined life," who makes of the raw material of everyday existence a finished product, a thing of beauty, as it were a palpitant poem, has inevitably his awkward age. Let him get through it as best he may, unmindful of the thoughtless laughter of the bystanders, finding his consolation in this analogue: Fair to look upon is the unstudied grace of the natural dancer, sweet to hear the bird-like singing of the born vocalist, pleasant to read the page of the ready writer; but fairer the dancing, sweeter the song, pleasanter the page, when the several artists, after the taking of much thought, have added to the magic of innate talent that of the mastery of technique.

Life is short. You have heard that before, you say, and by this time know it by heart. But I have reason to doubt it; for at this very moment, even as you make your

BOORD'S

LONDON, ENG.

OLD TOM GIN,

"CAT ON BARREL" BRAND

CHARLES MEINECKE & CO.,
SOLE AGENTS P. C. SAN FRANCISCO

GILBERT and STOLL

Movers of Household Furniture and Storage Warehouse, have removed their offices from the Murphy Bldg. to Room 43, Donohoe Bldg., Market and Taylor Sts. Storage Warehouse: Mercantile Library Bldg., Golden Gate and Van Ness ave

prideful boast, you are reading these water-words of mine while over there the dust falls, dishonoring particle after dishonoring particle on Lamb and Stevenson and old Montaigne. Tell me, you who have heard so often and know so well, that the days of man are few and the ways of spending them without number, how much care have you ever given to the creating and preserving of an atmosphere wherein all the little everyday things that must befall even the most charmed existence come to have their note of distinction, their aspect of delight. Are you wont to do this and leave that undone to the end of producing an appropriate mood for the appreciation of some rare music looked forward to? Is it your habit to make conditions for fine emotions? Has your life been one long preparation for the coming of love? How much thought have you given to determining the relative life value of much leisure, much energy, with little money, and little leisure, little energy, with much money? In a word, tell me, you who so well know how short life is, how impossible to live it but once, is yours an amorphous thing, or a thing of form? Are the artistically sensitive among your friends affected in your presence as by that subtle something which in literature or painting we call style?

Nothing is more common and few things more pathetic than to see men making a success of business and a failure of life. How hollow in the ears of the wise sounds the jingle of their unavailing gold who are hopelessly bankrupt of happiness! In Bohemia things are but little better. This poet who chooses his words like a true child of light chooses his friends for all the world like a Philistine; that impeccable painter's life is all out of drawing; here is a fine sculptor who lives wholly forgetful of artistic form, proportion; there a great musician whose days are discords every one.

The spectacle of man born of woman, with but a short time to live, missing his one chance, is a spectacle to which Use and Wont, with all their anodyne, have as yet been unable to render me insensible. With a tithe of the attention that the average man gives to the making of a living, he could master the first principles of the art of life. Let him but bear this in mind; that the question of success or failure must finally be settled in terms of feeling; that a golden emotion is the ultimate wage for which a wise man works; and forthwith that which was formless and void begins to revolve around a central axis. But it is far from being my pretentious purpose here to make trial of my skill in communicating the secrets of the supreme art. I had first to know them. Suffice it to say that my proud opinion is that, were men to look upon life as an art, difficult but delightful, they would find it more worth the living.

The City Beautiful

BY MRS. LOVELL WHITE.

In speaking of the City Beautiful, it is difficult to separate the real and possible from the ideal or impracticable. Dreamers, or people of genius construct their own worlds and cities, people them and dwell at peace therein. Even those of coarser mould in fancy create municipalities and dwellings, exceeding in beauty the existing models shaped by the hand of man.

The phenomena of the enchanting visions of Cities Beautiful, which drift across our mental horizons just when sleep begins to numb our outer senses—cities of gleaming marble, spires and forested parks, where everything is perfected, even the men and women—could serve as a theme for many an hour's speculation. Whence come these floating cities which can never be caught into permanent pictures, but dissolve before us while we gaze? Are they memories or buried selves awakened for a moment by some combination of brain atoms, or are they the prophetic visions of something yet to be? These cities are for the delectation of the individual, and are sacred property where none may invade. Let us leave them then, and return to the City for the multitude, which is built upon a rational basis and possible of attainment. And this should be a place where the average types of humanity would be at ease and therefore at home.

A city is in the hands of destiny and its character is foreordained, as is that of a man, for the topography of a locality draws to it minds allied to the developmental possibilities of that centre, and these minds build and shape to suit the trend of their needs and of their creative ability; therefore, as "one star differeth from another in glory," so does, and must the glory of cities differ, that the energy of man may be expressed according to his natural desire—and, again, that the errant human spirit which wearies of monotony may find satisfaction in variety. But in the construction of all cities of whatever character the essentials must ever remain the same. Proportion, space, color, cleanliness—these are the fundamentals of the City Beautiful.

As the public spirit surpasses in largeness the individual spirit, so should municipal buildings surpass in grandeur the habitations constructed by the private citizen, no matter how vast his wealth, otherwise the justness of values in a metropolis is lost.

The public buildings in the City Beautiful should be severe in architectural effects, but modified by the elegance and balance which always accompany sincerity in art. And these edifices should convey by their conformation the purposes for which they were designed. Magnificent structures in settings befitting their style express the civic spirit behind them and money expended upon these lasting monuments to a city's pride and intelligence is wisely expended and brings returns in the shape of increase in property values and increase of population, for people are always drawn to centres of artistic attractions.

WE BUY AND SELL TONOPAH STOCKS EXCLUSIVELY

Keep posted by reading our market letters and save money by getting our prices
FRANK L. KREIDER & BRO.

332 Crossley Bldg.

San Francisco

DECORATIONS For Weddings, Dinners, Lunches, Receptions and Stores. Flower gifts attractively arranged. Bridal bouquets artistically specialized.

Original Designs in Favors, Name Cards, Menus, Almond Dishes and Candle Shades

MISS CHARLOTTE F. WILLIAMS

121 Post Street

Tel. John 1911

San Francisco

Out of Town Correspondence Solicited

The history of a city's development should be recorded in monuments erected to the men and women who impressed themselves upon their times and who wrought for the city's benefit. Organizations and individuals should erect statues and arches to the memory of the pioneers who laid the foundations of their cities.

Parks should thickly dot the floor of the city and each park should secure the treatment in planting demanded by its locality, size and other considerations. A park should not be crowded with trees and plants; spaces of green sward will serve to enhance the beauty of the trees and the coloring of the flowers. And all the growing things should harmonize either by affiliation or by a studied contrast.

The creation of a park should be carefully considered and intelligently developed to fit its place in the city's scheme for embellishment. The dignity of simplicity can nowhere find a better avenue of expression than in the parks of a city.

Wide streets, parked and adorned in the residence portion with trees, and the dwellings made attractive by the presence of window gardens and living draperies of vines covering all poles and unsightly objects, are a necessity in the City Beautiful.

In the future, perhaps the near future, the municipal artist or colorist will arise. He will examine all conditions pertaining to the locality under discussion, and he will say, with conviction, "Paint your houses of such and such tones," for art demands obedience to her eternal laws, and nature herself revels in color.

So far as possible, the City Beautiful should exist free from the noise and strife accompanying traffic. Whistles, bells and other sounds, now a part of ordinary business, strike the nerve centres, and under the continual infliction man loses something of sanity and health. A noisy city is still in the throes of earliest development. The City Beautiful is mature and knows her strength. There is no noise—no bustle; serenity and silence are the distinguishing marks.

The direct making of money is not the pursuit of the dwellers of the City Beautiful, but all men are active in their callings for the purpose of improving upon existing conditions of life, and to exercise and remould their minds to newer forms of thought.

The atmosphere should be free from smoke and soot, and from the offensive emanations arising from unwholesome conditions of human life—and above all, the city should be uncontaminated by the vile and penetrating smells coming from fish markets, whose proper place is on the water's edge.

No open meat markets should mar the inner circle of the City Beautiful. Dead creatures hanging by their extremities in front of shops to serve as a lure to the purchaser will some day cease as a form of advertisement.

The streets should be cleaned at night. The process of sweeping the streets by day is injurious in a double sense; it stirs to activity the accumulated dust and filth, and places before our vision evidence of the fact that the contest with dirt is unceasing, but futile.

The City Beautiful then combines within its scope all natural forms of nature's handicraft. Water is at its very door, whose surface is animated by ships that sail to the uttermost parts of the earth, and in the interests of commerce are coming and going in ceaseless round. It is a City of Hills—terraced and surmounted by marble edifices dedicated to public service and pleasure. From these heights other hills beyond the expanse of water fall upon the vision, and villages arise in the distance, bespeaking a prosperous and populous land.

On the lower levels numerous parks besprinkle the floor of the City Beautiful. Great trees therein spread their hospitable branches and children are at play beneath. Music lends its enchantment to the scene, and people pause and listen, for here music is at home, where she serves not alone a minister to pleasure, but where in hospitals her power is exercised as a curative agent to the sick of body and to the despairing of soul.

The stranger entering the gates of the City Beautiful sees at a glance the character of its people. A large open space invites the eye; no tumble-down houses, overhead wires, poles or hideous bill boards are there to impede the vision, which travels from one majestic building to another, broken only by the verdure of intervening parks, and everywhere, one leading on to another, are forms of beauty to add to life's sum of joy and peace, for here each man shall find his own—each soul the satisfaction it craves.

To a Dead Child

BY GEORGE STERLING.

We question not what Faith beholds,
Nor mix farewell with prayer,
As now Eternity enfolds
What Time beheld so fair:
Sinless as any flower we bring Art thou whom Heaven gave;
Death never touched a gentler thing
Than thou whose peace we crave.

Here half-consoled we kiss thy brow
(We cannot speak our tears)
In gratitude at least that thou
Hast foiled the sadder years,
Hast fled the years when care and pain
Would greet thine elder breath,
To sleep forever without stain,
How innocent in death!

Beyond our clasp thy soul must wait,
Wiser than we at last,
Till each attain, in peace as great,
The silence that thou hast:
Be then it given each to be
What now in truth thou art—
Pure love renewed by memory
In twilights of the heart.

July, 1904.

“Marking Time in Tokio”

Being a Brief Account of Some Literary Doings in the Mikado's Capital, by Town Talk's Correspondent,
“The Wanderer.”

Some bright literary lights are illuminating the Russo-Japponic war. Perhaps I should have used the extended metaphor, “long distance searchlights,” for to tell the truth the fierce glare of genius does not penetrate the reek of Nanshan nor the thick breath of the combats around Port Arthur. As Mr. Richard Harding Davis very aptly describes, most of the literary talent imported to immortalize the heroes of this war, is “marking time in Tokio.” Thus far the millionaires who publish Collier's Weekly have paid Mr. Richard Harding Davis at the rate of one thousand dollars a week on a twelve weeks' contract for semi-vivid descriptions of notorious tea houses and for enthusiastic appreciations of the over-written geisha. Of course Mr. Davis had to do something for his stipend, and this is the best he could do. It is not the fault of the man who invented Van Bibber—it is the mistake of the millionaire. And it may be said that what is the temporary loss of the millionaire is the permanent gain of Mr. Richard Harding Davis.

Still, in the opinion of those who know Japan and the Japanese, it is not exactly fair that Mr. Davis should paraphrase (I use the milder term) from Professor Chamberlain's “Things Japanese” and Murray's Handbook. If the Colliers had desired information of this character they would have hired Professor Chamberlain and the compilers of the Handbook. Furthermore, there are forty-two thousand nine hundred and seventy-three books on Japan out of which the head office boy in Colliers might have rehashed all that Mr. Davis has written on the subject. But the head office boy could not write in the inimitable style of Mr. Richard Harding Davis, and Collier is paying for the Davis style as well as for the Davis matter—it comes somewhat high, but the price is of no consequence to the millionaire owners of Collier's Weekly.

Another leading beacon shining afar in the Orient is John Fox Jr., the gifted author of “The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come.” You have read the articles of this “best seller” as they appear in Scribner's. In one of these little classics Mr. Fox Jr. announced that “the people shouted ‘Nippon Banzai!’ which means ‘Good luck to Japan.’” As Mr. Fox Jr. had only been in Tokio forty-eight hours when he wrote this misinformation perhaps he may be forgiven. He has probably learned since that “Banzai” is not the spelling of “Banzai,” and that it means “Ten thousand years,” or, when used in salutation to the Tenshi, carries the significance of “Long live the king!” or “O king, live forever!” Therefore, “Nippon Banzai!” would mean “Long live Nippon!” or “Nippon forever!” “Banzai!” as an expression of popular enthusiasm is equivalent to our “Hurrah!”

All of which Mr. Fox Jr. might have learned in a few moments by consulting any Japanese-English dictionary. Mercenary journalists, dependent upon their accuracy for their salaries, would never have inflicted this error upon the unthinking young person who supports Scribner's Magazine and imagines that all she reads in that advertising medium is true and worth knowing. But as in the case of Mr. Richard Harding Davis the trammels of accuracy are not for the genius that is capable of a “best seller” of the “Kingdom Come Shepherd” variety.

Both of these great authors were surprised and mortified to find on their arrival in Japan that they were unknown to this people—that their books had not yet penetrated to the shelves of Z. P. Maruya & Co. or the “kept in stock department” of Kelly & Walsh, the great booksellers of Tokio and Yokohama. In fact, Mr. Fox Jr. is so little known in this country that the Japanese persist in calling him Mr. Junior. His fellow correspondents address him affectionately and admiringly as “Little Shap.”

Another great light, though of lesser candle power than those thus far named, is Mr. Frederick Palmer, whose short stories have created a sensation throughout the Orient by reason of their overwhelming imaginative quality. It is declared by the literary critic of the North-China Daily News that Mr. Palmer's literary product based upon the life, habit, custom and geography of the Far East is so absolutely imaginary that the old resident in China only recognizes it as an effort to depict the manners of the Orient because some of the names of the characters in the stories look like Chinese or Russian names.

Mr. Palmer's despatches from the front, “overland by courier,” lack the quality of imagination, but their value is handicapped by the circumstance that the facts they contain are familiar to the readers of Collier's long before they appear in that weekly publication, having been exploited as official despatches from Tokio and St. Petersburg published in the daily newspapers. However, as in the case of Mr. Richard Harding Davis and Mr. Fox Jr., Mr. Palmer's inimitable style covers a multitude of sins.

All the great literary luminaries employed to “do” this war for Collier's and other weekly publications are, with the exception of Mr. Frederick Palmer, “marking time in Tokio.” This is a new experience for Mr. Davis, who is accustomed to the adulatory courtesy of crowned heads and others wherever he deigns to travel. The fame of Mr. Davis has preceded him to the remotest corners of the civilized world, and it was presumed that the heathen of Japan would also bow down and worship this great man. But thus far they have refused to regard him otherwise than a merely human foreigner intruding uninvited upon the affairs of a nation preferring the crude folk lore of Lafcadio Hearn to the finished product of the blooming idol of the American publishers.

Consequently, in collaboration with Mr. Fox Junior, Mr. Davis has formally memorialized the Japanese Government to the effect that unless the Government aforesaid hastily decides to allow them go to the extreme front they will betake themselves out of the country.

It is believed that this ultimatum has spread consternation among the Japanese authorities and that the Mikado is in a quandary as to the proper course to be pursued. Only Adjutant-General Fukushima is undisturbed. He says he does not want these literary persons in the army, and when General Fukushima announces a decision it is irrevocable. In his heart of hearts Mr. Davis would rather return to his playwrighting in America than suffer the hardships of a campaign on the Liaotung Peninsula, but he thinks it would be undignified to go home without seeing at least one hot skirmish. Mr. Davis is very touchy

DR. NAGEL, Oculist. Practice Limited to the Eye.

Has Removed to 731 Sutter St., Atkinson Bldg.

Hours 10 to 12 A. M. and 1 to 3 P. M.

Phone East 1247

Residence, 1919 Vallejo St. Phone West 1103

in the matter of ridicule at his own expense. As to the thousand dollars a week that he has not earned—well, let us call that another story.

If Mr. Richard Harding Davis and Mr. John Fox Junior are of little consequence in the sight of the Japanese, far otherwise is it in the opinion of the little correspondents. Sixteen of these got together one day and resolved that when two more correspondents should be recommended to "go with the second army" the recommendation should be based on "literary eminence and the large influence exercised by the newspapers represented by the candidates." Upon this basis it was easy to erect heroic statues of Mr. Richard Harding Davis and Mr. John Fox Junior, to the exclusion of Jack London, whose name had been inscribed first on the list of those selected to go with the first army. Mr. London, however, was absent trying to do his duty in Korea, and besides, neither his "literary eminence" nor the "interests represented by the Hearst newspapers" was to be compared with the reputation of Mr. Davis and Mr. Fox and the influence of Collier's Weekly. So the little correspondents had Jack London expelled from the original list and afterwards had him discredited by the army in Korea.

Therefore, I am forced to the conclusion that in the matter of petty jealousies and crook-backed lick-spitting the little journalists now "marking time in Tokio" can give the ancient Roman parasite cards, spades and big casino.

Now I will tell you a story of a cruel hoax perpetrated on one of our literary townsmen by some of the merry wags of the Imperial hotel. At the beginning of the war the Morning Post of London published a rank fake setting forth that Lieutenant Hanzoku, employed in the war department, had been caught in the act of selling plans of the Japanese campaign to the Russians. Of course there was only one thing for the Japanese to do and Lieutenant Hanzoku was taken into the backyard of the War Department and shot as full of holes as a sieve.

This story was copied in all the papers throughout the world except the San Francisco Bulletin, and that is why our esteemed literary fellow townsman, Mr. Grant Wallace, was in ignorance of Lieutenant Hanzoku and his fate. That is why the San Francisco Bulletin published a page from the facile pen of Mr. Wallace describing in harrowing detail the crime and punishment of Lieutenant Hanzoku.

Now, to prevent all quibbling on the part of the San Francisco Bulletin or our esteemed fellow townsman, let me quote from the same dictionary that I have already recommended to Mr. John Fox Junior:

"Hanzoku (muhon-nin), n. One engaged in rebellion or treason against the government or prince; a rebel, traitor, insurgent."

Is it necessary to diagram this expose with the explanation that no Japanese ever bore the name of "Hanzoku"?

Tokio, July 17, 1904.

The Saunterer

Fate of the Insubordinate Politician

There is ample illustration nowadays of the unwisdom of trying to upset the plans of a powerful political organization. All over the State are to be found men who were once good "programmers," and who once enjoyed considerable political prestige, but who have been completely shorn of their influence because of their insubordination. A notable illustration of the folly of asserting too much independence in politics is afforded by Senator Tom Flint, of Los Angeles, who, by the way, is not related to Frank Flint, the candidate for United States Senator. A few weeks ago Tom Flint announced that he proposed seeking renomination for the State Senate. The organization immediately proceeded to formulate plans for the thwarting of his ambition, and before long it became apparent to him that if he entered the race he would be terribly humiliated. So he decided not to run. A few years ago Tom Flint was one of the big men in the Republican party of California. He was a prominent Native Son, he was rich and it was thought that he had a big following. He was elected to the State Senate, and "took program" so well that he was made President pro tem of that body. Then Mr. Flint began to have an exalted idea of himself. He resolved to become Governor of the State and his boomlet was launched in Los Angeles. He interfered with the plans of the organization, but the Republican machine no longer had any terrors for him. He failed to secure the nomination, and when he returned to the Senate he walked out of the Perkins caucus. This was another act of insubordination, and when his term of office expired he was classed among the "antis" and sidetracked. He is still a popular Native Son, and recently inherited a large estate from his father, but in politics he is what is known as a "dead one." He probably has gubernatorial aspirations yet, but there is small chance of their ever being realized.

Other Recalcitrants

Another one of the unfortunates is Senator R. M. Bulla of Los Angeles, who a few years ago was one of the leaders of the Republican party. He proved a chronic malcontent and was shelved, but he loathes the obscurity of private life and longs for the limelight. He bobs up every little while but quickly receives his quietus. At the last State Convention he wanted to become a delegate-at-large but found himself a rank outsider. Now he wants to become a Presidential elector, but his claims to recognition are regarded as preposterous. In the same class with Bulla and Flint is Senator Cutter of Yuba who also ranked

The Angelus

LOS ANGELES

NEW MANAGEMENT

Summer Rates to December 1st

LOOMIS BROS., Proprietors

Hotel Richelieu

1012 VAN NESS AVENUE

Having renewed our lease, and entirely renovated this Hotel, we will continue making it the finest and leading Family Hotel of this Coast.

AND

HOTEL GRANADA

1000 SUTTER ST.

HOTEL RICHELIEU CO.

among the big guns a few years ago. He occupied the position of chairman of the State Central Committee, and all the good things seemed to be coming his way. Then he became a little "heady" and in the gubernatorial campaign he ran counter to the organization. Recently he decided to run for the Senate again, but the machine men promptly took a fall out of him, and then he said he would be content with the nomination for the Assembly, but again he was turned down, and now he is nursing his sores.

Oxnard Sawing Wood

There has not been any change in the Senatorial situation during the past week. Bard has not been making any headway and is consequently worried. Oxnard is calmly awaiting developments, and is well satisfied with his prospects. His friends say that everything that has happened so far has been to his advantage. By dividing the south Frank Flint has improved Oxnard's chances, for the reason that there never can be an agreement between the Flint and Bard forces, and when the inevitable break occurs the votes from both sides will go to the sugar magnate. The south is bound to unite, for it will never permit the patronage to be taken away, but a union of the Bard and Flint forces is impossible.

The Opposition to Reorganization

There is great indignation among the McNabites and the Phelanites over the proposed reorganization of the local Democracy, and once more the Bulletin is swatting Hearst and the Examiner for daring to make suggestions. The Bulletin's interest in the Democracy is based solely on friendship for James D. Phelan, the angel of all the McNab political enterprises. If the reorganizers win there will be nothing left of Phelan's political influence and hence the Bulletin's anxiety for McNab. Personally McNab is despised in the Bulletin office. He turned traitor to that paper when he made his secret compact with Hearst which resulted in the latter's victory at Santa Cruz, but as he is still the leader of all that remains of the anti-Hearst faction, he is of some use to the enemies of the Examiner.

Lane Practicing His Profession

Mr. Franklin K. Lane is on a spellbinding tour through Oregon and Washington. The circumstance is worthy of note merely because it is in the nature of accumulative evidence of the fact that the ex-candidate for everything in sight is nothing more than what I have always proclaimed him—a job-chaser. When Mr. Lane was running for Governor, and again when he was running for Mayor, as also when he was running for City Attorney, his boomers represented him as a distinguished member of the legal profession, a lawyer of fine attainments. His great legal ability was harped on in every campaign in which he was pleading for votes. The fact is that Mr. Lane has never displayed any legal ability, and his efforts to make a living in his profession have always been in vain. Since the mayoralty campaign he has had one case, and that one required his presence in the Police Court. He is a professional politician and he is now practicing that profession on a cart-tail in Oregon and Washington.

Greif's Achievement

In his recently filed annual report, County Clerk Greif states that he has accomplished the task of keeping the vast amount of work in his department up to date. This is a notable achievement, for under his predecessor it was always two years behind, and in order to get up to date he had to do three months' work left undone by his immediate predecessor. He has brought order out of chaos, a circumstance that should be gratifying to the judges, to lawyers and litigants. During the past quarter of a century the County Clerk's office has been the favorite stamping ground of political hacks, and it was seldom without a scandal, but Mr. Greif is evidently conducting the office with some regard for the convenience and rights of the public.

Modest Senator Clark

Multi-millionaire and Senator William Clark, of Montana, came to town this week, and has been hobnobbing with politicians and financiers at the Palace. Though the Senator is preposterously rich, and has a record for extravagance in Senatorial campaigns, and as an art collector, he is a very modest man in his habits. He is not to be tracked by the nickels he drops. He is erecting an eight million dollar palace in New York, but that is only for the purpose of impressing the plutocrats of the metropolis. So far it has impressed them chiefly with its ugliness. But if it is not an artistic structure from an architectural standpoint, it will at least house some of the finest works of art in the world. Senator Clark buys old masters by the yard, but he prides himself on not being unduly extravagant. He tells a story on himself by way of illustration of his disinclination to flaunt his wealth. One day he followed his son Charles, in a barber's chair, and had his hair cut. He gave the barber twenty-five cents in payment for the hair cut, and the tonsorial artist seemed disappointed at not receiving a tip. Senator Clark noticed the look of disappointment and inquired as to the cause. The barber smiled and said, "Well, I always get a dollar from your son, and I thought probably you'd give about five."

"Oh, I couldn't afford to give such a tip," said Clark; "you see, unlike my son, I haven't a rich father."

HAVE A BEER WITH YOUR RACKET
MAKE A RACKET IF YOU DON'T GET
Rainier

JOHN RAPP & SON, AGTS., S. F.
Distributors in every
town on the coast.

Rudolph BARTH, Watchmaker and Jeweler, 134 Sutter St. (Upstairs.)
Fine Watch and Jewelry Repairing a Specialty. Careful attention paid to Repairing of French and other Fine Clocks. Phone Red 1221.

Scared by a Libel Suit

From an advertisement published in one of the dailies it appears that the Ladies' Home Journal, a most carefully edited magazine, guaranteed never to produce a blush, was recently compelled to retract certain statements concerning a concoction sold by the R. V. Pierce Medical Company of Buffalo. In an article entitled "The Patent Medicine Curse," an analysis was given of "Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription" in which the preparation was represented as containing, among other ingredients, tincture of digitalis, tincture of opium and alcohol. The medical company sued the Curtis Publishing Company for libel, and the publishers retracted, stating that since the commencement of the suit they had found that the analysis given by them "had been made, if made at all, twenty-five years ago," and that from analyses made since the filing of the suit, at their instigation, they found that the medicine contained none of the ingredients mentioned. From the retraction as it appears in the daily paper advertisement, the inference is clear that the published analysis was erroneous. I know nothing of the merits of the controversy or of the merits or demerits of Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," but my curiosity was piqued by certain asterisks indicating the omission of part of the published retraction, and I sought the whole of the article. Then I found that a paragraph, and an important one, had been omitted from the advertisement in the local daily. In the missing paragraph the publishers recited that they obtained the analysis on which the libel suit was based from the State Board of Health of Massachusetts, the secretary of which informed them that it had been made by Professor Hager, one of the foremost chemists in the world. They were also told that the analysis had long been accepted by medical boards all over the world as authoritative.

A Few Pertinent Queries

Now it seems to me that the publishers of the Ladies' Home Journal, before making their retraction, should have gathered more data on the subject of "Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription." It occurs to me that the question whether the "Favorite Prescription" as put upon the market today radically differs from the concoction advertised under that name twenty-five years ago, is a matter of general public interest. If the public records of the Massachusetts Health Department show that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription once contained digitalis, opium and alcohol, I am quite sure the circumstance would go far toward barring a suit for libel resulting from a misapprehension for which the owners of the medicine were responsible. If Dr. Pierce changed his favorite prescription without telling people about it then he is practicing a fraud on his patrons. Perhaps many of them would prefer the drug that was sold twenty-five years ago. If the original favorite contained digitalis, opium and alcohol and proved effective in certain cases, it might now be used in vain by people who had tested its qualities in the long ago. In the circumstances the retraction is decidedly unsatisfactory. As mangled in the advertisement it is unfair, because it suppresses facts which might assist readers to a reasonable conclusion concerning the practices of patent medicine vendors. It should be interesting to know whether the publishers of the Journal consented to the mangling. If so, might it not be inferred that the publication of the original article was part of a cunning advertising scheme? It is at least surprising that the rich publishers of a big magazine could be so easily scared into an apology, and then content themselves with a retraction that told only half the story. They intimate that they were led into error by the records of the State Board of Health of Massachusetts. But if so it should be interesting to know why the R. V. Pierce company had not taken the pains to have stricken from those records a false analysis of their medicine which had long been accepted as authoritative all over the world.

That Anaconda Deal

Thomas W. Lawson, the multi-millionaire who is engaged in exposing the methods of the Standard Oil pirates in Everybody's magazine, sets forth, in the current issue, that those astute financiers, Lloyd Tevis and J. B. Haggin, were defrauded by Marcus Daly. If the story as related by Lawson is true, then Mr. Haggin and the Tevis heirs have good cause of action against the Rockefellers and their associates. According to Lawson, Haggin and Tevis vested the control of the Anaconda mine and affiliated properties in their partner, Marcus Daly. "He alone knew where the lean veins ended and the fat ones began," says Lawson. He kept his knowledge a secret, resolving to get together the millions to buy out his partners on the basis of a valuation of the "ore in sight." This is an old trick that has frequently been played both in this State and in Nevada. According to Lawson, Daly took Henry Rodgers of the Standard Oil Company into his confidence, and the latter put up the money—thirty-nine millions—for the purchase of the property at the "in sight" lean-vein valuation. A few days later the property was capitalized at seventy-five millions in the Amalgamated Company and

FAT FOLKS

I reduced my weight 70 pounds, bust 6 inches, waist 6 inches and hips 14 inches in a short time by a guaranteed harmless remedy without exercise or starving. I will tell you all about it. Enclose stamp. Address

MRS. E. S. RICHARDS,
226 E. 9th St., Riverside, Cal.

Daly shared in the plunder. Mr. Rodgers is clearly charged with having conspired to defraud and with having carried out the conspiracy. If the story is true Marcus Daly was a thief and Henry Rodgers is a criminal and should be sent to Sing Sing. Moreover, if Haggin and Tevis were persuaded to part with their interests in the Anaconda property through the false representations of their partner, and as a result of a conspiracy to which Henry Rodgers was a party, it is not too late for the institution of a suit for the recovery of the plunder. It is said that the Standard Oil people have sought to suppress the publication of the Lawson story of "Frenzied Finance." If what he has recited in connection with the Anaconda deal is false he should be prosecuted for criminal libel.

Exploiting Miriam Michelson

The latest Californian to win high literary honor is Miriam Michelson, whose "In the Bishop's Carriage" is one of the most widely read of the works of fiction published during the last few months. Miss Michelson's personality is now being exploited in the Eastern magazines, and she is ranked among the writers from the Golden State who have made good in the literary world. It seems only a few years since Miss Michelson was employed as a reporter on the Bulletin staff. She served a long apprenticeship in the newspaper profession, to which she was attracted by the success of her brother, Charley Michelson, who was for several years a reporter on the Examiner staff, and who is now one of the high-priced stars of the New York Journal. He served his apprenticeship under his brother-in-law, Arthur McEwen, and when the latter became managing editor of the Philadelphia North American he sent for Miss Michelson, who joined the staff of that paper in the capacity of dramatic critic. The first bit of Miss Michelson's fiction to attract attention was a short story in the Smart Set written while she was in this city. The central figure of that story was none other than Alice Rix in thin disguise, and Miss Michelson handled that unconventional and brilliant woman with an unsympathetic hand.

"Why do you think she's a society woman?"
"Because she looks bored."

Californians Abroad

I hear that the King sisters, Genevieve and Hazel, will not return this winter but will spend the gay season in Paris. The Herrick party has decided to remain abroad for several months, and the Kings are of the party. Most of their sojourn on the continent has been spent in Florence where Hazel and Genevieve, owing to their equestrianship, were great favorites with the English set. Hazel King was considered the best golf player in Florence.

She Loves Balzac

The marriage of Miss Dillon and Lieutenant Winship, which will take place some time in October if present plans prevail, will be an elaborate affair in church with six or eight bridesmaids and as many naval officers as ushers. Miss Dillon has been a bridesmaid more than once herself. She was one of the attendants upon Lottie Cunningham when the latter married Lieutenant Percy Kessler, and she has always been a favorite in the army and navy sets. It is probable that Miss Cosgrave may be her maid-of-honor. I hear that Miss Dillon, who has one of the best private libraries in town, has lately developed a craze for Balzac and when at home is seldom without a book of the Comedie Humaine in her hand.

Turned Out a Swan

Down in Burlingame they are telling the story of the ugly duckling and pointing out its application to Frances Howard, who has turned out a swan of swans. Frances was considered an impossible child, by reason of her excess of inches, but since she lately emerged from the schoolroom she is heralded as Burlingame's prize beauty. She is of the Du Maurier type, Lita Gallatin being the only girl in society who towers above her.

She's Only Sixteen

I am told that Mrs. Jack Wilson's sister, California Cluff, will not make her debut until 1905 is well on its way. Her relatives consider that sweet sixteen is not a proper age for an entrance to the giddy whirl, but Miss "Callie" is very anxious to make her debut. When she does make her entree however, she will be launched into the liveliest of the social sets. Her sister Mabel, Mrs. Wilson, is the friend of Pearl Landers and Mrs. Jack Spreckels, and they know how to exploit a bud.

De Gullible—Chappy says that the girls always smile at him.
De Cynique—No wonder; he always looks so funny

Mrs. Partridge, wife of the Bishop of Japan, has since her marriage passed six months of her life on the ocean, for she has made the trip from Japan and return four times.

BALMORAL CASTLE

JOHN BEGGS

LOCHNAGAR

Scotch Whisky

As supplied to all the Royal Palaces for over fifty years

REMEMBER

Tan Shoes are Being Slaughtered

I am determined not to carry over one pair. The Best Shoes made in this country at Ridiculous Prices

GODFREY FISHER, 945 Market Street

A Shock to Blue

Lieutenant Victor Blue, U. S. Navy, the modest hero of the Spanish war and of the Chinese expedition, to whom I referred recently, passed through San Francisco last week, en route East, having been ordered to temporary duty at Morristown, N. J. Blue had quite a shock upon his arrival here. He had been three years in Asiatic waters and was homeward bound, anticipating a few months of rest in the United States with his family, who accompanied him. No sooner had the China, which brought him, reached her dock than she was handed orders attaching him to the Buffalo, which has suddenly been ordered back to China. It was as fine an illustration of the uncertainty of a naval officer's life as could be desired. However, three days later he received other orders, detailing him to Morristown.

Wonderful Gunnery

Officers returning from the Asiatic fleet tell me that the zeal among crews of our warships on that station is something remarkable. The gunnery competitions, they say, have become a positive craze with them, with the result that the efficiency of the Asiatic fleet is of a standard never excelled in our own or any other navy. Some years ago it was considered that a shot every five minutes from a thirteen-inch turret gun was good work. Nowadays such slowness of fire would be laughed at. The Wisconsin, during recent practice, fired ten shots in five minutes and forty seconds from one of her thirteen-inch guns, making nine hits at the regulation target, fifteen hundred yards away. This wonderful achievement beat the world's record, and its nature may be better appreciated when it is recalled that the projectiles for these big guns weigh eleven hundred pounds each, the powder charge weighing about five hundred pounds more. Firing these at the rate of two a minute from each gun, and making nine hits out of ten shots, are acts that speak for themselves.

Behind Closed Doors

Considerable amusement was afforded the reporters of the daily papers detailed to "cover" the Smith-White court-martial at the Presidio last week, by the antics of Colonel Charles Morris, the president of the court. Morris, it seems, hates newspapers as the devil hates holy water, and fondly imagined that the efforts he made to hush up the scandal by holding the hearings behind closed doors would baffle the enterprising young men who sought the news. His policy had the directly contrary effect. The newspapers got all the facts in the nasty case that they wanted and many more than they cared to print. The irascible little colonel only succeeded in making people think that the affair was even worse than it really was. Much merriment was caused by his forbidding the reporters to take notes during one trial which was open. The order may have been meant to harass the reporters, but it did not lessen the news printed next day.

He Is One of the Ring

The appointment of Rear-Admiral George A. Converse as chief of the bureau of navigation of the Navy Department, vice Henry C. Taylor, will probably make no material difference in the administration of that all-important office. Converse, like the late Admiral Taylor, is a member in good standing of the famous "navy ring," and committed to its policies. During the Spanish war he commanded the third-class cruiser Montgomery and was high in the councils of Admiral Sampson. It is a fact not generally known that the sinking of the Merrimac in the channel at Santiago, with the intention of bottling up Cervera's squadron, did not originate with Hobson at all, but with Converse. It was during a council of war held late in May that Converse made the suggestion, of which Sampson approved. Hobson, being the only officer of the construction corps on duty with the fleet at the time, was called in for expert advice relative to some of the details of preparing the ship for the purpose, and he took hold with so much enthusiasm that he was permitted to take charge. How he entered the harbor and how he bungled are well known historic incidents.

The appointment of Captain Henry W. Lyon, of the navy, to the command of the Honolulu naval station, to relieve Admiral Silas W. Terry, is pleasing to his many friends on the Pacific coast. Lyon, in various grades of the service, has often been on duty in the Pacific, and he was executive officer of the ill-fated Trenton at the time she was lost in the Samoan hurricane of 1889. His cool, courageous and efficient work during that disaster was quite characteristic of the man, who is one of the best officers in the service. During the Spanish war he commanded the Dolphin, and in her, side by side with the Marblehead, under B. H. McCalla, enabled the marines to establish a permanent foothold in Guantanamo bay.

Ruinart

The champagne of exquisite quality which fits the fancy of those who appreciate a contrast.

HILBERT MERCANTILE CO.
Pacific Coast Agents

V. W. GASKILL, Special Agent
SAN FRANCISCO

BOHM
BRISTOL & CO.

Our brilliant and exclusive showing of
Diamonds, Pearls
and Precious Stones

is a revelation to Jewelry lovers.
Especially reliable and tasteful settings.

104-110 Geary Street
San Francisco

Just To Bull The Market

The news of the capture of the Korea by the Russians, which was published in this city last week, caused a great deal of alarm. It worried many people, but it bulled insurance premiums, and that, I am told, was the purpose of its dissemination. It is said to have been cabled to this city by a Liverpool insurance man who has an agent in this city, and by the latter it was given to the Merchants' Exchange. If so all news from that quarter should be viewed with suspicion hereafter.

Heroes' Graves Neglected

Whether or not all republics are ungrateful, they would certainly seem to be forgetful, to judge from the oblivion into which the last resting places of some of the historic men of the United States have been permitted to fall. No one knows the burial place of John Paul Jones. From time to time efforts have been made to erect a suitable mausoleum, or a monument, over this great sea warrior's resting place, but no one has yet been able to find the resting place. It is believed to be somewhere in Paris, but there is no record either in the United States Navy Department or elsewhere, so far as can be found, which will determine its location. A similar case of neglect has been brought to light through search for the grave of Rear-Admiral Charles Stewart, another of our early naval heroes. Stewart served in the Tripolitan war, and was one of the gallant commanders who made the brilliant record of the infant United States navy in the war of 1812, when he took the Constellation out of Newport, eluding the British fleet off that port, and later commanded the Constitution when that vessel captured the British frigates Cyane and Levant in a single action. He died in 1869, the senior officer of the United States Navy, after seventy-one years of service. In spite of this splendid record, Admiral Stewart's grave has been found in a neglected condition in an obscure cemetery in Philadelphia, its location being known to but few people, one of whom, fortunately, was patriotic enough to call the attention of the Navy Department to the situation. Tardy steps have now been taken to have a suitable memorial erected over the grave of this brave old sailor. Similar cases of forgetfulness and neglect could be cited.

For example, there is the case of the late Captain John Williams, United States Marine Corps, whose neglected grave is in the little town of St. Marys, Georgia. For generations this gallant and little known officer's tomb remained lost in an out-of-the-way place, until the attention of the proper authorities in Washington was brought to it, with the result that the remains have been disinterred, after a lapse of nearly a century, and placed in the National Cemetery, at Arlington, Virginia. Captain Williams was a brave officer, who died of wounds received in action, in Florida, in the war of 1812. I could not say more of him than is contained in this eulogy inscribed on the stone over his grave:

DEAFNESS

Those troubled with deafness are cordially invited to demonstrations of the MASSACON and ACOUSTICON at the offices of the

HUTCHISON ACOUSTIC COMPANY

W. B. EGAN, Pacific Coast Agent Phone Priv. Ex. 216
417-418 Starr-King Bldg., 121 Geary St., San Francisco

"Here lie the remains of John Williams, Esquire, late Captain in the Corps of the United States Marines. Was born in Stafford County, Virginia, on the 24th of August, 1765, and died on the 29th of September, 1812, at Camp New Hope, in East Florida. The body of the deceased was removed to this spot, over which his brother officers of the Marine Corps have caused this pile to be erected, in testimony of his worth and of their mournful admiration of his gallant end. On the 11th of September, 1812, Captain Williams, on his march with the command of twenty men to Davis Creek Block House, in East Florida, was attacked toward evening by upwards of fifty Indians and negroes, who lay concealed in the woods. He instantly gave battle, gallantly supported his men, who, inspired by his animating example, fought as long as they had a cartridge left. At length, bleeding under eight gallant wounds and unable to stand, he was carried off the battle ground, whilst his heroic little band, oppressed by superior numbers, was forced to retreat. Eminently characterized by cool intrepidity, Captain Williams evinced during this short but severe contest those military requisites which qualify the officer for command, and if his sphere of action was too limited to attract the admiration of the world, it was efficiently expanded to crown him with the approbation of his country, and to afford to his brethren in arms an example as highly useful as his exit has sealed with honor the life of a patriotic soldier."

"Brown says he has no difficulty in keeping his word."
"Probably because nobody is ever inclined to take it."

Conspicuous Mrs. Oelrichs

No woman in New York society receives more attention from the newspapers—daily and weekly—than Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs. She is regarded by the press as the most unconventional and independent woman in the swim. Her conduct at the theatre, in the street and everywhere supplies themes for discussion. Last week the Daily Press took occasion to announce that there was no love lost between Mrs. Oelrichs and her husband's sister, Mrs. William Jay, and related that one day, recently, they met in the Casino at Newport and exchanged chilly little bows, though it had been months since they had seen each other. Mrs. Oelrichs and Mrs. Jay represent different sets. Mrs. Oelrichs is an exponent of the gayest and Mrs. Jay leans

Old J.H. Cutter Whisky

FROM OLD
KENTUCKY

DISTILLED AND BOTTLED BY
C.P. MOORMAN & CO.
LOUISVILLE, KY

SHERWOOD
AND
SHERWOOD
DISTRIBUTORS
212-214 MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO
HARRY G. HOWELL
SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE

THE BEST AFLOAT OR ASHORE

toward the conservatives. Barring Mrs. Pembroke Jones, Mrs. Oelrichs is the most energetic hostess in Newport, but she never entertains the Jays at her bi-weekly dinners. Moreover Mrs. Charles Oelrichs and Mrs. Hermann, who are sisters-in-law, are not on terms of intimacy at all.

Miss Robson of Brussels

Miss Helene Robson was the object of much interest for a brief while in San Rafael, but she is no longer there. She was received into the Hotel Rafael set on the strength of her kind attentions to Miss Elsie Tallant while the latter was studying music in Europe. The Robsons—mother and daughter—have spent many years in Europe, but I believe they were formerly residents of this city. The report was circulated in San Rafael that Mr. Robson was at one time Minister to Brussels, and as a consequence Miss Robson was looked upon as a girl who knew a thing or two about Court society. I do not think the report was well founded.

"Did the father give the bride away?"
"No; she married for money."

Lord of Ioamosa

All the way from the Roycroft Shop, East Aurora, made famous by Mr. Elbert Hubbard, there came to me, the other day, an envelope addressed "Editor Town Talk" and containing a page taken from a copy of this paper published some weeks ago. It was evidently intended by the sender that the printed page and some marginal handwriting should tell the story. One of my paragraphs in which I referred to Hubbard's account of his visit to Joaquin Miller as "unmitigated trash," had been blue penciled, and I infer that the pencil was wielded by the author of the marginal "copy." Furthermore I infer that by the same individual was the copy of Town Talk sent to Mr. Hubbard, for he set forth, on the margin, that on a visit to San Francisco he was introduced to the editor of this paper, on which occasion he chanced to announce his admiration for Fra Elbertus, his "Little Journeys," etc., "not looking for the explosion which followed the opening of said editor's front-piece." He further represented that the aforesaid editor denounced Elbertus in bitter terms, but that he attributed my feelings to envy. Incidentally he took occasion to indulge in a little billingsgate by way of expressing his opinion of me and his high regard for Fra Elbertus. The whole is signed, "I. W. Lord, Ioamosa, San Bernardino."

The Apologetic Lord

As I had never met Mr. Lord of Ioamosa, and had never discussed Fra Elbertus except for publication, the communication from East Aurora was a surprise. I resolved to probe the matter and wrote to Mr. Lord, telling him of what I had received, and asking him to inform me as to the time, place and circumstance of our meeting. Back from Mr. Lord came four closely written pages explanatory and apologetic, more humble in apology than lucid in explanation. He tells of an alleged meeting with somebody who was represented to be the man "who runs Town Talk." But his designation of time and place is vague, and he failed to give the names of any of the several people alleged to have been present. "At the worst," he writes, "it is a mistaken identity." He appears so willing to assume that he was deceived and so eager to impress me with his contrition that I have been impelled to the suspicion that the whole affair was purely imaginary. There are people in this world who are always trying to curry favor by posing as defenders. It is a harmless occupation but bespeaks a peculiar mental twist. After reading the extravagant remarks on the margin of the printed page sent to Mr. Hubbard I have come to the conclusion that Mr. Lord of Ioamosa is one of the queer species. Notwithstanding Mr. Hubbard's anonymous transmission of his (Lord's) personal communication to me the man of Ioamosa is still a worshiper of Fra Elbertus, and says he hopes I am sorry for having stigmatized the account of the journey to Joaquin Miller's home as untruth, even though I was truthful in so affirming, which I was.

Generous Appreciation

Words of appreciation are always encouraging. It is particularly gratifying to know that Town Talk is a paper of more than local interest, a fact of which I have frequently been assured. Not long ago Billy Meloney, the reporter, formerly of the Bulletin and now one of the stars of the New York World, wrote me that Town Talk was eagerly read every week by every member of the staff. The other day Mr. J. L. Wood, of the Commercial Union Assurance Company, showed me an excerpt from a letter from his son, who is a student of Columbia University, which I publish because it is unique. He wrote: "Town Talk is the great favorite here; it has given the fellows here more respect for San Francisco than all other methods combined."

SOROSIS SHOES

Advanced Fall Tan

Sorosis Tan Health Leather Blucher Oxford, welted sole, Cuban heel; the very latest advanced fall style. Sizes 1 to 9, widths AAA to EE. Price.....$3.50

There are numerous possibilities in dress and many points of view from which to study its excellence.

The best effect is obtained only by wearing the best articles. SOROSIS SHOES have a refined, pleasing appearance, because they are the best in quality and shape.

We also have this style in vici kid and patent leather. Price.....$3.50

ONLY TO BE HAD AT

SOROSIS SHOE PARLOR, 216 Post St.
ROYAL SHOE STORE, 50 Third St.

LADIES

Allow me to call your attention to the new addition to my Institute of Physical Training and Medical Gymnastics. I have fitted up private parlors for ladies exclusively, where they can get hot and cold, salt and fresh water tub baths and showers, Hammam, Steam and Nauheim baths, massage, etc. Private tub exclusively for my patients. This department is under the supervision of a trained nurse and graduated masseuse. Appointments by Phone. Office Phone—East 1162. Res. Larkin 4986.

Trusting to be favored with your patronage, I am sincerely yours,

JULIAN R. BRANDON

Lurline Baths Bldg. N. W. Cor. LARKIN and BUSH Sts., S. F.

The Youngers in Town

Though Mrs. W. J. Younger has been in San Francisco on short visits more than once since her husband took up his residence in Paris, this is the first time Dr. Younger has visited his old home for some time. He is a devoted Bohemian Club member and came across the ocean and continent solely to attend the midsummer jinks next week. Dr. Younger is rather more famous than most dental surgeons. It was he who first transplanted a tooth, and that achievement brought him to the notice of scientists. He had a fat practice in San Francisco but gave it up to go to Chicago, and thence to Paris. It was by a bit of strategy that he succeeded in winning his way in the French city, whose dentists hold a deep prejudice against the intrusive Americans. Dr. Younger, on his arrival in Paris, took a French colleague and under the latter's name started his practice. Of course it was only a short time before he became popular and then all was smooth sailing for him. Mrs. Younger's tact and gift for social leadership may have had something to do with her husband's success. She was the widow of Henry Edgerton, one of California's most brilliant lawyers, and after his death she gave music lessons until her marriage with the San Francisco dentist. She is a woman of fine mental attainments and when the Youngers lived here she entertained many of the visiting celebrities. Camilla Urso, the violinist, was one of her particular friends. When Mrs. Younger went abroad two of her step-daughters accompanied her, and she married them off very well, Alice to Baron Gall and Lucile to Baron Nugent, of the Hungarian and German nobility respectively. Bessie Younger married Burns MacDonald. Maude was engaged to a New Yorker, one of the Rough Riders who passed through here on his way to the Philippines, but the engagement was broken. The Younger children all inherited comfortable fortunes from their mother, whose estate yielded about five thousand dollars a year apiece to the heirs.

"What is the difference between McNab and Ruef?"
 "One revels in opportunity and the other revels in the hope of it."

The Presents Went Back

Stella McCalla refuses to discuss her broken engagement with Mr. Chapin. Even her intimate friends have not been told the reason. She returned all her engagement presents to the donors with the announcement, "I return your kind engagement presents, as I have broken my engagement with Mr. Chapin." Beside the engagement ring, a cluster of four beautiful diamonds and several other very handsome jewels were given Miss McCalla by Mr. Chapin, all of which of course went back.

Regards Him as a Brother

The breaking of the engagement has of course been the subject of much discussion at Oolong orgies. The most generally accepted theory as to the cause of the rupture is that Miss McCalla found that she did not love Mr. Chapin enough to have him always with her, and that she will continue to regard him as a brother. The breaking of the engagement has not ruptured the friendship of the McCalla and Chapin families. Miss Stella McCalla is the third of the McCalla girls who are always extremely good looking, but the beauty of the family is Mrs. Miller, wife of Lieutenant-Commander Miller. Miss Lilly McCalla is a distinguished looking girl of the Gibson type.

Popularity of Gummere

No member of the faculty of the summer school at the university has so delighted his audiences as has Professor Francis Barton Gummere, head of the English Department of Harvard College. Professor Gummere is the leading American authority on early English, and his books are admitted to be the most comprehensive of any used in the college course. There is never room for all those who wish to hear his lectures. His scholarly and sympathetic interpretation of the early masters of English rhyme has attracted the attention of the great minds outside as well as in university circles and it is safe to say that he is the most popular lecturer in Berkeley today.

Hammond Lamont, editor of the New York Evening Post, and former professor of rhetoric in Brown University, is lecturing along the same line in conjunction with Professor Gummere. His general theme is "Advanced Composition," and he deals with methods of advanced journalism. Professor Wells, of the regular staff of the State University, is giving an English course on "Elementary Composition and Rhetorical Analysis," and another course on "Methods of School English." With these lectures the student is given an opportunity to write six hundred words a week, for criticism by the professor.

Mrs. Innes (Ida Robinson), who died last week, was a graduate of the Berkeley University and one of the brightest of her class. She possessed to a great degree the magnetism that has stood her aunt, Mrs. Monroe Salisbury, in such good stead. Mr. Innes, who is an Englishman of culture, was considerably older than his wife.

The scheme of the decorations at the marriage of "Bee" Hooper and John O. Blanchard, in Berkeley last week, was white, all being a carefully arranged series of pictures from the bride in dainty white lace to tiny Mary Gayley, the flower-girl, in white mull. It was a very pretty wedding and largely attended.

Artistic Interiors Designed and Decorated

Ideas and Estimates furnished for all classes of
Decorative Work

L. TOZER & SON

762-764 Mission St.

San Francisco, Cal.

Artists at Monterey

There will be a plethora of Monterey scenes among the canvases shown at the autumn exhibition, judging by the number of artists who are painting near that town this summer. Charley Peters has become one of the town's prominent cits, but if he succeeds in renting his place will go abroad. Evelyn McCormick, who is one of the few women artists whose work is favorably regarded by the men, is at Monterey this year. Indeed she is one of the "discoverers" of the place and has always had an affection for it. Harry Fonda has given up painting altogether, I understand, but he raises chickens that are the pride of the place. Charlie Dickman has given up painting Brittany peasants for the nonce and is trying his hand at California scenes. Mathews, who has been working chiefly at decorative friezes, is doing some fine landscapes. Chapel Judson, who spends some time at Monterey every year, has done some beautiful things during his present stay.

What Others Are Doing

Clawson is trying his hand at landscapes this year as a change from portraits, though he recently painted a very good portrait of Miss Phelan. Theodore Wores is back from Europe with a lot of interesting sketches of Moorish Spain, several being pictures of the Alhambra. He will show some of them at the Bohemian Club exhibition, and also at an exhibition of his own. His studio during his absence was occupied by Mrs. Mary Mott Smith Bird, who has done some exquisite little portraits. Edward Cucuel has been feted during his stay here. He is en route to Japan to do illustrating for prominent French and English papers. Cucuel's father is editor of the A B C Guide. "Bob" Aitken gave a luncheon for Cucuel Jr. at the Bohemian Club last week and several artists were among the guests. Haig Patigian, who has given up newspaper art for more serious work, has taken Aitken's studio for three months during the latter's absence in Paris.

L. P. Latimer has been busy this summer painting redwoods scenes to fill various orders. He is camping near Guerneville and quite an army of ambitious art students is with him.

People of Letters

Morgan Shepherd has established himself in a charming den in the Crocker building, and is hard at work writing children's stories. Chester Bailey Fernald, who with his wife has been spending the summer at his Mill Valley bungalow, will soon leave for London, where he is to have some plays produced. Joaquin Miller has been posing for a local photographer as Moses, and it has been suggested that if he ever tires of versifying he could make his living as a model for photographers. Anna Strunsky has started a new book. She has just gone up the Russian river on a camping trip.

Frances Joliffe is thinking of taking up literature for a profession. She is a great enthusiast over the Celtic revival, and showed some talent as a writer recently when she discussed a Yeats play for publication. This is really no new ambition on Miss Joliffe's part, however. When she went to Vassar she said that it was her desire to study to be a "lady journalist," and it was later that she conceived the idea of becoming an actress. Nearly all of the Joliffe girls were educated with view to earning their living, if such a course should ever be necessary.

Oakland Wants a Queen

Oakland society people are discussing the question of leadership. It is thought by some of the "quality" across the bay that somebody should be appointed arbitre to separate the sheep from the goats. But how to go about choosing a Queen they do not know. In Newport Mrs. Astor is the recognized Queen, but she assumed the role, and nobody has ever disputed her claims to leadership. But in Oakland there is no woman whose superior qualifications are generally acknowledged. Some of the women who have been suggested are Mrs. Tom Magee, Mrs. Will Magee, Mrs. Taft, Mrs. Long, Mrs. Requa and Mrs. Butters. It is said that Mrs. Jane Sather would be eminently qualified were it not for the fact that she is reported to have referred to the women of Ebell as "rabble."

An Exclusive Set

The most exclusive society across the bay is that of Berkeley, dominated by the families of the university professors. People who have gone to Berkeley in the hope of associating with cultured people find it very difficult to break into the charmed circle. Among the climbers are people of literary pretensions, but even they receive very little encouragement.

An English Beauty Wedded

The marriage of Madeline Kent and William Johnston, which was solemnized in Trinity Episcopal church, Oakland, on Wednesday night, was one of the important society events of the late summer season across the bay. The ceremony was performed by the young rector, the Rev. Clifton Macon, and the scene was as picturesque as thought and money could make it. The bride is reputed to be very well off in this world's goods. She is the only

PIERCE-RODOLPH STORAGE CO. Inc.

STORAGE, MOVING, PACKING AND SHIPPING

WAREHOUSE: EDDY ST., near Fillmore

Specially built for the Storage of Household Furniture

OFFICE: POST AND POWELL STS.

Phone Private 571

NELSON'S AMYCOSE

Infallible Remedy for Catarrh
Sore Throat and Inflammations of the Skin

daughter of Mrs. M. Kent, a wealthy Englishwoman, who lives in an exceedingly quaint and picturesque house just off the fashionable section of Telegraph avenue. By the way, I hear that Mr. Macon, who lately came to Trinity church and indeed to Oakland, is an especial favorite of Bishop Nichols, who affectionately calls him "one of my boys." It is whispered, too, that the bishop intends to make the young man's advancement as rapid as possible. Mr. Macon is certainly a delightful fellow and his wife is as pretty and as great a favorite socially as he is.

A young matron who runs Mrs. Mark Gerstle a sharp race in popularity is Mrs. Frederick Fenwick, who is invited to all the smart functions of this city, Oakland and Berkeley. She is a clever woman with much savoir faire. Mrs. Fenwick was one of those receiving with that indefatigable Berkeley hostess, Juliet Garber, at the latter's reception last week to Mrs. Thomas Jagers, who is visiting in Oakland.

Mrs. William Richardson, who was Bessie Gage, is expected in Oakland this fall. She will be accompanied by her husband and their little son and will make a visit at the family home in Harrison street.

Mrs. Mein's Picture Hats

Oakland society has been treated to a delicious bit of gossip as a result of the controversy between Mrs. Thomas Mein and the Chief of Police. Mrs. Mein enjoys a unique distinction in Oakland's smart set, and when it was learned that a servant had robbed her of napkins worth forty dollars per dozen, and some priceless hat crowns, everybody was interested. Mrs. Mein's picture hats have long been the envy of Oakland's fashionable women, and at the theatre they usually attract more attention than the performance.

Honest Supervisors sometimes owe their reputation to corporations that never needed their services.

Down Among The Artists

Pearl Landers has returned to Monterey where she has been spending a great deal of her time sketching in the quaint streets of the adobe town. She has considerable talent for drawing, and she likes the society of artists. She has met nearly all the artists who are summering at Monterey, and they have taken a great interest in her.

Curios from the Orient

Miss Mae Perkins collected some fine curios during her two years' sojourn in the Orient. She brought them home in fourteen huge trunks, and it required all the finesse for which she is famous to get them safely through the Custom House. The treasures were exhibited for the first time at a dinner given last Sunday night to some naval officers and their wives at the Perkins residence in Piedmont. The guests of honor on that occasion were Admiral and Mrs. Whiting. Paintings by Japanese artists were given as souvenirs.

Mr. and Mrs. Josiah E. Locke entertained on Tuesday evening at the St. Charles, a large number of their friends being present. The affair was a musicale and reception, many clever people taking part in the program.

Why They Turned Back

Now it turns out that Nathalie Schenck did not make a brilliant match, in the smart set acceptance of the term, when she married Captain Glen Collins. It is reported that he married her thinking she was an heiress and that she married him under the impression that he was wealthy. They both discovered their blunder in Honolulu, and that was why, it is said, they turned back. At that time it was reported that they had decided to rush over to Paris to hire a high-priced skin specialist to patch up Mrs. Collins's face, she having met with a painful accident. They went as far as New York and have been there ever since. The story of the mutual misapprehension arose, perhaps, when it leaked out that Collins had been raising money right and left before his marriage. One of the stories current in New York is that he asked Alfred Vanderbilt for a loan of one hundred thousand dollars without security. The story of their having turned back from Honolulu because the Captain did not have sufficient money to continue the journey is one that taxes credulity, and as the young people are still together it looks as though mutual disappointment, if any existed, did not jar them very hard.

Miss Flora Low is ill with rheumatism at Paso Robles and her friend, Ella Morgan, has gone down to visit her. Though there is many years' difference in the ages of these two bachelor girls, they are the most devoted friends imaginable. They usually go to Del Monte together for the summer.

Clarke's Threat

Actor Harry Corson Clarke does not intend to submit tamely to being divorced from his wife. When the decree was granted to Mrs. Clarke it was generally believed that her actor husband was quite willing that the marital bonds should be severed, but Clarke has written to a friend in this city to the effect that he intends to have the case reopened,

NOW ON!

S. & G. GUMP CO.'S

113 Geary St.

CLEARANCE SALE

Discounts on Everything!

$200 Reward

For the arrest and conviction of any one assaulting members or employees of this association or destroying property belonging to them.

Report promptly to the Law Department, Citizens' Alliance, 217 Crossley Building.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
CITIZENS' ALLIANCE

and also to prosecute one of the witnesses for perjury. He has gone to New York for that purpose, and he intimates that he will sue his mother-in-law for alienating his wife's affections. He says that he has saved up ninety thousand dollars, and that he will spend every cent to get justice. In the letter he recites the whole history of his domestic affairs, representing himself as an "unusual actor," inasmuch as he was always a generous husband. He attributes all his domestic trouble to his sister-in-law, Addie Deming, who, he says, opposed the match when it was made in Honolulu, and predicted that they would not live together six months. Mrs. Deming, according to Clarke, warmly approved the match, and was eager for an early announcement of the engagement.

The latest society girl to undergo an operation for appendicitis is Florence Whittell, George Whittell's cousin and Mrs. Athearn Folger's niece. Miss Whittell is an heiress and very popular, especially with the Burlingame set.

Miss Hadenfeldt's Quick Recovery

When George Aspden, disappointed in love and heart-broken, took the life that God gave him, I thought the exploiting of Joan Hadenfeldt would be discontinued. But it seems that newspaperiety is a legacy bequeathed by her dead lover. I thought too, that the young woman—who was prostrated by the shock of the ghastly tragedy—would be a long time recovering from its effects. But it seems that Miss Hadenfeldt is made of sterner stuff than that of which high-strung femininity is usually fashioned. She is a strenuous young woman, is Miss Hadenfeldt, and she has already banished the memory of her romance and its tragic denouement. Once more she has yielded to the soothing influence of the amatory passion, and the dailies tell us that this time the love of her lover will prove stronger than her love of the stage. However, before taking the plunge she will revive Aspden's "Cycle of Love," which some local theatrical manager will probably consider worth while now in view of the advertising that it and Miss Hadenfeldt have received.

Decorating His Way Into Society

Bobbie McKee has written to admiring friends here of his great social and business success in New York. He is in the decorating business and has for his patrons many of the Newport swells. Mrs. Charles B. Alexander is interested in him and has introduced him to many of her set. McKee is an artistic chap. He did the decorations for the Henry Miller production of "Camille" in this city two years ago.

The Clark-Hobart Contract

The Examiner says that Senator Clark was much annoyed by the report that his son was not the owner of the San Mateo property purchased from Walter Hobart. There would not have been any misapprehension on the subject if the contract for the purchase had not been made by William Clark and Walter Hobart. This contract was a matter of record.

Was She His Typewriter?

It will be interesting to get from that strenuous hero, Jere Lynch, his version of that little scene on board the Deutschland, the details of which were singularly contradictory as recounted by the dailies. From the two versions at hand it is difficult to determine whether Jere had a mistress aboard ship or merely a flirtation with the pretty wife of a distinguished Spaniard. The New York dailies gave the sensational affair a great deal of space, and according to their version the woman involved was from Amsterdam, and was Mr. Lynch's companion on the voyage. Mr. Lynch's friends in this city are so confident of his rectitude that they say she could not have been his companion in any immoral capacity. They think it very likely that she was his typewriter, for Jere is a literary genius and it is not improbable that, during the trip, he was dashing off another work on Egypt, or a treatise on the looseness of morals in Paris.

Coming of The Towers

Among the passengers on the Deutschland were Belamy Storron, American Ambassador to Austria-Hungary and Charlemagne Tower, American Ambassador to Germany. Both Mr. and Mrs. Tower, by the way, are expected in old Oakland, the home of the Ambassador's wife. Mrs. Tower has been credited with having given Uncle Sam the most brilliant social representation he has ever known at the German court. It has, indeed, been of so notable a character that the representatives of other great powers have seemed modest by comparison. No one who knows what a powerful adjunct to diplomacy hospitality contributes in a glittering capital will deny that America is fortunate in having in "Kaiserstadt" so experienced and accomplished a hostess as Mrs. Tower, who alone of our "Ambassadors" enjoys the distinction of having represented her country at three great European capitals in succession—Vienna, St. Petersburg and Berlin. When the Towers were at St. Petersburg it was common rumor that they spent two hundred thousand a year "keeping America's end up." In Berlin they have been the envy of the diplomatic corps. They occupy for an embassy the famous Pringheim granite palace. As we expect our Ambassadors and Ministers to foot their own bills none of our representatives in Berlin before the appointment of Tower had ever been able to afford anything but hotel apartments. Mrs. Tower's most brilliant function, one that made the capital ring with her fame, was a dinner party in honor of Emperor William in December last, when the Kaiser for the first time in the history of American diplomatic representation in Germany, "set foot on American soil," as he expressed it.

MRS. L. WARWICK

(Formerly of the Waldorf)

ELECTROLYSIS, FACIAL TREATMENTS

Superfluous Hair, Warts and Moles Removed with ELECTRIC NEEDLE

Room 603 STARR KING BUILDING

121 GEARY STREET

Phone Private Exchange 216

Her Hair the Reason

One of the reasons, I hear, for Helen de Young's trip abroad was to see if something could not be done to make her hair grow more profusely. Ever since Helen was a tiny girl her mother has worried over her hair and consulted numerous hair specialists about it. She has had her hair braided, tonicked, dressed in every way, but it has not grown longer or thicker though it has a pretty, natural wave that inspires envy in the straight-locked girls of her set. Mrs. de Young and her daughters are having the best sort of a time at Newport where they have been hobnobbing with the smartest, under the ciceronage of Mrs. Oelrichs. The latter gave a dinner for them and the Harry Lehrs entertained them at a breakfast.

Her New Auto

Mrs. Norris Davis is doubly proud, it is said, of the new automobile which she steers so gracefully, for it was not bought with her husband's earnings, with those of Davis pere, nor with those of Mrs. Morgan mere. Mrs. Davis the younger carefully hoarded her dimes and with the sum saved made her purchase. However as she has several hundred dollars a month of her own it was not a difficult matter to put the dimes aside till the thousands were reached.

Society is once more on the qui vive in consequence of the attentions of a navy and clubman to a very popular and charming young widow.

They Tell Fine Stories

The J. Wilson Shiels are spending the summer at Carmel-by-the-Sea, and are contributing largely to the gayety of the place. Dr. Jack and his brother are what are known as "good company," and both have a fatal facility for telling Scotch dialect stories. They are inimitable dialect artists, and it is said that people who have once cultivated a taste for the particular brand of cavaire served up by the Shiels brothers are forever panic proof in mixed company.

Stevenson's Philosophy

It may stagger some of the good people who make it part of their religion to talk of the perfections of the style of Stevenson and to lecture learnedly on the advantages of reading and reading and again reading all that he wrote in order to catch the knack or acquire the gift, to learn that Stevenson himself enjoyed reading the veriest trash. Not only that, but he confessed to a willingness to write trash if he could not make a living by better things, for he believed that first of all a man should pay his way. He had no sympathy with starvation coupled with ideals too high to be reached, and perhaps, too, he knew by observation at least, that the idealist who does the high thinking usually leaves the plain living for the rest of the household.

S. KRAMERSuits, Jackets and Outer GarmentsMade to OrderLADIES' ARTISTIC TAILORING

Phone Black 3831

218 Powell St., San Francisco

From Seclusion to The Opera

By way of commemoration of the recent anniversary of the death of her husband Mrs. John W. Mackay went into exclusion for twenty-four hours, and the next evening she appeared at the opera at Covent Garden with Lady Bache Cunard, Countess Fabricotti and Prince Agu Khan as her guests. It must have amused the Londoners to hear of Mrs. Mackay's retirement out of respect to the memory of her husband, and then to see her at the opera on the following night wearing her stomacher of sapphires. I hear that in Mrs. Mackay's residence in Carlton House Terrace is a beautiful chapel with an ivory shrine. Every day the altar is decked with flowers.

An illustration of the difference between climbers and those that are in: On a state occasion at which both Queen Victoria and Empress Eugenie were present, Eugenie looked behind her to see that her throne was there, but Victoria did not—she was sure it would be.

Such Fine Manners!

The latest representative of the nobility to thrill local society is Count Hubert de Montaign. He has been entertained in an informal way by Etienne Lauel, the French Consul, and those who have met him are enthusiastic in their praises of his gallantry and fine Parisian manners. I heard one young woman say that Gaston and Alphonse were "not in it" with Hubare. Even Count Grimani is not more polished than the newcomer, and Grimani is regarded by local fashionables as a model of good form. He has spent two years in this city, and has never yet failed to carry off the honors in polite conversation.

A Society Queen's Itinerary

Mrs. Eleanor Martin's itinerary is always a matter of great interest to those local fashionables by whom she is regarded as the leader. She returned from Burlingame this week to superintend some repairs that are to be made on her Broadway residence. Next week or the week after she will visit Los Angeles to stay about a month and stimulate social activity. Upon her return home she will get ready for a trip to the St. Louis exposition, and later on she will give Newport a treat. Mrs. Martin has become an object of much interest to Newporters since she became the mother-in-law of Lily Oelrichs.

ALASKA
REFRIGERATORS*FOR GROCERS
BUTCHERS
FLORISTS AND
HOUSEHOLD -TILE, OPAL OR
ZINC LINED -
PACIFIC COAST AGENTSW.W. MONTAGUE & CO.
309-317 MARKET ST.

The Market Street Bank was incorporated in 1891. They moved this month into their new building at the corner of Seventh and Market from their old quarters at 1143 Market St. The Grant Building, which they are now occupying, is directly adjoining the new Post Office, opposite the Callaghan building, the Hibernia Bank and Prager's. They have the whole floor and basement, the latter being used for the safe deposit vaults, which contain five thousand boxes. The furniture of the bank and the fixtures are mahogany, while the floors and casements are of Italian marble. The safes are from the Diebold Safe Company, and the whole institution is wired by the San Francisco Electric Protective Company. The officers of the bank are: A. F. Martell, president; E. C. Dudley, vice-president; W. S. Upham, treasurer; W. B. Nash, secretary; C. Martell, director; Oliver Ellsworth, director and attorney. The location of this bank is particularly good to enjoy an excellent business, and the honorable business record of its officers insures that the bank will be conducted upon conservative lines.

At the Resorts

Many people continue to arrive at Capitola from San Francisco and other places. Salmon fishing continues good and the weather delightful.

Among the arrivals at Paraiso Springs last week from San Francisco were L. Crocker, Mr. and Mrs. Duvall, L. Brizzola, E. Armstrong, N. A. Gosliner and wife, Ed. Fay, wife and son, Mr. and Mrs. H. Johannisson, M. Clancy, Mrs. F. Cox and daughter, Chas. Mayer and wife, Miss Hilda Mayers, Fred Hesthal, C. E. Carroll, P. Higgins and wife, J. Brandt and wife.

Arrivals during the past week at Rowardennan from San Francisco were: Miss Emma Bazet, Mrs. S. Milzner, Toby G. Hughes, Judge and Mrs. Jas. M. Troutt, Dr. and Mrs. E. A. Clay, Mrs. McColgan, Miss Adelaide McColgan, W. I. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. L. Lowengrund, H. G. Howell, Judge John Hunt, Dr. Waiss, Miss Edith Norris, Miss Mabel Norris, M. S. Latham, Miss Hattie Camp, M. L. Camp, H. B. Edwards, C. B. Edwards.

Among the arrivals at Byron Hot Springs during the past few days are Mr. and Mrs. Samuel F. Pond, Capt. Thomas, Miss Kate Humphreys, William F. Humphreys, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Pike, L. Kalmuk, Robert Kalmuk, F. E. Finnerty, J. G. Eagle-son, Chas. Mattheas of San Francisco; Mr. and Mrs. John W. Chase, Mrs. S. M. Dodge from Oakland; H. S. Honigsberg, U. S. N. Mr. and Mrs. F. Schmidt, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Ayers, Mrs. R. T. Engelbrecht and son lunched with Mr. and Mrs. John A. Schmidt, it being Mr. Schmidt's eightieth birthday.

Paso Robles being the nearest place with available accommodations, this resort will be the centre of social activity during the army encampment. It has been arranged to run special trains between Paso Robles and Atascadero, so that the visitors will be able to reach the camp by a twenty minutes' ride from the hotel. An automobile service is also to be installed, the trip taking perhaps half an hour. The hotel is daily in receipt of communications for reservation of rooms, and shows every sign of hanging out the S. R. O. sign before the encampment begins.

Automobile Notes

The Rambler Auto Agency received a four-cylinder National gasoline touring car this week. It is a beautiful machine, royal blue in color, and is attracting a great deal of attention. This is the second one of these machines, the first having been purchased by Eugene Murphy of Burlingame. The Rambler agency received two carloads of machines this week.

Fred Linz has just returned from Bakersfield where he went on a Model K Rambler touring car. Mr. Linz made the trip from here to Fresno, a distance of two hundred and nine miles, the first day, and completed the trip the next day.

H. E. Irish of Santa Cruz was in the city Monday and purchased a Model K Rambler touring car. Mr. Irish went home in his car Tuesday.

The Rambler Auto Agency delivered cars this week to O. A. Shephard, San Jose, Fred Dahnker, Antioch, Henry Bieler, Wil-lows, H. A. Lemmon, Carson City, Nevada.

In Financial Circles

The week's business compares unfavorably with that of the previous week. Transactions aggregate $248,000 bonds and 1,914 shares, divided as follows: 207 lighting, 460 water, 445 miscellaneous, 77 bank shares and 725 sugars.

No changes in the first two groups. In the miscellaneous, Alaska Packers' Association continued its mercurial course, advancing rapidly to $130 and just as quickly settling back to $127 in the face of an abundant supply. California Wine Association is freely offered at a concession on the part of sellers of about one point.

Sugar stocks show continued activity under the stimulus of a further advance of raw sugar quotations. The conditions favor higher prices, but it is a regrettable fact that investors do not show any great interest in our local Exchange at present.

—The Financier

An Old Letter Case

BY MABEL PORTER PITTS.

On your surface, old and tattered,
Rest small cupids, ink-bespattered,
Clasp is gone and lock is shattered.

Faintly, as I lift the cover,
Perfume seems to rise and hover
Close, like words of some old lover.

Tired, or fearful of derision,
Here a hand has, with precision,
Struck a name from curious vision.

Had you voice would words be teeming
Of a love that proved but seeming,
Idle hope and foolish dreaming?

Old the story, old the sorrow,
Nothing new of love we borrow,
True today and false tomorrow.

Quaint old box, how reads your story?
Fancies crowd, and tinge with glory
Life that was ere you grew hoary.

Leather worn and satin tattered,
Cupids, roses, ink-bespattered—
Like your owner's dreams—all shattered.

August, 1904.

Why Gladys Blushed

BY ARTHUR DELROY.

The afternoon was very hot.

Gladys Felton was not the only sleepy person in the lecture hall. Young Harrie Ferris on the men's side made no pretence at anything but pure, unadulterated slumber, as he sat back in his seat with open mouth into which two other youths, also out of range of the short-sighted lecturer, had been trying for the last hour to flick little pieces of paper.

Had it not been for the display of energy on the part of these sportive young gentlemen, it is probable that many more would have followed Harrie's bad example.

Gladys Felton shook her pretty head and tried hard to give her attention to what the venerable old gentleman was droning. "Good gracious!" she thought, "this is his last lecture and the examiner may come any day. It's a wonder he did not arrive this afternoon."

Then her mind wandered to the dance the night before. "What a perfect step he had, and—"

Gladys flushed, and strained every nerve to follow the soporific the government was providing for its two hundred training college students.

"Let us now consider the character of Cromwell," groaned "Old Cross Eyes," as he was irreverently dubbed by the students. "History is a horribly uninteresting thing—if the lecturer is uninteresting," thought Gladys.

"Fancy not getting home till three o'clock, and—"

The droning voice suddenly ceased and the mellow voice of that perfect dancer woke Gladys into astonished attention.

"I wish to examine each student personally, so while you are doing the written work I will come among you and ask each three questions," he said.

Gladys in bewilderment looked up at the platform, and there, sure enough, her charming partner stood with just the fascinating smile that had so taken her fancy the night before.

"He didn't tell me he was the History examiner," she said in amazement.

She looked round the hall and was astounded at the transformation. Harrie Ferris and company were as wide awake as the birds in spring and a virtuous resolution to do or die seemed to have settled on the whole assemblage.

"Will you kindly write me the answers to the following questions," trilled that mesmeric voice, as an instantaneous rustle of paper, sounding like a hurricane passing through a cornfield, showed the eagerness of the students to obey. "Which of the English sovereigns made the most perfect lover? How many sweethearts had Oliver Cromwell? Say how long he was engaged to teach and why they parted. What do you know in favor or otherwise of morganatic marriages of ruling princes?"

"Dear me," said Gladys, "I can't answer these. He might have given nicer questions," she added, almost in tears.

"Which of the—"

The speaker's eyes lighted on Gladys's troubled face. He started and said:

"Probably that will be enough for the present."

There was a sigh of relief on all sides, as each one struggled to cover some paper on the subject matters at issue. The examiner left the platform and approached Mary Gaffer. Poor Mary's eyes grew even larger than her huge spectacles as she endeavored to reply to the questions he was quietly putting to her. But he shook his head and with a huge blue pencil they saw him write "Failed." A shiver passed through two hundred frames. "Mary Gaffer failed," thought each, "how can I pass?" The examiner now interrogated two of the young men, both of whom appeared to fail.

"He's a perfect beast," thought Gladys, "and who would have dreamed it, last night. I'm sorry I gave the horrid thing three dances, too."

He approached Kitty Kerr. "She'll be ploughed," whispered many voices. Kitty was a noted copyist. In fact she made it a boast that she had never done a lesson "on her own" in her life. The examiner turned. All eyes were stealthily rooted on that awful blue pencil.

"Passed," he wrote.

"Oh he's just cheating," thought Gladys. "It's not a fair way to examine, I—" Gladys dropped her eyes hurriedly and her heart began to beat wildly, for he was walking straight towards her. He paused before he put the first question. Then he sighed and murmured:

"What time did you get home last night?"

"Three o'clock," she replied, in amazement.

He shook his head.

"You are wrong. We were dancing that last dance at five minutes past three. I am sorry," he added, "that's one of your questions gone!"

Gladys flushed. "That's nothing to do with history," she said angrily.

"Now, dear, don't get cross," he whispered, "I'll give you two nice easy ones to make up for it: Which King of England was beheaded?"

Poor Gladys lost her head as surely as did that unfortunate monarch on the direful occasion.

"Charles II," she stammered. Then she saw her error and gasped, "I mean—"

"Charles I," he said quickly.

"Oh the darling," she thought, "I might have said George I."

She felt his warm breath on her cheek. Gladys blushed to think of the hundreds of eyes that were so earnestly noting his every movement. The third question

"A Good Wine Needs no Bush"

which means, we think, that it needs no recommendation. Certainly after you have tasted the wines we offer, and tested their real value, you will ask for none other. Will you not try a sample bottle of the wine of your preference and give us your honest opinion.

RATHJEN WINE CO.

46 ELLIS STREET

Pacific Coast Agents NEAR MARKET

was put in soft, tremulous tones:

"Will you marry me?"

The tears rushed to her pretty eyes. "I love him, I love him," was ringing in her excited brain. Her thoughts flew away from examination to those three blissful dances. She glanced at the eager, handsome face at her side.

"Yes," she whispered.

"Passed," he shouted in delight, as he kissed her passionately before the astonished students.

"Don't, dear, don't kiss me here," she cried as she noted the horror of the girls around her.

MISS BOLTE'S FRENCH SCHOOL.

Among the private institutions of learning in San Francisco, none enjoys a more enviable reputation than Miss Bolte's French School at 2174 Post street. The school was established sixteen years ago, not however in its present location, and the favor it then secured it still enjoys. There are many reasons why the school has won its high high reputation. Miss Bolte brought to her work many years of experience as a teacher. She is familiar with the most progressive methods of America and Europe, having taught in the best families and schools of this country, and parents in entrusting their children to her care have been sure that their education would be properly conducted. The school is in a healthful and central location, the buildings commodious and the sanitation perfect. A good table is set for the boarding pupils, who pay thirty dollars a month, this including room and board, tuition in English, French and German, and daily music lessons; there are no extras. The rooms of the boarders are sunny and comfortable, all the comforts of home being found in them. Miss Bolte guarantees to teach her boarders to speak French and German fluently in one year, the school having resident English, French and German instructors. French is the language used in the family, and this naturally facilitates the acquisition of the language. Day pupils pay five dollars a month for the grammar and high school grades, which are for girls only. A free conveyance to and from school is one of the conveniences for day pupils. The Froebel Kindergarten is an adjunct to the school, and is the best in the city. There are seventeen pupils in the kindergarten. The children take their recess in beautiful Hamilton Square, across the way, after school, and this is a playground worthy the name. There is much to be said for a private school such as Miss Bolte's, where the girls and children are given not only the best education books can provide, but where their morals and manners also receive attention which cannot be given in larger institutions where the teachers have no time to consider the individual pupil because of the claims of general work.

"Did you ever notice that the brilliant, impulsive, passionate natures are always given to the women with black eyes?" asked the brunette.

"Frequently I have known that kind of nature to inspire the desire in others to confer black eyes," answered the joshier.

The exclusive portion of our population, which objects to patronizing the places that are open to the public, is delighted that Julian R. Brandon has added Hammam baths and massage parlors to his Institute of Physical Training and Medical Gymnastics in the Lurline Bath Building. A trained nurse and graduated masseuse are in charge of the department, which includes Hammam, steam and Nauheim baths. It fills a much needed want among the best people of our city.

Some people are illiterate because of their habit of rejecting whatever they do not understand.

HILBERT MERCANTILE COMPANY

It is remarkable that this firm established new quarters at 136 to 144 Second street and filled orders as promptly as they have done after a total loss by fire in their old store. It certainly shows evidence of the fact that this firm is up to date and in pace with the times as they now exist, and is a guarantee to the public that what they say they will do they do. The quarters which they now occupy are spacious, brightly lighted and peculiarly adapted to their business, both as to location and general arrangement.

There was a roar of laughter from those who were still awake.

"Miss Felton," said Old Cross Eyes severely, as she awoke from her dream, "I fear you are letting your mind wander from my lecture."

And that is why Gladys blushed so vividly.

* * * * *

Dreams do not always go by contrary, for in less than a week Gladys had answered the last question satisfactorily, not at a horrid examination but at another dance.

SAN FRANCISCO BLUE BOOK.

THE FASHIONABLE PRIVATE ADDRESS DIRECTORY.

Now Being Compiled and Reservations Made for the Season of 1904-5.

It will contain an alphabetical arrangement of the names and residential addresses of the leading families, designating Matron and Maid, Benedict and Bachelor, embracing one hundred cities and towns in California, viz.: San Francisco, Oakland, Alameda, Berkeley, San Rafael, Sausalito, Belvedere, Palo Alto, Menlo Park, Burlingame, San Mateo, Redwood City, San Jose, Los Angeles, Pasadena, Elk Grove, Paradise, Placerville, Maywood, Redding, Sacramento, Willows, Woodland, Calistoga, Eureka, Napa, Petaluma, Sonoma, Watsonville, Hollister, Centerville, Niles, Newark, Decoto, Irvington, Sonora, Stockton, Tuolumne, Vallejo, Armona, Bakersfield, Dinuba, Fowler, Fresno, West Park, Hanford, Kern, Lemoore, Oleander, Porterville, Reedley, Sanger, Selma, Tulare, Visalia, Alhambra, Avalon, Azusa, Briggs, Carpinteria, Covina, Downey, Lompoc, East Whittier, Long Beach, Moneta, Monrovia, Pomona, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, Santa Maria, Santa Paula, Santa Monica, South Pasadena, Saticoy, Ventura, Colton, Corona, Fullerton, Highland, La Jolla, La Mesa, Ontario, Perris, Placentia, Redlands, Santa Ana, Riverside, San Diego, San Jacinto, National City, Fair Oaks, Nevada City, San Bernardino and Nome, Alaska.

Also San Francisco Street and Avenue Guide, Theatre Diagrams, Clubs and Societies, Prominent Residents of the Pacific Coast, Personnel of the Press, Shopping Guide, Permanent Guests at the Leading Hotels, San Francisco Street Railway Guide, First and Last Cars, Car Routes and Transfer Points.

The greatest care will be exercised in selecting only responsible and honest concerns among the advertisers.

Shopping, by mail order and telephone call, is one of the modern conveniences extended to subscribers, through the announcements in the Blue Book.

Address all communications to Chas. C. Hoag, Publisher. Telephone Main 1760. Office, 320 Sansome Street, Room 47, San Francisco.

The Printing, Binding and Art Work will be executed by Morris & Bain, Printers, 320 Sansome St.

SOCIETY AT PASO ROBLES.

Already many parties are planning to spend a good part of August at Hotel El Paso de Robles, which will be the social headquarters for the big army camp to be maintained August 13-31. Over five thousand men of regular army and National Guard will be encamped there, and incidentally at the hotel there will be a merry round of social functions. The camp is about ten miles away, but a special train and automobile service over oiled country roads will make camp Atascadero readily accessible. Special railway rates will be made from San Francisco, Los Angeles and intermediate points with hotel accommodations. For details apply Information Bureau, Southern Pacific.

IF YOU WANT THE WINNERS

GET THE

TELEGRAPH HANDICAP

OUR RECORD SPEAKS FOR ITSELF

For sale at Scott's News Emporium, Ellis street; Ferry News Stand and Sausalito Ferry.

The Stage

A Tivoli Triumph

The Tivoli has an epoch-maker in its "Toreador" production. It is so complete as a production, so emphatically inclusive of all the essentials of a smart up-to-date musical comedy, that it gives the impression of its being a transplanted Broadway show—one of those special-train-across-the-continent sporadic affairs for the heralding of which high-priced press-agents are employed. It is really the first production to signalize the transition from the historic barn across the street to the luxurious, pretentious playhouse on the corner. The Tivoli management has splurged tentatively before, and for a provincial stock house it has done wonderful things, but it always seemed to take for granted that its patrons, in the exuberance of their appreciation of all that the unique institution had done for music lovers, would graciously close their eyes to minor shortcomings. And the Tivoli management knew well the temper of its patrons. It did not trust in vain to the loyalty of San Franciscans, who rejoice in the revered Tivoli as they do in their winds, their fogs, their French restaurants and their hospitality. When the singers were good and the costumes shrieked of goldsteincohn, the enthusiasts in the audience were myopic but keen of ear. They defied villainous comedians to bore them, and even a squeaky tenor couldn't feaze them, for they were convinced that the management was doing its best, and there never was a time that they didn't have the orchestra to point to with pride. But the era of makeshifts appears to have passed. With "The Toreador" the management has begun to live up to the pomp and circumstance of a new smokeless theatre. The new production is of the genuine Broadway, blown-in-the-bottle brand. It is not so much the piece as the way it is done that impels the veteran Tivoli patron to sit up and take notice. It bears not the slightest trace of provincialism. It has an air of modishness about it that seems sacrilegiously un-Tivolian. The Tivoli has had stronger casts but never one that worked in such artistic harmony, or that was so free in trick and device from archaic suggestion. Never before did the company seem so keenly appreciative of picture values, or so refreshingly self-unconscious. I do not know whether Mr. Melville Ellis is deserving of the credit of having wrought the metamorphosis, but I am sure that somebody has succeeded in communicating his artistic sense to the whole company. "The Toreador" has been a long time coming to San Francisco, but we are bound to get the best of everything if we only wait long enough. Do what we will we cannot prevent the earth from revolving on its axis or deprive any little corner of it of its share of sunshine. Four or five years ago "The Toreador" made a big sensation in London, its birthplace. Later on, in the winter of 1901-02, it was produced in New York, and now it has passed into repertoire. It is a delightful piece compared with which the average musical comedy is what a turnip is to fruit. It is a delicious blend of music, dialogue, story, action and atmosphere. It has the vim and smartness of "Florodora" and the production at the Tivoli has all the dash and up-to-dateness of Melville Ellis himself, who, to borrow a word from the piece, is "class" so far as tone is concerned, and he seems to have imparted that to the show. And yet the part that he plays is a comparatively obscure one. Having seen the New York production on Broadway, with Francis Wilson in the leading comedy role, I could not restrain my inclination to make comparisons, and though the Tivoli did not suffer as a consequence I noted some peculiar phenomena. For instance, Joe Coyne in the role of Sir Archibald Slackett, now played by Willard Simms, took the honors away from Wilson. Simms evidently considered Slackett the leading comedy role because of the success made therein by Coyne, but lo and behold, Teddy Webb in the Wilson role has unquestionably taken the honors away from Simms. The achievement was a wonderful surprise to me, for now that Webb is enjoying a triumph I don't mind telling him that until I saw him as Sammy Griggs I considered him the worst comedian the Tivoli ever had, with the exception of Phil Branson. As Sammy Griggs he is as un-Webbified as the Tivoli in the new production is un-Tivolified. He plays the part as though he were really the unfortunate mock Toreador, and never once does he step out of the picture to explain comic bits to the audience. He confines his attentions strictly to his environment, and he is completely en rapport with the humor of the piece. He is not an imitation of Wilson, but to me he is much funnier than that veteran comedian. Poor Simms, who was so good as the Sheriff of Nottingham, appears to have not the faintest conception of Archie, and he accentuates his unfitness for the role with a dialect that is a cross between Teutonic and New Engladesse. Archie is a "Sillyoss" but he is a high-toned one, as fastidious as his friend Augustus Traill (Melville Ellis), but no one would ever think so from seeing Simms in the role. Archie in the hands of Simms is grotesque, and lacking as he does the genius of Ellis for wearing clothes, he looks like a Raphaelite lay figure alongside the exquisite Traill. However, as Simms becomes more familiar with the role, he will doubtless capitalize his lines to greater advantage, and by perseverance he may even improve his dialect. Another part that is not satisfactorily exploited is that of Dora Selby, played by Mary Young. In New York, Adele Ritchie shone in that role, and dominated all the scenes in which she appeared. As played by Mary Young it is a minor part. Her song, "Keep Off the Grass," fell flat Monday night, though it should have been one of the distinct hits of the piece. Carrie Reynolds as Susan lifted a small part into prominence. She is young, pretty, graceful, and she acts, sings and dances well and has plenty of the divine fire. Dore De Fillippe is a vivacious Nancy, and sings the "Language of Flowers" song sweetly. Kate Condon gives great importance to the role of Donna Teresa, and sings two songs beautifully. The virility and artistic finish of her performance were not to be expected after her indifferent Alan Dale showing. But as she was a very successful Dolores in "Florodora" at the Casino, she probably found Donna Teresa a congenial role. Dunsmore, the big, modest basso, looks the part of the toreador and with a little more dash and fire would be more acceptable. He has the gem vocal number—the toreador song—which is worthy of rank with Bizet's, and he sings it well. A part that has not a sympathetic exponent is that of Pettifer, the dealer in wild animals, played by John P. Kennedy, who has not a proper conception of the circus magnate, and fails to figure as conspicuously as he should. Though Schuster is a little late in getting to the front, he comes with a rush at the wind-up in a make-up suggestive of Mayor Schmitz, designed doubtless to give verisimilitude to his eagerness to wreck the town. Bessie Tannehill as the widow has not much to do, but looks charming. "The Toreador" combines all the elements of popularity. It has a more substantial plot than the average musical comedy, and its music is rhythmic and ear-catching. But the feature of the production that appeals to me, despite its tuneful and humorous charms, is the modishness of it, not only so far as dress is concerned but in the general air of the girls—principals and chorus, and in the variations of the picture, signifying a familiarity with the very latest wrinkles in stage management.

Theodore Bonnell.

Localized New York Musical Comedy

The Richmond resident, or the resident of Castro Heights, who wishes to see the whole of "The Whirl of the Town" will have to be satisfied if he gets home in time to snatch an hour or so of sleep before breakfast. Perhaps, however, they have cut out some of the business since Tuesday night, or eliminated some of the Nora Bayes encores. The Fischer audiences rightly appreciate the worth of a good thing, judging by the way they rise to it when Miss Bayes is the occasion. Nora Bayes is different from the soubrettes that preceded her at Fischer's inasmuch as she has style and presence, chic and natural wit. There is none of the dust of the road on her face or her frocks. It is a thousand times she is to leave the company. Her songs in "The Whirl" have the real New York Casino air about them. On Tuesday night Flossie Hope's entrance was somewhat spoiled because the applause for Miss Bayes was so long continued; the audience could not get enough of the latter. Little Flossie however had her innings later on in the same act, when she emerged from a huge champagne bottle and did a toe dance. "The Whirl" has been cleverly localized and the scenery wins applause because it is familiar. There is not much to the plot, but it serves to hold together the various specialties in which the burlesque stars show their talent. Bobby North has a burlesque dance, in ballet attire, which is very funny. North is one of the big hits of the new company. Dorothy Morton, who has a cold and consequently does not sing so well as usual, makes an exceedingly plump mermaid. She has two new songs, "Oh Willie don't you love me" and "The Little Brown Man" which will go better when her cold disappears. Imitation may be the sincerest form of flattery, but I do not think poor Dan Daly would be flattered if he saw Lionel Lawrence in his old role of Willie Badboy. It is a nice fat part, full of opportunities for anybody with a stroke of humor in his makeup, but Mr. Lawrence brings out none of its possibilities.

HILDA SPONG.

the well-known English actress whom Charles Frohman has brought direct from London to join the Miller company for the initial American presentation of "Joseph Entangled" at the Columbia theatre next Monday night. Miss Spong is an actress whose artistic ability in high comedy roles has been recognized for some seasons past. She was last here with Daniel Frohman's company, playing the stellar roles in "Wheels Within Wheels" and "Lady Huntworth's Experiment." Miss Spong is recognized as one of the most effective dressers on the stage, and her gowns brought especially from London and Paris will interest feminine theatre-goers.

But why he should not play the part in a manner based on his own conception of it instead of imitating a dead man is a mystery to me. Rice and Cady have not a great deal to do in the new piece, but they contribute a little to the gayety of it. The musical comedy is prettily staged, and when blue-penciled should go well, especially when there is less of Mr. Lawrence. Flossie Hope strengthens the company, for she is a graceful dancer and an enthusiastic and conscientious artist. But the loss of Miss Bayes will be felt. It is usually fatal for one member of a stock company to make a distinct hit.

Writes That She's Coming

Now that Fischer is soon to lose Miss Bayes perhaps he will be pleased to learn that Miss Duprez is coming to town. Who is she? Well, in the first place she is her own press-agent. I have received a letter from her, written in the Melbourne Opera House July eighth, beginning in this frank and familiar manner: "After four and a half years away from America, my dear old native land, I am about to return by the Ventura, that sails from here on September nineteenth." She says she is only paying a flying visit home, for her important engagements in London—the same old story; they all have those important engagements but might be induced to tarry awhile. "I have met with marked success," she continues, "as the press notices which I have enclosed will prove, and they never cost me a cent. The people here are very nice and they hail with delight everywhere the appearance of the jolly American girl. If you have a tiny space at liberty in your paper you might make a note of the above." Indeed I might. What a fine time Ashton Stevens would have interviewing Miss May Moore Duprez. The envelope was fat with the press notices that never cost a cent, and from them I gather that the jolly American girl was a great hit in Australia. The johnnies wrote verses to her and the critics described her as "the lady with the French name and the pronounced American accent." They said that she was "distinctly saucy," that she danced with "the clatter of a quartz mill driven by a forty-horse power engine" and that she "talked her audience into a state of uncontrollable laughter at her quaint Dutch rendering of up-to-date Yankee drollery." Miss Duprez also sent me her picture, and she looks young and pretty.

"The Lady of Lyons"

In Eugenie Thais Lawton White Whittlesey has at last found a leading lady who is in every way suited to play opposites to the

FOUR OF THE FIVE MADCAPS.

Acrobatic dancing girls, who created such a sensation here two years ago and who will reappear at the Orpheum next week. Concerning their work a London paper of recent date said: "The girls rushed upon the stage in their picturesque loose dresses, and to the strains of wild Slavonic music, threw themselves with frenzied abandon into their dancing, in which not only the limbs but every muscle of the body seemed, without flagging, to take part. Their free, vigorous and energetic, yet graceful, movements were a refreshing contrast to the studied poses of the average stage dancer."

Ready for Business

Notwithstanding last Sunday's fire in our establishment at 213-215 Market St., we are to-day ready for business. We have leased for a substantial period of years the building at 136-144 Second St., Cor. Minna, and have completely stocked it from our warehouse with all our excellent brands.

We wish to thank our many customers for their patronage and respectfully solicit the continuance of their good will.

Hilbert Mercantile Co.

136-144 Second St., Cor. Minna, San Francisco

PACIFIC COAST AGENTS FOR THE FOLLOWING LINES:

HUNTER BALTIMORE RYE

Wm. Lanahan & Son, Baltimore.

EL MONTE BOURBON

MARYLAND MONOGRAM

Wm. Lanahan & Son, Baltimore

W. H. McBRAYER'S "CEDARBROOK"

BOOTH'S OLD TOM AND DRY GIN

Booth & Co., London.

ST. LOUIS "A B C" BEER

American Brewing Co., St. Louis

BLACK AND WHITE SCOTCH

Jas. Buchanan & Co., Glasgow

H. B. BOURBON AND RYE

"That's Whiskey."

RUINART CHAMPAGNE

Ruinart Pere & Fils, Rheims, France

Established 1729

J. BAUMGARDNER RYE

UNION LEAGUE BOURBON

AETNA MINERAL WATER

Bottled at Aetna Springs, Napa Co., Cal.

BASS' ALE AND GUINNESS' STOUT

Boar's Head Brand

Bottled by T. B. Hall & Co., London

Remember Our New Address

136-144 Second Street, Corner Minna

PHONE, PRIVATE 313

star roles. Miss Lawton played Camille once at the Central and showed her ability on that occasion to do higher work than that called for in hysterical melodramas. Her Pauline is a very finished interpretation, and in the love scenes with Claude she is thoroughly sympathetic. Whittlesey never looked so handsome as in the makeup and costume of Claude, and he acts the role with intelligence. Connass as Beauseant is also a picture upon which the eye loves to dwell. Osbourne's Colonel Damas is a fine thing, and is really the most artistic characterization in the production. The old Bulwer-Lytton play, however, seems out-of-date in its long-winded dialogue and super-romantic situations. Nobody can take seriously the story of the noble lady and the gardener's boy. As a revival of a drama which age has converted into a classic it is noteworthy.

"Shenandoah" Still Holds Its Own

San Francisco has seen a good many "Shenandoah" casts. Henry Miller was in one, many years ago, when he looked the part of Kerehival West better than he could now. Bronson Howard made more money out of this war play than his more artistic "Aristocracy" ever brought him. There is something very soul-stirring about this tale of the Southern girl's love for the Northern soldier. Neill and Miss Chapman are respectively West and Gertrude Ellingham, and the parts could not find better exponents. Miss Gilman's Jennie Buckthorn is another good bit and Bowles is excellent as Heartsease.

Good Vaudeville Sketch

"A Girl from Kansas" is compressed cleverness, and very well fills the needs of three bright, breezy mummies like Olive May, Albaugh Jr. and Kavanaugh. It is seldom that a sketch takes so well at once at this one did, with an Orpheum audience. One reason perhaps is that there is just enough of it. McCabe, Sabine and Vera have a different kind of a sketch in "The Arrival of Kitty McCarthy," which if not so artistic as the other, is amusing enough. The Hughes trio do a good musical turn, and Abramoff, Russo and Miss Decker again please with their Faust trio.

Sergeant James

The Flavia of the last two weeks at the Alcazar is converted into the heroine of a military drama at the Central this week. Juliet Crosby's versatility is one of her strong points, and she is fully as satisfactory as the heroine in "Sergeant James" as she was in "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Rupert of Hentzau." She acts well with Mayall, who in the title hero has a part considerably superior to that in the melodramas preceding this one. "Sergeant James" has good parts for everybody, from pretty Verne Castro to clever Ernest Howell. The scenic effects are up to the Central standard, which means a good deal.

Features of Next Week's Bills

"The Toreador" will easily run some weeks. It is the best production the new Tivoli has put on.

"The Whirl of the Town" contains so many clever features that it is sure to draw interested crowds at Fischer's during its run. Seats are selling a long time in advance.

One of the funniest farces Charley Hoyt ever wrote, "A Bunch of Keys," will be the Central's bill. It will have a strong cast, including James Corrigan, who is just back from a tour of the East, Agnes Ranken and Henry Shumer. Verne Castro, Julia Blanc and Edna Ellsmere will sing popular songs, and the Allen sisters, who made an immense hit with Irish jigs and reels during the production of "Robert Emmett," will appear in new fancy dances.

At the Orpheum will be the five Madcaps. A special feature of their act will be a radium dance by Lena Madcap, who will wear a costume valued at ten thousand dollars. Harry Foy and Flo Clark will have a novel sketch, "Old Curiosity Shop." Charles Guyer and Nellie O'Neil, eccentric dancers who were the hit of the famous "Babes in Toyland" production, will be new.

At the Chutes will be Cooper and Rogers, "the merry Germans," in "Pickles and Kanickles," Leslie's trained pigs, Campbell and Johnson, comedy bicyclists, and others. The management has decided to present all children visiting the Chutes on Sunday mornings hereafter tickets for the Miniature Electric Railroad, Ferris Wheel and Galloping Horses, without extra charge.

"Joseph Entangled," which will be given for the first time in America at the Columbia, will have both Hilda Spong and

COLUMBIA THEATRE

Last Two Weeks of the Miller Season
Beginning Monday Evening, August 8th Charles Frohman presents

HENRY MILLER

and his company in the reigning London success, Henry Arthur Jones latest play

"JOSEPH ENTANGLED"

as produced at the Haymarket Theatre, London, and now to be given in San Francisco for the first time on the American Stage.

Augmented Company, Special Production.

ALCAZAR THEATRE

Phone "ALCAZAR"
Belasco and Mayer
Proprietors
E. D. Price, Gen. Mgr.

Monday, Aug. 8, one week
Evenings, 25c to 75c

Regular Matinees Thursday and Saturday
25c to 50c

WHITE WHITTLESEY

And the Alcazar Stock Company
In the First San Francisco Production of Paul M. Potter's Picturesque Comedy

"SHERIDAN; OR THE MAID OF BATH"

As Played by E. H. Sothorn

Monday Aug. 15—White Whittlesey in Hall Caine's Powerful Drama
"THE MANXMAN"

Orpheum

O'Farrell between
Stockton and Powell
Streets

Week Commencing
Sunday Matinee,
Aug. 7th

VAUDEVILLE'S SUPERLATIVE!

THE FIVE MADCAPS, including Miss Lena Madcap with the Latest Radium Effects. Foy and Clark. Guyer and O'Neil. McCabe, Sabine and Vera; Les Olopas. Hughes Musical Trio. Empire Comedy Four. Orpheum Motion Pictures. Last Week of OLIVE MAY and J. W. ALBAUGH JR.

Regular Matinees Every Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday
Prices: 10c, 25c and 50c.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Phone "Grand Opera House"
Grand Opera House Co.
Lessee
Regular Matinee Saturday

Week beginning tomorrow
(Sunday) Matinee

MR. JAMES NEILL And the Original
Neill Company

In Octave Feuillet's Drama

"A PARISIAN ROMANCE"

By Special Arrangement with Mr. Richard Mansfield
First Time at 15c, 25c, 50c. Sunday Matinee, Aug. 14—"The Lottery of Love"

Fischer's THEATRE

O'Farrell between Stockton and
Powell Streets

Phone "Fischer's"

Second Week and Tremendous Success

"THE WHIRL OF THE TOWN"

SUPERB SCENIC SINGING SENSATION

Gigantic Spectacular Burlesque. Three Very Funny Acts.

Cast of Unexcelled Artists
Dorothy Morton, Nora Bayes, Flossie Hope, Rice and Cady, Bobby North, Edwin Clark, Ben Dillon, Lionel Lawrence. Pretty Chorus of Forty 30 Novelties and New Specialties.

Reserved Seats—Nights 25c, 50c and 75c.
Saturday and Sunday Matinees 25c and 50c. Children at Matinees 25c and 10c

★TIVOLI★

Cor. Eddy and Mason Sts.

Evenings at 8 Sharp

ANOTHER TIVOLI VICTORY

Second Week of The London and New York Musical Comedy Sensation

"THE TOREADOR"

By Ivan Caryll and Lionel Moncton

With an Unrivalled Cast

Usual Tivoli Prices, 25, 50 and 75c.

Only Matinee Saturday

Seats Now Ready

CENTRAL

Belasco & Mayer, Props. Phone South 533
Market Street near Eighth
Opposite City Hall

Beginning Monday, August 8th

Matinees Saturday and Sunday

Charley Hoyt's Famous Farce Comedy

"A BUNCH OF KEYS"

Prices: Evening, 10c to 50c

Matinees, 10c, 15c, 25c

August 15—"FOR HER CHILDRENS' SAKE"

Put Your Money into the BEST PIANO
that you can buy

That means the

Mason & Hamlin Piano

Let us sell you our piano which will enable you to own a Mason & Hamlin instrument without a large outlay. Your first payment is all you require. See us about it NOW.

The Mason & Hamlin piano is equipped with the most perfect mechanism for the production of clear, sweet, powerful sound. This mechanism is peculiar to the Mason & Hamlin piano, and it is this which gives it the tone that is so often called a "spell of magic." It shows the performer an instrument on which he cannot be forced to play other than music.

The Wiley B. Allen Co.

931-933 MARKET STREET,
San Francisco.
Oakland, San Jose, Sacramento, Eureka,
Fresno and San Diego.

Jessie Busley in the cast. The play tells the story of Lady Verona Mayne, the wife of Mr. Mayne. She runs up to London town unexpectedly out of the season and goes to her own house. By a strange coincidence Sir Joseph, an old admirer, comes to town that very night and having lost his luggage asks Lady Verona's butler (who does not know that she is in town), to put him up for the night. The next morning the two meet at breakfast and they are discovered at this compromising meal by two friends of Mr. Mayne, who have come to the house to meet him on business, Mr. Mayne having also come unexpectedly to town. Sir Joseph tells the friends the story of his lost baggage, which is regarded as not even a fairly decent lie. Lady Verona's mouth is sealed, because she has come to town to prevent the elopement of a giddy sister. It is easily understood what fine scenes grow out of this one. It is the one about which the whole play centres.

Another interesting novelty is the Alcazar's production of "Sheridan, or the Maid of Bath." It has never been acted here, although E. H. Sothorn, for whom it was written, achieved a great and lasting success in it at the Lyceum, New York, and in all the principal Eastern cities. "Sheridan" is by Paul M. Potter, the dramatizer of "Trilby" and author of "The Conquerors." It is founded upon incidents in the life of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, who wrote "The Rivals" and "The School for Scandal." The scenes include the pump room at Bath, the manager's room at Covent Garden theatre, and Sheridan's London lodgings at Castle Tavern, where, as a spirited climax, the dashing young Irish playwright wins his wife by fighting a duel. Whittlesley will have the role of Sheridan and Miss Lawton that of the Maid of Bath. "The Manxman" comes next.

James Neill will begin the sixth week of his engagement tomorrow matinee, with an elaborate production of Octave Feuillet's "A Parisian Romance," the right to produce which he has obtained from Richard Mansfield. Mr. Neill will play the role of Baron De Chevrier, supported by the original Neill company. This will be the first production of this play at ten, twenty-five and fifty cents. Sunday matinee, August fourteenth, Augustin Daly's comedy, "The Lottery of Love," will be presented.

She Played The Slot

"I was at Narragansett Pier one day," said a New Yorker, in the Palace Grill the other day, "and was sitting in the Casino

IRVING INSTITUTE

Boarding and Day School for young ladies and little girls, 2126 California St. Founded in 1877. REV. EDWARD B. CHURCH, A. M., Principal.

reading the Herald. An item caught my eye—"Rose Coghlan Bankrupt"—and I read on and learned that the actress declared her debts amounted to twenty-seven thousand dollars and her personal property to two dollars and fifty cents. That made me feel bad, to think of Rose Coghlan's plight. Just then I heard a cry of glee from the vicinity of the slot machine. There, before the wheel of fortune, knelt the actress about whom I had just been reading. She was scooping in the nickels and as I came along she said: "Please lend me your handkerchief. I've just captured fifteen dollars' worth of nickels—hit the five dollar mark three times. If this keeps on I'll be able to get out of bankruptcy and pay all my debts."

—The Playgoer.

SMITH'S NEW TRUNK STORE

We've Moved to

116 ELLIS STREET

Larger Store and Larger Stock of Goods to select from—and all from the best factories in the country

BUREAU TRUNKS

STEAMER TRUNKS

THEATRICAL TRUNKS

LADIES' HAT TRUNKS

WARDROBE TRUNKS

SKIRT TRUNKS

PACKING TRUNKS

SHIRT WAIST TRUNKS

DRESS SUIT CASES

CLUB BAGS

CABIN BAGS

TELESCOPES

PHYSICIANS' CASES

SILK HAT BOXES

SATCHELS AND VALISES

OF EVERY DESCRIPTION

And an Endless Variety of Ladies' and Gents' Trunks with Special Tray Compartments, Etc.

Valerie's Hour

BY KEITH GORDON.

It was springtime. You knew it in several ways; by the faint, mild freshness in the air, by the increasing number of hurdy-gurdies in the streets, but most of all by a certain restless stirring of the blood that made you long for something beyond the power of words to express—perhaps beyond the power of life to give.

Driscoll knew the feeling and shrank from it. Still, it clung to him as he walked through a certain street while the day was sobering into twilight, and filled him with a wistful unrest totally at variance with his outward appearance, which was that of a handsome, well-preserved epitome of sixty years of high living and varied experience.

Something—the fresh breeze that brushed across his cheek or the whiffs of soft spring air—stirred memories; vague, formless impressions that were yet strangely instinct with pain—a sense of loss, of desolation, grotesquely out of place in a husband and father who passed the massive silver collection plate each Sunday at St. Sixtus' church, a pattern of elegant respectability.

At Maraschino's, where the public was taken into confidence by a sign announcing a table d'hôte dinner for a dollar and a half and where the tulips in the window boxes looked almost cruelly gay, he slowly ascended the steps.

Monsieur, it was evident, was an old habitué. That was apparent from the marked deference of the waiter who greeted him in the hall and conducted him to his favorite table in the window. Monsieur, indeed, was accustomed to deference everywhere—which was perhaps the reason why he felt so aggrieved that the spring time never showed him any, wringing his heart with its memories and desires, as ruthlessly as if it had been merely the heart of some mere painter-fellow or writer of books.

Everything about him seemed to be telling a mute story tonight. The hideous paper on the walls, the racks behind which the palm-leaf fans awaited the summer season, the worn red carpet whose bloom the feet of pleasure had long since worn off; even the chandeliers, about which the protective mosquito netting billowed—all held a message of other days and other places, a sad tale of departed gayety.

Everything was as usual. On one side of the table the water carafe, flanked by goblets, faced the salt, pepper and toothpick boxes that huddled on the other, just as they had done from time immemorial at Maraschino's. And yet, the very tables were a different aspect. The joy of life seemed dead.

It was very early and Driscoll was the first arrival. He glanced at the menu that was placed before him and then tossed it aside with bored impatience.

"Bring me something—anything, Gaston, you will know what," he said carelessly to the attending waiter, who, with a murmured "Mais oui, Monsieur!" that seemed to partake of the general pliancy of things, disappeared down the vista of the rooms and left him to his thoughts.

Through the open window beside him he gazed moodily out into the failing light. At the foot of the steps a petite young woman and her escort hesitated, uncertain, to judge from their actions, whether to enter or go farther.

She was not a pretty girl and not well gotten up. There was about her a telltale air of tarnished finery that might have reflected the soul within; and yet, there was something about her profile, something in the roundness of her cheek and a slight tilt of her small nose, that focussed the floating mist of Driscoll's sadness into one sharp, poignant memory—Valerie!

"Pardon, Monsieur," murmured Gaston's apologetic voice as he waited, in respectful patience, an opportunity to place the soup course before him, and with the look of a man in a trance Driscoll leaned back and removed his arms from the table.

At the memory of that name his thoughts, like homing pigeons, made straight across the sea.

Paris, A. D. 1865 and Vance Driscoll, young, rich, dashing and beloved of women—a veritable lord of life. Oh, the glory of those brief years when the days and nights were all too short for the mad rounds of pleasure. The mere thought of that time, separated from the present by a monotonous expanse of years, made his eyes darken and his heart throb, as he harked back to it, the tumult of the spring astir in his veins.

It was then that he had met Valerie—Valerie who was so ravishingly different, yet so strangely like the others—Valerie in whose eyes the chill hauteur of a queen forever vied with the challenge of a wanton.

He drew in his breath sharply. How she had made the hours spin—how she had made life reel with joy! Where was ever equaled the proud splendor of her eyes, the defiant tenderness of her lips?

As he asked himself these questions, his glance fell, in some bewilderment, upon the small tureen and deep plate that had been placed before him. Then, with quick disgust, he motioned the solicitous Gaston to remove them. For the moment, he had a soul above any conceivable potage.

As the waiter effaced himself preparatory to another effort, Driscoll resumed his meditations. Valerie lived again. He could

The Dinner Setting is Incomplete
without

White Rock

LITHIA Water

A Selected Water is as Essential
as a Selected Wine

P. J. WENIGER & CO.
DISTRIBUTORS

101-103 Powell St.
SAN FRANCISCO

ELECTRICAL WIRING AND SUPPLIES

Lamps, Telephone Batteries, Bells, Etc.
Repairs Given Prompt Attention

National Electric Company

455 SUTTER ST., San Francisco

Telephone Bush 396

REMOVED

Patrick & Co.

Rubber Stamps and Metal Signs
to

111 and 113 Sansome Street

FAT FOLKS!

YOUR WEIGHT REDUCED

By New Process I guarantee to REDUCE YOUR WEIGHT as much as you desire. No Change in Diet, no inconvenience, no bad after-effects.

MRS. E. L. RYAN, Dermatologist
Apt. 589, THE IROQUOIS, 524 Ellis Street

Wrinkles and all facial blemishes. Superfluous hair removed. Manicuring, hair-dressing, scalp treatment. Phone Private Exchange 719

Guadalupe Milk is Pure

We know it is pure and no matter how severe the test imposed by the Board of Health, we are able to stand it—and more. When you use Guadalupe Milk you can be sure of getting pure, rich milk and full measure. Just try it once.

GUADALOUPE DAIRY CO.

1814 San Bruno Road, San Francisco

TELEPHONE WHITE 31

feel her soft cheek against his own, see her wafting him kisses from the tips of her rose-tinted fingers.

Again she sat opposite him at the table, her childish hands loaded with jewels, her small foot touching his beneath the table to emphasize a mandate or endorse the caress of a look.

Before he realized what he was doing, he lifted his glass and a triumphant thrill ran along his nerves. For the fraction of a second, he loved and lived again. Then the reality came back.

Why, he asked himself bitterly, was forbidden fruit always the sweetest? Why had the kisses of the woman who bore his name and whose beauty was as far above Valerie's as was her social station, failed to thrill him as those of his lawless youth had done?

"Bon soir, Monsieur. Vous etes en avance ce soir," interrupted a woman's voice, and Driscoll smiled assent to Madame Maraschino, who was passing his table on her way to the desk.

Some way, her greeting served to deepen the illusion—so often in the old days Valerie and he had been en avance—yes, and en retard, too, at the dear old haunts where youth scattered the golden hours in wild extravagance.

He had played most of the games of life—sounded most of the notes in the scale of human experience, and now, with a surge of fiery regret, he knew for a certainty that he would give it all—all, for one hour with Valerie!

Oh, that he had more courage—or less; that he had the courage to shun the flame, or press it to his breast to sear and scorch! For Valerie had been his mate. He acknowledged it now, as he had known it then. The soul of her called to him as none other had ever done, but he had scorned to confess it even to himself.

He had given her up, laid her, like some beautiful living sacrifice, on the altar of Respectability, and thereby saved his own reputation. Now, the thing he had purchased at so great a price seemed only as dust and ashes to him.

And how she had met him! Not one regret had passed her lips when he broke to her the news of his approaching marriage. Not a sentiment, save a half contemptuous mockery, could be discerned in her incomparable eyes.

He remembered how, in his maudlin despair, he had tried to wring from her some admission of regret, some confession of love and misery to match his own, something to appease his own regret.

"You will miss me, my darling, you will care? Oh, Valerie, Valerie, if only it could be different! But love me, dear, love me in spite of it. Promise me that you will remember."

In some such way he had raved at their final parting. For a moment Valerie's eyes had blazed into his with something blinding and tigerish in their depths. Her nostrils quivered, and no aroused goddess ever faced a situation more superbly.

Then a quick change came over her and that quaint, delicious laugh that was a toast among the gilded youth of Paris broke the stillness of the room—the laugh that suggested one knew not what of the tinkling of rich glass and the jangling of silver bells.

"Toujours, mon ami, toujours," she assured him, throwing her head back until her eyes became mere slits. But the mockery of her face stung him to the quick and he dashed out of the room, cursing her, himself, and fate.

A month later "the most brilliant event of the season" took place in New York, being one of those barbaric nuptial celebrations that highly civilized people delight in, and Vance Driscoll went through the role of bridegroom with perfect propriety.

In light-hearted Paris, at the same hour of the same day, Valerie Duval shot herself through the heart, though of course there was no connection between the two events.

She indulged in no last words, no sentimental farewells, no useless reproaches. It had been a part of Valerie's indomitable pride never to cry out, and that pistol shot was the one outburst that she ever allowed herself. She played her part with spirit, so long as she played it. When she could no longer do that—the pressure of a small finger on the trigger, and poof! that exquisite laugh fell upon the ears of men no more.

"Monsieur is not well?" suggested Gaston with the solicitude born of many good tips, as Driscoll, with a somewhat drawn face, pushed the almost untasted dishes away and waited for his account. The rooms were filling up now and the murmur of voices was in the air, but he found the place stifling. He wanted to get out into the night, to get away from himself.

He passed chattering couples at the tables as he made his way out. They seemed to feel that life was worth living. But he was far, far wiser. Outside, it was dark and a soft spring rain was falling—like tears upon a grave, he thought, as he turned his steps homeward, heavy, sodden, hopeless.

And thus at last Valerie, whose laughter was like the sound of silvery bells, received her tribute of remorse, her hour of triumph.

The SCENIC ROUTE TO YOSEMITE

People who go to Yosemite Valley want to see ALL THE BIG THINGS.

At the same time they want the most comfort and the quickest trip.

The Southern Pacific route is many miles shortest and has the most comfortable stages. The road is oiled and dustless, and passes through no monotonous country.

The Mariposa Big Tree groves are reached by this route only. These are the greatest of the great giants. No other trees compare with them. They are as much a point of interest as is the great Valley itself.

Many who go to Yosemite by other routes come up to Inspiration and Artists' Points for the magnificent view. Travelers by the Southern Pacific have this as a part of their trip, for it is here that this route enters the Valley.

The stage passes at the foot of El Capitan, goes by beautiful Bridal Veil, and carries you in full view of grand Yosemite Falls.

DEPARTURE VIA GLACIER POINT is done by no other route. Here is some of the most impressive scenery of the trip.

Every courtesy is paid travelers, and every comfort given.

REMEMBER THESE POINTS — THEY MEAN THE SUCCESS OF YOUR TRIP. ASK ABOUT THEM AT

613 MARKET ST.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

The Hibernia Savings and Loan Society

INCORPORATED APRIL 12, 1859

RE-INCORPORATED AUG. 30, 1864

Office, COR. MARKET, McALLISTER AND JONES STS.
SAN FRANCISCO

The objects for which this Association is formed are, that by its operations the depositors thereof may be able to find a

SECURE AND PROFITABLE INVESTMENT FOR SMALL SAVINGS

and borrowers may have an opportunity of obtaining from it the use of a moderate capital, on giving a good and sufficient security for the use of the same

OFFICERS

President, JAMES R. KELLY Secretary and Treasurer, ROBERT J. TOBIN Attorneys, TOBIN & TOBIN

Any person can become a depositor of this Society on Subscribing to the By-Laws

Deposits can be made from $1 up to $3000.

Loans made on Security of Real Estate within the City and County

STATEMENT

OF THE CONDITION AND VALUE OF THE ASSETS AND LIABILITIES OF

THE HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY (A Corporation)

And where said Assets are situated

DATED JUNE 30, 1904

ASSETS

1—PROMISSORY NOTES AND THE DEBTS THEREBY SECURED, THE ACTUAL VALUE OF WHICH IS.....	$32,649,459.88
The condition of said Promissory Notes and debts is as follows: They are all existing Contracts, owned by said Corporation, and are payable to it at its Office, which is situated at the corner of Market, McAllister and Jones Streets, in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the payment thereof is secured by First Mortgages on Real Estate within this State ($32,137,459.88), and the States of Oregon ($237,000.00) and Washington ($275,000.00). Said Promissory Notes are kept and held by said Corporation at its said Office, which is its principal place of business, and said Notes and debts are there situated.
2—PROMISSORY NOTES AND THE DEBTS THEREBY SECURED, THE ACTUAL VALUE OF WHICH IS.....	757,075.00
3—BONDS OF THE UNITED STATES, THE ACTUAL VALUE OF WHICH IS.....	16,796,830.32
4—MISCELLANEOUS BONDS, THE ACTUAL VALUE OF WHICH IS.....	8,496,806.79
5—INTEREST ON MISCELLANEOUS BONDS ACCRUED TO JULY 1, 1904.....	292,507.04
6—(a) REAL ESTATE .....	656,722.15
(b) THE LAND AND BUILDING in which said Corporation keeps its said Office, the actual value of which is .....	471,596.47
7—CASH IN UNITED STATES GOLD AND SILVER COIN .....	1,684,595.88
Total Assets .....	$61,805,593.53

LIABILITIES

1—SAID CORPORATION OWES DEPOSITS.....	58,468,656.19
2—RESERVE FUND, Actual Value.....	3,336,937.34
Total Liabilities .....	$61,805,593.53

THE HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY,
By JAMES R. KELLY, President.

THE HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY,
By ROBERT J. TOBIN, Secretary.

State of California, City and County of San Francisco, ss.

JAMES R. KELLY and ROBERT J. TOBIN, being each separately duly sworn, each for himself, says: That said JAMES R. KELLY is President, and that said ROBERT J. TOBIN is Secretary of THE HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY, the Corporation above mentioned, and that the foregoing statement is true.

JAMES R. KELLY, President.
ROBERT J. TOBIN, Secretary.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 1st day of July, 1904.

GEO. T. KNOX, Notary Public

In and for the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

Automobile Topics

S. C. Hammond recently took a twenty days' trip in his '04 Winton touring car, traveling fourteen hundred and eighty miles through two mountain ranges and twenty-two counties without a stop, not even to change a spark plug. The only delay was from one bursted tire and one broken front spring. Mr. Hammond, who is an amateur with less than eight months' experience, was accompanied by his wife and daughter and Miss Jennie Paulson. For the information of automobilists, he compiled the following notes of the trip: "Taking three p. m. Creek route boat to Oakland, rode to San Jose on roads too well known to need any description, to Hotel Vendome, in just two hours. Sunday left hotel at ten a. m. for Gilroy, thirty miles road, splendid, straight and smooth. From Gilroy to Watsonville, twenty-seven miles. As far as San Juan, roads are rolling but very good, then for a few miles not good but have no steep hills. Last six miles to Watsonville are very good and from there to Santa Cruz are through the mountains. After dining at Aptos arrived in Santa Cruz at three p. m. After four days in Santa Cruz, taking in all the side trips and turning out in the Fourth of July parade, resumed our trip by returning same route to Gilroy and through the Pacheco Pass to Los Banos, Merced county, fifty-five miles, where we took on Miss Mary Wallis. Roads through the Pass on the whole are good, some dust in places and grade is from five to fifteen per cent for five or six miles, but is wide and safe. Made the steepest part as well as worst road for ten miles in less than forty minutes, over four miles of which had to take low speed. From Mountain House down grade and grand roads to Los Banos. Following day from Los Banos through Newman, Crews Landing and Grayson to Stockton, ninety-three miles; roads all level, and except a couple of dusty spots, are all fine. Stockton to Sacramento, forty miles, through Cherokee Lane, roads nearly all very good. From Sacramento through Roseville, Lincoln, Wheatland to Marysville, forty miles; roads except for first ten miles out of Sacramento, which are dusty and somewhat rough, are all very good. From Marysville to Oroville, thirty-six miles on all good roads. Oroville to Chico, twenty-four miles over rolling hills, no grades to amount to anything and roads good on the whole with some few dusty stretches. Chico is forty miles from Red Bluff through Vina and Tehama, the well known Stanford Vineyard, the largest in the world, and roads between these two points are level and very good. Returning on west side of Sacramento river, from Red Bluff to Willows, a distance of sixty miles. The first twenty miles to Corning are somewhat rolling and several dry creeks to be crossed with heavy gravel bottoms, but no difficulty was experienced. From Corning to Willows through Orland and Germantown, the roads are level and equal to any in the State, and we traveled one stretch of nine miles in nineteen minutes flat (not so bad for a car that had been on the road for fourteen days with five people and their luggage). From Willows to Maxwell and then to Colusa is a grand ride of about thirty-eight miles. Colusa to Woodland, forty-five miles by way of Sycamore, Grimes, College City and Yolo City, over roads mostly very good, though in the vicinity of warehouses, some dusty spots encountered. From Woodland through Davisville, Dixon, Elmira to Suisun and Fairfield is all level and fine roads, and a distance of forty-four miles. Fairfield to Napa, twenty-two miles, by way of Cordelia, roads fair but with short pitches for part of the way through the hills and rather lumpy as Napa is approached. Napa to Calistoga, through Yountville and St. Helena, is twenty-seven miles through a beautiful country and roads fairly good. From Calistoga to Santa Rosa, eighteen miles of mountain road; a stiff grade is encountered, rather narrow and in places from twelve to eighteen per cent. Santa Rosa to Sonoma, twenty-two miles, road rolling but good and from Sonoma to Petaluma hills, but very fine road. From Petaluma through Novato to San Rafael, roads are fine, and from San Rafael to Sausalito are in good condition."

J. S. Craig, the well known banker of Woodland, in company with his wife, ran his new 1904 Winton touring car to San Francisco, where he spent last Sunday. Mrs. Craig is one of the most expert chauffeurs in the State. She has, during the last thirty days, averaged over fifty miles a day with the machine touring through Yolo county. Mr. and Mrs. Craig recently returned from a trip to Mt. Shasta, which they made in their Winton.

R. A. Crothers received his new Winton on Saturday, and on Sunday made a trip from San Francisco to Niles and return. Mrs. J. H. Durst and Mrs. E. P. Brinegar made a run to San Mateo and back last Sunday in a 1904 Winton.

It is worth your while to know about Swedish massage and movements. Inquire of Lindstrom & Einarson, 406 Sutter Street.

With the advent of the new Army Corps at Paso Robles, automobiling at that point will take on renewed vigor. It has been arranged to run machines hourly between Paso Robles and Atascadero, the trip taking perhaps thirty minutes, but many arriving guests at the hotel who desire to witness the manoeuvres are bringing their own automobiles. The roads about Paso Robles are far famed for their excellence, but at this time of the year they are rather dusty. To obviate unpleasant traveling it has been decided to oil the roads between Paso Robles and Atascadero, thus giving automobile enthusiasts a chance to travel ten miles over a perfectly clean track. It is the intention of the railroad to run special trains between the two points, but those interested in automobiling will make little use of this privilege with such roads as those about Paso Robles and vicinity.

The White steam touring car has established another record in California, covering a distance of one hundred and fifty miles in nine hours. Frank de War of Los Angeles, accompanied by his brother Arthur and Mr. and Mrs. William J. Wagner of Coronado Beach, made the phenomenal run from San Diego to Los Angeles in nine hours. This record beats the former one by three and one-half hours.

Leon L. Roos, a very enthusiastic motorist, left Monday morning in his White for a record run to Santa Barbara, a distance of about three hundred and fifty miles. L. P. Lowe, who made the run down on this side of the bay in a White, reached Santa Barbara in about thirty-three hours, elapsed time, and Roos expects to make a still faster run. He will not go by way of the fourteen mile house, San Mateo, Palo Alto and Mountain View, but will journey to San Jose and then will follow the route over which the endurance run will be held in September. Mr. Roos is accompanied by two friends and a chauffeur and there is nothing wanting in

Because

Hunter Whiskey

it leads in universal popularity.
It has

Absolute Purity,
Faultless Quality,
Exquisite Flavor.

HILBERT MERCANTILE CO.,
213-215 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.
Telephone Exchange 313.

intends to remain in the south several weeks, seeing the sights in his White.

S. C. Lowe and party returned last week after an extended tour to Santa Cruz, Watsonville and that vicinity, about three hundred and ten miles being covered in all. The White touring car that recently made the phenomenal run to Los Angeles unpennalized, covered the three hundred odd miles without a hitch, and "We had not the slightest trouble with the machine," said Mr. Lowe, "not even with the tires." Being unfamiliar with the roads, Mr. Lowe drove the steamer to Watsonville by way of San Juan, and said that it is cruelty to animals to run over that road. The car, however, successfully traversed it and brought the party home in good shape.

Miss Fannie Colby and party enjoyed a run towards Byron Springs yesterday in her White. Miss Colby is fast becoming an expert at handling an auto.

In a recent issue of a Bakersfield newspaper the following appears: "Among the most enthusiastic motorists is W. S. Tevis, who has the finest and most expensive machine in use here. It is a White and is different from other machines in use here in that it is a steam auto."

Edson Bradbury and Mrs. E. A. May of San Francisco arrived at Del Monte in their Cadillac, last Monday. They report a delightful trip. After spending some time at the hotel they went to Los Laurellos ranch, twenty-six miles from Del Monte. The roads there are very difficult and young Bradbury has the honor of being the second automobilist to make the trip, which was made first by Mr. H. H. Owens in his Cadillac. Although only twelve years old, young Bradbury has probably covered more miles in his Cadillac than any other automobile owner on the coast. Dr. E. L. Wemple Jr. received a Cadillac Model B touring car last week.

Dr. Wilcox, writing the Holle Automobile and Manufacturing Company, of San Francisco, from whom he purchased a Ford four months ago, states: "I have just sold my horse and buggy, keeping it at quite an expense since I bought my car, expecting to be compelled to call for it at most at any time, like some of my neighbors with higher priced machines, but unlike them, I did not have to use it once. I have driven my car about four thousand miles without a mishap, and it is in perfect condition. The car is certainly a dream." The Holle Company reports the sale of eight and the arrival of another carload of Ford machines last week.

The Pacific States Automobile Company received this week a carload of Haynes, Apperson Co. machines, at its garage, 217 Ellis street. These machines are of the latest model and consist of tonneaus and light touring cars.

Motocycle Items

The reliability run of the Pacific Coast Motocyclists on the thirty-first was a success, thirteen of the fourteen starters getting over the ninety-seven miles with a fair average of points and six of the thirteen made perfect rides and scored one hundred points. They were L. C. Black, F. M. Butler, E. L. Malsbary, J. W. Leavitt, E. L. Dreschman and C. C. Hopkins. A. Navlet and H. Fuchs of Sacramento participated in the run and made good scores, considering the condition of their machines, which had scarcely any attention after their ride of one hundred and forty miles from the capital on Saturday. A great amount of interest was manifested in the event all along the route and the contest was interesting and amusing to the riders. There is a likelihood that the run may next year be lengthened to one hundred and fifty or two hundred miles. There will be no regular run of the Pacific Motocyclists tomorrow, but nearly all of them will ride in the country.

H. G. Corbaley of Palo Alto has applied for admission to the Pacific Motocyclists and will be elected to membership at the next meeting. He joined the riders in the reliability run when they passed Palo Alto and accompanied them as far as San Jose. The Sunday previous he rode his new Indian to Santa Cruz and back.

—The Chauffeur.

The Hotel Richelieu is to continue under the present management, the lease having been renewed for ten years. There was no foundation to the report of an impending change of management. The hotel has been entirely renovated. The Hotel Granada is under the same excellent management.

Important to know of: Swedish massage and movements. Inquire of Lundstrom & Einarson, 406 Sutter Street.

THE OLDSMOBILE TOURING CAR

Handsome Lines      Greatest Power
Most Thoroughly Built      Easiest Running
Easiest Controlled
Most Satisfactory Car for the Money
Always Goes

PRICE COMPLETE WITH LAMPS, HORN AND TOOLS

$1050.00

PIONEER AUTOMOBILE CO.

901-25 Golden Gate Ave.      -      San Francisco
Oakland, 355 Tenth Street

AUTOMOBILE REPAIRS

81 CITY HALL AVE.      Telephone South 1039

De Dion Plugs
De Dion Porcelains
Electric Cable

ANDREWS, KEENAN & BLASAUF

"POPE"
TOLEDO

POPE TOLEDO TOURING CAR CO.

Phone South 1142

G. A. BOYER, Manager

134-148 GOLDEN GATE AVE.

REPAIRS MADE AND SUPPLIES FURNISHED
AT THE

Hotel Vendome Automobile Garage San Jose

Stable accommodations free to guests. Record time on road from San Francisco to San Jose, two hours.

PIERCE
STANHOPE

Price, $1350 without Top; $1450 with Top

Pierce Arrow Touring Car (French) $2650
Northern Runabout, $800

MOBILE CARRIAGE CO.

GOLDEN GATE AVE. AND GOUGH ST.

Phone Private Exchange 770

San Francisco

AUTOMOBILES FOR HIRE

Downtown Offices:

Palace Hotel Occidental Hotel St. Francis Hotel

INDIAN and RAMBLER MOTOCYCLES

Won first five places in endurance contest in East, July 2 to 7, and were the ONLY machines making perfect scores in ALL events. In ONE-PINT economy test—Indian first; distance 31 miles, 1400 yds.; time, 1:16:39.

C. C. HOPKINS
Larkin & McAllister

"SOLUTION OF TIRE TROUBLES" FISK DETACHABLE

ONLY A WRENCH NEEDED
CAN'T COME OFF THE RIM
CAN'T PINCH THE TUBE

MORE MILEAGE
MORE COMFORT
MORE SATISFACTION

CALL OR WRITE PACIFIC COAST BRANCH
PHIL. B. BEKEART CO. 114 SECOND ST.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

ON the HILLS NOT THE RACE TRACK

is the test of power. The Annual Hill Climbing Contest of the Minneapolis Automobile Club was held on Saturday, June 11th, on Kenwood Hill, when the

Rambler

again demonstrated its superiority over cars costing three times its price, and, for the second time, won

FIRST PRIZE

finishing the course, 2680 feet, on a 10 per cent grade, in 1 minute, 7 3-5 seconds.

ENTRIES AND TIMES

Class No. A, Machines Valued at $2,750 and over—

Owner	Make	Time
J. H. Queal,	Pope-Toledo	:59
A. F. Timme,	Pope-Toledo	1:05
Die. Ferris,	Pope-Toledo	1:05 4-5
F. T. Heffelfinger,	Peerless	1:08 1-5
Ralph Bagley,	Packard	1:11
Bert Strong,	Stearns	1:22

Class No. B, Machines Valued bet. $2,750 and $1,750—

A. C. Bennett,	Winton	1:11
G. W. Cappelin,	Winton	1:25
George Shear,	Knox	1:41

Class No. C, Machines Valued bet. $1,750 and $1,000—

M. E. Clark,	Rambler	1:07 3-5
C. C. Pillsbury,	Franklin	1:10 1-5
Dr. A. P. Walrath,	Rambler	1:14

Send for our latest illustrated Catalogue "C"; it explains RAMBLER construction; the records prove its value.

RAMBLER AUTOMOBILE AGENCY
Tenth and Market Sts., San Francisco

The CADILLAC

MODEL B. Price $950
With Tonneau $1050
"Canopy Top Extra"

August 8th from Del Monte to 12th and Broadway, Oakland, 6 hrs, 5 min.

October 18th the same run was made in 5 hrs, 38 min., without stopping the car or refilling with gasoline or water, breaking all records.

The only successful tour of the Yosemite Valley was made by a party of four in a CADILLAC.

CUYLER LEE, Agent

201-203 LARKIN ST., S. F.

This is the White Steam Touring Car complete with canopy top, curtains and glass front, baskets, acetylene lamp equipment, and extra tonneau seat.

WHITE STEAM TOURING CAR COMPLETE

AUTOMOBILE GARAGE
SAN MATEO

PAULL. NOISAT PHONE BLACK 111
GARAGE AND REPAIR SHOP
B ST. NEAR THIRD AVE.

Music

[Communications addressed to this department should be received not later than Tuesday noon.]

The Pasmores

Mary Brock Pasmore, violinist, Suzanne Nicholine Pasmore, pianist, and Dorothy Bickford Pasmore, cellist, have just returned from a most successful engagement at the Southern Oregon Chautauqua Assembly, where they were the principal musical attraction during the ten days' session. At the last concert they played two movements of Mendelssohn's D minor trio as the principal number, a daring thing to do before an audience of miscellaneous taste. Their rendition was so masterful in technique, clear in portrayal of the master's purpose and above all, sympathetic, that the audience listened in perfect silence, but expressed its approval at the close of the numbers with storms of applause and bravos. After this, the girls had to play four encores before the people were satisfied. An eminent Philadelphia lecturer on psychology remarked that their playing was "almost telepathic" and predicted great success if they should play in the large Eastern cities. Another eminent divine said, "They do not merely play instruments. The music flows from them."

Then Public Tuning

It has often puzzled the uninitiated to give a reason why musicians tune their instruments in public, and not before they enter the orchestra. If they tuned their instruments before entering the theatre or concert room, the temperature is very apt to be different in the place of performance, and, therefore, the instruments would not be in tune. A piano which is in tune in a cold room would get out of tune if the room were suddenly heated.

Schumann-Heink's comic opera, which will receive its premier production in New York in October, is called "Love's Lottery," and the plot hinges about a lost lottery ticket upon which a love letter was written.

Hother Wisner, who has been summering in the Santa Cruz mountains, has returned home, and resumed his violin classes, at his studio, 844 Grove street near Fillmore.

At Fannie Francisco's concerts here she will have quite a number of novelties on the program, having arranged to render arias from the latest European successes.

Harry Girard, who was a few years ago quite prominent in musical circles here, is now located in Seattle.

—The Music Critic.

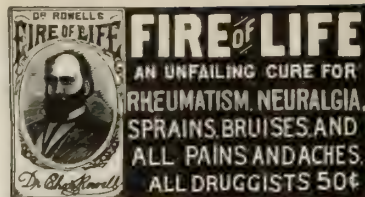

"To what do you attribute your uniform prosperity?"

"To the fact that I was never rich enough to keep up two establishments."

It is absurd to say a cereal coffee is better for the system than is the product of the general bean. A good coffee is both delicious and palatable. The best coffee on the market now is Arner Bros.' Very Best, the product of their own plantations.

OWNING A HOME.

To own a home, whether in town or country, has become the object sought for by eighteen out of every twenty men or women nowadays. And it is easy enough to achieve this object by going the right way about it. William Corbin, the genial secretary and general manager of the Continental Building and Loan Association, says that his institution has built or assisted to build three thousand one hundred homes, and the number is daily on the increase. The Continental is the leading building and loan institution west of the Rockies, and its importance is due to the fact that it really does what it claims to do. It helps the people to build and own their own homes in a comparatively short space of time. Its cash capital is over three million dollars and its subscribed capital sixteen million dollars. Its officers are all men of probity, worth and position in the community.

FIRE OF LIFE
AN UNFAILING CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA,
SPRAINS, BRUISES, AND
ALL PAINS AND ACHES.
ALL DRUGGISTS 50¢

Fire of Life, known for years as the most remarkable remedy for the cure of

RHEUMATISM

A trial of this remedy will at once show its great merit as a rheumatic cure.

ROWELL & BROWN
32 Turk St., S. F.

$72.50 CHICAGO AND RETURN

One Way Via St. Louis with Stop Over Privileges

SALE DAYS—August 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, September 1st, 2nd, 3th, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, October 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th

TWO FAST TRAINS DAILY

Via the SOUTHERN PACIFIC, UNION PACIFIC and CHICAGO & NORTHWESTERN Rys.

Overland Limited, Vestibuled. Leaves San Francisco at 10:00 a. m. The most Luxurious Train in the World. Electric Lighted Throughout. Buffet smoking cars with barber and bath. Booklover's Library. Dining Cars, Standard and Compartment Sleeping Cars and Observation Cars. Less than three days to Chicago without change.

Eastern Express, Vestibuled. Leaves San Francisco at 6 p. m. Through Standard and Tourist Sleeping Cars to Chicago. Dining Cars. First Reclining Chair Cars.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED EXCURSIONS

Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays at 7:00 a. m.

Send 10 Cents in Stamps for Russia-Japan War Atlas

R. R. RITCHIE, G. A. P. C.

617 Market St. (Palace Hotel)

Chicago and Northwestern Ry.
San Francisco

Or S. P. Company's Agent

BEKINS VAN & STORAGE CO.

11 MONTGOMERY ST.

PHONE MAIN 1840

Oakland Office, 1016 BROADWAY

PHONE MAIN 285

PACKING, MOVING, STORING HOUSEHOLD GOODS

is Our Exclusive Business. The Only
Safe, Quick and Economical Way.

—TRY US—

Shipping at GREATLY REDUCED RATES in our PRIVATE CARS to and from the East and South

LOS ANGELES OFFICE - - - 244 SOUTH BROADWAY
CHICAGO OFFICE, - - - 95 WASHINGTON ST.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST—Phelan Bldg., Rooms 6, 8, 10, 48. 806 Market St. Phone John 3841

LOUIS CREPAUX

(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

SCHOOL OF TONE PLACING (PALATAL SYSTEM)

Vocal Phonetics—Besides the
"Palatal Tone Placing System"

taught in the Louis Crepau School, another and most important feature is the teaching of the English phonetic sounds. The study of the five vowels is not all that is necessary to sing in a language, and particularly so in English. Very few English-speaking people are able to sing the phonetics of their language exempt from throatiness. Fundamentally, English phonetics cannot be emitted in singing as uttered in speech. From a vocal standpoint and through ten years of experience in teaching English-speaking singers, Mr. Crepau has made a vocal classification of all the English phonetic sounds. This classification enables English-speaking singers to master all the English phonetic sounds and renders them harmonious and easy to sing.

Apply at the School Mondays and Thursdays, from 2:00 to 2:30 p. m. Y. M. C. A. Building, Ellis and Mason Sts.

LOUIS H. EATON

ORGANIST AND DIRECTOR OF THE CHOIR
TRINITY CHURCH

Teacher of Singing, Piano and Organ

Special advantages offered singers in choir training
Studio and Residence 1676 Broadway

Between Van Ness Ave. and Franklin Street

H. B. PASMORE

TEACHER OF SINGING

Specialty—Shakespeare's system of tone production.

1424 Washington Street

573 Fifteenth street, OAKLAND, on Thursdays after August 1st.

HOTHER WISMER (Violinist)

ENSEMBLE INSTRUCTION

Will resume teaching about August 8th, at his residence and studio,
844 Grove Street near Fillmore.

M. GERTRUDE JUDD

Teacher of Whistling

785 Geary St., S. F.

Phone Hyde 933

JOSEPH ROECKEL and MME. COURSEN-ROECKEL

Assisted by Mlle. Elena Roeckel, Concert contralto

NEW VOCAL CLASSES Placing of Voice and Solo Practice
1060 FULTON ST. Opposite Alamo Square

Conrad W. Fuhrer

TEACHER of Violin and Ensemble Playing. 1676 Page St.
Phone Fell 3373. Also care of Sherman, Clay & Co.

CHICKERING Best in the World
PIANOS Oldest in America

100,000 IN USE

BENJ. CURTAZ &amp; SON, 16 O'FARRELL STREET

SOLE AGENTS

Dr. H. J. STEWART

TEACHER OF VOCAL MUSIC

Pianoforte, Organ, Harmony and Composition
Special course for singers desiring church appointments

Studio, 1105 Bush St.

MR. ANDREW BOGART

TEACHER OF SINGING

METHOD of the ELDER LAMPERTI

Home Studio: S. E. corner Buchanan and Page Sts.

PHONE PARK 202

SIGNOR ABRAMOFF

The only teacher of the famous California Prima Donna, Miss Edith Decker (Dramatic Soprano), Miss Paraskova Sandelin (Contralto), Mr. Emil Arnold (Tenor) and of several other singers prominent in the profession.

VOICE CULTURE (OLD ITALIAN METHOD)

Signor Abramoff Equalizes, Beautifies and Strengthens the Tone. Corrects Nasal and Throaty Production Produces apartamentos, and Covered tones with Open Mouth.

703 SUTTER ST.

HOURS: 10 to 1 and 3 to 7 Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday

MR. THEODOR

SALMON

Concert Pianist and Teacher. Pupil of Kullak, Reinecke, Jadassohn and Richter. Studio, 546 Sutter St. Phone James 1281. Residence, "The Nordhoff."

Von Meyerinck
School of Music

Telephone Park 223

841 FULTON STREET

Offers all the advantages of Eastern and European conservatories for a thorough musical education.

STAFF OF TEACHERS.

Voice Culture - - - MRS. ANNA VON MEYERINCK
Art Expression, Opera and Drama, MRS. MARY FAIRWEATHER
Piano Harmony and Composition MR. FRED ZECH, JR.
Violin and Viola - - - MISS MARIE H. MILLS
MR. W. F. ZECH

Competent staff of assistant teachers. Special teachers for Languages (German, French and Italian), Physical Culture, Fencing, Elocution, and Stage Dancing. Prospectus upon application.

SIGNOR PAOLO LA VILLA

(Of Florence, Italy)

N. B.—Special Terms for Professionals.

Vocal Studio: THE ROOSEVELT, 546 Sutter St.

Phone James 1282

PALACE HOTEL

San Francisco, California.

TOURISTS and TRAVELERS will, now, with difficulty recognize the famous Court into which for twenty-five years carriages have been driven. This space of over a quarter of an acre has recently, by the addition of very handsome furniture, rugs, chandeliers and tropical plants, been converted into a lounging room, the

FINEST
IN THE
WORLD

THE EMPIRE PARLOR—the Palm Room, furnished in Cerise, with Billiard and Pool tables for the ladies—the Louis XV Parlor—the Ladies' Writing Room, and numerous other modern improvements, together with unexcelled Cuisine and the most convenient location in the City—all add much to the ever-increasing popularity of this most famous Hotel.

Techau Tavern

The most unique resort in San Francisco. There is not a more artistically appointed cafe in the country. . . . It is a place wherein the guest may feast the eye while dining sumptuously and being regaled with exquisite music. . . . The Tavern is now under new and experienced management, and patrons are assured of the constant attendance of the chief of the establishment, and of prompt service at all times. . . . Special attention is paid to luncheon, dinner and after-theatre parties. . . .

Those who read much

are more frequently subject to eye trouble than others. There are, however, numerous modern occupations which bring on eye troubles that injure the brain and the physical system irreparably. Avoid danger by

Using GEORGE MAYERLE'S GLASSES

His Glasses insure health and a clear vision. Consultation Free. Open until 9 o'clock every evening. Geo. Mayerle's GERMAN EYEWATER makes weak eyes strong, sore eyes well, rests tired eyes. Price 50c. 62c by mail. Mail order or Wells-Fargo. Geo. Mayerle's Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers insure clean lenses without scratching.

GEORGE MAYERLE, German Expert Optician

1071 MARKET STREET

Two Doors from Seventh

Showing effect of George Mayerle's Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers

CAFE ZINKAND

After the Theatre call at this Palace of Delights and revel in the luxuries of a spread fit for the gods, or drink of some of the best wine that ever chased the skeleton from the feast or painted landscapes within the brain of man.—Hograve.

TONKIN, Photographer

1490 MARKET ST.

Bet. 7th and 8th Sts.

San Francisco, Cal.

GROUND FLOOR STUDIO

Bonestell, Richardson & Co.

DEALERS
IN

PAPER OF ALL
KINDS

FOR PRINTING AND WRAPPING } 401-403 Sansome St.

OUR STANDARDS

Sperry's Best Family.

Drifted Snow.

Golden Gate Extra.

Sperry Flour Company

GOODYEAR'S
"GOLD SEAL"

Rubber Goods the Best Made

Rubber Hose, Belting and Packings

We are headquarters for everything made of Rubber

GOODYEAR RUBBER COMPANY

R. H. Pease, Pres. F. M. Shepard, Jr., Treas. C. F. Runyon, Sec.

573-575-577-579 Market St., San Francisco

His Conception of Duty

BY ANNE THURBER.

Grant had exchanged only a few commonplaces with the young woman his hostess had given him as a neighbor. He had never met her before, and had imperfectly caught her name. When he first saw her, however, she had impressed him as being an uncommon type, and he was glad he was not to be placed next to a nonentity. But soup and fish had been passed, and nothing brilliant had been vouchsafed him in reply to what he felt were very worthy remarks of his own. Then a sentence floated down to them from the other end of the table, where an eminent clergyman was holding forth to his tete-a-tete on the subject of duty.

"The only rule of life, I take it," he said, "is to do one's duty; that covers everything necessary."

"Do you believe that?" asked Grant, turning to the woman at his side.

"I think it would be very disagreeable sometimes," she answered.

"But that would make it the necessity, would it not? Now I believe in doing my duty even if it is repugnant."

A smile flitted over her serious features.

"You cannot imagine," he said, "how delighted I was when Mrs. Meade showed me whom I was to take in. And I am awfully glad you let me talk to you. I was afraid you disliked me for some reason when you turned aside my efforts to be companionable."

"That could scarcely be, when I never saw you before. It is possible I had nothing to say."

They came back to the subject of duty, and as the menu progressed, Grant found himself, without exactly knowing how the topic introduced itself, telling her that he had once separated two people who were drifting into matrimony, because he believed that duty dictated.

"A romance!" she exclaimed. "I love romances; tell me the story."

"You see he was my only brother," he said, "and I did not like to see his life ruined for a woman like that."

"What do you mean by 'like that'?"

"Oh, a woman no one knew anything about—not like you, for instance, or our hostess, or any of the others here."

"But you don't know anything about me."

"I take it for granted—you are our hostess's friend."

"That is not conclusive. All you really know about me is that I am a woman you took out to dinner, fairly good-looking and wearing a pretty frock—anyone with eyes in his head, you know, can tell my gown is pretty."

They laughed in duet, and turned to the discussion of the hors-d'oeuvre. Then she begged him to go on with his story.

"That woman interests me," she added. "I can't understand your reasons for condemning her on mere hearsay, or supposition."

"Well, all I can say is, that she was different from the women you would go with, or care to know. She was an artist, and belonged to a bohemian set, and did things that well-brought-up women don't do. She admitted all sorts of people to her friendship, went about unchaperoned and all that."

"A 'good-fellow girl,' I suppose, as we call it? But there's no harm in that, is there? Don't you believe women should ever have men chums, as well as those of their own sex?"

"That may be, but I had other views for Will. He had inherited money, and he had a place to fill in the world. I didn't care to see him entangling himself with that sort. I know she was unworthy of his love."

"How did you know? Did you ever see her?"

"No, but one hears things. And then Will read me some of her letters."

"Wasn't that rather caddish of him, to read her letters to you?" she asked.

"Oh, no," he responded warmly, "you don't understand. Will was not a bit of a cad. But he and I were more than mere brothers—chums, rather. He was a taciturn sort of a chap, and never gave his confidence entirely even to me. But he wanted me, I suppose, to share his admiration, and so read me bits from her letters. They were bright letters, too—and that is one reason I knew the woman was merely acting a part. My brother was not the kind that would attract a brilliant woman."

"How can you be sure what a brilliant woman, or any woman indeed, is attracted by? Do not tastes differ in individuals?"

"No doubt they do, but this woman was remarkably clever, and fond of things that Will cared nothing for. He was all for dogs and horses and athletic sports, not artistic or over-intellectual."

Corona Cafe, New Montgomery and Mission St. Mercantile lunch 25c. Always good, try it.

MURINE EYE REMEDY

THOSE
LUSTROUS
EYES ARE MURINE
EYES

Sunlight Intensified by Reflection

from Ocean Beach and Desert Sand unrelieved by foliage. Winds and mineral laden poisonous dust, all bring eye-troubles in their wake, Granulated Eyelids, Red, Itching, Burning, Tired and Watery Eyes, Impaired Vision and Eye Pain. Prevention, Relief and Cure are found in MURINE EYE REMEDY, mild and harmless. Murine aids those wearing glasses, doesn't smart, but soothes and quickly cures. Is an Eye Tonic. Sold by Opticians and Druggists. Fifty Cents.

EXCURSION RATES ST. LOUIS

ROUND TRIP Excursion Tickets to St. Louis and Chicago on sale August 8, 9, 10, 18, 19, and dates in other months later at the following rates:

TO ST. LOUIS . . . $67.50
TO CHICAGO, passing one way through St. Louis . . . $72.50

RETURN LIMIT three months. Stop overs allowed on both going and returning trip.

THESE RATES GOOD ON ANY TRAIN

Ask about the Through Tourist Cars direct to the Exposition.

613 MARKET STREET
SOUTHERN PACIFIC

tual. I feel quite sure she could not have loved Will. Besides, she was not a good woman."

"Did he tell you that?"

"Oh, no; Will never in his life breathed a word against any woman. But from my knowledge of him I know no woman could be for any length of time on terms of companionship with him, and remain good. There was too much of the savage in his nature. His idea of the divine passion was primitive."

"And you constituted yourself her judge without knowing anything more definite?"

"I did not need to know. There was too much logic on my side. I took it for granted from what I knew of him that it was so."

"You are always taking things for granted, it seems," she returned, "and that is a woman's flimsy reason."

"It is reason enough for a logical mind. My duty was plain."

"And you separated them? Did you never think—" and there was a tremor in her voice, which was sweet flattery to him as denoting his power to interest—"that you might have broken her heart?"

"I never thought of Margaret Brown at all"—the name slipped from his lips without thought. "My only idea was to save Will from a mercenary woman, a bad woman who would blight his life forever. I kept by his side. When he went to New York, where she was, I was with him. I took him abroad. He never saw her again."

"But did she give him up so easily? Did he never explain?"

"She wrote once or twice, but I persuaded him not to reply."

"Wasn't that a bit cruel of you?"

Her fingers played in a nervous way with her fork. She had barely tasted the dainty dishes that formed the various courses. Even her champagne was untouched. Grant felt a glow of pleasure at this proof of his ability to hold her attention.

"Oh, I presume she recovered her balance in time," he answered carelessly. "Time is a great healer."

"Time dulls the pain; it does not heal the wound."

There was a faraway look in her eyes, and Grant wondered if she had experienced in her own life something that made her voice that bit of philosophy.

"I notice," she said, after a few moments of silence, "that you always speak of your brother in the past tense."

"Yes—he is dead."

An expression of pain passed over her face, and she closed her eyes for a moment.

Grant feared she was about to faint.

"Are you ill Miss—Miss—how stupid of me, I did not catch your name when we were introduced."

"Brown—Margaret Brown, is my name," she said, just as the hostess gave the signal for the women's departure.

Sam's Theory

BY ARTHUR DELROY.

High in the skies, somewhere,
There is a Place, where care
And sorrow and decay
Are ne'er allowed to stay.
How sweet the Place would be
To weary folks like me.
What's that? They don't let in Folks loaded down with sin!
Folks who are seeking rest!
Folks who have done their best!
I care not what you say.
God would not act that way.

July, 1904.

Out of Date

"Will you come a-sailing with me," he asked,

"In the trimmest little yacht afloat?"

"'Tis not up-to-date enough for me,"

She said, "why not get a motor-boat?"

—The Nonsense Rhymers.

Corey's Cafe, 600 Mission. Mercantile Lunch 11 to 2. Cedar Brook Whiskey, formerly W. H. McBrayer—10 yrs. old.

SCHOOLS and COLLEGES

HEALD'S

LEADING BUSINESS COLLEGE of the WEST

Over 24 Post St., San Francisco, Cal.

Established 40 years. Open entire year, day and night. Write for circulars (free.)

St. Mary's College

OAKLAND, CAL.

Literary, Scientific, Commercial Courses.

Studies resumed August 1, 1904.

Send for Catalogue.

BROTHER VELLESIAN, President.

Santa Clara College

SANTA CLARA, CAL.

The next session will begin August 2, 1904. Send for full particulars to

(Rev.) R. E. KENNA, S. J., President.

Hoitt's

School for Boys; 14th year begins August 9th; larger and stronger faculty than ever; perfect sanitation; illustrated catalogue. W. J. MEREDITH, Vice-Principal. Menlo Park, Cal.

Irving Institute

Boarding and day school for young ladies and little girls. 2126 California St. Will reopen August 1, 1904. Accredited to the universities. REV. EDWARD B. CHURCH, A. M., Principal.

Miss Bolte's School

2174 Post St., prepares for universities and colleges. Music by graduate professor of Berlin and Leipzig conservatories. Conversational and grammatical French and German; English. Board, English, French, German, music, $30 month. Next term July 25. Steiner 656.

San Francisco Business College

Scott & Van Arsdale Building, 738 Mission St., between Third and Fourth. We are located in our new quarters. The finest schoolrooms in the West. Come and see them whether you want to go to school or not. Business men know where we are. We had eight calls for help this week.

is the most practical; recommended by expert court reporters. Send for catalogue.

1382 Market St., San Francisco.

The Melbourne Institute

For stuttering and stammering teaches a new scientific course for cure. It is successful. It has been established in this city for three years under teaching of Prof. F. G. Norcross, acknowledged mental expert, whose work has won the admiration of reputable physicians and other deep students of mentality. The services of the Melbourne may be enlisted with the utmost confidence. Address MELBOURNE INSTITUTE, Van Ness Ave. and Market St., San Francisco. Hours 1 to 5 P. M. Telephone Mint 2626.

THE LYCEUM

AN ACCREDITED PREPARATORY SCHOOL For the University, Law, and Medical College, Etc. This school is well known for its careful and thorough work; we prepare you well. References, President Jordan or any Stanford professor. L. H. GRAU Ph. D., Principal. Rooms, 333-346, 5th floor, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

CALIFORNIA BUSINESS COLLEGE

The largest and finest quarters in the city; refined residence locality. Position for every graduate. Thorough, modern. 75 Page Catalogue on request. R. L. DURHAM, President.

925 Golden Gate Avenue. San Francisco

Kent Law School

THIRTEENTH YEAR

Day and Night. Always open. No Vacations. Books Free. 536 Parrott Building (Emporium). Phone Folsom 2031

Century Electric Corporation

SUPPLIES, CONSTRUCTION, MANUFACTURING AND REPAIRING. BUILDINGS WIRED

16 and 18 SECOND STREET

Telephone Bush 352

San Francisco

MAISON TORTONI

111 O'Farrell St.

French Rotisserie

Private Dining Rooms.

Banquet Hall.

S. Constantini, Prop

SUMMER RESORTS

The following Resorts will send descriptive booklet when requested.

GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM

A Sanitarium, cottage plan; not a hospital. Equipped for the scientific application of Water, Electricity, Massage, Tissue Oscillation, Electric Light, X-Ray, Dry, Hot Air and all minor treatments. Large grounds, 5½ acres, shade, etc. Separate treatment apartments for men and women. Fifteen minutes walk from centre of city; one block from car line. Beautiful scenery. Write for literature. GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM, San Jose, Cal.

Camp Vacation

Hotel under canvas on the Russian River below Guerneville in a grove a mile and a half long, skirting the river; tennis courts; 40 new boats. There will be a dam in the river affording 4 miles of smooth water for boating, bathing and swimming. Adults $2 per day, $10 per week; children under 10 half rates. Special rates for families. Opens May 1. Address Mrs. L. C. CNOPIUS, Camp Vacation. "Vacation" P. O., Sonoma Co., Cal.

Hotel Rowardennan

"IN THE MOUNTAINS BY THE SEA"

Ben Lomond, Santa Cruz County. Opened under entirely new management. Round-trip Tickets from San Francisco, $3. For booklet apply PECK'S BUREAU, 11 Montgomery St., S. F.; or to WM. G. DODGE, Lessee.

The Monterey

Most Elegantly appointed Hotel on the Pacific Coast. Hot and cold water; Electric and Gas Lights; Private and Public Baths; Telephone in every room; four Private Dining Rooms; Fine Sample Rooms. American Plan, $2.50 and upwards; European Plan, 75c and upwards. Hageman & Jones, Props., Monterey, Cal.

Hotel Ben Lomond

SANTA CRUZ MOUNTAINS--NO STAGING

Table first-class. Electric lights, boating, swimming, fishing, hunting, tennis, croquet. See booklet, S. P. Company, 613 Market St., or B. DICKINSON, Ben Lomond, Cal.

Tahoe Tavern

On Lake Tahoe, the largest and most beautiful body of water in the world at this elevation, now open. The tavern will be conducted this season by Mr. F. W. Richardson, manager of California's famous mission hotel, The Glenwood, Riverside; a guarantee that it will be strictly first class. The table supplied with all delicacies; fishermen constantly employed to furnish lake trout. For rates address F. W. RICHARDSON

Brockway

Lake Tahoe

Opens June 1st. Write FRANK B. ALVERSON, Mgr. Brockway, Cal.

The Tallac

Lake Tahoe, Cal.

Cafe European. Nurses, Maids and Children, American Plan. Prices now as low as any hotel on Lake. Service, accommodations, boating and livery superior to any. Address M. LAWRENCE & CO., Tallac, Cal.

Hotel Bon Air

Go to Hotel Bon Air for your summer outing. Thirty-Seven minutes from San Francisco. Bowling, tennis, boating, bathing and fishing. Escalator R. R. Station. MR. AND MRS. J. E. MANLOVE, Props., Ross P. O., Marin County.

Byron Hot Springs

Open all the year. Unexcelled climate. Luxurious Mineral and Mud Baths, and the most curative waters known for Rheumatism, Gout, Sciatica, Liver and Kidney and Nervous troubles, also Malaria.

Hotel unique in cuisine, service and appointments.

Rates $17.50 per week in Cottages. $3 per day and upwards in Main Hotel.

Reached by Southern Pacific, 2 1-2 hours from San Francisco. 3 trains daily, at 8:30 a. m., 10 a. m. and 3:30 p. m.

H. R. WARNER, Manager

Byron Hot Springs Post Office, California

THE MART

1348 MARKET STREET

DOMESTIC and IMPORTED BEERS
WINES and LIQUORS, for Camping,
Picnics and Vacations, at

Phone South 1176

REDUCED PRICES

VACATION 1904

IS NOW READY FOR DISTRIBUTION.

"VACATION" is issued annually by the

California Northwestern Railway

THE PICTURESQUE ROUTE OF CALIFORNIA

and is the standard publication on the Pacific Coast for information regarding

MINERAL SPRING RESORTS, COUNTRY HOMES AND FARMS WHERE SUMMER BOARDERS ARE TAKEN, AND SELECT CAMPING SPOTS.

This year's "VACATION 1904" contains over 150 pages, beautifully illustrated, and is complete in its detailed information as to location, accommodations, attractions, etc., with terms from $7.00 per week up.

To be had at Ticket Offices, 650 Market Street (Chronicle Building) and Tiburon Ferry, foot of Market Street; General Office, Mutual Life Building, corner of Sansome and California Streets, San Francisco

Applications by mail will receive immediate response.

JAS. L. FRAZIER, Gen'l Mgr. R. X. RYAN, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

Beautiful Laurel Dell

The Robson Orchestral and Dr. Monroe N. Callender will furnish the best music ever played at any resort in the state. The Switzerland of America. The only lake resort that has its own mineral springs and a chemically pure spring. Boating, swimming, marine toboggan 160 feet in length; first class livery; saddle horses. Dining room seats 300. Bowling alley and all games free to guests. Pamphlets at Pecks, 11 Montgomery St. and Cal. N. W. Ry., 650 Market St. Address, EDGAR DURNAN, Owner and Proprietor Laurel Dell, Lake Co., Cal.

Kenilworth Inn

Mill Valley

One of the most popular resorts in Mill Valley, situated at the foot of Mt. Tamalpais; only 50 minutes' ride from the city; rates reasonable. MISSES PALMER & HULETT.

The Grove

Lake Tahoe

Half mile east of Tallac on Lake Shore. Rates $2 per day; $10 per week; meals 50c. Good saddle horses and the best of livery; boats free to all guests, J. E. PARMETER, Prop., Tallac, Cal.

Spend Your Vacation

A great many San Francisco people are planning to spend the entire summer at Hotel Del Monte. No other resort in California offers such a combination of attractions--sea bathing, golf, automobiling, bowling, tennis, fishing, and all out-of-door sports. Instead of going from place to place seeking comforts, the wise ones of society are planning already to put in several enjoyable weeks down at Del Monte by the sea. Address Geo. P. Snell, manager, Del Monte, California.

At Hotel Del Monte

MOORE'S POISON OAK REMEDY

Cures Poison-Oak and all Skin Diseases
Sold by all Druggists

Letters

Mary Queen of Scots

Though Maurice Hewlett has given us a delightfully interesting volume in "The Queen's Quair," it is doubtful if he has really thrown any new light on the character of Mary Queen of Scots, or even whether he will cause any of his readers to change their preconceived opinions of her. Consciously or unconsciously, we have all formed our ideas, and though we may read every new version of her stormy career, we are apt to find ourselves not much the wiser. Perhaps the simplest way to explain her to ourselves is to remember that she was a Stuart, and that the Stuarts of all ages and degrees and both sexes had certain well-defined characteristics, just as the various animal species have. Mr. Hewlett deals only with that period of history between Mary's widowhood in France and her incarceration in Scotland. He shows her surrounded by people each of whom, old or young, gentle or simple, male or female, cared only for what advantage could be snatched, but he shows the Queen herself to have been not less unscrupulous. Her position, at best, would have been a hard one, but assuredly her course did nothing towards making it easier, and it is doubtful if, having found her kingdom at peace, she herself would not have fomented strife and discord. Certain it is that she never stooped to consider any question but her own pleasure for the moment, and rights, whether of classes or of individuals, civil or moral, never offered a barrier to the gratification of her desires. Her pleasure was in pursuit, not in possession, and to have was not to hold, but to cast aside and seek anew. In these later days, perhaps the wild blood would have been tamed by a consideration of the conventions—that, or the likelihood of being confined to an insane asylum, and it passes credulity that any woman who courted exposure to wind and weather and could endure hardships which today would prove too much for the constitution of a gypsy wife, could have retained any trace of beauty or delicacy, or that one so callous and impassive when the sufferings of others were in question should claim sensitiveness in her own troubles. If ever there was a woman in need of the bit and bridle, and a touch of the whip in addition, in a word, if woman ever needed a master, it was this same lady. Mr. Hewlett intimates that it was this quality of mastery which she found so attractive in Bothwell, but yet, had her fortunes prospered and she retained throne and power, it is a question whether the public executioner would not have been called on to free her from the yoke. Mary may have been an incarnation of love, looking everywhere in vain for a lover as great as herself, willing to give all in return for all, but she just as surely was an "Indian giver," claiming the right to withdraw at her own pleasure. The facts and episodes of her life are history. They are not changed by any amount of fanciful embroidery. Her playing fast and loose, her courtship and marriage of Darnley and her subsequent complicity in his removal, her intrigues with David Riccio and her planned elopement with Bothwell, are not to be wiped out nor glozed over. Mr. Hewlett gives a clear view of the confusion of the government, for the alternate alliances and ruptures between James Stuart and Mary were most disconcerting to the nobles who had a very natural desire to keep up a close connection between their heads and shoulders, yet could scarcely be certain over night which way the political wind would be blowing in the morning. It is one more view of a character which has been variously presented as persecuted saint and incarnate fiend—as the victim and the would-be executioner, and nearly every other extreme and opposite. Her history is as fascinating as we are told she herself was, but after all, what was she? Shall we ever know? As to the manner of the telling, to have read one of Mr. Hewlett's books is to have fallen under his spell. Published by the Macmillan company.

The Paul Elder Company is preparing additional "One Hundred and One" compilations under the general title of Epicurean Thrills. "One Hundred and One Sandwiches" was issued some time ago. Now will come "Salads, Beverages, Candies and Chafing Dish Recipes."

—The Bookworm.

VALUABLE JEWELRY LOST

During the summer months much jewelry is lost traveling and at summer resorts. This can be avoided by leaving yours with the Baldwin Jewelry Co., 906 Market St., who make advances on diamonds and jewelry.

The modish woman's stationery is as much a part of her nowadays as her dainty wardrobe. Cooper & Co., 746 Market Street, are showing the newest modes in paper and envelopes, dies and seals.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. —.

ELLA VAN BENTHUSEN

Plaintiff

vs.

THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN

Defendant

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:

THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's alleged willful and utter neglect of said plaintiff for more than four years last past, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 30th day of June, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk,
By CHAS. C. MORRIS, Deputy Clerk.

N. F. FLOOD, Plaintiff's Attorney

1122 Market St., Rooms 1, 2, 3 and 4.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. —. No. 91429

ELISE KOEBSCH

Plaintiff

vs.

CHARLES W. F. KOEBSCH

Defendant

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:

CHARLES W. F. KOEBSCH, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of plaintiff; also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 8th day of July in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk.

By GEO. W. LEE, Deputy Clerk

McCLELLAN & McCLELLAN, Plaintiff's Attorneys.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of PETER MCCARTHY, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Kate A. Schwerin and Nellie M. Hall, Executrices of Last Will and Testament of Peter McCarthy deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within ten months after the first publication of this notice to the said Kate A. Schwerin and Nellie M. Hall, as such executrices, at Rooms 607, 611, 612 Hayward Building, San Francisco, Cal., the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

KATE A. SCHWERIN and NELLIE M. HALL,
Executrices of the Last Will and Testament of
PETER MCCARTHY, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, July 16, 1904.

J. J. LERMEAN, Attorney for Estate of Peter McCarthy, Deceased.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of JAMES NEILL, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Mary A. Daly, Administratrix, with the will annexed, of the estate of James Neill, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Mary A. Daly, Administratrix, with the will annexed, of the estate of James Neill, deceased, at Room 498 Parrott Building, No. 855 Market Street, San Francisco, California, the same being her place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

MARY A. DALY, Administratrix, with the will annexed,
of the Estate of JAMES NEILL, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, August 6, 1904.

JOHN J. BARRETT, Attorney for Administratrix, with the will annexed.
Parrott Building, 855 Market Street.

VERUS GUARANTEED PILES
OR $50. FORFEITED. One application relieves. Cures while you work. Price $2. Send only 25¢ with your druggist's name and we will send a $2 package of Verus prepaid. Send us the balance when cured. VERUS REMEDY COMPANY, Dept. E, Los Angeles, Cal.

HAIR GOODS

G. LEDERER
Wig Maker and Hairdresser. Scalp treatments, Shampooing, Manicuring, Hair dyeing, Switches, Ornaments, Toupees. Complete line of pure Hair Goods only. 123 Stockton St.

KIMONOS AND JAPANESE GOODS

KIMONOS
Silk and Cotton; Custom made and made to order; of every description at special low price. Call and inspect our large and artistic line. The Orient, 633 Sutter St. near Taylor.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR REMOVED

BEATRICE ST. JOHN
Hair, Face and Scalp Specialist. 426 Sutter St. Phone Black 153. Superfluous Hair killed root and branch by absorption—guaranteed permanent, $1.00.

HAT RENOVATORY

PANAMA HATS
Bleached and Blocked. 423 Sutter Street. 424 1/2 Montgomery Street. Telephones Black 4616, Red 3212.

Residence 814 Grove St., S. F.
Telephone Page 81

HENRY P. TRICOU
Notary Public

Telephone Main 1580 206 Montgomery St.
Bet. Pine and Bush

VEUVE
CLICQUOT
PONSARDIN

The most delicious
Champagne
of the Age

Yellow Label, Dry
Gold Label, Brut

Cruse &
Fils Freres

Clarets and
Sauternes

Crème des Grands
Crus
(Crème de Cognac)

A. Vignier Co.

429 & 431 Battery
San Francisco

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy

1051 Market St., bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.

The largest of its kind in the world.
Book "The Philosophy of Marriage" mailed free.
A Valuable Book for Men.

Other People's Ideas

Books instruct us calmly, and without intermingling with their instruction any of those painful impressions of superiority, which we must necessarily feel from a living instructor. They wait the pace of each man's capacity; stay for his want of perception without reproach; go backward and forward with him at his wish; and furnish inexhaustible repetitions. When a man sits in a well-furnished library, surrounded by the collected wisdom of thousands of the best endowed minds, of various ages and countries, what an amazing extent of mental range does he command. Every age, and every language, has some advantages; some excellencies peculiar to itself! Above all, there is this value in books, that they enable us to converse with the dead. When a person's body is mouldering, cold and insensible, in the grave, we feel a sacred sentiment of veneration for the living memorials of his mind.—Sir S. Egerton Brydges.

The books which help you most are those which make you think the most. The hardest way of learning is by easy reading. But a great book that comes from a great thinker—it is a ship of thought,—deep-freighted with truth, with beauty, too.—Theodore Parker.

No book that will not improve by repeated readings deserves to be read at all.—Thomas Carlyle.

Good books, like good friends, are few and chosen; the more select, the more enjoyable.—A. Bronson Alcott.

From "The Grafters," by Francis Lynde:

Brutal as their blind gropings were, the Flagellants of the Dark Ages plied their whips to some dim purpose. Natures there be that rise only to the occasion, and if there be no occasion, no floggings of adversity or bone-wrenchings upon the rack of things denied, there will be no awakening—no victory.

It is a question for the psychologists to answer if there be not crises in a man's life when the event, weighty or trivial, turns upon that thing which, for want of a better name, is called a premonition.

After the first blush of youth is past, the heavenly-affinity sentiment loses its hold, and a woman comes to know that if she cares to try hard enough she can love any man who will be thoughtful and gentle, and whose habits of life are not hopelessly at war with her own.

If love be blind in the teens and twenties, it is more than apt to have a keen gift of insight in the thirties and beyond.

Somebody has said that for every new point of view gained we have to sacrifice all the treasures of the old.

The most hardened criminal in the dock is less dangerous to humanity than the woman who has forgotten how to cry.

It is one of the prime requisites of successful mastership to know when to press the point home, and when to recede gracefully.

When any weakness of the human heart can find a seeming virtue to go hand in hand with it, the battle is as good as lost.

From "The Story of a Governess," by Mrs. Oliphant:

An uninterrupted course of adulation is not a disagreeable thing altogether; even if we do not have a very high opinion to begin with of the genius of the person who expresses it, our idea of his judgment will probably improve when we see how he appreciates our merits.

In society of every kind the characters of the absent are often torn to pieces with no particular motive, or one which is half good, to divert the minds of the audience from more important things.

If men would but understand that it is not to be married that the woman wants, but to know the lover's heart, to be assured of his love.

W. SCHEPPLER & SON

Dealer in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry.
1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

A Home with Music is a Happy One

THE EDISON
PHONOGRAPH

AND EDISON GOLD
MOULDED RECORDS

place happiness within the reach of all.
—Hear them.

PETER BACIGALUPI
Pacific Coast Headquarters

786 MISSION ST. SAN FRANCISCO

For those who appreciate comfort
and attention

Occidental Hotel

SAN FRANCISCO

AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN PLAN

A QUIET HOME

CENTRALLY LOCATED

GEORGE WARREN HOOPER, LESSEE

Visit the

Hoffman Cafe

Wm. J. Sullivan, Proprietor

Lunch, Grill and Wine Rooms

Half a block below Palace and Grand Hotels, S. F.

Fine Goods a Specialty. Merchants' hot lunch from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. An extra spread served on all holidays. Merchants' lunch served in Ladies Cafe and Grill, from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. Oysters, English Chops, Steaks and Delicacies a specialty.

Handsome Cafe in America

Open all night. Private Dining Rooms for Ladies and Escorts

601 Market St. (S. W. Cor. 2nd and Market Sts.)

POODLE DOG RESTAURANT, CORNER Eddy and Mason Streets, San Francisco—Private dining and banquet rooms. Telephone 429.

A. B. BLANCO & BRUN, Proprietors

WARRANTED 10 YEARS

SOHMER
PIANO
AGENCY

BYRON MAUZY

PIANOS
308-312 Post St
San Francisco

OF THE CECILIAN—The Perfect Piano Player

Continental Building & Loan Ass'n.

OF CALIFORNIA

The GREAT HOME BUILDER

BUILT WITH THE AID OF THE CONTINENTAL

HAS HELPED OVER 3100 FAMILIES TO HOMES IN THE PAST 15 YEARS

SUBSCRIBED CAPITAL	-	-	$16,500,000.00
PAID IN CAPITAL	-	-	3,300,000.00

Dr. Washington Dodge, President
Wm. Corbin, Sec. and Gen. Mgr.

CORNER BATTERY AND CALIFORNIA STS.

San Francisco, Cal.

TOWN TALK

VOL. XII. No. 624.

SAN FRANCISCO, AUGUST 13, 1904.

PRICE 10 CENTS.

Old J.H. Cutter Whiskey

We are the sole owners and proprietors of this celebrated brand, and here assert in the strongest language possible that

J. H. CUTTER WHISKEY

Rye or Bourbon—in barrels or cases, is all whiskey, and whiskey, too, of the highest grade known.

The Best Afloat or Ashore

It will hereafter be supplied the trade under the KENTUCKY INSPECTION in all its purity, flavor and mellowness, just as it leaves its "Old Kentucky Home."

C. P. MOORMAN & COMPANY, Louisville, Kentucky

Sherwood & Sherwood

Distributors—212-214 MARKET ST., S. F. and 216 N. MAIN ST., L. A.

HARRY G. HOWELL, Special Representative

...THE...

German Savings & Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus	- - - - -	$ 2,448,948.13
Capital actually paid up in Cash	- - - - -	1,000,000.00
Deposits June 30, 1904	- - - - -	36,573,015.18

Board of Directors

JOHN LLOYD, President.
DANIEL MEYER, 1st Vice-President
H. HORSTMANN, 2nd Vice-President
Ign. Steinhart	Emil Rohde	H. B. Russ	N. Ohlandt
I. N. Walter		J. W. Van Bergen
A. H. R. Schmidt,		Cashier
Wm. Herrmann,		Asst. Cashier
Geo. Tourny,		Secretary
A. H. Muller,		Asst. Secretary
W. S. Goodfellow		General Attorney

San Francisco Savings Union

532 California Street, Corner Webb

Deposits July 1, 1904	- - - - -	$33,908,594.00
Paid Up Capital	- - - - -	1,000,000.00
Reserve and Contingent Funds	- - - - -	935,033.00

E. B. POND, President	W. C. B. de FREMERY	} Vice-Presidents
	ROBERT WATT

LOVELL WHITE, Cashier	R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier
-----------------------	----------------------------

DIRECTORS:

Henry F. Allen, William A. Magee, W. C. B. de Fremery, C. O. G. Miller, Robert Watt, George C. Boardman, Fred H. Beaver, Jacob Barth, E. B. Pond.

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits: Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

OFFICE HOURS: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

CONTINENTAL BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATION

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital	- - - - -	$17,000,000.00
Paid in Capital	- - - - -	3,500,000.00
Monthly Income	- - - - -	250,000.00
Homes built since organization	- - - - -	1,500

Home Office 301 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

DR. WASHINGTON DODGE, President
WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

It might be well to remember
when making a will

THAT THE

CALIFORNIA SAFE DEPOSIT*AND TRUST COMPANY

Is in a position to settle estates with the assurance that the administration will not change hands and that the estate will be prudently managed with absolute safety.

WILLS SAFELY KEPT WITHOUT CHARGE

OFFICES:

Cor. CALIFORNIA and MONTGOMERY STS.

San Francisco

Rathjen Bros. 39 Stockton St.
Phone Main 5522

Complete Line of Imported and Domestic

GROCERIES, TEAS, COFFEES
WINES AND LIQUORS

Special Sale Days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday

Look for Items in all the Daily Papers

The Owl Drug Co.

is the largest concern of its kind in this country—it buys
its goods in such large quantity it can sell them for less
money than most any other
druggist pays for them.
Telephone orders filled at
once and delivered free.
South 356.

1128 MARKET ST., S. F.
BROADWAY & 10TH ST., OAKLANDLa Grande

BRANCHES

5A Taylor Street
200 Mtgy. Ave. cor. Kearny
202 Third cor. Howard
1738 Market opp. Eleventh

Laundry23 POWELL ST.
Phone Bush 12

Sew Buttons

Ordinary
MendingWork called for and
deliveredFREE
of chargeTONKIN, Photographer

1490 MARKET ST.

Bet. 7th and 8th Sts.

San Francisco, Cal.

GROUND FLOOR STUDIO

J. PORCHER*HATTERLatest Summer
Styles

JOHN A. STETSON CO.

1109 Market St.
Odd Fellows Building, S. F.

TOWN TALK

SAN FRANCISCO, AUGUST 13, 1904.

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

THEODORE F. BONNET - - - Editor
CHARLES S. SMITH - - - Manager

609 MISSION ST. FOURTH FLOOR Telephone BUSH 713

SUBSCRIPTION.—One Year, in advance, $3.00; six months, $1.75; three months, $1.00; one month, 40 cents; single copies, 10 cents. Foreign subscriptions (countries in postal union), $4.00 per year. Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application. For Sale by all Newsdealers.

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

RALPH A. GROVER - - - Manager of Advertising
New York Representative, FREDERIC M. KRUGLER, Room 918,
150 Nassau Street.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N. Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 200 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

No attention is paid to anonymous communications, but the wishes of contributors as to the use of their names will be scrupulously regarded. We cannot undertake to preserve or return manuscripts.

TOWN TALK is mailed to subscribers every Thursday and should be received in this city and vicinity every Friday. Please notify us of tardy delivery.

Let Us Rejoice

Judge Hunt's decision affirming the illegality of the boycott staggered the labor union leaders and their sympathizers, and occasioned much rejoicing among people who have long viewed with disgust the un-American methods pursued by the autocrats of organized labor for the intimidation of those who ignored their dictation. The sentiment of every American community is against the boycott as much as it is against all expressions of capitalistic greed and insolence, but so great was the influence exercised by organized labor in this city that protests against its coercive tactics excited nothing but derision. With the acquiescence of the authorities the union bullies became so bold in some instances as to frighten prospective patrons away from boycotted stores, and to assault peaceful citizens who refused to be intimidated. Seldom were they content with merely designating a place of business as "unfair." In the majority of cases they resorted to all sorts of hoodlum tactics to make it appear that it was hazardous for the public to patronize the object of their disfavor. They instituted a reign of terror in the neighborhood of many boycotted establishments, and before the organization of the Citizens' Alliance, were becoming so contemptuous of the law and of the rights of citizens, that had it not been for the salutary intervention of that association, nobody at this late day would be so rash as to engage in a labor dispute. Though we have not always agreed with the Citizens' Alliance we believe that it restored the courage of the community. It hastened a reaction that rendered Judge Hunt's task less indelicate than it otherwise would have been. A year ago it would have been hard to find a judge willing to try the case decided by Judge Hunt unless he was quite convinced that his view of the law was favorable to organized labor.

To Accelerate Litigation

Upon celerity justice often depends, and therefore it is important that reasonable effort should be made by the State to minimize the law's delays. The judicial system of California has no greater capacity for the handling of litigation now than it had in 1880, when the Constitution by which our present Supreme Court was established went into effect; yet the population of California has doubled in the meantime, and judicial business has grown proportionately. As a consequence litigation in the Supreme Court is in a state of congestion, and the judges are three years behind in their work with no prospect of catching up. Much evil and injustice necessarily result from this condition of affairs which entails protraction of controversy, making the meanders of the law more tortuous than they really are, and aiding those attorneys who like to stay with a good case till they have the oyster and their clients the shell. Fortunately the people are to have an opportunity to apply a remedy. It is proposed to follow the example of several Eastern States that solved a similar problem by establishing district Courts of Appeal, and we are to vote next November on a Constitutional amendment creating such intermediate courts, one to sit in Los Angeles, one in San Francisco and one in Sacramento, each consisting of three judges. These courts, it is proposed, shall have appellate jurisdiction in minor cases at law, which, by the way, constitute the bulk of the business that now engrosses the attention of the Supreme Court. It is a most important amendment and one that should have the approval of public sentiment.

The Best Cure

The Government pathologists and bacteriologists at Washington are said to be following with great interest the efforts being made by the health authorities of several large cities to secure better ventilation of street cars, churches and places of amusement. In this connection Dr. Walter Wyman, Surgeon-General of the Marine Hospital Service, takes occasion to acclaim the wisdom of the old-fashioned doctors who taught the value of fresh air and sunshine, of pure food, cleanliness and dry dwelling houses, as prophylactics. He says there is abundant scientific proof of the sense of the old-time notions. It is a well-known fact that fresh air and sunshine either kill microbes or render them harmless, and it is surprising that these germicides of nature are not more appreciated. Of course they are not so strongly recommended by the modern physician, for he feels that to earn a fee he must give evidence of medical knowledge, and therefore he prefers to write a prescription. But he is not altogether to blame. There are many people who crave medicine whenever they feel that some malady has hold of them. They would have no faith in a doctor who merely recommended fresh air and sunshine which, very often, are all that they need. However, the "fresh air cure" is becoming more popular. It is likely to supplant many nostrums in popular favor before long.

Another Plea For The Canteen

The prohibitionists and fanatics of the W. C. T. U. are most stubborn in their adherence to their ridiculous theories regarding the army canteen. Like most fanatics they are hard to convince of anything not in accord with their prejudices. Even the testimony of the highest and most respected army officers that the canteen is an institution which fosters temperance has no influence with them. From the annual report of General Carter, commanding the department of the Viscayas, in the Philippiners, it appears that evil resorts similar to those in the neighborhood of the main entrance to the Presidio in this city, have sprung up around the army posts in the islands. He confesses that he is unable to counteract the influence of those resorts because forbidden to establish a canteen. "So long as the Christian women of America," says the General, "insist upon carrying the canteen question into politics young soldiers whose powers of resistance to temptation are below normal or not firmly exercised will continue to fall victims to the plagues of the service in India and the Orient generally—drunkenness, dissolute company and disease." It is about time for some public-spirited organization to start a movement in the interest of the young men of the army who are demoralized and debauched as a result of the cowardice and wire-pulling of Congressmen anxious to propitiate the Prohibitionists of their districts. Congressmen have no antipathy for the canteen; nor have they the distorted view of the relative value of things with which the women of the W. C. T. U. are afflicted, but they are willing to prostitute themselves for votes.

The Text-Book Graft

One of the justifiable grievances which parents have against the public schools lies in the frequency with which text books are introduced, changed, and discarded. At the present time, parents are burdened by the purchase of the new histories, geographies and arithmetics just issued by the State Board of Education, with the pleasing prospect of new books in the other studies to follow as soon as they can be issued. It is said that the old books were so bad that they could not be used any longer, and a change was imperative. True, the old books were bad, but in the opinion of teachers the new ones are no better. In fact, the whole plan and purpose of a modern text book is wrong. A text book to fulfill its proper purpose should be an aid to the pupil, not an exponent of methods for the teacher. Why should there be such a bewildering number of arithmetics, grammars and geographies on the market? The principles and facts suitable for the use of the schoolroom are comparatively few in number and well defined. They can not vary much, no matter how numerous the books. Two times two are four, Columbus discovered America, and a verb must agree with its subject; these and like verities form the bulk of the subject matter in school books. Why, then, such an infinite variety of books by compilers without number, to set forth facts so few and palpable? How can the grammar of Brown differ so widely from the grammar of Green, and the history of Smith be at variance with the history of Jones? Because, in order to make a market and to sell, text-book-makers have to create a difference where none exists. Because the school book has departed from its legitimate function and has assumed one which does not belong to it. It now exploits methods of instruction and teaches the teacher how to teach. Needless to say it does this imperfectly, clumsily, and impertinently. A certain very late text-book for the use of infants beginning to read has each day's lesson divided off and numbered, with minute directions for each step, for fear the teacher might go astray and teach rat before she does cat. The State Board of Education could not do better than to issue a series of books containing the elements of the subjects to be taught, and leaving the methods to the intelligence and professional knowledge of the teaching body. The books would be less bulky, the subject matter less complicated, and every new whim in pedagogy would not necessitate a change of texts.

Morality Without Religion

It is somewhat surprising to find so enlightened a journal as the New York Sun discussing, as though it were a novelty, the suggestion made by "a friend in Brooklyn" that, "of the present needs of intelligent society the least need of anything in the world is of a supernatural religion"; that, as nothing is assumed, not even a Deity, "the conduct of life must now be on purely scientific grounds." The Sun's friend thinks that the moral code of Christianity should be adopted, but that Christian myth and miracle should be eliminated. The suggestion is as old as the hills, but the Sun gravely discusses it as though it were new, and makes the very wise comment that if Christianity be brought down into the category of a merely human moral philosophy it will become a pure idealism impossible of realization as a practical standard for the conduct of life. The suggestion of the Brooklyn unknown is purely atheistic, and has been discussed by some of the greatest philosophers of modern times. Human experience has taught that no moral philosophy that is not founded on the assumption of a Deity is sufficient for the guidance of human conduct. As Chateaubriand has said, "If man is a mere mass of matter, there is in reality neither vice nor virtue, and of course morality is a mere sham." A purely human system of philosophy would serve but to propagate a species of impiety and lead to the calamities of atheism. In the absence of a great moral power, a great coercive power is necessary and that comes from the doctrine which commands a belief in God who will reward and punish. That doctrine is the main pillar both of moral and civil government. The question of the expediency of separating religion from morality was the subject of lively discussion in the seventeenth century, and John Selden, a shrewd thinker, took occasion to call attention to the fact that if morality were without a supernatural basis it would be changed for convenience. It was plain to him that religion was not founded on morality, but that distinction between vice and virtue emanated from religion. "He that has no religion to govern his morality," said Selden, "is not a dram better than my mastiff dog; so long as you stroke him and please him, and do not pinch him, he will play

Engraved Wedding Announcements and Invitations

ROBERTSON 126 Post Street
San Francisco

The Hub
CHAS. KEILUS & CO.
EXCLUSIVE
HIGH GRADE CLOTHIERS

Suggestions of money saving are not the incentives we offer to purchase clothes here. It's the creations we show that emanate from premier designers, whose talents with shears, needle and brain are of the highest class. Correct dressers say, "Immediate Service Clothes" for theirs.

132
KEARNY STREET
Churlow Block

with you as finely as may be—he is a very good moral mastiff; but if you hurt him he will fly in your face and tear out your throat.” Like Selden’s mastiff, the atheistic moralist will be virtuous while there is no temptation to wickedness. But why fritter away time joining issue with superficial philosophers of the type of the Sun’s Brooklyn friend who pragmatically disposes of the general principles of things, and peremptorily substitutes unintelligible systems for those that have stood the test of time and experience? Every student of the world’s history knows that the Gospel has been a barrier to the destruction of society and that faith in a Deity is man’s greatest blessing. The ancient Romans did not improve when they ceased to have faith in the gods. On the contrary they were consigned to barbarism. Even Plato argued that the Word arranged the universe and that a knowledge of the Word leads to a happy life and procures felicity after death. It is well for such philosophers as the Brooklynite to ponder the words of Bacon: “A little philosophy withdraws us from religion, but a good deal of philosophy brings us back to it again; nobody denies the existence of God excepting the man who has reason to wish there were none.”

The Pampered Convict

There is not much use in protesting against the granting of the modest request of the inmates of the State Penitentiary that they be furnished with a newspaper plant, for, having expressed a desire for the plaything, these pampered pets will probably get what they want, and the tax-payers will foot the bills. The criminal element has but to hint at reform and moral elevation, and all the foolish philanthropists will range themselves into a push to urge that they be gratified. The reform idea has taken so tight a clutch that punishment has been lost sight of, and the convicts actually dictate from behind prison walls and deem it a favor to the unconfined that they will condescend to specify as polite requests what they might demand as rights. It is no great while since a professor interested in university extension told of a letter received by him from a convict, who asked how he could procure certain books with which to carry on a line of study he had begun some time before. The university extender not having a sense of humor, thought he had done something laudable in furnishing the jailbird with the literature he asked for. It never once entered his head, or for that matter, the heads of his audience, that a State Penitentiary was not designed primarily as an institution of higher learning or that if there were such preventive efficacy in mere book learning, a man capable of carrying on a course of study would not be behind bars. Josiah Flynt, who probably knows more about tramps and criminals and their methods and motives than any one outside of their own guild, has no illusions on this subject. He says that so far from being illiterate, the majority have had a fairly good start in education, but they are shrewd enough to know that if they profess total ignorance and pretend to be unable to recognize figures or the letters of the alphabet they will excite a certain degree of compassion in their jailors and visitors, and that their apparently rapid progress in the prison classes will earn them not only credits but a misguided sympathy on the theory that they are the victims of neglect and environment rather than criminal tendencies. Mr. Flynt also says that a goodly proportion of the criminals deliberately choose burglary as a profession. As they figure it out, a bank robber, or a thief of any grade, will make more money with less exertion than an honest tradesman. They expect to spend a certain portion of their lives in prison, but they think it is worth while for the sake of the advantages. Each one thinks that he will be smart enough to retire with a competence while he has plenty of time to enjoy it, and reformation is the last thing to trouble him while he can keep his nerve. If our State prisons were properly conducted, without short hours, football elevens, wrestling bouts, printing plants and university extension courses, the scamps would be kept so hard at work that they would have no leisure to establish glée clubs and get out newspapers. Without resorting to cruelty or unnecessary harshness, prisoners ought to be kept so steadily employed and with so little enjoyment that they would be willing to undergo any honest hardship rather than put themselves in the way of serving a second term in prison.

To Appeal To The Morbid

The old story is being revived of a dramatic presentation of “Sir Richard Calmady.” There is very little likelihood of anything of the kind taking place, not that more unpleasant and less dramatic novels have not been exploited, or that actresses without number would not be found anxious to fill even the most unpleasant role, or even that stage-craft would not devise some means by which an adequately legless hero could be brought in. But the author, Lucas Malet, long ago positively and emphatically refused to give her consent to any attempt at dramatization. We do not need “Calmady” on the stage any more than we need a hundred or so other novels which were produced at great expense and for no other reason than that they were widely advertised and puffed into best-sellers. No doubt in the world but that if “Calmady” were put on the stage a morbid crowd would attend the matinees to satisfy themselves that the thing could be done. At the rate at which women visit anatomical museums and side-shows where maimed and dwarfed creatures, human and animal, are to be seen, and the eagerness with which they crowd to scenes of accident, morgues and murder trials, there is little doubt but that “Calmady” would be appreciated. But to what end? Neither diversion nor instruction. Only idle curiosity.

IMPERIAL
STUDIO

744 Market St.
San Francisco - Cal.

THE IMPERIAL STUDIO'S PARCHMENT PROOFS

Are the swellest thing the Photographer's art has yet produced. There are plenty of imitations. The real thing is a little more expensive, but it's worth the difference.

For Breakfast

For Breakfast

For Breakfast

Protesting Bryanites

BY THEODORE BONNET.

The disease which most seriously afflicts the mind of man today is want of faith in God, but there is always an abundance of faith in the so-called leaders of thought and propagators of fads. Any system of philosophy that appeals to superficial minds grips its sympathetic devotees with hooks of steel. And once the founder of such a system procures the acknowledgment of eminent merit and sublime sincerity from his unsophisticated followers, he is assured of everlasting adoration. Nowhere is such blind fidelity and aggressive loyalty to be found as among the fanatical followers of a self-constituted prophet. It matters not whether the cult be religious, sociological or political, so long as it savors of sophistry or reeks of humbug the prophet thereof is sure to enjoy the fervent fealty of his followers, and invariably the ardor of their devotion is in proportion to the integrity of the opposition which he arouses. Their faith is adamant. All fanatics are of one kin. Their bigotry is of the same quality, whether incited by a Dowie, a Mrs. Eddy or a Bryan.

At the close of the St. Louis convention I took occasion to criticise the blatant Nebraskan, and to predict that he would never again be taken seriously by intelligent Democrats. Notwithstanding his superiority as a strategist shown in his encounters with David B. Hill and other leaders of the Parker movement, I argued that, as he had abandoned principle for the purpose of keeping within party lines, he could no longer command the confidence of people of principle who had long admired him for being what he had at length shown that he was not. In other words, Mr. Bryan, the great champion of the oppressed, the unterrified leader of the masses, who, up to a few days before the convention, charged Judge Parker with being the candidate of the plutocracy, had not the moral courage to face party ostracism. This noble patriot who would rather be right than President, this scrupulous exponent of government by the people, lacking the courage of his convictions, proved himself a trimmer of empirical pretensions.

For having expressed my views of William Jennings Bryan I have been bitterly assailed by some of the most rabid of his political followers, in letters heavy with invective and shrieking with indignant protest. Their disinclination to accept Mr. Bryan in his true light is not hard to understand. Worshipers of false gods are proverbially reluctant to have their gullibility exposed. No man is pleased to confess, even unto himself, that he has been humbugged. The vanity of his victim prolongs the career of many a gold-brick artist. There is nothing unusual, therefore, in the phenomenon presented by the fanatical devotees of the apostate silver champion, who by their fulminations have impelled me to advert once more to the shattering of their idol. The most bitter of them is typical of his class, and he, unconscious of the satire of it, signed himself "A Patriot." An anonymous writer of scurrility who fatuously arrogates to himself the virtue of patriotism is of course not to be criticised for his inability to discern impropriety in the conduct of another. The men who still have confidence in Bryan must be largely of the calibre of my indignant correspondent. If at the adjournment of the St. Louis convention they were not convinced of the shallowness of his pretensions, the dark spots on their understanding should have been dispelled ten days later, when he issued his ukase on the urgent necessity of an income tax and national ownership of railroads. Why did Mr. Bryan not advocate those measures before the convention? The plea that he would have been outvoted is one that can scarcely be urged with propriety; the brave man fights for his principles in the face of overwhelming odds. If Mr. Bryan had done so he would still be entitled to the confidence of the radical wing of his party. His belated pronunciamento is clearly a bid for the loyalty of people whose admiration for him was largely due to their belief that he was inaccessible to seduction and uninfluenced by self-interest. Surely they do not now consider it to his credit that he pretends to believe that the election of Judge Parker will be conducive to a reorganization of the Democratic party along the lines favored by the radicals and cranks. No sensible Democrat doubts that the election of Judge Parker will serve to strengthen and perpetuate principles that are antithetic to the flub-dub of which Bryan is an exponent. It is certain that a man of Bryan's intellectual attainments has no doubt on the subject, and it is clear that the press of the country is pretty well satisfied of his hypocrisy, for he is being quite widely lampooned and caricatured in the role of a hypocrite.

Mr. Bryan derived his influence from an air of sincerity, of vehement feeling and of moral elevation, but the mask has been torn aside. He now appears as a man of circumstances, not of principles, one who lacks the self-trust of Grover Cleveland, a self-trust which ignores expedients in the plenitude of its resources for the restoration of prestige. If I have formed a low estimate of the sage of Lincoln it is because I admire the frankness and boldness of a Cleveland who had the courage to dissent when he believed his party was lashing itself into a fury over a misguided policy and departing from the traditional ground in which it should have been intrenched. Mr. Cleveland is today the greatest living American. Mr. Bryan is his contemporary nonentity. In the time of Halifax there was a party known as the Trimmers, and Halifax became their chief. But he was no hypocrite. He boldly vindicated the dignity of the appellation by arguing that everything good trims between extremes. Macaulay says that he was inexhaustibly fertile in distinctions but that he was never true to any band of political allies and never went to extremes. Bryan is fertile in distinctions but he does go to extremes, and he lacks both the genius and candor of Halifax. He sounded a discordant note in the symphony of his talents at St. Louis when, not having the courage to abide by himself, he weakly tried to reconcile himself with the majority. The incident recalls the words of Talleyrand: "That is worse than a crime; it's a blunder." Mr. Bryan may continue to deal profitably in sophisms and the propagation and adornment of current prejudices, but he has alienated those of his followers who abhor shamming.

DRS. A. C. MOORE & B. P. SHEPHERD
OSTEOPATHISTS

Now Located at 204 SUTTER ST., Cor. Kearny

Will REMOVE, September 1st, to

ALTA BUILDING, S. E. Cor. Kearny and Bush Sts.

GILBERT and STOLL

Movers of Household Furniture and Storage Warehouse, have removed their offices from the Murphy Bldg. to Room 43, Donohoe Bldg., Market and Taylor Sts. Storage Warehouse: Mercantile Library Bldg., Golden Gate and Van Ness ave

The Woman of Thirty

BY HARRY COWELL.

From the far-off indeterminate days when first the sons of men looked upon the daughters of men and saw that they were fair even down to the present, the way of a man with a maid has been full of wonderment. Watching it, the world has held its breath and heard its heart beat. Rumors of wars in brave words, and in tender ones the tale of a lover and his lass—these are the eternal romances. Your maker of fiction finds him a character distinct from all other men and yet eminently human, and causes him to fall in love and puts him face to face with death, to the end that, by his deportment under these momentous circumstances, he may show what manner of man he is, to the delectation of those who read books, who see as it were faint reflections of themselves in the magic mirror of the written page. Man's love for woman beautiful, masterfully interwoven with what a modern humanitarian calls "the glorious ardor of war," gives us the immortal epic of the blind son of seven cities. Some day—God knows how distant—wars may cease and rumors of wars pass forever into the eternal silences; but for all human time the maker of the literature that lives will set his readers to following breathlessly the footsteps of the lord of life.

Dispute has been rife—and the end of the argument is not yet—as to the age at which the fair daughters of men are fairest. The sons of men of long ago—our forebears—simple beings, fighters and hunters all, man the animal ascendant, their lusty faces not yet sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought, had a decided preference, I take it, for the age of physical ripeness. Maids who had seen the flowers blow and fade some fifteen times, or thereabouts, seem to have been their choice.

Modern man, complex being that he is, the brute in him at once baffling and baffled, is not so easily satisfied. His mate must be, so to speak, spiritually ripe. The free flower who has watched but fifteen times or thereabouts her fettered sisters of the field spring forth into beauteous being and thereafter fade away, is to him even as a yellow primrose and nothing more—fair to look upon, it may be, but as yet scarcely human.

Another fifteen years, and the flowerlike thing has somehow come to be possessed of a soul, has, in short, become a woman, the possible wife of a man. The chances are that Sorrow has kissed into her a comeliness all its own, like to no other comeliness. The amorphous character of the flower days has taken form. In the vast university of the world she has acquired the necessary knowledge of good and evil. She has held converse with the serpent and grown strangely wise and charming—with just that charm that a suspicion of sin—for instance, the having eaten in fancy of the fruit and in fancy hidden at the sound of the Great Gardener's voice—gives to one unmistakably pure. The modern man—one may blush to confess it, or boast of the fact, as one pleases to take this point of view or that—finds the arch-innocence of flowers a trifle flat; but for all that, if I mistake not, he loves virtue in woman no less than did his forefathers. We do not today tell ourselves as many lies as once we were wont to tell; the reason being, perhaps, despite the pessimists, that now for the first time it is possible for a man of feeling to live with his eyes open. But we are far from being ready for the whole truth in this matter of sex. We have each of us as it were entered into a silent compact here to prevaricate not a little for the furtherance of public morals. The absurd poses we take, looking solemnly the while into one another's eyes, must surely give rise to much merriment in hell, causing the gamins there to grin from ear to ear. That novelists and poets have lately ceased from expatiating on the incomparable sweetness of sixteen is a sign of the times full of significance and healthy withal.

Because in nature a female of the human species may become a mother at the age of, say, fifteen years, it is thought by the unthinking that she may therefore at the like age become a wife also; but fitness for physical motherhood and fitness for a spiritual motherhood are two very different things, to say nothing of fitness for spiritual wifehood, which is, of course, the state in question—one not easily attained even by maturity at its best.

The woman of thirty has almost inevitably lived, that is to say, loved; and he who allows himself to become enamored of her is in no little danger of being grievously tormented by the strangest of all jealousies, the jealousy of the irreparable past. Some words of Stevenson's on this very subject are so much to the point that the temptation to quote them is irresistible: "That he himself (the lover) made a fashion of being alive in the bald, beggarly days before a certain meeting, is deplorable enough in all good conscience. But that She should have permitted herself the same liberty seems inconsistent with a Divine Providence."

Youth is in many respects an adorable age and virginity is dear to the heart of man, and the danger that I have just spoken of is not very imminent when she who is found fairest among the daughters of men is yet in her teens. Nevertheless the widow of thirty is probably the best beloved woman in the world. Although every would-be husband must needs brave the ghost of a dead man's lips, and live it down as best he may, hers—that is, the relict's lips—suffer no lack of kisses.

The modern man is not one man but many men, each of whom seeks a mate; nor will he as a whole be satisfied so long as any part of him is left lonely, cheated of its sweets of love. What reasonable hope may he entertain, I ask you, of finding in one school-girl wives for his infinity

Swan Gin.

THE FINEST HOLLAND GIN
IMPORTED SINCE 1819

CHARLES MEINECKE & CO.,
SOLE AGENTS P. O. SAN FRANCISCO

ties—unless, indeed, she be born with that genius for success in the supreme art of life of which I have recently spoken?

The woman of thirty is a type, not merely a female of our species between three hundred and sixty and three hundred and seventy-two months old; and her peculiar charm lies, I believe, in the fact that she has lived—whether actually or in imagination matters little. When she and her lover sit hand in hand, silent in the silence that follows sundown, deep calls unto answering deep. What if Sorrow be present also; there is a benediction in her low voice. What if the Past be as a death's head at their feast of love; it but prevents unseemly hilarity; and if they bemoan the lost years before they met, what time is left to them has an added value not unlike that of the Sibylline books.

Now Let the War Go On

BEING A SHORT ACCOUNT OF HOW THE CORRESPONDENTS GOT TO THE FRONT, BY "THE WANDERER."

What the combined power of the press of the world could not accomplish in three months' strenuous endeavor a few strokes of the facile pen of Richard Harding Davis have effected within forty-eight hours of the stroking.

Representatives of the great newspapers have been pleading, petitioning, threatening, demanding, coaxing, praying for weeks to be allowed to go to the Japanese front. Their urging was in vain. The military authorities were "very sorry," but the gentlemen of the foreign press must wait until the preliminary strategy of the Japanese army was far enough advanced to escape all risk of exposure to the enemy through the despatches and letters of the correspondents. Not that the war department doubted the personal integrity and good faith of the foreign newspaper men; perish the thought! But the flesh is weak and there are temptations that even the most honorable of foreign correspondents might not be able to resist.

So, for weeks the correspondents "marked time" in the tea houses and yoshiwara of Tokio; and whenever they became unduly impatient and threatened to become obstreperous, a banquet or a geisha dance at the Maple Club was ordered and the clamor temporarily ceased. There is nothing more soothing to the ruffled brow of an irritated war correspondent than the soft stroke of a geisha's fat hand—nothing more convincing of Japanese good will than brut champagne in the sec throat of a Tokio war correspondent. And for a time there was champagne of the best quality at the behest of the correspondents of Tokio—champagne to the ultimate supernaculum.

Finally, however, Richard Harding Davis and John Fox Junior tired of writing only of tea houses and geishas—of the courtesy of the Japanese, the valor of the men and the beauty of the women. They were even surfeited of the champagne. They longed for the thunder of the captains, the flaunting of the battle flags and the shouting.

They resolved to memorialize all whom it might concern, announcing that if the military authorities did not cease lying to the correspondents regarding the time of departure for the front Richard Harding Davis and John Fox Junior would betake themselves to other wars and let the samurai of Nippon extricate themselves from this war as best they could without aid from the trenchant and facile pens of the author of "The Derelict" and "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come."

As I predicted in my last letter, consternation swept like a typhoon through the War Department of Japan. The ultimatum was unexpected and crushing. If Skrydlhoff and his Vladivostock fleet had come thundering at the walls of the imperial palace of Yedo the hearts of the bushi of Fusō would have quailed less than they did when they heard that Richard Harding Davis and John Fox Junior were threatening to go home and write articles for Collier's Weekly and Scribner's Magazine in opposition to the next war loan to be floated on the tempestuous sea of foreign finance.

There could be but one reply. The correspondents must be permitted to go to the front. If they could be sent to the front that the Russian bullets could reach them with fatal precision, so much the better for all concerned.

Now you know why the foreign newspaper men will go with the third army on the twenty-ninth of this month.

Personally, I do not blame the Japanese for refusing to admit the war correspondents to their councils. The modern war correspondent is an untrustworthy person. Give him an inch and he will take an ell. Permit him to go to the front and he will deliberately violate every rule and regulation prescribed for his guidance. It is immediately his purpose to elude the censor and to smuggle out news that in the majority of instances is absolutely detrimental to the interests of those whose hospitality he has accepted. As a matter of fact this is the only kind of news that he cares to send to his newspaper. Anybody can send news that has been revised by the censor, but it requires a superior sort of brains and a peculiar morality to scoop the censor and publish news that will assist the enemy.

Perhaps I have devoted too much of your valuable space to commendation of the man who wrote a miserable story about a fellow newspaper man, and perhaps I have wasted too many words on John Fox Junior. I imagine I hear you saying "There are others as great as Davis and greater than Fox." True. There is J. W. F. Archibald, for example. Surely a war correspondent—a war photographer would possibly describe him better—who can wear the medals of a dozen monarchies, the decorations of a score of South American republics, and is entitled to affix more initials to his name than he wears in front; surely such an one is great enough to merit mention in these despatches.

$200 Reward

For the arrest and conviction of any one assaulting members or employees of this association or destroying property belonging to them.

ALLIED EMPLOYERS ASSNS
CITIZENS' ALLIANCE
SAN FRANCISCO

Report promptly to the Law Department, Citizens' Alliance, 217 Crossley Building.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
CITIZENS' ALLIANCE

While visiting Consul-General McWade in Canton Colonel Archibald procured the rank of a mandarin of the fifth class entitled to wear a crystal button on the roof of his silk hat and to have a silver pheasant embroidered across the bosom of his dress shirt.

Somebody told Dr. Morrison that this rank had been conferred on Colonel Archibald. "That's no high honor," was the retort of the Times correspondent; "I had my number three boy decorated with that rank the other day and it only cost me twenty-five taels."

Colonel Archibald is at present assisting General Kuropatkin in the conduct of the Russian campaign—seemingly with disastrous success. The other day he wrote to his friend, "Dick" Davis, "marking time in Tokio," to the effect that as he would have nothing to do for at least three months from the Japanese point of view he (Davis) ought to put in his surplus leisure touring the Russian lines. The Colonel offered to introduce Davis to all the great men of Mukden and Liaoyang and he assured his friend that he would be received with open arms and not only "shown around" but admitted to the inner councils of the Russian commanders.

Davis repaid the generous offer of his friend by reading his absurd letter aloud to the correspondents in the billiard room of the Imperial hotel, laughing consumedly the while in chorus with the laughter of the others.

Why do I call him "Colonel" Archibald?

You may search me—I haven't the slightest idea.

Perhaps it is because he is no more a Colonel than I am. Tokyo, July 20th.

The Saunterer

An Heroic Trait

Nothing excites the admiration of politicians to such a degree as does that quality in a man which enables him to "take his medicine" without a grimace. Politicians regard it as an heroic quality akin to that which gave Job distinction. They think that it bespeaks nobility of character, and wherever they encounter it they are generous in their applause. The signal exhibition of it is sometimes most profitable to men ambitious of honor. The value of this rare trait of character is to be exemplified, I believe, in the case of Ulysses Grant of San Diego. Grant has won the esteem of politicians throughout the State by the sportsmanlike manner in which he took his defeat in the Senatorial contest of some years ago.

Honor Unsolicited

When the Grant boom went to smithereens the whole State wore a broad grin. It was evident that Grant had been fleeced by the grafters in whom he had reposed confidence, and nobody sympathized with him. He had tried to buy his way into the Senate, and had spent his money foolishly. He was ridiculed as a presumptuous carpet-bagger who thought that the name of his father would have an hypnotic effect on the people of the State. He spent one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars in that memorable contest, and left Sacramento humiliated by defeat and shamed by the scandal which his candidacy had provoked. He had been treated in a most cruel fashion, and had learned a bitter lesson. Politicians had broken their solemn pledges, and there had been deception and misrepresentation all along the line. Men had taken money from his agents and would not stay bought. In the circumstances the average politician would have emitted a howl that could have been heard from Siskiyou to San Diego, but Ulysses S. Grant, the son of his father, exhibited the characteristic stoicism of the Grant blood. Crushing and humiliating though the defeat was, he uttered not one word of reproach. Newspaper men sought interviews with him in the hope of eliciting words of denunciation for those by whom he had been betrayed, but in vain. He acknowledged his disappointment, but in a cheerful strain. No complaint had he to make. He had been out-manoeuvred, and he made his retreat as dignified as possible. Years have passed by and Mr. Grant, no longer a carpet-bagger, but now an old citizen of California, is as good-natured and optimistic as ever. He has become better acquainted with the politicians of the State, and the more they see of him the more they like him. If he has an enemy in California I have never met him. Grant "took his medicine" gallantly, and now there is talk of making him a Presidential elector. He has not expressed a desire for the honor, but it is coming to him without solicitation. From now on keep your eye on the son of his father.

The Passing of Burns

There is no longer any doubt of the elimination of Colonel Dan Burns as a factor in the politics of this State. That fine organization of which he was once the head has completely disintegrated. A few years ago his henchmen were very strong at the primaries, but last Tuesday not a vestige of the Burns organization was in evidence. As a boss the man who tried to make Estee Governor of California, and who did elect Henry T. Gage to that high office, is no more. He ended his political career when his social aspirations prompted him to try for the toga with a view of getting into the social whirl of Washington. He is now devoting all his time to his Mexican mine.

The Moral Bard

Where, oh, where are the ecclesiastical gents who boldly entered the political arena a few weeks ago to give spiritual endorsement to the candidacy of Senator Bard?

The Angelus

LOS ANGELES

NEW MANAGEMENT

Summer Rates to December 1st

LOOMIS BROS., Proprietors

Hotel Richelieu

1012 VAN NESS AVENUE

Having renewed our lease, and entirely renovated this Hotel, we will continue making it the finest and leading Family Hotel of this Coast.

AND

HOTEL GRANADA

1000 SUTTER ST.

HOTEL RICHELIEU CO.

According to my recollection they espoused the cause of the Hueneme statesman on the assumption that he was a patriot who would scorn to traffic in votes. He had said so himself and they believed him. They regarded him as an idealist on his own testimony, and they had contempt for Henry T. Oxnard because it was rumored that the sugar magnate was going to buy his way into the Senate. The Arcadian simplicity of the unsophisticated clergyman is refreshing. I pointed out at the time that the ecclesiastical supporters of Bard were doing that which might subject themselves to the suspicion of having been subsidized, and recent developments have shown that Mr. Bard's pretensions were in the nature of cant. From Los Angeles comes the news that his henchmen in Ventura were reckless at the primary election, and that to avert a scandal his assemblyman in his home district has agreed to vote for Oxnard for second choice. Up to date more money has been spent for Bard than for all the other candidates, and as I remarked last week, it looks as though Oxnard is to benefit from the complications that have arisen. In the end, if it should appear that neither Bard nor Flint could win, Oxnard would no doubt be willing to reimburse them in the sums which they had expended, and take their votes.

Some Extravagant Touting

Since the suicide of Joan Hadenfeldt's discarded lover the press-agent's art has not been permitted to sink into innocuous desuetude. It has been restored to its pristine effectiveness in the ably edited columns of the evening Bulletin for the glorification of our affable Public Administrator, the nearly comedian, Mr. Hynes. Every time the Bulletin's brilliant editorial writer has occasion to cite notable examples of official integrity, the printed name of Hynes is strikingly silhouetted against the white page, occasioning much speculation as to the reason. Mr. Hynes is no doubt a man of rare virtue, an official beyond the reach of sordid temptation, but he is a novice in public life. He has been Public Administrator less than a year, and though there has been no scandal in his office up to date that circumstance does not warrant the assumption that he would not loot an estate if he had the chance. Why, then, is he being advertised so persistently as a man of conspicuous integrity? True, he was elected by a large vote, but his popularity was undisputed. He has been contributing his stale jokes to the cause of charity for twenty years, and he has long been highly esteemed for his graciousness by the patrons of free shows throughout the city. Billy Hynes is a good fellow, and should be able to hold his job until it is time for his own estate to be administered upon, but he should call a halt on his industrious press-agent, for there is such a thing as overworking the purity fake. It is unfair to require a man to live up to a reputation which he has not earned. Mr. Hynes should whisper a few words into the ear of the man behind the press-agent.

The Democratic Scrap

James H. O'Brien, the leader of the reorganizers of the local Democracy, says that the Democratic League will control the coming municipal convention, and he appears to have reason for believing that McNab has received his quietus. At this convention nominations for the Legislature will be made, and it is not likely that men who expect to run for the Senate and Assembly will care to antagonize the element behind the reorganization movement. The Republican papers that always assist McNab in disrupting the Democratic party are not going to contribute aid and comfort to his candidates for office. Those candidates must depend for support on the Democratic press, and when it comes to organizing the convention they will in all probability have their own welfare in mind. McNab's prestige is undoubtedly gone despite the efforts of the Republican press to keep it alive. He has lost the State convention, and he will soon be deprived of the control of the State Central Committee. In essaying his great acrobatic feat at Santa Cruz without the aid of a net, he was badly crippled and has been walking lame ever since. Hearst saw through his deception, and has evidently resolved to put him out of business by telling the truth about him.

Boris Below Par in Russia

The accouchement of the Czarina, which is awaited with feverish interest in Russia, is rekindling speculation as to the succession to the throne in the event of another daughter blighting the hopes of the Czar. The European press is bristling with theories should there be no son, and the present Czarowitz, who is not married and in frail health, not reach the throne. The prevailing opinion is that it would go to the third son, Andre, of the Grand Duke Vladimir. In the press despatches sent to this country Boris, the second son of Vladimir, is counted out of the running. It is stated that the Council of State would undoubtedly remove Boris's name from the list should he become the heir apparent, on the grounds of "dissolute imbecility." "Dissolute imbecility" is not a pretty phrase to tag a man with but Duke Boris must have hit the high places pretty hard since his tour of this country. His predilection for chorus girls, as illustrated by the suite he took to Port Arthur, only broke out once in America. Aside from the Chicago chorus girl episode Boris behaved as nicely as though he were a small boy on a "personally conducted" Sunday-school picnic. In California he toed the lineski like a good little manski.

Boris and the Bathing Suit

His stay at Del Monte was the occasion of Ethyl Hager's appearing in that now famous pale blue silk bathing suit. Every woman there made her prettiest bow to the waves, for each one was aware that a Grand Duke was on the beach watching the fair bathers. The bathing hour was almost over when Ethyl Hager came strolling beachwards. When she threw off her robe and stood, "half-concealed, wholly revealed" in a pale blue silk bathing suit an "Oh!" of wonder ran up the beach and broke into little ripples of astonishment. Sky blue silk isn't worn on the beach every day, not even on the continent, judging from the attention Boris vouchsafed Miss Hager. He asked to be introduced to her that night and after a tete-a-tete with the Grand Duke, the incorrigible Ethyl raised a laugh in her coterie by saying, in her inimitable manner, "Really, I quite approve of Royalty now, don't cher know." Boris, who had suddenly wandered within ear-shot, bowed low his amused thanks, to the edification of the little group, but Miss Hager's nonchalant wit rescued her from the embarrassing position.

The Star Hair Remedy—best of all tonics and restoratives. Stops falling hair, cures dandruff, restores color. Not a dye. At druggists and hair-dressers. Accept no substitute. Star Remedy Co., 1338 Polk street. Telephone Sutter 31.

Critical But Not Lascivious

As a matter of fact every one at Del Monte quite approved of royalty in the person of Duke Boris. He had an easy manner without being in the least free and easy. He had a penetrating eye for pulchritude, as evinced by his appreciation of Mrs. Sterling Postley, whom he pronounced one of the most beautiful women in America. But there was nothing lascivious in the admiring glances Boris bestowed on the pretty women and it was counted an honor to be singled out by more than a passing glance from him. He certainly gave little hint while out here of the "dissolute imbecility" which the Council of State threatens to brand him with in event of his candidacy for the Russian throne.

Moffitt Turned the Trick

Frank Moffitt, one of the few survivors of that famous political clique of Alameda county known as the "old Bills," has once more taken a hand in politics. He was the guiding spirit behind the anti-Fitzgerald movement in Oakland last week, and he marshaled his forces with rare tact and discretion, and completely routed the enemy. For several years Moffitt has taken only a desultory interest in politics, but at the Santa Cruz convention some of his friends proposed him for delegate-at-large to the State convention. He was turned down at the instigation of certain Oaklanders, and when he heard the news he decided to teach them a lesson in the game that he played so successfully in former years. That he has not lost his cunning is evident from the signal victory scored by his forces last Tuesday. Moffitt is an anti-McNab man and will co-operate with the Democratic League at the State Convention.

Conventional Mrs. Carolan

Ethel Barrymore has returned with the Tobins from their summer home, Arcadia, and on Tuesday night she was one of a theatre party that attended the Miller-Spong performance at the Columbia. The following evening she was the guest of honor at a dinner given by Mrs. Frank Carolan at Burlingame. Mrs. Carolan dearly loves a stage celebrity, and when she met Miss Barrymore at the Tobin summer home last week decided at once upon giving the dinner in her honor. There was considerable speculation as to whether she would invite Charley Clark and his bride, for it was reported that she did not quite approve of the match. Mrs. Carolan has developed into one of the most conventional of women and there were some features of the Clark-Tobin match and marriage that impressed her as being not in strict accordance with Dame Fashion's code. However, the betting was even money that she would invite the Clarks.

It Was a Love Match

Celia Tobin has been quoted as saying that she would have married Mr. Clark if he didn't have a cent in the world. In other words she desires it to be understood that it was distinctly a love match. It was probably because of the comment it excited that the pair decided upon a private wedding. Charley Clark's most intimate friends did not know of the marriage until he was on his way to San Mateo. The society reporters of the dailies said that the bridal pair journeyed to Burlingame in a special car and they put large printer's caps on that word "special." The Clarks did go to Burlingame on a special car, but it was just an ordinary electric car that every Jack and Jill may trolley on for fifty cents each, or charter for an evening or afternoon at a ridiculously small sum. If the Examiner had only known that the electric car which was stalled up at Fifth and Market the afternoon of the wedding was the "special" waiting for young Clark and his bride they would have had a half-dozen reporters and photographers there. The public would have been treated to a page of flaring pictures illustrating just how the young couple stepped from their carriage and mounted the steps of the car; teachers of deportment might have learned whether it is proper to board an electric car with the left or right foot first; bridegrooms-to-be might have studied the exact angle at which Mr. Clark held his bride's arm while assisting her into the car; but nary a photographer or reporter was there to immortalize the incident. A few passersby noticed a young woman in a festive blue gown accompanied by a smiling young man board the San Mateo bound car, but they little dreamed that this was the "special palace car" in which the scion of millions was carrying away his bride.

Why He Wasn't There

That there are degrees of mourning the following story, which is going the rounds of the tea-tables, illustrates: It was a few days before the time set for the Clark-Tobin nuptials that Richard Tobin gave a theatre

Ruinart

The champagne of exquisite quality which fits the fancy of those who appreciate a contrast.

HILBERT MERCANTILE CO.
Pacific Coast Agents

V. W. GASKILL, Special Agent
SAN FRANCISCO

GRATEFUL, REFRESHING, DELIGHTFUL
THE GENUINE
MURRAY & LANMAN'S
FLORIDA WATER
without exception the very best perfume for the Toilet and the Bath.

party in honor of the newly-engaged pair. After the guests were seated in their boxes one of the ladies glanced around, and not seeing the groom-to-be leaned over and inquired his whereabouts from Miss Tobin, who was sitting near. "Oh, he couldn't come," responded the fair fiancée, "you know he's in mourning."

It's Deadly Dull

By the way, Burlingame is badly in need of a stimulant. Its spirits are drooping. There is scarcely any life down in the fashionable village. The old-timers who used to impart so much gayety to the place are no longer taking any interest in it. Even Mrs. Joe Tobin no longer cares to spend any time down there. In the winter she lives in town and in summer she goes to Arcadia where she continues to take on weight. She is no longer of the spirituelle variety of femininity. She is positively buxom.

Return of Mrs. Elkins

While the Blingumites are suffering from ennui, the fashionables of Menlo Park are having a very gay time. Indeed Menlo Park is once more threatened with a revival of fashionable interest. Mrs. Elkins is there visiting her father, Senator Felton. She is accompanied by her children and is preparing for a children's party for Saturday night, to which all the juveniles of the fashionable settlement have been invited. Mrs. Elkins was Katie Felton. She married the son of the Philadelphia Elkins who made forty millions in traction companies. Her husband died some years ago, and when her father-in-law died recently he was very generous to her children but left a very small share of his estate to his son's widow.

The Bohemians

The invitation to the Bohemian Club midsummer high jinks, next Saturday, reads:

Kind, lenient lover of Bohemia: On one sweet night our feathered friend and master demands your presence: Obey for your heart's sake. Yet the appeasable bird requests your good fellowship for the full period wherein we live and commune with His Mighty Trees. Grant this for his heart's sake. On this summer night you shall witness the second coming of Apollo, aeons ago the God of Streaming Sunlight, the Repeller of Ills, and the Lord Protector of our Grove, now the willing servant of a Higher Power, at whose command he will slay foul Meledon, the God of Care, bringing joy to the spirits of the trees, the gentle hamadryads, and to us Content. Great Chronos gave a mighty strength to every trunk of our Titan grove, and to become that strength he endowed each with a man's masterful soul to better battle with the winds and Care. Yet were they gentle. All this in the poesy of Irwin and the music of McCoy. With due solemnity shall hurtful Care to ashes be reduced, and you shall listen with profound reverence to the benediction of your most beloved High Priest, who in turn will honor John McNaught by laying on him his command to tell us of our future happy time. Shiels, Sire.

And the invitation to the low jinks reads:

Brother of the Brood: On the August night wherein the Sign of the Archer shines in the sky falls that happy time when the soul of every owl's son is set free. Far-darting Apollo will have slain foul Care and his ashes will have been unearched. The men-spirits will have blown their "mimic hootings to the silent owls" and trooped reluctant back to their prisons in the ruddy trees. Neither dryad nor hama-dryad will there be to haunt the forest aisles. Yours, then, to foot it about the grove of malicious Meledon and to lift your voice in shout and song until the hill-sides ring. Yours, also, to join the company at the Place of the Sacred Fire, to bid welcome the strolling players and with them revel to the melody Paul Steindorff blends of wood and wind and brass. For your soul's sake, fail you not; Simpson, Sire.

Many of the Bohemians went into camp on Tuesday, but the larger number can only spare the time for one day and a night—that of the jinks. Joe Redding arrived early last week. He is looking much stouter than on the occasion of his last visit. "Making money in New York so that he can live in San Francisco" evidently agrees with him, though it has turned his raven hair gray.

President Phelan cabled that he would not be back in time for the jinks, being detained in Europe by the illness of his traveling companion, Rudolph Spreckels. Vice-President Hall will consequently preside at the big dinner which precedes the jinks. Frank Deering will make the dedicatory speech at the new clubhouse. As usual Jack Wilson is to have the "handsome" part in the jinks. He is to be Apollo, gorgeously costumed; last year he was Montezuma and the preceding year, the Indian Chief. Dr. Jack Shiels and Charlie Field will be two of the hamadryads, the river spirits who emerge from the trees. To Dick Hotaling has been given the fat part of Meledon, god of Care. Frank Deering will be the speaking Angel and Vail Bakewell the singing one. Will Irwin's words are said to be rather bombastic, "full of sound and fury, signifying nothing," but the scenic effects are simple and artistic and the music good. Porter Garnett designed the invitations.

When Scandal Is Fit to Print

Peculiar and subtle are many of the distinctions made in journalism. For instance, some newspapers that condemn all forms of gossip that disparage reputation, especially the reputation of a woman, consider it legitimate "news" when it is reduced to writing. Scandal, according to their notion, is to be frowned upon only when it is communicated by tongue to ear. It may be dignified and

BARON STOCK SELLING OUT

All our Custom Tailor Suits and Coats at a Sacrifice

$50 Suits     $14.90

$25 Suits     8.40

200 $20 Coats     5.00

Baron's

762 MARKET ST.

SALE NOW GOING ON

MILLS & HAGBOM

Formerly REHNSTROM & HAGBOM

..TAILORS..

PHELAN BUILDING, Rooms 1, 2, 3     Telephone Main 5387

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL

chastened by a series of pen-strokes, and then it is fit for dissemination in the hallowed columns of a newspaper. Last week the local agent of actor Harry Corson Clarke brought to Town Talk's office a letter from the thespian in which he reviled the sister of his ex-wife. The letter was submitted for publication but rejected, and publicity was given merely to the news that the actor contemplated re-opening his divorce suit, and that he blamed his wife's relatives for alienating her affections. That same letter was subsequently made the basis of sensational articles in the morning dailies that must have been very humiliating to the woman attacked. Harry Corson Clarke has a reputation in San Francisco for traducing women, and for a long period he kept away from the city, fearing chastisement at the hands of the brother of a girl whom he had slandered. It is surprising that so much space should be given to the utterances of such an individual. His letter was sublimated scandal and obviously written for publication.

A Gay Season Expected

Every one is prophesying that the coming social season will begin early. Some big guns will be fired shortly after the middle of the month, and by the first of October the wheels of society will be revolving at a lively rate. Already there has been "tea-ing," although in a quiet way, for WE are supposed to be out of town until September first at least. But the main guard of society is in town, as anyone may be sure of who drops in for lunch at the Palace grill or other favorite luncheon-places on a Saturday. There will be a general flitting Del Monte-wards during the month, but no one expects to be away very long. Mrs. Eleanor Martin, I hear, will give a large function before she goes East. She has hostessed several small teas lately, but no mention has been made of them.

Studious Maids of Society

Studies are absorbing the days of many of our society girls. Bessie Mills is buried deep in a mound of bulky volumes at Berkeley, looking up references for her new book. I am told the book really has merit and is a remarkable undertaking for so young a girl. Lucie King has been attending the summer school, and Christine Pomeroy is studying political economy.

And the Book Binders

Those who aren't studying the insides of books are learning how to bind them artistically. Book-binding, since Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor of Chicago started the craze, has become a popular fad. Christine de Guigne, who has taken it up, says she intends to go to Paris soon and continue her work there, where one is sure to find the best instruction. Other book-binders of the ultra-fashionable set are Edith Chesebrough, Lutje Collier and Mrs. Gilman-Brown.

Miss Rosenstirn's Literary Work

Miss Emily Rosenstirn is devoting a great deal of her time to literature these days. She is writing a book and is also engaged on a translation of "Monna Vanna." I believe that she has received some assurance that her version will be used by Mrs. Fiske, who expects soon to produce the Maeterlinck play. I also hear that a local dramatic club is preparing for a private production of the play. It will be witnessed by only a few people, for the lady who is to take the part of the heroine is very modest and fears that the performance might be given unpleasant notoriety.

His Favorite Is Pie

Professor Arrhenius, who was one of the bright stars of "California's" Summer School, and who is now a member of Regent Charley Wheeler's house party on the McCloud river, has developed a great fondness for American cookery. He is a Dutchman with a tremendous appetite, and if he has a favorite among American dishes, it is pie. Not long ago he was a guest at a family dinner in Berkeley. The dessert included pie, and the hostess, knowing the foreigner's love of the great dyspepsia promoter, gave him a quarter section. There was a quarter section left after the other guests were served, and when Arrhenius finished his portion he was asked if he would not like more. He confessed that he would, and he was given the remaining quarter. When he had finished it his hostess said smilingly:

"You are fond of pie?"

"Yes," he said, taking a long breath, "but you give such large portions."

Regent Wheeler as "Mine Host"

Now that Mrs. Hearst is summering elsewhere Charles Stetson Wheeler is holding up the social end of the University of California. He entertained the visiting foreign savants at his country home on the McCloud and there is no doubt of the opinion of country life in California they will carry away with them. The Wheeler country home is the ideal simple, rambling affair without any of the vulgar ostentation of the Burlingame houses. Most of the wealthy people do not differentiate between their town and country homes. The mode of living is practically the same, the only real difference being a geographical one. But the Wheelers wear old clothes, dine on oilcloth covered tables and drop all the impedimenta that clog city life. No doubt the brain-fagged scholars found that sort of thing very restful and refreshing. Mrs. Hearst, who is very adaptable, has taken the Wheeler receipt for enjoyable mountain life and intends to follow their prescription when the home she is building on the Wheeler estate is finished.

Charles Bedford Jones of Los Angeles, and Benjamin R. Walker of Berkeley, members of the senior class in the University of California, have been made members of the faculty.

GEO. P. MOORE & CO.

Phone South 697

AUTOMOBILE SPECIALTIES
305 VAN NESS AVENUE

BOHM

BRISTOL ©

— Every piece of our comprehensive display of —

SILVERWARE AND CUT GLASS

reflects the perfect workmanship of masters of the art.

104-110 Geary Street
San Francisco

The Punctilious Faubourg

It is not surprising to learn that Mrs. Potter Palmer has failed to take all the hurdles along the social highway in Paris. Mrs. Palmer was too ambitious. She wanted to break into the Faubourg St. Germain set which is a little more exclusive than any in America or even in London. Most American climbers who go to Paris to get the social brand are satisfied with a rating among the high toned bohemians, the minor fashionables, and the lesser nobility. The best Parisian society is very conservative, more so than that of London. To hobnob with the Duchesses de Rohan, d'Uzes and de Noailles, one must have an Old-World repose. It is easy enough to win the American set and the degenerate nobility with dinners, but the Faubourg is exceedingly haughty. It gets disgusted with extravagances that might appeal to some of King Edward's intimates across the channel. The Faubourg no doubt regarded the rich Chicago woman as bourgeois. She has a bad habit of "going to the bottom of her trunk" and swaggering ostentatiously. She is a clever widow, but she wears all her jewels in informal affairs. She cannot shake off her Chicago habits.

Our Most Prolific Composer

"Mr. Bruguere," says a chronicler of the doings of society people, "is collaborating with George de Long on another opera. . . . Mr. Bruguere's musical ability is well known, and Mr. de Long is very clever and is already the author of several pieces." I am sure that Mr. Bruguere's musical ability is well known, because I have been reading about it for years. Mr. Bruguere is the Joan Hadenfeldt of the musical world. The facility with which Mr. Bruguere grinds out operas is even greater than that which Mascagni has long displayed. Every few weeks, according to some writer of society news, Mr. Bruguere has either just finished an opera or just begun a new one. At frequent intervals he has one accepted by some manager, and it is "soon to be produced." He is the most industrious composer in the world today. And the newspapers have been exploiting the musical ability of this rich young man so long that naturally it is well known. I very much regret that I have not had the pleasure of hearing one of his operas. I am anxiously waiting for one to be produced. As for Mr. de Long, he is unquestionably very clever, but this is the first time I have heard of him in the role of an author. And yet he is the author of several pieces; pieces of what?

Coming to San Francisco

The home-coming of Edward Payson Critcher, after several years of absence from his native town, will be tinged with sadness, owing to the death of his father, last week. Critcher senior was a pioneer of the State and quite well known on the stock board during early days. "Ed" Critcher, who was one of the first publishers of an amateur newspaper in San Francisco, went to New York some years ago and entered the newspaper field. He was one of the organizers of the Californian Society, of which J. O'Hara Cosgrave is an officer. Lately Mr. Critcher was appointed editor of the new Masonic weekly, the Trestle Board, which has its offices in Chicago. He is a member of St. Bernard Commandery K. T. of Chicago and is coming to the conclave with that organization next month. St. Bernard's is the commandery that had such a fine drill corps and magnificent drum major during the last triennial conclave held in San Francisco in the eighties. The drill corps is still in existence and is prepared to carry off the first prize in the September competition.

The Rejoinder Polite

To the Argonaut's stinging rebuke Mr. Elwyn Hoffman makes reply:

In its issue of July twenty-fifth the Argonaut took occasion to speak of me as "a gentleman referred to by a contemporary as 'poet Elwyn Hoffman,'" and to reprint a couplet from some verses which I had published in Town Talk and which were addressed to Mr. Louis A. Robertsen. The couplet was as follows:

"A nation's building, day to day,
Swells up from street, and mart, and quay."

In the way of comment upon this, the Argonaut said: "A little learning is a dangerous thing." Presumably, my pronunciation of the word "quay" affected the erudite soul of the Argonaut most disagreeably. Evidently, it caused a severe pain, and simply could not be passed in silence. Therefore it delivered itself of the above "rebuttal," and no doubt considered that it had struck a telling blow in the interest of pure speech. While I do not think it is worth while to perpetuate the Argonaut's quibble by giving it a larger circulation, I do think that it will do no harm, in the interest of common sense, to call the Argonaut's attention to the fact that its criticism is nothing more than a quibble, and a very foolish quibble at that. If the Argonaut were really the literary journal which it pretends to be, it would be arrayed, not dogmatically against changes in pronunciation, but for them. It has long been a matter of serious consideration among literary men, how to change the spelling and pronunciation of certain words in our language so as to make them conform more nearly to the best needs of speech. The English language is heavily burdened with words which should either be spelled differently, or pronounced differently. The word "quay" is among these. The dictionaries give its pronunciation as "ke," but in view of its spelling, such a pronunciation is certainly to be condemned. Personally, I have always preferred to pronounce it as spelled, and doubtless shall continue so to prefer, in spite of the Argonaut's objection to anything so "perfectly shocking." I cannot but express my sorrow, however, at the position which the Argonaut has taken on this subject. It grieves me to find that this "literary" journal is opposed to language reform, for its opposition will, of course, send all the hopes of the advocates of a better speech a-glimmering.

DECORATIONS For Weddings, Dinners, Luncheons, Receptions and Stores. Flower gifts attractively arranged. Bridal bouquets artistically specialized.

Original Designs in Favors, Name Cards, Menus, Almond Dishes and Candle Shades

MISS CHARLOTTE F. WILLIAMS
121 Post Street Tel. John 1911 San Francisco
Out of Town Correspondence Solicited

YOU CAN'T FOOL A GOOD JUDGE

He Knows That It's

Rainier BEER

JOHN RAPP & SON, AGTS.
SAN FRANCISCO

Distributors in every town on the coast.

The Navy in Berkeley

Berkeley is becoming a haven for Rear-Admirals, and no less than three of them have decided that the scholastic village is one of the most charming places of residence in California. Rear-Admiral Miller and his family are staying at the Berkeley Inn this summer, but will soon build a home on the hill. The Rear-Admiral will retire next month from active service, and his family has persuaded him to make Berkeley his home instead of returning to New York. Rear-Admiral Kempf and his daughters spend the greater part of their time at their Berkeley home, and Rear-Admiral Glass and Mrs. Glass expect to become permanent residents, when their new house is ready for occupancy.

Lieutenant Russell Eastman, U. S. A., who married Miss Lottie Patton, Colonel Patton's pretty daughter, at St. Louis last week, is a brother officer of Lieutenant Gilbert A. McElroy, who married Mary Bright Wallace just a fortnight before.

Simplicity was the keynote of the Patton-Eastman wedding as well as that of Mrs. De Greayer with Captain Rowan, which was witnessed only by the bride's maid and the sexton of the church. It seems that fuss and feathers do not always attend functions of this character when army people are involved. It is probable, however, that the next army wedding—that of Anna Sperry and Lieutenant Clarence Carrigan—will be on a more elaborate scale. It will occur on the thirty-first of August and will be solemnized in Sausalito with all the paraphernalia, and buttons galore, usual on such an occasion. Mrs. Jean Nokes Murphy is to officiate as matron of honor.

Mrs. De Greayer bought a house in Mill Valley shortly before her marriage with Captain Rowan, and that is to be their home. She received many beautiful gifts. The Gunns and the Merrills, her most intimate friends, sent very valuable presents, and Camille D'Arville Crellin, Ida Conquest and Henry Miller remembered her.

Manoeuvring Regulars and Militiamen

Society is flocking southward, for the regular troops and National Guard begin today their practice of the art of war that is not limited by the target range and drill ground. Camp Atascadero is situated about ten miles from Paso Robles, in the centre of Rancho del Encinal. Major-General Arthur MacArthur, U. S. A., is in command of the camp, the details of the manoeuvres being carried out under Colonel Jocelyn, Major Duvall and Captain Cloman of the general staff. A number of young officers will be detailed to make the military maps. Nothing like this occasion has ever taken place in California before and it will therefore have the charm of novelty added to that of natural interest. Never in the history of the Paso Robles hotel will there have been such a gathering of society at that hostelry. I remember years ago, before the extension of the railroad and the building of the present hotel, several summers when smart San Franciscans were guests there, but never more than twenty at a time. Everything has been changed since then, but it is safe to say the hotel has never had such a string of applications as went by mail or wire this month.

FAT FOLKS

I reduced my weight 70 pounds, bust 6 inches, waist 6 inches and hips 14 inches in a short time by a guaranteed harmless remedy without exercise or starving. I will tell you all about it. Enclose stamp. Address

MRS. E. S. RICHARDS,
226 E. 9th St., Riverside, Cal.

Metamorphosing The Tin Soldier

There is more importance to the joint manoeuvres of the regular troops and the California State militia, which will begin at the Henry ranch in San Luis Obispo county next week, than the average citizen imagines. In the first place, it marks an epoch in the National Guard movement, being the first time in the history of that organization in this State that it has come under national control. Under the provisions of the Dick bill of 1903, the State militia are now under Federal supervision, and may be mobilized under officers of the regular army upon occasions like this, as well as being subject to the call of the President, to serve anywhere, in or out of the State, in case war is threatened. The best feature of all is the abolition of the "tin soldier" characteristics of the old-time National Guard camps and parades. This encampment means business. It means practical instruction and experience, side by side with regular troops, in the problems that must be met in actual campaigning, and General MacArthur, who will be in supreme command, has made it known in unmistakable terms that the encampment is to be no summer picnic, but a school of instruction. It is safe to say that these two weeks in the field with the regulars will do more to make real, efficient soldiers out of the militiamen than all the armory drills and all the camps of the old-fashioned kind, of a life time.

The entire State is also likely to derive benefits from the encampment at Henry ranch. It is quite likely that in case the undertaking is a success, a large permanent camp will be established in California, which will in future years be the place of mobilization not alone of the California militia and the regulars of the Department of California, but of the militia of Oregon, Washington, Utah, Arizona and New Mexico, with the regulars of the whole Division of the Pacific.

Return of "Bloody" Doyle

Lieutenant-Commander James G. Doyle arrived in this city last week from the Orient on the Doric, after an absence of several years, and was greeted by many of his old-time friends, of whom he has crowds on the Pacific coast. "Jimmy" Doyle served for some time on vessels of the Coast Survey, from San Diego to Alaska, and later was attached to Schley's flagship, the Brooklyn, in which he took part in the battle of Santiago. He is a jolly mess-mate, always ready with a song or story, and his popularity is great throughout the service. Although one of the best-natured of men, he went by the name of "Bloody" Doyle while at the Naval Academy, owing to his ability as a boxer, which produced more than one bloody nose during his numerous friendly bouts with the gloves.

Prince Goes To The Philippines

There is much regret in local social circles over the recent departure of Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas C. Prince, of the Marines, for the Philippines, where he will be employed for many months on a tour of inspection of the marine garrisons in those islands. Prince has been for some time the Marine Corps quartermaster of the whole Pacific coast, including Alaska, Hawaii, Guam and Midway. All of his local duties have been turned over to Lieutenant-Colonel Richards, the paymaster, who is therefore not by any means enjoying a sinecure. Prince graduated from Annapolis in 1882, in the same class with Lewis Nixon, Philo N. McGiffin and others whose names are well known. He was destined for the Line of the Navy, but through the workings of the Robeson bill he was assigned to the Marine Corps.

The Unfortunate Ohio

The failure of the battleship Ohio to develop the contract speed of eighteen knots on her official trial trip was the most severe blow that Pacific coast, and particularly San Francisco shipbuilding has received in its history. Every warship hitherto built in San Francisco, including the historic Oregon and Olympia, has surpassed the Navy Department's requirements. Every one has been a credit to the builders and a source of gratification to the Navy. That the Ohio, launched under the auspices of the lamented President McKinley, should be the one to fail, has caused genuine mourning, her poor performance being all the more regrettable when it is remembered that foreign nations are building battleships with nineteen knots speed. The Ohio is of course a powerful war vessel, much more powerful and even speedier than the Oregon class and other of our new battleships, but however powerful may be her ordnance, her speed deficiency places her in a class with foreign battleships built nearly a decade ago. She cannot be regarded as a thoroughly up-to-date man-of-war.

A "Tahitian Afternoon"

No bride-elect is being more extensively entertained just now than is Florence Brown, whose engagement to Dr. W. S. Porter is just announced. The most recent entertainment planned in her honor was a "Tahitian afternoon" by Mrs. Walter Scott, who returned from the Pacific Islands in the last steamer. The affair was given in the handsome residence of the Scotts, in East Twelfth street, Oakland, and, I hear that although the guests and hostess did not wear the native costume of fringed grass, the decorations and refreshments were really as true to "atmosphere" as if the scene had been enacted on the palm-crowned islands themselves. The piece de resistance was a salad, such as Mrs. Scott says the natives eat daily for breakfast. A prize had been offered the one who should come nearest to guessing the ingredients, but when Florence Brown hazarded an opinion that the salad was based upon a compound of "missionaries, young and tender," the other women were shocked and the prize, which was to have been a realistic figure of a Tahitian native, was withdrawn. For a tempestuous moment it looked as if that delicious salad was to be the means of breaking up the "afternoon." The guests' attention was directed to bananas and pineapples in unconventional garb and the threatened storm passed. The decorations were superb; the ceiling was thatched with grass and palm trees were used to uphold the corners, while graceful bamboo waved in feathery fronds from every corner, and orchids climbed in brilliant, jeweled lengths and wound themselves around the tall trees. Curios, brought by Mrs. Scott from the far-away Pacific Islands, were exhibited in the library, where the hostess gave a most instructive and entertaining talk upon them and, incidentally, told many an amusing anecdote of life in Tahiti and of the ways of the islanders.

Delinquents Cause Trouble

Trouble is brewing in the Reliance Club of Oakland in consequence of the disinclination of some of the members to reduce their indebtedness to the organization. There has been some talk of expelling the delinquents and also of giving their names to the newspapers.

No Foreigner For Her

The great expectations indulged by Oakland people over the prospect of Evelyn Craig's marriage to a titled Englishman have come to naught. Miss Craig has decided

FAIRCHILD SUITS, WAISTS AND CORSETS

TO ORDER ONLY

The latest Parisian creation, front lacing Corsets. Made perfectly to conform with the figure—high or low, light or heavily boned, as the form requires.

Phone Larkin 862

1211 SUTTER STREET

"Strathmill"
Scotch Whisky

an aged whisky distilled
from barley malt—not corn
CROWN DISTILLERIES CO.
GENERAL AGENTS

that an untitled American is good enough for her. She has announced her engagement to William L. Pattiani, a relative of the C. D. Gilmans, and she will make her home in one of the picturesque hillsides of Piedmont instead of acquiring an estate in England.

Her Latest Conquest

Since the return of Mae Perkins, daughter of Senator Perkins, from the Orient, there have been rumors of another conquest by that dashing and spirited young woman. During her sojourn in the Orient Martin Egan spent so much time by her side that when they parted it was thought that in all likelihood affairs had progressed to the engagement stage. Egan is the Associated Press correspondent, specially detailed for war news. He was formerly a reporter in Oakland and was a great pet among society girls. "As nice as Martin Egan" was for a long time a superlative expression across the bay. He gave a dinner in honor of Miss Perkins just before she started homewards.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Moore Jr. (Florence Blythe) are enjoying an automobile trip in Europe, a la the one described in "The Lightning Conductor," the popular auto novel of last year.

Popular Reverend Brown

The Rev. Charles R. Brown, known as the George Washington of the Oakland pulpit, seems to be getting ahead of the rector of the Church of the Advent in his many marriages. Mr. Shaw is said to have such sympathy with the blissful couples that it trembles in his very tones. But there are always many reasons for a young and good looking clergyman's popularity.

Mae Sadler Abroad

Dashing Mae Sadler of Alameda has written to friends that she has been having the time of her life in Europe. She has been the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Denbigh, in Kent, and recently she attended a concert given under the auspices of royalty, meeting there Clara Alexander, whose negro impersonations have been creating a great sensation in London society. Miss Sadler is now in Paris and intends visiting Italy and Switzerland, after which she will return to London to study singing. When Ruth Sadler is graduated from Miss Hamlin's school next summer, she and her mother will join Mae and they will all tour Europe.

Mrs. Hattie Tabor and her daughter, Alice, have just returned from Honolulu in a sailing vessel. They spent thirty-five days on the water, taking the trip for their health, their nerves having frayed out as a result of the strenuous fashionable life. They now consider themselves vulgarly robust.

The Eternal Problem

The servant problem is becoming such a serious one in this city that it is a menace to home life. Half of the business done by boarding houses is the result of the servant problem. Rather than be subjected to the annoyances and inconveniences incident to the management of a home under present conditions, many women declare in favor of the boarding-house. The scarcity of Chinese help has enabled the Mongolian to demand such high wages that people in moderate circumstances cannot afford to employ them. The Jap has been tried and found wanting. He is a poor substitute for the Flowery Kingdom heathen. The white woman from foreign parts has taken advantage of the situation. She has become more independent than ever, more exacting and less useful. The specialization of labor is such that one servant will not do a thing considered to be another's duty. If one has several servants it takes the entire time of one person to keep their tasks properly divided. In Los Angeles, I hear, conditions are even worse than in this city. No fewer than four wives of millionaires are doing their own work down there. The girls in Los Angeles who are willing to work out have the Eastern idea that they are "help," and should be permitted to eat at the family table.

Mabel Toy has recovered from her recent illness and is preparing for her trip to St. Louis. Miss Toy has become the best bowler of the younger set. She practices a good deal and the muscular development of her arm is said to be quite wonderful.

In San Rafael

Elsie Tallant is one of the most popular girls at San Rafael this summer. She rides horseback a great deal and is in constant demand for driving parties. The Baker boys have their automobiles and traps over there and are responsible for most of the gayety among the younger set. The mammas spend most of their time at bridge.

Artistic Interiors Designed and Decorated

Ideas and Estimates furnished for all classes of
Decorative Work

L. TOZER & SON

762-764 Mission St.

San Francisco, Cal.

NOW ON!

S. & G. GUMP CO.'S

113 Geary St.

CLEARANCE SALE

Discounts on Everything!

Twentieth Century Club Tangle

The fashionable Twentieth Century Club which was organized to promote music culture is in the throes of dissolution. If it goes up in smoke, as it promises to do by reason of the factional fires, several smaller clubs will spring from its ashes. One of the causes of dissension is the importance which some of the members attach to social standing. With them musical culture even in a musical club is a matter of secondary consideration. As only a few of our society women have been endowed by the muses, the club became strong in society but rather mediocre in talent. Whenever a new name was proposed the first question asked was, "Who is she?" Sometimes the reply would be, "A fine vocalist." "Yes, yes"—from the interrogator—"but who is she? From what family," etc. So the Twentieth Century Club is divided into factions—those who do not want pedigree and those who do.

The Rudolph Spreckelses are expected to return home in October, but the Gus Spreckelses will not be here for some time later. Miss Lurline will be in town in time for the winter's whirl, over which news the jeunesse doree are rejoicing.

My Lord Bountiful

The local artists have a mysterious patron who visits them all without playing favorites, and buys their pictures. But the mysterious feature about this patron is that he never sends for his purchases, making the excuse that at present he has no room in his habitation for them. Nevertheless he never fails to pay for his purchases. The artists call him their fairy god-father.

Art Gossip

I hear that a German Countess posed for one of Ed Cucuel's opera pictures. Cucuel's sketches of court life are admirable. Cucuel was a Bulletin artist in the beginning of his career, and then went on the Call. It was about eight years ago that he left here for Paris. As he speaks German and French fluently he is rarely taken for an American. Though so many deride the local school where Cucuel learned the early tricks of his art, it has certainly turned out many successful artists, some of whom were his classmates. Jules Pages, who has had many pictures in the Paris salon, was one; Jimmy Swinnerton, the caricaturist and creator of the famous little bears, was another; and Cadenasso, one of the best of our landscapists, was another. Emilia Kalisher (now Mrs. Thompson) also studied there before she became one of the Art League students, subsequently going to Paris.

Matteo Sandona has gone to Sonoma county to rest and gather a few sketches.

Afraid to Ruin His Style

Bobby Aitken, the sculptor, used to say there was nothing for him to learn in Europe, and it seemed as though he never could be persuaded to cross the ocean. He said that he feared he would ruin his style. But he has broadened somewhat of late, and is now on his way to view the masterpieces of European plastic art.

The Truant Artist

Brubaker, the artist who designed so many striking posters for the Sunset, has deserted palette and pencil for the seclusion of a poultry farm where he will raise feathered things to his heart's content. Every little while the commercial instinct lures some local artist away from Bohemia, but in time he wanders back to his studio. Gordon Ross was designing stained-glass windows for awhile but he is doing newspaper art work again.

Mrs. McBean has rented her house and will stay at the Richelieu this winter with Athol and Mrs. Kierstedt. Mrs. McBean's health has never been robust and now that Edith no longer requires chaperoning her mother feels that she can take a rest from society's claims.

"I presume that the last act ends in wedded bliss as usual?"
"Oh, no; he has given it a fashionable touch. The goal of happiness in this play is the divorce court."

The Preston Girls

Mr. and Mrs. Len D. Owens with two of their children are at Aetna Springs. Mrs. Owens, who was the eldest of the Preston girls and a step-sister of Edith and Norma, makes a splendid step-mother. She had one of her own, and that is perhaps the reason she knew so well how to win the hearts of Mr. Owens's children. Although the Owens's have all kinds of money they prefer to live a quiet life. Their tastes in this respect differ from those of Mrs. Owens's sisters, Mrs. Drown and Mrs. Ames, who are always flitting about from one country-place to another. Mrs. Drown is a great friend of the Hopkins girls, and like the two Mesdames Taylor makes a model mother. The Ames's are building a home in San Mateo and when it is finished will move there. The Drowns senior own a beautiful ranch near Los Gatos, upon which they have lately spent a large sum in improvements. It is there the eldest son of the house of Drown lives, with his wife.

PIERCE-RODOLPH STORAGE CO. Inc.

STORAGE, MOVING, PACKING AND SHIPPING

WAREHOUSE: EDDY ST., near Fillmore

Specially built for the Storage of Household Furniture

OFFICE: POST AND POWELL STS.

Phone Private 571

DEAFNESS

Those troubled with deafness are cordially invited to demonstrations of the MASSACON and ACOUSTICON at the offices of the

HUTCHISON ACOUSTIC COMPANY

W. B. EGAN, Pacific Coast Agent Phone Priv. Ex. 216
417-418 Starr-King Bldg., 121 Geary St., San Francisco

Hopkins Clan Goes A-Camping

E. W. Hopkins has taken the usual clan for an outing at Prosser, where he owns everything in sight. At their Menlo Park place the Hopkins's do the conventional sort of country entertaining, but to their lodge in the Sierras they invite only the intimate friends who find that sort of roughing congenial. Mrs. Gus Taylor, Mrs. Fred McNear, Mrs. Will Taylor, Mrs. Latham McMullin, Mrs. Gene Murphy and Mrs. Laurance Scott were of the merry party that left a few days ago for this cherished annual outing. They took along the roughest sort of outing togs, for hunting, fishing and sailing punctuate the day and at night everybody is too tired to think of dressing for dinner. Mr. Hopkins owns the ice plant on the lake and the cooks who prepare the food for the men, "grub" for the master and his party. It must be a relief for people who have to eat course dinners with all the queer implements that the science of cutlery can devise to get down to tin spoons once in a while. The Hopkins party will rusticate in the mountains till the last call for the Del Monte meet summons them Montereywards.

She Forgave Him

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clarke, after a brief honeymoon in the Eastern States, have gone back to Paris to reside. Ed Clarke had been engaged to the French girl, who is now his bride, for a long time. She is very much younger than he. He meant to be faithful to her when he left her to make a trip to this city, but he awoke one morning after a very strenuous night, and found himself the husband of the sweet pea girl. But that marriage was quickly annulled, and despite the little infidelity, the French girl was true blue, and crossed the ocean to be married in New York. She probably thought it wouldn't be wise to take any more chances. Mrs. Jeremiah Clarke, who came out here to settle up Harold Clarke's estate, will soon go back to Paris, for she no longer enjoys living in this country.

The second annual tennis tournament at Santa Barbara will be held at the Potter hotel courts beginning next Monday and extending over five days. The events will be men's open singles, consolation singles and doubles; mixed doubles; ladies' handicap singles, consolation singles and doubles. No entrance fee will be charged, and the United States Lawn Tennis Association rules will govern all play. On Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons the tennis play will give way to polo matches. Miss May Sutton will defend the cup, at the big tennis match, playing the winner of the match of the ladies' handicap singles. If there are sufficient entries of visitors to warrant it, the Country Club will hold an invitation golf tournament the week following.

I hear that Miss Georgie Spieker is to be a very active hostess next winter. She made a trip round the world last year, but did not go out much on her return. Next season she will give several large entertainments. She is an heiress and a beautiful girl. She spends a great deal of her time in her automobile and is regarded as a very daring chauffeuse.

S. KRAMER*Suits, Jackets and Outer GarmentsMade to OrderLADIES' ARTISTIC TAILORING

Phone Black 3831

218 Powell St., San Francisco

Their Friendship is Firm

The Youngers are going to stay in California only a few weeks. They say they like San Francisco better than Paris, but Dr. Younger makes so much more money there than he could here they feel that they must expatriate themselves, although in heart they will always be Californians. Next week Mrs. Younger will visit Mrs. Downey Harvey, while Dr. Younger is at the Bohemian jinks. The friendship of Mrs. Harvey and Mrs. Younger is of no new growth, but dates from years ago when the former was Miss Cutter and the latter Mrs. Edgerton. Dr. Younger was then the admirer of beautiful "Tot" Cutter, who met a sad death by drowning. When the Harvey girls were in Europe, attending convent school, they caught brief glimpses of high life in Austria, through the medium of the Younger sisters, the Baronesses Nugent and Gall.

"I'm sure those Wall-street brokers are humorous fellows."

"Why do you think so?"

"Every little while they wire the news out here that money is easy."

Mabel Gunn's Engagement

Cupid is liable to get many a jolt riding postilion with the latest engaged couple, Mabel Gunn and Dr. Thayer of Porto Rico. Miss Gunn is a high-spirited girl with a will of her own, and her friends are wondering how her fiancé will stand the capricious tests she is bound to put him to during the engagement period. At Mills College and later at a fashionable Eastern school, Mabel Gunn always led the rebellious spirits that were "forinst" everybody and everything that curbed their freedom. She has a way of expressing her opinions without a "by your leave" to anyone and her presence at a function is as prickly as a needle shower. Mabel Gunn is just slipping out of her teens and her particular friends are the Bull girls, who are now traveling in Europe. She is a fine type of the independent American girl who doesn't need a chaperon. Candor and sincerity are her shining virtues. Her older sister, Amy, has become a great favorite, particularly in the army and navy set. She had practically to make a niche for herself in society, as her parents in spite of their wealth, had always avoided the social side of life. Amy Gunn is one of the few girls in society who speaks Spanish like a Castilian. After she was graduated from the Irving Institute she spent three years at a private school in Spain.

Old J.H. Cutter Whisky

FROM OLD KENTUCKY

DISTILLED AND BOTTLED BY
C.P. MOORMAN & CO.
LOUISVILLE, KY

SHERWOOD
AND
SHERWOOD
DISTRIBUTORS
212-214 MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO.
HARRY G. HOWELL
SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE

THE BEST AFLOAT OR ASHORE

Howard's Masterpieces

Galen Howard, the architect of the new buildings of the University of California, has achieved something picturesque and out-of-the-common as well in the arrangement of his own house, which stands in the midst of the beautiful scenery in North Berkeley, where Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, the Wheelers, the Wilsons, and other notables have modern castles. His windows all face toward the ocean or the distant mountains and each sash is finished as a picture frame, in dull gold or ebony. Thin silk or lace curtains hang straight from each side but in no wise obscure the view. Mr. Howard says that there will be no need of other pictures alongside of the works which the Master of the Universe has spread upon His canvas for the delight and inspiration of each one who chooses to frame and make his own.

Juvenile Vengeance

The John Galen Howards have a brood of merry children whose pranks are reminiscent of "Helen's Babies." The other day Mrs. Howard noticed that everyone who passed the house wore a broad smile, or exploded into peals of laughter.

"What a happy world it is," she said to a caller who entered with a broad grin. "Everyone who has passed here today looks so gleeful."

"Evidently your children are not," laughed the caller, and drawing Mrs. Howard out on the porch she pointed up at the front windows. In one hung a huge placard on which was scrawled in glaring black letters:

The Governess

Is a Pig.

In the other window a twin placard announced the reason for this lampoon—

She Won't Let Us

Go Out To Play.

California's Wonderful Museum

It is said, proudly, by the faculty and friends of the University of California, that no collection of antiques is to be found in the United States worthy of comparison with that in the museum of the institution at Berkeley. In this collection are specimens from Greece, Italy, Egypt, and South America, and so perfect and valuable are they that the attention of savants from all over the country is being directed to it. The archaeological collection is especially rich in Etruscan and early Italian specimens. G. A. Reisner, Hearst lecturer in Egyptology, is at present in the land of the Pharaohs and Fellahs, gathering more material of the ancient people for use in his work and to further enrich the museum. For the same purpose, although in a different field, M. Uhle, Hearst lecturer in Peruvian archaeology, is in Peru, studying the ancient and partially buried cities of that province of South America. The museum has a very valuable cabinet of ancient coins, including eighteen hundred coins of Greek States and Kingdoms, coins of early Italic republics, Gentile coins of Rome, coins of the nations of Gaul, and of the imperial period of Rome.

Other Antiques

There is also in the museum a series of reproductions of the principal periods of antique art, which is of great interest and value to the student. It is said to be the most

M. H. RICHARDSON, Opposite Phelan Building
 Importer of Precious, Semi-Precious and Superior Imitation Stones
 769 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO

MME. GILLINGHAM*COMPLEXION SPECIALIST

Will guarantee to permanently remove every wrinkle (no matter how deep) crows feet, small pox pittings, freckles, bagginess of the eyes, restore lost contour, making you a new skin as clear and fresh as in youth. No surgery or electricity used. There are ladies at the Parlors who have one half of the face treated, showing the thoroughness of the treatment.

All Consultation, either by mail or person, free and confidential.

Parlors, 131 POWELL ST., Near Ellis

SUGAR

2¢ a lb.

In order to introduce our Quality Groceries we will send to any one family one order of our Special Combination No. 50 for ..... $8.60
 We pay the express or freight.
 50 lbs. best Granulated Cane Sugar, white and dry ..... 1.00
 18 lbs. new fancy head Table Rice, very best ..... 1.00
 10 lbs. pail pure Leaf Lard, Rex or Swift ..... 1.10
 5 lbs. Fancy English Breakfast, Spider Leg or Ceylon Tea... 2.50
 5 lbs. Mocha and Java Coffee, roast or ground, none better 1.50
 5 lbs. pure Baking Powder, Eastern "Cream" ..... 1.50

$8.60

Everything Guaranteed—Money Back.

SMITHS' CASH STORE, Inc.

25 Market Street San Francisco
 Phone U.S. Exchange 560

ALASKA REFRIGERATORS

FOR GROCERS
 BUTCHERS
 FLORISTS AND HOUSEHOLD -

TILE, OPAL OR
 ZINC LINED—
 PACIFIC COAST AGENTS

W.W. MONTAGUE & CO.
 309-317 MARKET ST.

extensive collection of the sort in America. There are also large collections of photographs and engravings of classical subjects and a set of wall maps of ancient countries. The Latin scholar has access to five hundred mechanical copies of classified Latin inscriptions, made in Rome under the direction of Dr. Alfred Emerson, acting as the agent of Mrs. Hearst. These inscriptions are said by Latin scholars to be of more value to the student than a year's research in Rome.

Many of the smart society people of Los Angeles are closing their homes and taking apartments at the Angelus hotel, which makes a specialty of family suites.

At the Resorts

Arrivals during past week at Rowardennan from San Francisco were: R. W. Furman, Mrs. Pierson Durbrow, Ed. Cebrían, Miss F. Fernside, J. Costa; from Santa Cruz, Mrs. F. W. Swanton, W. H. Lamb; from Shanghai, Mrs. Oskar Mordhorst, and child, Fraulein a. Herrmann; Mrs. Ada C. Sutton, Louisville, Ky.; S. J. Bruce and family, Oakland; Mrs. M. Agar Dunbar, London.

Late arrivals at the Hotel Belvedere included: Mr. and Mrs. Walter Speyer, Helen, Ethel and Eugene Speyer, E. M. and J. K. Hecht, Miss Hecht, Adelheid Hecht, J. H. Masterton and family, Mr. and Mrs. F. Habenicht and family, Mrs. C. B. Sloan, Miss Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. W. Frank and Elsa Frank, Captain and Mrs. W. J. Gray, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Countryman and family, all of San Francisco, Mrs. K. Douglas of Sacramento.

Arrivals at Paraiso Springs included, from San Francisco: Mrs. O. A. Kotelman, Mrs. Wendk, Mrs. P. A. Mahoney, M. Gorman, Theresa Gorman, Mrs. Greninger, H. Redlick, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cox and daughter, Jacob Brandt, M. Clancy, D. P. Francis, J. N. Costello, A. B. Clay.

Mrs. H. C. Whiting, of San Francisco, wife of Superintendent Whiting of the C. & N. W. Railway, is registered at El Carmelo, Pacific Grove. Others at the hotel are Mrs. George E. Wilhoit and John Wilhoit of Stockton, Captain C. C. Stadler of the Ninth Cavalry and Miss Stradler, Dr. Chas. Brown of Philadelphia, E. A. Knight of Shanghai, China, R. and W. Weinstock of Sacramento, Dr. W. J. Austin. F. J. Small, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Ormsby of San Francisco, were visitors at El Carmelo last week, where Mr. Small's family has been rusticated for the past two months.

Among the many recent arrivals at Byron Hot Springs hotel are F. L. Stone and wife, Lewis Morrison, Miss L. Armsby, H. Maundrell, Alex. Less, W. A. Downs, Phil Kiefer, F. O. Johnson, Miss Maren Froelich, Mrs. J. Gohiere and child, Mrs. W. G. Stafford, Miss Marjorie Stafford, J. A. Eagleson, G. E. Kirkpatrick, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kirkpatrick, from San Francisco; from Oakland, H. G. Morrow, Miss Katherine Madden, Miss Margaret Slavich, Miss Ilma C. Chase, Samuel Hubbard Jr., C. P. Hubbard, Mr. and Mrs. J. Ghiradelli, Miss Carmen Ghiradelli, Mrs. Hufschmidt.

Arrivals at Hotel Del Monte this week included G. C. Rockwell, Mrs. MacArthur, Arthur MacArthur, P. W. West, U. S. A.; Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Blanchard, Mrs. A. L. Tubbs, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Oyster and family, Mrs. J. T. Dean, Miss Parks, San Francisco; Mrs. M. P. Spindle, J. P. Spindle, Washington, D. C.; Thomas J. Barbour, Chas. G. Lyman, Mr. and Mrs. Fries, Earle Talbot, L. M. Robbins, San Francisco.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR ART LOVERS.

Art lovers, and all who dote on artistic home decoration, should be pleased to learn that there is a clearance sale at Gump's this week. Whenever the Gumps announce a clearance sale connoisseurs sit up and take notice, for they know that an opportunity is at hand to pick up something worth having in pictures, cut-glass or bric-a-brac. The establishment of S. & G. Gump is a veritable treasure house filled with rare ornaments that are the finest samples of the handiwork of the best known artists of Europe.

Jules', 315 Pine street, is in no way connected with any other restaurant.

Professor Joseph Beringer, whose interesting letter from Leipzig recently appeared in the music department, has returned from Europe and resumed his duties at the head of the Beringer Conservatory of Music.

Baron's Cloak and Suit House has removed to 115 Geary St., next to Gump's. Tailor-made suits a specialty. Your credit is good.

FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS

Worth of the freshest and best coffee distributed free by The Call to its "want ad" patrons. A pound can of J. A. Folger's "GOLDEN GATE COFFEE" will be given free to every want advertiser in the next Sunday Call. Only one can of this high-class coffee will be given to a want advertiser and none but those presenting a bona fide want ad to the business office of this paper on Thursday, Friday and Saturday for insertion in the want columns of next Sunday's Call will be entitled to receive this premium. See announcement classified pages of the Call.

Private Rooms	Phone Main 5966	Jules Wittmann
JULES' RESTAURANT
Regular Dinner with Wine, 75c Sundays and Holidays, $1.00
315-317-319-321-323 Pine St.	Music Sundays	Open Evenings
JULES IS IN NO WAY CONNECTED WITH ANY UPTOWN RESTAURANT

DR. NAGEL, Oculist.	Practice Limited to the Eye.
Has Removed to 731 Sutter St., Atkinson Bldg.
Hours 10 to 12 A. M. and 1 to 3 P. M.	Phone East 1247
Residence, 1919 Vallejo St.—Phone West 1103

MRS. L. WARWICK
(Formerly of the Waldorf)
ELECTROLYSIS, FACIAL TREATMENTS
Superfluous Hair, Warts and Moles Removed with ELECTRIC NEEDLE
Room 603 STARR KING BUILDING	121 GEARY STREET
Phone Private Exchange 216

	DR. E. H. RETSLOFF
	2504 CLAY ST.	Phone Geary 2259
	WRINKLES, Crows Feet, Lines, Scars, Tan, Freckles, Yellow and Flabby Skin and all FACIAL BLEMISHES REMOVED by my new scientific Parisian method. No pain, no inconvenience, no bad after effects. SUPERFLUOUS HAIR removed.
	RETSLOFF CREAMS AND ASTRINGENTS Invaluable to ladies of refinement Will teach others the Profession—Dr. Retsloff will form a class for teaching any part of her wonderful treatment to those who desire to make a profession of Facial and Skin Treatment. Call or write.

MRS. E. L. RYAN
DERMATOLOGIST
APARTMENT 500	THE IROQUOIS
524 ELLIS STREET
Phone Private Exchange 719
Wrinkles and all Facial Blemishes and Superfluous Hair removed. Manicuring, Hair Dressing, Scalp Treatment.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR and all other Facial Blemishes
are removed by MISS LOIS GRAY, Donahue Building, Rooms 28 and 29, 1170 Market St., with the Electric Needle, without pain or scar. Permanency guaranteed. Hours 1 to 4 P. M. Phone Folsom 3783.

 CURES Bythina NATURAL LAXATIVE CONSTIPATION FOR SALE AT DRUG STORES AND BARS
---

The Stage

"Joseph Entangled"

English middle-class society has no reason to blush for its aristocrats in "Joseph Entangled." Henry Arthur Jones has written a play that does not deal in demoralizing ridicule of the domestic hearth or the fatuity of the principles on which social order rests. He mirrors only a phase of the manners of high-toned British society, and universalizes individuality, so that the characters with which he peoples his play are English only because they had to be of some nationality. During the recent vogue of salacious plays in London people who study the correlation of things viewed, as tremendously significant, dramas of "The Gay Lord Quex" order, contemporaneous as they were with the defeat of the flower of England's army by a handful of Dutch plowmen. It was thought that Pinero foreshadowed Joubert and that Kruger followed in the wake of the Grundys and Cartons. But Henry Arthur Jones has done nothing significant of national decadence in "Joseph Entangled." Instead of metamorphosing Lares and Penates into satyrs with horns that protrude through the family roof-tree, he has merely fashioned an exhilarating comedy out of a suspicious circumstance that justified a husband's development of a pair of green eyes. He has employed his material with neatness, ingenuity and polite effect, and the performance is good fun—mighty good fun. The only sin that is exploited is that of gossip, which is not fostered in London society any more than it is anywhere else. The dramatist has shown us how eager people are to infer from circumstances that a woman has been deceiving her husband, and how quick they are to spread the news. This theme is not new but "it all depends upon the way in which it is done," as the clown used to say in the circus, just before the airy, fairy one in layers of tulle jumped through the tissue hoop. Mr. Jones has done it well. It is a long time since I have seen anything quite so funny as the scene in the breakfast room in the first act, when the Harry Tavenders discovered Sir Joseph and Lady Verona together, and listened in good-natured amusement to the explanations, clearly skeptical, but simulating credulity in the face of what they considered overwhelming evidence of guilt. The scene in the second act is also a capital conceit. Nothing could be funnier than the efforts of Sir Joseph to trace the gossip to its source, the while protesting his innocence to men who felt that he was doing the honorable thing in a very clumsy, blundering way. In this act Mr. Jones takes his severest smash at the English gentleman by having Professor Tosfield, the stern, uncompromising moralist, remark that when a man gives his word of honor, then there need be no further doubt but that his representations are entirely false. There is a great deal of this cynicism in the play, but it is in the nature of polite chaff, and does not shock. Jones has handled his material with remarkable deftness, and it is safe to predict that his play will have a successful run in this country. It was unfortunate that Mr. Miller was unable to open his Columbia engagement with the Jones play and with the mummery by whom he is now surrounded. The cast is an exceptionally strong one, and Miller has a most congenial role in Sir Joseph, one that does not appear to be too young for his years. Hilda Spong gives a fine performance of the suspected wife who plays with fire and scorches her reputation. Though she is impeccable from the point of view of the play she took advantage of the fact that she was loved by a man who was not her husband, to discipline the latter, and that is not a very honorable thing for a wife to do, but it helps out a comedy-drama wonderfully. Miss Spong is a magnetic actress and her mannerisms are captivating. Frederick Tiden's Harry Tavender is a fine impersonation of a species of the cad. His humor is very much of the John Drew order. Jessie Busley is a splendid second to him in the role of the malevolent gossip. Stanley Dark's Jermyn Pycroft and Walter Allen's Professor Tosfield are fine characterizations that give symmetry to an unusually smooth performance.

Theodore Bonnet.

A Picture Play

The Alcazar revels in beautiful scenery and picturesque costumes this week, in "Sheridan or the Maid of Bath," the play Paul Potter wrote and in which Sothorn so long starred in the East. The part of the hero might have been written for Whittlesey, it fits him so well. It seems to me that Whittlesey is always at his best in a "costume role," which suits his style, his willowy figure and his peculiar, mincing walk. He has the natural grace that fits such characters. The public—that portion of it that reads—always likes to see on the stage counterfeit presentments of people that really lived, which is probably why the so-termed "historical dramas" have a vogue. The romantic incidents in which Sheridan figures in the play, though not historical, are not impossible, and contain so much that draws the sympathies that it would not matter if they were. Whittlesey as Sheridan has to fight a duel—and he is one of the best fencers on the stage. He has some pretty scenes with the Maid of Bath (Miss Lawton), and indeed the best of everything in the play falls to the star. Does he not win the Maid in the end? A fine part, though not a fat one, in the play is that of David Garrick, played by George Osbourne, who always brings the finest of art to any part allotted him, whether of major or minor consequence.

HERMINE SHONE,
with Emmett Devoy & Co., at the Orpheum.

WM. WILLIAMS & SONS
(LTD.) OF ABERDEEN.

VVO
Scotch Whisky

Importers - MACONDRAY & CO.

White Whittlesey as Pete Quillian in scene from "The Manxman," at the Alcazar, week beginning Monday, August fifteenth.

At the Orpheum

The five Madcaps, giggle and all, are back at the Orpheum this week. Their dancing is as violent as ever and their turn is brought up to date by the introduction of Lena Madcap in a radium dance which is chiefly entertaining on account of its weirdness. The "Old Curiosity Shop" presented by Harry Foy and Flo Clark is as original as it is amusing. O'Neill and Guyer introduce a knockabout specialty that wins the audience at once. Among the holdovers are McCabe, Sabine and Vera, Les Olopas, the Hughes Musical Trio and Empire Comedy Four. The Orpheum motion pictures are unusually good this week.

At the Grand

James Neill has been doing excellent work at the Grand this week as Baron Chevril. His performance, though not an imitation of Mansfield's, is strikingly reminiscent, and quite effective. He makes the character of the old roue as revolting as possible, and the impersonation is repulsively realistic. Katherine Gilman, the latest acquisition of the company, plays Marcelle this week with some intelligence, but too many staccato notes mar her performance. She is a very pretty girl, tall and with a dignified stage presence. All the women wear beautiful gowns, Miss Chapman's being particularly handsome. Miss Chapman is not exactly adapted to the role of Rose Guerin, which calls for chic rather than any other quality. Miss Harrison is one of the most promising actresses in the company; she plays Madame Chevril with refinement and understanding. Of the men John W. Burton, as Dr. Chesnel, is the best. He is a sterling actor.

Alice Neilsen and Signor Dani, by permission of the Royal Opera Syndicate, assisted in the program at Miss Clara Alexander's recital in London on July fifteenth. The recital was given at the residence of Mrs. Frank Mackey, 46 Upper Grosvenor street, and the tickets were a guinea each.

At the Central

One of the first musical farces poor Charley Hoyt wrote was "A Bunch of Keys," in which Willie Edouin assisted him. It is still a good satire on hotel management and with the features that the Central management has added to it, it is rather better than it was in its original form. Hoyt once said that to please the public all you needed was to have a few girls in the cast with black stockings, and in all of his earlier farces the black-hosed girl had a prominent part. In the Central production of "A Bunch of Keys" the Allen sisters take the place of the black stockings, and give some very graceful and clever dances. Specialties by Verne Castro, Edna Ellsmere, Julia Blanc, Winifred Gordon and Agnes Ranken are also introduced, and the piece goes right merrily, the company seeming to enjoy the brief respite from heavy melodrama. James Corrigan as Littleton Snaggs, who attempts to run his hotel according to law, is the star of the play, but Ernest Howell as Tom Harding, in propria persona and in two disguises, wins well-bestowed applause. Julia Blanc as Matilda Jenkins, and Agnes Ranken as the servant-maid, are very amusing.

The second operatic recital by Little Lillias Chapelaine (aged ten years) was given on Tuesday evening in Steinway hall before a large and interested audience. Little Lillias is one of the pupils of the Roeckel Conservatory, the juvenile operatic class. Her numbers were Hervey's "Ave Maria," Denza's waltz "Sing On," "I'm Ower Young to Marry Yet" (Scotch), "Quando a te Lieta" (Faust), "Once I knew a poor young child" (Mignon), the canzone "Saper vorreste" from Verdi's "Masked Ball," "Know'st Thou the Land" from "Mignon" and three scenes from "Carmen." Mario and Maria Roeckel, the gifted twins, assisted in the program, rendering numbers by Mascagni, Leoncavallo, Verdi and Joseph Roeckel.

(Continued on Page 27)

Count de Lormerin's Romance

ENGLISHED FOR TOWN TALK BY BEATRICE HASTINGS.

Having finished his toilet, de Lormerin smiled complacently as he took one last glance in the splendid cheval-mirror which occupied a conspicuous place in his dressing-room.

Though entirely gray, he was still a remarkably handsome man—tall, svelte, elegant, without embonpoint, the fine moustache on his long, slender face readily passing for blond. His striking personality combined that indefinable distinction of manner, that indescribable something, which distinguishes one man among a thousand. Thoroughly pleased with himself, he whispered, half aloud, as he turned away from the mirror and walked into his library, "Thank God, de Lormerin still lives!"

He began at once to busy himself with his morning mail. With a single stroke of his finger, he spread the letters out on his writing-table, as a player spreads his cards before choosing one; then he began to scrutinize the handwriting, which he always did each morning before breaking the seals.

For de Lormerin, this was always a delightful moment of expectancy, mingled with a sort of vague, uncertain anguish as to what these sealed and mysterious letters would bring, whether pleasure, happiness or sorrow.

This morning there was one letter which particularly attracted his attention, though there was nothing very extraordinary about it; yet he scrutinized it with a strange feeling of anxiety.

Dreading to open it, he held it up between his two fingers before the long French window, in a vain effort to read through the envelope; then he scented it, took his magnifying glass from the table and began to study the writing. Closer scrutiny convinced him that he had seen that writing before, not only once but very many times—yet that must have been years ago. A begging letter, he at last concluded, and without further ado he broke the mysterious seal:

"My dear de Lormerin,

"Doubtless you have long since forgotten me, for twenty-five years have passed since our last meeting. I was then young, now I am old and white-haired—though perhaps you may still have a vague remembrance of our parting at Paris, when I said good-bye to you, to follow to the south of France my aged husband, whom you always playfully referred to as my 'walking hospital.' He died five years ago; and now I return to Paris to marry my daughter, for I have a daughter, Lormerin, a beautiful girl of eighteen, whom you have never seen; true, I announced to you her birth, but possibly you paid little attention to so trifling an event. From mutual friends I hear that you are still the 'handsome Lormerin.' Well,—if you have not entirely forgotten little Lise, whom you always called Li-on—come and dine with her this evening, with the antiquated Baroness de Vance, whose hand, my dear Jaquelet, you may press, but not kiss.

"Sincerely yours,

Lise de Vance."

Lormerin's heart began to palpitate. He threw his head back in the silken hollow of his armchair, the letter fluttered to the floor, he was visibly agitated—the tears started in his eyes.

If he had ever loved any woman in his life, that woman was Lise de Vance. "Fleur de Cendre" he had familiarly called her, on account of the extraordinary tinge in her blond hair, and the peculiar shade of her soft gray eyes. Ah! what an enchantingly pretty woman she was then, this frail little Baroness de Vance, whose goaty old husband had suddenly carried her off one day from Paris, to a sequestered chateau in southern France, simply because he was jealous of the handsome, dashing Lormerin.

And indeed he was quite right, for de Lormerin was in love with the little Baroness, and she on her part had given him every reason to believe that his affection was reciprocated. Ah! how he loved to hear her call him by the pet name Jaquelet; he always fancied the rosy lips pronounced it so prettily.

A thousand old memories, long since dead, came back to him this morning. He recalled the evening when the youthful Baroness had come to his apartments, direct from a brilliant reception given at the American Embassy, and the drive they had taken together through the Bois de Boulogne, she in her ball-gown, he in his simple smoking-jacket. It was in the spring time; a beautiful star-lit evening; her bouquet of violets, thrown carelessly on the carriage cushions, filled the soft night air with fragrance.

What a divinity she was, in the shimmering amethyst satin! How quickly the hours had slipped by. As they passed the lake the moonlight, falling through the overhanging branches of the trees, made it a sheet of burnished silver.

The young Baroness grew pensive; a few silent tears fell from the soft gray eyes. "Why do you weep?" de Lormerin had asked. "I cannot explain," she answered timidly. "It is the moonlight falling on the water that affects me. I am always deeply impressed with poetical scenes." Lormerin had smiled at the ingenuous, artless answer, and had flung his arm passionately around the slender waist, whispering: "You are adorable, my little Lise!"

Fall 1904 Hats. Just arrived. Nobby shapes. Tom Dillon & Co., opp. Palace

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATRE

Beginning Monday Aug. 15—Fourth and Last Week Charles Frohman presents

HENRY MILLER

Last 6 Nights. Matinee Saturday. Henry Arthur Jones comedy

"JOSEPH ENTANGLED"

Coming Kyrle Bellew in "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman"

ALCAZAR THEATRE

Phone "ALCAZAR"
Belasco and Mayer
Proprietors
E. D. Price, Gen. Mgr.

Monday, Aug. 15, one week
Evenings, 25c to 75c

Regular Matinees Thursday and Saturday
Matinees Thursday and Saturday 25c to 50c

WHITE WHITTLESEY

And the Alcazar Stock Company

In the late Wilson Barrett's Dramatization of the Powerful and Thrilling Drama

"THE MANXMAN"

By Hall Caine, Author of "The Christian" and "The Eternal City"

Monday Aug. 22—White Whittlesey in "The Pride of Jennico"

Orpheum

O'Farrell between
Stockton and Powell
Streets

Week Commencing
Sunday Matinee,
Aug. 14th

HERE'S A GREAT SHOW!

Emmett Devoy and Company. The Juggling Barretts. Little and Pritzkow. Walter C. Kelly. Foy and Clark. Guyer and O'Neil. Hughes Musical Trio. Orpheum Motion Pictures and Last Week of THE ORIGINAL MADCAPS.

Regular Matinees Every Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday
Prices: 10c, 25c and 50c.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Phone "Grand Opera House"
Grand Opera House Co.
Lessees
Regular Matinee Saturday

Week beginning tomorrow
(Sunday) Matinee

MR. JAMES NEILL

And the Original
Neill Company

In Augustin Dady's Comedy

"THE LOTTERY OF LOVE"

First Time at 15c, 25c, 50c. Sunday Matinee, Aug. 21—"Held by the Enemy"

Fischers THEATRE

O'Farrell between Stockton and
Powell Streets

Phone "Fischer's"

Last Week of

"THE WHIRL OF THE TOWN"

Gigantic Spectacular Burlesque. Cast of Unexcelled Artists

Pretty Chorus of 40

30 Novelties and New Specialties.

Next Attraction Monday, Aug. 22. A Complete and Original Musical Burlesque

"THE ANHEUSER PUSH"

A Fountain of Fun. Up-to-Date Novelties and Laughable Situations
Seats now on sale.

★TIVOLI★

Cor. Eddy and Mason Sts.

Begins Monday Evening, August 15th

Evenings at 8 Sharp
THIRD BIG WEEK

Of the Superb Tivoli Sensation

"THE TOREADOR"

With an Unrivalled Cast

Seats Always Selling 25c, 50c and 75c.

Only Matinee Saturday

CENTRAL

Belasco & Mayer, Props. Phone South 523
Market Street near Eighth
Opposite City Hall

Beginning Monday, August 15th

Matinees Saturday and Sunday

Theodore Kremer's Tremendous Success

"FOR HER CHILDREN'S SAKE"

Prices. Evening, 10c to 50c

Matinees, 10c, 15c, 25c

August 22—"A SPY AT PORT ARTHUR"

What a charming romance it had been—and so brief—cut short at the critical moment by that old brute of a Baron, who carried his wife away and shut her up in a castle like the princess in a fairy tale.

At the end of two or three weeks de Lormerin had quite forgotten his short-lived romance, for women follow one another so quickly in Paris, especially when one is a bachelor! Nevertheless he had enthroned in his heart the image of Lise de Vance, the only woman he had ever really loved. This morning he was profoundly conscious of that love.

"Of course I will go," he said, rising from his chair; and instinctively walking before his mirror he surveyed himself admiringly from head to foot. "She must have aged more quickly than I," he thought. "How surprised she will be to find that I am still handsome, robust, vigorous and apparently young!"

He returned again to his letters; there was nothing of any importance in them.

All day long he was followed about by the beautiful apparition of Lise de Vance, the youthful Lise of the long ago. How strange it seemed to meet again, after the lapse of twenty-five years! Would they recognize each other?

That evening de Lormerin made his toilet with all the coquetry of a woman, and to prove his eagerness to the Baroness de Vance he started out very early. The first object which greeted his eyes on entering the elegantly furnished drawing-room was an old, faded photograph of himself, taken during his days of triumph, when he had won the young heart of Lise de Vance. It was prettily framed in antique silk, being above a large bouquet of fresh violets—the Baroness' favorite flower. He seated himself and waited.

Presently a door opened behind him; he immediately arose from his chair, and turning, saw an old, white-haired lady, with both hands cordially extended, coming toward him. Lormerin eagerly seized the thin, slender white hands, kissing them again and again. After some minutes he raised his head to scan the face of his old-time friend.

Yes, she had indeed grown to be a very old woman; there was not the slightest trace of semblance between the sprightly Baroness de Vance of twenty-five years ago and the shriveled, silver-crowned face of the woman before him, who seemed tempted to weep but who smiled instead.

"Is this really you, Lise?"

"Yes," she answered gently, "but you would never have recognized me, would you? Ah! I have had so much sorrow, so much grief; my life has been so dreary. Just look at me, or rather do not look at me, for I am so changed. But time has dealt kindly with you, for you are still the handsome Lormerin. Had I accidentally met you in the street I should immediately have exclaimed, 'Jaquet!' Now, sit down and we will have a little chat; then I will call my daughter. You will see how strongly she resembles me, or rather, how strongly I used to resemble her. She is the second edition of the Baroness de Vance whom you first saw at the opera twenty-five years ago. I preferred to meet you alone, fearing to betray my emotion, but the moment has passed now. Sit down, Monsieur de Lormerin." Lormerin seated himself beside her, still holding her hand, but he was painfully ill at ease, and utterly at a loss what to say. He did not know the woman who sat beside him; indeed, he had never seen her before. Why had he come to that house? Of what could he speak? Of the past? What was there in common between this woman and him? He could recall absolutely nothing in the presence of this antiquated, grandmother face.

The sweet old memories, associated in his mind only a few hours ago, when he had thought of the other Lise, his mignonnette Fleur de Cendre, had vanished. What had become of her, the one of twenty-five years ago, whom he had so passionately loved—the woman of his dreams, the radiant young blonde, with the soft gray eyes, who called him so prettily, Jaquet?

For some moments the Baroness and de Lormerin sat side by side, motionless, visibly embarrassed, both profoundly ill at ease. As their conversation was entirely commonplace, abrupt and trite, Madame de Vance suddenly arose from her chair, touched the bell and announced that she would send for Renee. Lormerin, delighted at the interruption, walked across the room under the pretense of examining an Italian landscape.

Presently they heard the noise of an opening door, followed by the rustle of a silk skirt, and then a young voice cried: "Here I am, mamma!"

Lormerin looked a trifle perturbed at the apparition, then he stammered: "Bonjour, mademoiselle. . . ."

Turning to the Baroness he said: "You are right, madame, the resemblance to you is striking."

A Good Host

Aims always to give the best to his guest

Hunter Baltimore Rye

holds first place fixed because of its

Maturity.
Purity.
Flavor.

HILBERT MERCANTILE CO.,
136-144 Second St., San Francisco, Cal.
Telephone Exchange 313

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of ELLEN HOLLAND, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned Josephine Mockler, administratrix of the Estate of Ellen Holland, deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Josephine Mockler, Administratrix, at Room 498 Parrott Building, No. 855 Market Street, San Francisco, California, the same being her place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

JOSEPHINE MOCKLER,
Administratrix of the Estate of Ellen Holland, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, August 13, 1904.

JOHN J. BARRETT, Attorney for Administratrix,
Rooms 497-498 Parrott Building, San Francisco.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA,
a Corporation. Plaintiff,

VS.

WILLIAM HORSTMAYER and FREDERICK HORSTMAYER, copartners doing business under the firm name of William Horstmeyer & Co., Clara Horstmeyer, wife of William Horstmeyer, et al., Defendants.

No. 80,714—Depart. 10.
SUPERIOR COURT.

Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure.

Under and by virtue of an Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure, issued out of the Superior Court, Department No. 10, of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, on the 8th day of August, 1904, in the above entitled action, wherein the CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA, a corporation, the above named plaintiff, obtained a Judgment and Decree of Foreclosure against WILLIAM HORSTMAYER, et al.; defendants, on the 25th day of July, 1904, which said Judgment and Decree was, on the 2nd day of August, 1904, recorded in Judgment Book 87 of said Court, at page 523, I am commanded to sell all that certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and bounded and described as follows:

Lot Number Thirty-nine (39) in Block "B" fronting on the Southerly line of Merritt Street, between Rose and Hattie Streets, as per map entitled Map of portion of Park Lane Tract; surveyed March, 1885, by T. W. Morgan, and filed in the office of the Recorder of the City and County of San Francisco, on April 22, 1885; being between Seventeenth and Eighteenth Streets, and a portion of the San Miguel Rancho.

PUBLIC NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that on Friday, the 2nd day of September, 1904, at 12 o'clock, Noon, of that day, in front of the New City Hall, Larkin Street wing, in the City and County of San Francisco, I will, in obedience to said Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure, sell the above described property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to raise sufficient money to satisfy said Judgment, with interest and costs, etc., to the highest and best bidder, for lawful money of the United States.

JOHN B. REILLY, Commissioner.

San Francisco, August 10, 1904.

E. B. YOUNG and F. A. DENICKE, No. 14 Sansome Street, San Francisco, Cal.,
Attorneys for Plaintiff.

The girl before him was indeed the old Lise, the one who had disappeared and who now suddenly stood before him like a vision of the past. He had found her again, just as she was twenty-five years ago, when her husband had ruthlessly snatched her away from him. The second Lise appeared even younger, fresher and more girlish. Lormerin could hardly restrain himself from throwing his arm around her waist and whispering, "My little Lison, you are adorable!"

A servant announced dinner. Ah! what strange emotions de Lormerin experienced as he sat at table with the two women. Which was the real one? The mother, smiling, repeatedly asked: "You recall such and such a thing, Monsieur de Lormerin?"

It was however in the bright, clear eyes of the young girl that de Lormerin found his old memories. Twenty times he was on the point of saying: "Do you remember, Lison . . . ?" quite oblivious of the white-haired woman who regarded him so affectionately.

Yet there were moments when he was conscious that the Lise of today was not precisely the Lise of twenty-five years ago. The other, the older one, had something in her voice, something in the expression of her eyes, and an indescribable something in her manner, which he did not find in the younger one.

"You have lost your spirits, Monsieur de Lormerin," said the Baroness, observing the taciturnity of her guest.

"Alas! madame, I have lost many other things besides," responded the Count absent-mindedly.

The young girl prattled gaily. She was in high spirits, she talked of her expectations for the coming winter, of the splendid ball which her mother had promised to give in her honor. At times her intonations, the expressions she used peculiar to the elder woman, and the striking resemblance of mind and manner which come from association, forcibly impressed de Lormerin. The old wound in his heart opened anew. His passion revived.

He left early, and made a tour of the Boulevard before returning home. The image of the young girl haunted him. Away from the two women, he saw only one—a young one—the old one returned—in the amethyst satin gown, just as she was when they had driven together in the spring moonlight through the Bois de Boulogne. He loved her more ardently now than ever—the twenty-five years of separation had only served to increase his passion.

He hurried home to reflect as to what he would do. As he passed, a candle in his hand, before the great cheval mirror, where only a few hours ago he had contemplated himself with such intense admiration, he now recognized merely a matured, gray-haired man. Suddenly he remembered himself in the years ago, young, handsome, debonnaire, just as he was when he had won the heart and admiration of the youthful Baroness de Vance.

Approaching nearer the mirror, he scrutinized himself in the flare of the candle light, as one examines some strange object under a magnifying glass; never until tonight had he observed the deep lines and wrinkles in his face—the frightful, irreparable ravages of time. Depressed, crushed, overwhelmed with the lamentable reflection of his own face, he seated himself in a chair before the mirror, and looking into the glass whispered: "Lormerin, it is finished!"

In Financial Circles

The week under review was not without interesting features. Transactions in bonds amounted to $247,000; dealings in stocks show quite an improvement, sales figuring up 2,890 shares divided as follows: 545 lighting, 535 water, 1,195 miscellaneous, 10 bank and 605 sugars.

No changes have occurred in either S. F. Gas & Electric or Spring Valley Water quotations. Alaska Packers' Association, after several days' stagnation at the previous figure ($127), broke two points in one session of the Exchange, closing at $125 asked. The run of salmon has been unusually light, though the Alaska Packers' Association has fared better than its competitors. The company carries a heavy load in the shape of overdraft, and people are apprehensive of an assessment, which it if it does come ought to better its condition.

California Wine Association shows considerable weakness; the stock is offered at $83. Inside information is to the effect that nothing has transpired detrimental to the company to justify such declines. The wine industry is just now suffering from overproduction, but reduced prices invariably furnish a remedy through increased consumption.

The bright spot was observed in the sugar group. The continually rising raw sugar market is finally having its effect, and the demand for stocks is now quite pronounced. The profits of the various companies, while having been extremely satisfactory during the season just about to close, will be enormously increased by larger outputs and materially higher prices for the raw product. The public might do well not to lose sight of them.

—The Financier.

The Dinner Setting is Incomplete
without

White Rock LITHIA Water

A Selected Water is as Essential
as a Selected Wine

P. J. WENIGER & CO.
DISTRIBUTORS

101-103 Powell St.
SAN FRANCISCO

ELECTRICAL WIRING AND SUPPLIES

Lamps, Telephone Batteries, Bells, Etc.
Repairs Given Prompt Attention

National Electric Company

455 SUTTER ST., San Francisco

Telephone Bush 396

REMOVED

Patrick & Co.

Rubber Stamps and Metal Signs

to

111 and 113 Sansome Street

COPYRIGHT.

RATHJEN WINE CO.

46 ELLIS STREET

Phone Main 5171

NEAR MARKET

On Hand

at all times here you will find a choice assortment of table wines—Burgundies, ports, sauternes, champagnes, clarets, etc., of rare vintages ripe with age, of fine bouquet and "meaty" to an extent to glad the heart of a connoisseur. Yet our prices will not startle a lover of rich wines. Taste, test and price at your pleasure here.

DR. ROWELL'S
FIRE OF LIFE
AN UNFAILING CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA,
SPRAINS, BRUISES, AND
ALL PAINS AND ACHES.
ALL DRUGGISTS 50¢

Fire of Life, known for years as the most remarkable remedy for the cure of

RHEUMATISM

A trial of this remedy will at once show its great merit as a rheumatic cure.

ROWELL & BROWN
32 Turk St., S. F.

Mamie Gilroy, who died in New York this week, appeared in San Francisco six years ago as the star of the original production of "The Girl from Paris." She was a very chic actress and a graceful danseuse.

Next Week's Bills

For the eighth week of White Whittlesey's engagement at the Alcazar he will appear in the part in which he scored such a success last season, Pete Quillian in "The Manxman," Hall Caine's drama. Mr. Sterling Lord-Whitney, a clever actor who will accompany Mr. Whittlesey on tour during his coming season, will also be seen in the cast. The production will be elaborate. The following week Abbey Sage Richardson and Grace L. Furniss's dramatization of Agnes and Egerton Castle's "The Pride of Jennico" will be presented. This play was originally produced by James K. Hackett and proved so popular that he starred in it for several seasons.

The Central's new leading lady, Ethel Clifton, will make her first appearance in "For Her Children's Sake," one of Theodore Kremer's melodramas that is said to have broken the records in the big Eastern cities. It is full of scenes calling for great emotional power on the part of the actors, and will have some strong scenic features. Kremer's melodramas are worth seeing, for they contain original plots and situations that stir the heart.

"Joseph Entangled" will go all next week at the Columbia, the last of the Miller engagement. Kyrle Bellew in "Raffles the Amateur Cracksman," comes next. "Jimmie" Powers will be with "San Toy," which is on its way here.

"The Toreador," which well deserves the praise bestowed upon it by press and public, will remain at the Tivoli. Many good things are promised to follow, but in the meantime "The Toreador" is packing the theatre. The Family Club had a theatre party last Friday night to see "The Toreador." John Dunsmure, who has been singing the Toreador, returns to New York to fill an important winter engagement and his role will be sung by Forest Danby Carr, basso cantante. Mr. Carr was a member of the Grau-Savage grand opera company at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York.

There will be but one more week of "The Whirl of the Town" at Fischer's. "The Anheuser Push," an original musical burlesque by Carleton and Johnson, will be produced on August twenty-second. Among the original scenes will be the opening of the Fairmount hotel on Nob Hill, the Anheuser Busch brewery in St. Louis and the electric panorama on the St. Louis exposition grounds at night.

James Neill will begin the seventh week of his engagement at the Grand tomorrow (Sunday) matinee with a splendid production of Augustin Daly's comedy "The Lottery of Love." Mr. Neill will play the role of Adolphus Doubledot, twice married and once done for, one of his cleverest impersonations and a striking instance of his versatility. Edythe Chapman will be seen as Diana. It will be the first time of this comedy at fifteen, twenty-five and fifty cents. Sunday matinee, August twenty-first, William Gillette's war drama, "Held by the Enemy," will be produced.

Emmett Devoy and his company of comedians, including Miss Hermine Shone, will make their first appearance in San Francisco at the Orpheum in "The Saintly Mr. Billings." The act of the three Barretts consists of club juggling and hat throwing. They have the modern wide brimmed straw hats under perfect control. Malle Little and Louis Pritzkow will also be new in "A Mixed Affair." Miss Little is a soprano with a compass of three octaves, her top note being F above high C, Mr. Pritzkow a tenor robusto. Walter C. Kelly, dialect comedian, will make his first appearance west of Chicago. The Orpheum motion pictures will include the speed trial of the United States battleship Ohio, at Santa Barbara Channel, August first.

At the Chutes will be four new acts—the Budd brothers, comedy acrobats; Rouble Sims, the tramp cartoonist; Mortimer and Hill, singing and talking comedians; and the dancing Kellys, colored entertainers.

—The Playgoer.

The most refreshing drink to both the manual and brain worker is a cup of good, strong coffee. Armer's Very Best coffee is the best brain food to be found. Its purity commends it. Its flavor is unsurpassed.

Mrs. E. L. Ryan, Dermatologist, formerly of the Vogue, has opened elaborate and perfectly fitted parlors in the Iroquois, 534 Ellis street. Mrs. Ryan removes wrinkles and all facial blemishes as well as superfluous hair, permanently and without pain. Her 'phone is Private Exchange 719.

Whatever your complaint you may as well ask about Swedish massage and movements. Inquire of Lindstrom & Einarson, 406 Sutter St.

MURINE EYE REMEDY

THOSE
LUSTROUS
EYES ARE MURINE
EYES

Sunlight Intensified by Reflection

from Ocean Beach and Desert Sand unrelieved by foliage. Winds and mineral laden poisonous dust, all bring eye-troubles in their wake, Granulated Eyelids, Red, Itching, Burning, Tired and Watery Eyes, Impaired Vision and Eye Pain. Prevention, Relief and Cure are found in MURINE EYE REMEDY, mild and harmless. Murine aids those wearing glasses, doesn't smart, but soothes and quickly cures. Is an Eye Tonic. Sold by Opticians and Druggists. Fifty Cents.

EXCURSION RATES ST. LOUIS

ROUND TRIP Excursion Tickets to St. Louis and Chicago on sale August 8, 9, 10, 18, 19, and dates in other months later at the following rates:

TO ST. LOUIS . . . $67.50
TO CHICAGO, passing one way through St. Louis . . . $72.50

RETURN LIMIT three months. Stop overs allowed on both going and returning trip.

THESE RATES GOOD ON ANY TRAIN

Ask about the Through Tourist Cars direct to the Exposition.

613 MARKET STREET
SOUTHERN PACIFIC

LOUIS CREPAUX

(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

SCHOOL OF TONE PLACING (PALATAL SYSTEM)

Vocal Phonetics—Besides the "Palatal Tone Placing System"

taught in the Louis Crepau School, another and most important feature is the teaching of the English phonetic sounds. The study of the five vowels is not all that is necessary to sing in a language, and particularly so in English. Very few English-speaking people are able to sing the phonetics of their language exempt from throatiness. Fundamentally, English phonetics cannot be emitted in singing as uttered in speech. From a vocal standpoint and through ten years of experience in teaching English-speaking singers, Mr. Crepau has made a vocal classification of all the English phonetic sounds. This classification enables English-speaking singers to master all the English phonetic sounds and renders them harmonious and easy to sing.

Apply at the School Mondays and Thursdays, from 2:00 to 2:30 p. m. Y. M. C. A. Building, Ellis and Mason Sts.

THE BURROWES COURSE OF MUSIC STUDY

FOR CHILDREN (KINDERGARTEN AND PRIMARY)

Studio, 2209 Broderick St., bet. Washington and Jackson

Reception Hour, Tuesdays and Fridays, 1:30 to 2 P. M.

MRS. FRANCES B. WILLIAMS, Piano Teacher

Representative of Katharine Burrowes

Telephone

Teachers taught the Burrowes System and outfits furnished.

Geary 2472

LOUIS H. EATON

ORGANIST AND DIRECTOR OF THE CHOIR

TRINITY CHURCH

Teacher of Singing, Piano and Organ

Special advantages offered singers in choir training
Studio and Residence 1676 Broadway

Between Van Ness Ave. and Franklin Street

H. B. PASMORE

TEACHER OF SINGING

Specialty—Shakespeare's system of tone production.

1424 Washington Street

573 Fifteenth street, OAKLAND, on Thursdays after August 1st.

M. GERTRUDE JUDD

Teacher of Whistling

785 Geary St., S. F.

Phone Hyde 933

JOSEPH ROECKEL and MME. COURSEN-ROECKEL

Assisted by Mlle. Elena Roeckel, Concert contralto

NEW VOCAL CLASSES Placing of Voice and Solo Practice
1060 FULTON ST. Opposite Alamo Square

Conrad W. Fuhrer

TEACHER of Violin and Ensemble Playing. 1676 Page St.
Phone Fell 3373. Also care of Sherman, Clay & Co.

CHICKERING Best in the World
PIANOS Oldest in America

100,000 IN USE

BENJ. CURTAZ & SON, 16 O'FARRELL STREET

SOLE AGENTS

Dr. H. J. STEWART

TEACHER OF VOCAL MUSIC

Pianoforte, Organ, Harmony and Composition

Special course for singers desiring church appointments

Studio, 1105 Bush St.

MR. ANDREW BOGART

TEACHER OF SINGING

METHOD of the ELDER LAMPERTI

Home Studio: S. E. corner Buchanan and Page Sts.

PHONE PARK 202

SIGNOR ABRAMOFF

The only teacher of the famous California Prima Donna, Miss Edith Decker (Dramatic Soprano), Miss Paraskova Sandelin (Contralto), Mr. Emil Arnold (Tenor) and of several other singers prominent in the profession.

VOICE CULTURE (OLD ITALIAN METHOD)

Signor Abramoff Equalizes, Beautifies and Strengthens the Tone. Corrects Nasal and Throaty Production Produces apartamentos, and Covered tones with Open Mouth.

703 SUTTER ST.

HOURS: 10 to 1 and 3 to 7 Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday

MR. THEODOR

SALMON

Concert Pianist and Teacher. Pupil of Kullak, Reinecke, Jadassohn and Richter. Studio, 546 Sutter St. Phone James 1281. Residence, "The Nordhoff."

Von Meyerinck School of Music

Telephone Park 223

841 FULTON STREET

Offers all the advantages of Eastern and European conservatories for a thorough musical education.

STAFF OF TEACHERS.

Voice Culture - - - MRS. ANNA VON MEYERINCK

Art Expression, Opera and Drama, MRS. MARY FAIRWEATHER

Piano Harmony and Composition MR. FRED ZECH, JR.

Violin and Viola - - - MISS MARIE H. MILLS

Competent staff of assistant teachers. Special teachers for Languages (German, French and Italian), Physical Culture, Fencing, Elocution, and Stage Dancing. Prospectus upon application.

SIGNOR PAOLO LA VILLA

(Of Florence, Italy)

N. B.—Special Terms for Professionals.

Vocal Studio: THE ROOSEVELT, 546 Sutter St.

Phone James 1282

Music

[Communications addressed to this department should be received not later than Tuesday noon.]

A Wagner Hoax

An occasional correspondent informs me that a big sensation was recently created in Germany by the report of the discovery among the papers of King Ludwig of a hitherto unpublished opera by Wagner. It was a hoax but it deceived many people. It was supposed to be a sacred opera, "Sara," and to have been written for the mad King of Bavaria who was to have been the only person to hear it. According to one newspaper, the first scene was in Eden, with Adam and Eve singing a love duet beneath an apple tree, and the serpent occasionally making it a trio; the burning of Sodom, a tableau of Lot's wife, and the fall of Babylon. The opera, it was further said, was to last fifteen hours, but with luncheon after the first act, dinner after the second, eight hours' sleep after the third, breakfast next day after the fourth, and so on. It must have been a highly credulous person who could have believed such amusing nonsense.

In the Musical World of England, in an issue of forty-five years ago, this appeared, apropos of Joachim, the violinist who for three score years has been before the public, and has no equal in his line of work. The great violinist was then but twenty-eight years old: "So long as virtuosi walked (or galloped) in their proper sphere, they amused by their mechanical tours de force, charmed by their finesse, and did no great harm to musical taste. They were accepted cum grano salis, applauded for their dexterity, and admired for the elegance with which they were able to elaborate thoughts in themselves of very slight artistic worth. But recently our virtuosi have been oppressed with a notion that to succeed in this country they must invade and carry by storm the "classics" of the art, instead of adhering exclusively, as of old, to their own fantasies and jeux de marteaux. One composition after another by the great masters is seized upon and worried. If they were things of flesh and blood, and could feel the grip, be conscious of the teeth, and appreciate the fangs of these rapid-devouring virtuosi, concertos, sonatas, trios, etc., would, indeed, be in a pitiable condition. Happily they bleed not, but are immortal."

There is much speculation among theatrical managers as to what Madame Schumann-Heink will accomplish in the realm of comic opera. It is predicted by many that people will not care for her in comic opera, but the great contralto only smiles at the forecasts. She is confident that she will repeat the success of her concert tour which was tremendous.

The E minor Symphony was Brahms' last and greatest work for orchestra. As an example of thematic music—music that from a few simple themes is built up architecturally until it attains the grandeur and symmetry of a cathedral—this symphony is perhaps the greatest in all musical literature.

The Scranton, Pa., Choral Society received the first prize of five thousand dollars awarded in the choral contests at the St. Louis exposition. Among the competitors were the Evanston Choral Club, the Pittsburg Cathedral Choir and the Dubuque Oratorio Society.

Music lovers are hearing a lot of vague rumors these days about a coming big feast of song. Conreid, it is said, is going to vouchsafe us a season of "Parsifal" with some of the original cast. Thirteen performances are to be scheduled.

It was Mendelssohn who said: "Music is to me so solemn a matter that I do not feel justified in trying to adapt it to any subject that does not touch my heart and soul."

Miss Gertrude Judd, the siffleuse, who has been sojourning in the country, returned home last week quite restored to health. She has resumed her classes in whistling, at 785 Geary street.

Cecile von Seiberlich, the dramatic soprano, has returned to town after her vacation trip, and resumed her Saturday receptions, at 1643 Polk street.

—The Music Critic.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST—Phelan Bldg., Rooms 6, 8, 10, 48. 806 Market St. Phone John 3841

The SCENIC ROUTE TO YOSEMITE

People who go to Yosemite Valley want to see ALL THE BIG THINGS.

At the same time they want the most comfort and the quickest trip.

The Southern Pacific route is many miles shortest and has the most comfortable stages. The road is oiled and dustless, and passes through no monotonous country.

The Mariposa Big Tree groves are reached by this route only. These are the greatest of the great giants. No other trees compare with them. They are as much a point of interest as is the great Valley itself.

Many who go to Yosemite by other routes come up to Inspiration and Artists' Points for the magnificent view. Travelers by the Southern Pacific have this as a part of their trip, for it is here that this route enters the Valley.

The stage passes at the foot of El Capitan, goes by beautiful Bridal Veil, and carries you in full view of grand Yosemite Falls.

DEPARTURE VIA GLACIER POINT is done by no other route. Here is some of the most impressive scenery of the trip.

Every courtesy is paid travelers, and every comfort given.

REMEMBER THESE POINTS—THEY MEAN THE SUCCESS OF YOUR TRIP. ASK ABOUT THEM AT

613 MARKET ST.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

The Love-Plaint

BY MABEL PORTER PITTS.

For my love and me
How the robins sang in the greenwood tree,
How the great bell's voice
In the church afar made the hills rejoice
For my love and me.

On the sun-kissed lea,
Where the wanton flower lured the roving bee,
There we rested long,
And the whole world throbbed to the passion-song
Of my love and me.

Oh, my love and me,
How we creep afar lest the world shall see
What my arms enfold;
Oh, the way is long and the world is cold
For my love and me.

Mrs. Dr. Retsloff, the well known Dermatologist of 2504 Clay street, has remodeled her office and home and now has the most complete establishment on the coast for the removing of superfluous hair, deep wrinkles, moles and all facial blemishes. The work done by Dr. Retsloff is very fine and is considered by many ladies, who have been treated abroad, superior to the Paris method. Dr. Retsloff teaches her method to others and those desiring instruction are invited to investigate this new treatment.

"It's all off with poor Mrs. Swiftleigh; she's bound to be ostracized."

"Surely not for being divorced?"

"Certainly not; because the co-respondent made his money in trade."

TAKE A TRIP OVER THE CALIFORNIA NORTHWESTERN RY AND GET A DEER THE NEXT MORNING.

This is easy. A few hours' ride over this road will take you right into the deer hunting grounds. Deer never before were so plentiful in Sonoma and Mendocino counties as they are this year. They have been carefully protected during the closed season. For the past two months the ranchers all through these counties have been commenting on the great number of deer that are being seen. The season in Sonoma county lasts from July 15th until Aug. 31st and in Mendocino county from July 15th until Sept. 30th. The best deer hunting to be had in California is in these counties and they are within only a few hours' ride of San Francisco over the California Northwestern Railway.

Judging from his latest Mr. Kipling is striving for a reputation as the greatest of cryptic poets.

Mrs. N. Fairchild, formerly of the Starr King Building, has opened an elaborate establishment for the manufacturing of suits, waists and corsets, entirely to order, at 1211 Sutter street. The success of Mrs. Fairchild's parlors in the Starr King Building was so great last season that she was obliged to make this move in order to get more room. She is now located within easier access to her patrons.

FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS

Worth of the freshest and best coffee distributed free by The Call to its "want ad" patrons. A pound can of J. A. Folger's "GOLDEN GATE COFFEE" will be given free to every want advertiser in the next Sunday Call. Only one can of this high-class coffee will be given to a want advertiser and none but those presenting a bona fide want ad to the business office of this paper on Thursday, Friday and Saturday for insertion in the want columns of next Sunday's Call will be entitled to receive this premium. See announcement classified pages of the Call.

NELSON'S AMYCOSE

Infalible Remedy for Catarrh
Sore Throat and Inflammations of the Skin

SCHOOLS and COLLEGES

HEALD'S

LEADING BUSINESS COLLEGE of the WEST
Over 24 Post St., San Francisco, Cal.
Established 40 years. Open entire year, day and night Write for circulars (free.)

St. Mary's College

OAKLAND, CAL.
Literary, Scientific, Commercial Courses.
Studies resumed August 1, 1904. Send for Catalogue.
BROTHER VELLESIAN, President.

Santa Clara College

SANTA CLARA, CAL.
The next session will begin August 2, 1904. Send for full particulars to (Rev.) R. E. KENNA, S. J., President.

Hoitt's

School for Boys; 14th year begins August 9th; larger and stronger faculty than ever; perfect sanitation; illustrated catalogue. W. J. MEREDITH, Vice-Principal. Menlo Park, Cal.

Irving Institute

Boarding and day school for young ladies and little girls. 2126 California St. Will reopen August 1, 1904. Accredited to the universities. REV. EDWARD B. CHURCH, A. M., Principal.

Miss Bolte's School

2174 Post St., prepares for universities and colleges. Music by graduate professor of Berlin and Leipsic conservatories. Conversational and grammatical French and German; English. Board, English, French, German, music, $30 month. Next term July 25. Steiner 656.

San Francisco Business College

Scott & Van Arsdale Building, 738 Mission St., between Third and Fourth. We are located in our new quarters. The finest schoolrooms in the West. Come and see them whether you want to go to school or not. Business men know where we are. We had eight calls for help this week.

is the most practical; recommended by expert court reporters. Send for catalogue.
1382 Market St., San Francisco.

The Melbourne Institute

For stuttering and stammering teaches a new scientific course for cure. It is successful. It has been established in this city for three years under teaching of Prof. F. G. Norcross, acknowledged mental expert, whose work has won the admiration of reputable physicians and other deep students of mentality. The services of the Melbourne may be enlisted with the utmost confidence. Address MELBOURNE INSTITUTE, Van Ness Ave. and Market St., San Francisco. Hours 1 to 5 P. M. Telephone Mint 2626.

THE LYCEUM

AN ACCREDITED PREPARATORY SCHOOL
For the University, Law, and Medical College, Etc. This school is well known for its careful and thorough work; we prepare you well. References, President Jordan or any Stanford professor. L. H. GRAU Ph. D., Principal. Rooms, 333-345, 5th floor, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

CALIFORNIA BUSINESS COLLEGE

The largest and finest quarters in the city; refined residence locality. Position for every graduate. Thorough, modern. 75 Page Catalogue on request.
R. L. DURHAM, President.
925 Golden Gate Avenue. San Francisco

Kent Law School

THIRTEENTH YEAR
Day and Night. Always open. No Vacations. Books Free.
536 Parrott Building (Emporium). Phone Folsom 2031

Century Electric Corporation

SUPPLIES, CONSTRUCTION, MANUFACTURING AND REPAIRING. BUILDINGS WIRED

16 and 18 SECOND STREET
Telephone Bush 352 San Francisco

MAISON TORTONI

111 O'Farrell St. French Rotisserie
Private Dining Rooms. Banquet Hall. S. Constantini, Prop

Life

BY ARTHUR DELROY.

When things go well and times are good,
Then life is life!
But when the canker care comes in
Then where is life?
Where are the friends that round us flocked
Who us with pleasures overstocked?
Can they have left us, friendless, shocked?
Oh, that is life!

Automobile Topics

Mr. Thornton, of the Fireman's Fund Insurance Company, has just purchased a Stevens-Duryea machine from the Pioneer Automobile Company. He left this city on Tuesday evening for a business trip, which will include Stockton, Sacramento, Modesto, Madera, Fresno, Bakersfield and all intermediate towns. This machine was purchased as an experiment to test the practicability of automobiles for this kind of work. In a letter received by the Pioneer Company from the J. Stevens Arms and Tool Company of Chicopee Falls, Massachusetts, and dated August fourth, they advise that out of one thousand Stevens-Duryeas they have but seventeen on hand, on all of which they have received deposits of two hundred dollars apiece. This will be quite a disappointment to a great many prospective purchasers of Stevens-Duryea machines. The Pioneer Company (agents for the machine) have protected themselves and have orders in for ten more Duryeas. The J. Stevens Arms and Tool Company will run the same model next season.

Colonel West, with a party of friends, left on Friday with two 1904 Winton touring cars especially built by the Winton Motor Carriage Company for use in the army at their manoeuvres. The party made their first stop over night at the Vendome, San Jose, second stop at Del Monte, and arrived at Paso Robles on Sunday without any mishaps whatsoever. In each machine was an officer, placed by Colonel West, whose duty is to report all the details of the trip, as to the number of miles they run, amount of gasoline and lubricating oil used, speed, etc.

A carload each of Oldsmobile light tonneau touring cars and runabouts was received by the Pioneer Company and distributed last week. Within a short time the Pioneer Company will be able to make immediate deliveries on both the Oldsmobile runabout and light tonneau touring car.

Max Schwabacher and family returned from Monterey on Monday morning last, after a week's trip at Santa Cruz and Del Monte, made in their new four-cylinder Winton touring car. Mr. Schwabacher will likely make a trip to Santa Barbara, Los Angeles and San Diego, a trip that, up to the present time, has not been in great favor with four-cylinder cars.

The members of the Board of Trade were entertained at the Pacific Union Club on Thursday last, after which the entire party was taken for a trip around the city in nine of the Pioneer Company's Winton touring cars.

In the recent Mount Washington hill-climbing contest, it is interesting to note that the White steam car was one of the two cars out of the entire entry list that won a gold medal on the hill. It is also interesting to note that the same car with the identically same gear and in the same condition as it competed in the hill-climbing contest, completed the two days' endurance non-stop run, winning also a gold medal in this.

Probably one of the most ardent enthusiasts of automobiling in San Francisco is J. O. Bradney, who recently purchased a White touring car. His first trip was to San Jose. Then he prepared for a long journey north in the vicinity of Healdsburg and had a most successful tour of four days. The other day, after putting his machine in the garage, he turned around and said to some one of the garage men: "I never had anything that gave me so much real pleasure in my life as that automobile," pointing to his steamer, "and I want you to know that I have now run over fifteen hundred miles and never had to get out of my car to make an adjustment or tighten up a screw, and the only time I have ever looked under the machine was to light it." "Are you not exaggerating, Mr. Bradney?" was asked as he was about to leave, and he remarked, "That's what I mean."

Many unsuspected disorders yield to Swedish massage and movements. Inquire of Lindstrom & Einarson, 406 Sutter St.

THE OLDSMOBILE TOURING CAR

Handsome Lines      Greatest Power
Most Thoroughly Built      Easiest Running
Easiest Controlled
Most Satisfactory Car for the Money
Always Goes

PRICE COMPLETE WITH LAMPS, HORN AND TOOLS

$1050.00

PIONEER AUTOMOBILE CO.

901-25 Golden Gate Ave. - - San Francisco

Oakland, 355 Tenth Street

AUTOMOBILE REPAIRS

81 CITY HALL AVE. Telephone South 1039

De Dion Plugs
De Dion Porcelains
Electric Cable

ANDREWS, KEENAN & BLASAUF

"POPE"
Toledo

POPE TOLEDO TOURING CAR CO.

Phone South 1142

G. A. BOYER, Manager

134-148 GOLDEN GATE AVE.

REPAIRS MADE AND SUPPLIES FURNISHED
AT THE

Hotel Vendome Automobile Garage San Jose

Stable accommodations free to guests. Record time on road from San Francisco to San Jose, two hours.

PIERCE
STANHOPE

Price, $1350 without Top; $1450 with Top

Pierce Arrow Touring Car (French) $2650
Northern Runabout, $800

MOBILE CARRIAGE CO.

GOLDEN GATE AVE. AND GOUGH ST.

Phone Private Exchange 770

San Francisco

AUTOMOBILES FOR HIRE

Downtown Offices:

Palace Hotel Occidental Hotel St. Francis Hotel

INDIAN and RAMBLER MOTOCYCLES

Won first five places in endurance contest in East, July 2 to 7, and were the ONLY machines making perfect scores in ALL events. In ONE-PICT economy test—Indian first; distance 31 miles, 1400 yds.; time, 1:10:39.

C. C. HOPKINS
Larkin & McAllister

"SOLUTION OF TIRE TROUBLES" FISK DETACHABLE

ONLY A WRENCH NEEDED
CAN'T COME OFF THE RIM
CAN'T PINCH THE TUBE

MORE MILEAGE
MORE COMFORT
MORE SATISFACTION

CALL OR WRITE PACIFIC COAST BRANCH
PHIL. B. BEKEART CO. 114 SECOND ST.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

ON the HILLS NOT THE RACE TRACK

is the test of power. The Annual Hill Climbing Contest of the Minneapolis Automobile Club was held on Saturday, June 11th, on Kenwood Hill, when the

Rambler

again demonstrated its superiority over cars costing three times its price, and, for the second time, won

FIRST PRIZE

finishing the course, 2680 feet, on a 10 per cent grade, in 1 minute, 7 3-5 seconds.

ENTRIES AND TIMES

Class No. A, Machines Valued at $2,750 and over—

Owner	Make	Time
J. H. Queal,	Pope-Toledo	:59
A. F. Timme,	Pope-Toledo	1:05
Dic. Ferris,	Pope-Toledo	1:05 4-5
F. T. Heffelfinger,	Peerless	1:08 1-5
Ralph Bagley,	Packard	1:11
Bert Strong,	Stearns	1:22

Class No. B, Machines Valued bet. $2,750 and $1,750—

A. C. Bennett,	Winton	1:11
G. W. Cappelin,	Winton	1:25
George Shear,	Knox	1:41

Class No. C, Machines Valued bet. $1,750 and $1,000—

M. E. Clark,	Rambler	1:07 3-5
C. C. Pillsbury,	Franklin	1:10 1-5
Dr. A. P. Walrath,	Rambler	1:14

Send for our latest illustrated Catalogue "C"; it explains RAMBLER construction; the records prove its value.

RAMBLER AUTOMOBILE AGENCY
Tenth and Market Sts., San Francisco

The CADILLAC

MODEL B. Price $950
With Tonneau $1050
"Canopy Top Extra"

August 8th from Del Monte to 12th and Broadway, Oakland, 6 hrs., 5 min.

October 18th the same run was made in 5 hrs., 35 min., without stopping the car or refilling with gasoline or water, breaking all records.

The only successful tour of the Yosemite Valley was made by a party of four in a CADILLAC.

GYLLER LEE, Agent

201-203 LARKIN ST., S. F.

This is the White Steam Touring Car complete with canopy top, curtains and glass front, baskets, acetylene lamp equipment, and extra tonneau seat.

WHITE STEAM TOURING CAR COMPLETE

AUTOMOBILE GARAGE
SAN MATEO

PAUL L. NOISAT PHONE BLACK 111
GARAGE AND REPAIR SHOP
B ST. NEAR THIRD AVE.

A. H. Piepenberg of Santa Barbara, whose fad is running from San Francisco to San Diego and back in his White car, intends to compete in the big endurance contest in September and his familiarity with the roads between the southern city and San Francisco will undoubtedly be of aid to him in the contest.

H. D. Ryus of the White Automobile Company of Los Angeles and Frank Garbutt, the captain of the Southern California Automobile Club, are to compete in a challenge race at the Del Monte race meet, August twenty-fifth to twenty-eighth. Those who witnessed the automobile races in this city last year will remember the thrilling five-mile exhibition that these two motorists put up, Mr. Ryus driving the "White Ghost" and Garbutt his reliable red steam touring car.

The repair shops of Andrews, Keenan and Blasauf, 81 City Hall avenue, are busy on the great sixty horse-power Mors of Dr. Hill, preparing for the races at Del Monte and Ingleside. The car is having a most thorough overhauling, and condition will not count if it does not show some fast time. This shop is well fitted up to undertake heavy repairs. Two French cars were noted under repairs and six American, of as many different makes, in addition to much transient work, or small repairs and adjustments, made "while you wait."

In connection with the hill-climbing gear of the new 1905 White touring car, manufactured by the White Sewing Machine Company of Cleveland, Ohio, there is a neutral point between the gears at which the engine is disconnected from the car. This enables the operator to warm up his engine and to increase the steam pressure to full amount without any hand-pumping, as there is always water enough in the generator to make steam for running the engine, but sometimes not enough to move the car. The White car will remain equal in every way to the former models in regard to hill climbing without changing gear and have the added facility of surmounting, without resort to the hand-pump, the longest and steepest grades.
—The Chauffeur.

SUMMER RESORTS

The following Resorts will send descriptive booklet when requested.

GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM

A Sanitarium, cottage plan; not a hospital. Equipped for the scientific application of Water, Electricity, Massage, Tissue Oscillation, Electric Light, X-Ray, Dry, Hot Air and all minor treatments. Large grounds, 5½ acres, shade, etc. Separate treatment apartments for men and women. Fifteen minutes walk from centre of city; one block from car line. Beautiful scenery. Write for literature. GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM, San Jose, Cal.

Camp Vacation

Hotel under canvas on the Russian River below Guerneville in a grove a mile and a half long, skirting the river; tennis courts; 40 new boats. There will be a dam in the river affording 4 miles of smooth water for boating, bathing and swimming. Adults $2 per day, $10 per week; children under 10 half rates. Special rates for families. Opens May 1. Address Mrs. L. C. CNOPIUS, Camp Vacation. "Vacation" P. O., Sonoma Co., Cal.

Hotel Rowardennan

"IN THE MOUNTAINS BY THE SEA"

Ben Lomond, Santa Cruz County. Opened under entirely new management. Round-trip Tickets from San Francisco, $3. For booklet apply PECK'S BUREAU, 11 Montgomery St., S. F.; or to WM. G. DODGE, Lessee.

The Monterey

Most Elegantly appointed Hotel on the Pacific Coast. Hot and cold water; Electric and Gas Lights; Private and Public Baths; Telephone in every room; four Private Dining Rooms; Fine Sample Rooms. American Plan, $2.50 and upwards; European Plan, 75c and upwards. Hageman & Jones, Props., Monterey, Cal.

Hotel Ben Lomond

SANTA CRUZ MOUNTAINS--NO STAGING

Table first-class. Electric lights, boating, swimming, fishing, hunting, tennis, croquet. See booklet, S. P. Company, 613 Market St., or B. DICKINSON, Ben Lomond, Cal.

Tahoe Tavern

On Lake Tahoe, the largest and most beautiful body of water in the world at this elevation, now open. The tavern will be conducted this season by Mr. F. W. Richardson, manager of California's famous mission hotel, The Glenwood, Riverside; a guarantee that it will be strictly first class. The table supplied with all delicacies; fishermen constantly employed to furnish lake trout. For rates address F. W. RICHARDSON

Byron Hot Springs

Open all the year. Unexcelled climate. Luxurious Mineral and Mud Baths, and the most curative waters known for Rheumatism, Gout, Sciatica, Liver and Kidney and Nervous troubles, also Malaria.

Hotel unique in cuisine, service and appointments.

Rates $17.50 per week in Cottages. $3 per day and upwards in Main Hotel.

Reached by Southern Pacific, 2 1-2 hours from San Francisco. 3 trains daily, at 8:30 a. m., 10 a. m. and 3:30 p. m.

H. R. WARNER, Manager

Byron Hot Springs Post Office, California

Beautiful Laurel Dell

The Robson Orchestral and Dr. Monroe N. Callender will furnish the best music ever played at any resort in the state.

The Switzerland of America. The only lake resort that has its own mineral springs and a chemically pure spring. Boating, swimming, marine toboggan 160 feet in length; first class livery; saddle horses. Dining room seats 300. Bowling alley and all games free to guests. Pamphlets at Pecks, 11 Montgomery St. and Cal. N. W. Ry., 650 Market St. Address, EDGAR DURAN, Owner and Proprietor. Laurel Dell, Lake Co., Cal.

Kenilworth Inn

Mill Valley

One of the most popular resorts in Mill Valley, situated at the foot of Mt. Tamalpais; only 50 minutes' ride from the city; rates reasonable. MISSES PALMER & HULETT.

The Grove

Lake Tahoe

Half mile east of Tallac on Lake Shore. Rates $2 per day; $10 per week; meals 50c. Good saddle horses and the best of livery; boats free to all guests. J. E. PARMETER, Prop., Tallac, Cal.

Spend Your Vacation

A great many San Francisco people are planning to spend the entire summer at Hotel Del Monte. No other resort in California offers such a combination of attractions--sea bathing, golf, automobiling, bowling, tennis, fishing, and all out-of-door sports. Instead of going from place to place seeking comforts, the wise ones of society are planning already to put in several enjoyable weeks down at Del Monte by the sea. Address Geo. P. Snell, manager, Del Monte, California.

At Hotel Del Monte

The Tallac

Lake Tahoe, Cal.

Cafe European. Nurses, Maids and Children, American Plan. Prices now as low as any hotel on Lake. Service, accommodations, boating and livery superior to any. Address M. LAWRENCE & CO., Tallac, Cal.

Hotel Bon Air

Go to Hotel Bon Air for your summer outing. Thirty-Seven minutes from San Francisco. Bowling, tennis, boating, bathing and fishing. Escalier R. R. Station. MR. AND MRS. J. E. MANLOVE, Props., Ross P. O., Marin County.

Brockway

Lake Tahoe

Opens June 1st. Write FRANK B. ALVERSON, Mgr. Brockway, Cal.

THE MART DOMESTIC and IMPORTED BEERS
WINES and LIQUORS, for Camping,
Picnics and Vacations, at
1348 MARKET STREET Phone South 1176 REDUCED PRICES

MOORE'S POISON OAK REMEDY

Cures Poison-Oak and all Skin Diseases
Sold by all Druggists

Letters

London's Ninth

"The Faith of Men" is the ninth book which has been published for Jack London, besides the serial now running in the Century. The stories which comprise the contents of the present volume do not show the author at his best, but there is no argument to be made from that fact in support of the theory that he has "written himself out," for the tales, all of which have appeared in the magazines, were many of them written before some which have been collected in earlier volumes. So far from being a matter of regret that the author has chosen to issue them in other than their fugitive form, it is a case for congratulation, for though they are not Jack London at his best, they are far and away better than almost any other author of short stories can furnish. Moreover, a writer is wise in his generation, if he has achieved any thing of a reputation in these days, to keep a tight grip on the products of his pen. Two of the stories relate to the deeds of a mighty hunter, who was a mighty spinner of yarns. "Batard" is a dog story, a psychological study of the hatred between two devils, a man and a dog, who were well mated. In "The Marriage of Lit-Lit" and the "Story of Jeess-Uck" we have the comedy and the tragedy of the marriage of the native girl with the white man. "Too Much Gold" is the old and ever new tale of the prospectors who drop the certainty in their hand to search for the rainbow gold of the fabulous lost mine, and return empty-handed to find out their mistake. There is something ludicrously inadequate, and yet so absolutely satisfactory, in the comment which the two returned miners address to each other when they discover that "the Swede" who purchased their claim for half nothing and whom they thought they had so neatly buncoed tells them he has taken out four hundred thousand dollars already. "Gosh!" said the first. "Yes, Bill, Gosh!" "The One Thousand Dozen" relates the heart-breaking tale of a man possessed of one idea which he carried through in spite of fate. In theory it was a perfect and perfectly feasible plan for making a fortune honestly. There was just one tiny flaw in the reasoning and through that the whole enterprise failed. "The Faith of Men," the story from which the volume takes its title, was of the usual quality and quantity. All of these are tales of the Northland, and perhaps the last of the fascinating series which we shall be regaled with. Already the old order has changed, giving place to the new; the railroad has superseded the trail and the mail and the telegraph are no longer unknown quantities. The Klondiker of today would probably resent a description which applied perfectly to the times of the first rush as much as the Californian of the '90's objected to Bret Harte's later tales. "The Faith of Men" is published by the Macmillans, who have brought out the majority of Mr. London's books. Now that the author has returned from his Oriental pilgrimage, readers of the Critic are in hopes that the promised series of literary essays will begin to appear.

"A Little Tragedy at Tien Tsin" (Robert Grier Cooke, publisher) has proven to be one of the best selling books of the season. The title story of this book first appeared in Harper's Magazine. It has since been translated into several foreign languages and has also been dramatized. There has been considerable speculation among the many readers of the book as to what the letters S. M. T. G., referred to by the author in "In Remembrance," in the dedication, might happen to be. It seems that they were those of Mrs. Philip Dunbar Gulager, the only daughter of the late George Francis Train. Mrs. Gulager, who died just before "A Little Tragedy at Tien Tsin" was published in book form, was a cousin of Miss Mathews, the author, and that naturally brought them much together. Aside from any ties of kinship the two were very closely associated with each other. One of the author's deepest regrets was that Mrs. Gulager could not have lived to see the success of the book in which she was so heartily interested.

—The Bookworm.

VALUABLE JEWELRY LOST

During the summer months much jewelry is lost traveling and at summer resorts. This can be avoided by leaving yours with the Baldwin Jewelry Co., 906 Market St., who make advances on diamonds and jewelry.

The modish woman's stationery is as much a part of her nowadays as her dainty wardrobe. Cooper & Co., 746 Market Street, are showing the newest modes in paper and envelopes, dies and seals.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. —.

ELLA VAN BENTHUSEN Plaintiff
vs.
THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN Defendant

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:

THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's alleged willful and utter neglect of said plaintiff for more than four years last past, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 30th day of June, in the year of our Lord; one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk,
By CHAS. C. MORRIS, Deputy Clerk.

N. F. FLOOD, Plaintiff's Attorney
1122 Market St., Rooms 1, 2, 3 and 4.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. —. No. 91429

ELISE KOEBSCH Plaintiff
vs.
CHARLES W. F. KOEBSCH Defendant

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:

CHARLES W. F. KOEBSCH, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of plaintiff; also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 8th day of July in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk,
By GEO. W. LEE, Deputy Clerk

McCLELLAN & McCLELLAN, Plaintiff's Attorneys.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of PETER McCARTHY, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Kate A. Schwerin and Nellie M. Hall, Executrices of the Last Will and Testament of Peter McCarthy deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within ten months after the first publication of this notice to the said Kate A. Schwerin and Nellie M. Hall, as such executrices, at Rooms 607, 611, 612 Hayward Building, San Francisco, Cal., the same being their place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

KATE A. SCHWERIN and NELLIE M. HALL,
Executrices of the Last Will and Testament of
PETER McCARTHY, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, July 16, 1904.

J. J. LERMEN, Attorney for Estate of Peter McCarthy, Deceased.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of JAMES NEILL, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Mary A. Daly, Administratrix, with the will annexed, of the estate of James Neill, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Mary A. Daly, Administratrix, with the will annexed, of the estate of James Neill, deceased, at Room 498 Parrott Building, No. 855 Market Street, San Francisco, California, the same being her place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

MARY A. DALY, Administratrix, with the will annexed,
of the Estate of JAMES NEILL, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, August 6, 1904.

JOHN J. BARRETT, Attorney for Administratrix, with the will annexed.
Parrott Building, 855 Market Street.

VERUS GUARANTEED PILES
OR $50. FORFEITED. One application relieves. Cures while you work. Price $2. Send only 25¢. with your druggist's name and we will send a $2 package of Verus prepaid. Send us the balance when cured. VERUS REMEDY COMPANY, Dept. E, Los Angeles, Cal.

HAIR GOODS

G. L E D E R E R
Wig Maker and Hairdresser. Scalp treatments, Shampooing, Manicuring, Hair dyeing, Switches, Ornaments, Toupees. Complete line of pure Hair Goods only. 123 Stockton St.

KIMONOS AND JAPANESE GOODS

K I M O N O S
Silk and Cotton; Custom made and made to order; of every description at special low price. Call and inspect our large and artistic line. The Orient. 633 Sutter St. near Taylor.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR REMOVED

B E A T R I C E S T. J O H N
Hair, Face and Scalp Specialist. 426 Sutter St. Phone Black 153. Superfluous Hair killed root and branch by absorption—guaranteed permanent, $1.00.

HAT RENOVATORY

P A N A M A H A T S
Bleached and Blocked. 423 Sutter Street. 424 1/2 Montgomery Street. Telephones Black 4616. Red 3212.

Residence 814 Grove St., S. F.
Telephone Page 81

HENRY P. TRICOU
Notary Public

Telephone Main 1680 306 Montgomery St.
Bet. Pine and Bush

LASH'S
KIDNEY & LIVER
BITTERS
A PLEASANT LAXATIVE
NOT INTOXICATING

VEUVE
CLICQUOT
PONSARDIN

The most delicious
Champagne
of the Age

Yellow Label, Dry
Gold Label, Brut

Cruse &
Fils Freres

Clarets and
Sauternes

Crème des Grands
Crus
(Crème de Cognac)

A. Vignier Co.

429 & 431 Battery
San Francisco

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy

1051 Market St., bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.

The largest of its kind in the world.
Book "The Philosophy of Marriage" mailed free.
A Valuable Book for Men.

Other People's Ideas

In this world we must still have something to wish and sigh for—Scott.

It is extremely dangerous to make long halts. I could cry with homesickness at the thought of the towns I have spent more than a month in; they are like the people one knows; if you see them once, you go away satisfied, and then you can bring them to mind afterwards, and think how they looked or just where it was you met them—out of town or at the club. But if you live with those people, and get fond of them, and have a thousand things to remember, you get more pain than pleasure of it when you go away. But one can't be everywhere at once, so if you're going to care for things tremendously, you had better stay in one town altogether.—Dr. Ferris in "A Country Doctor," S. O. Jewett.

From "A Change of Air," Anthony Hope:

If men never told their wives anything, the condition of society would no doubt be profoundly modified, though it is not easy to forecast the precise changes.

Finally, there is a sound general principle that where it is doubtful whether to hold one's tongue or not, one's tongue should be held.

A woman who is pleasantly indifferent to the wants and wishes of her associates, if they happen to clash with her own, is tolerably sure to have her way on the whole.—A Crooked Path, Schubin.

Sympathy is the cheapest graft that ever looked over the hill; it's got every other con game skinned to death, and a guy in a tight pull takes chances o' breaking his neck over it every time he opens his mouth—"The Ragged Edge," by John T. McIntyre.

Reform: "A ting what the wise guy gets busy at—when the other push is holdin' the jobs."—From the Lexicon of Chip Nolan, in "The Ragged Edge."

An ambitious young man once went to W. D. Howells with a letter of introduction from Charles Dudley Warner. He showed Howells a joke he said he had written, and asked the novelist's advice about it.

"If you wrote that," said Howells, after scanning the joke, "you must be at least one hundred and twenty years old."

The witty and extravagant Duke of Buckingham was saying one day to Sir Robert Viner, in a melancholy humor, "I am afraid, Sir Robert, I shall die a beggar at last, which is the most terrible thing in the world."

"Upon my word, my lord," said Sir Robert, "there is another thing more terrible which you have reason to apprehend, and that is, that you will live a beggar, at the rate you go on."

W. SCHEPPLER &amp; SON

Dealer in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry.
1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

SOHMER
PIANO
AGENCY

WARRANTED 10 YEARS
BYRON MAUZY
The CECILIAN—The Perfect Piano Player

PIANOS
308-312 Post St
San Francisco.

ORDER SOME

"Club Cocktails"

SENT HOME TODAY.

You will then have on your own sideboard a better cocktail than can be served over any bar in the world. A cocktail is a blend of different liquors, and all blends improve with age.

The "Club Cocktails" are made of the best of liquors; made by actual weight and measurement. No guesswork about them.

Ask your husband at dinner which he prefers—a Manhattan, Martini, Whiskey, Holland Gin, Tom Gin, Vermouth or York.

For Sale by all Fancy Grocers and Dealers generally, or write to

G. F. Heublein & Bro.,
29 Broadway, N. Y.
and Hartford, Conn.

PACIFIC COAST AGENTS

Spohn-Patrick Company

San Francisco Seattle Denver
Salt Lake City Los Angeles

For those who appreciate comfort
and attention

Occidental Hotel

SAN FRANCISCO

AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN PLAN

A QUIET HOME

CENTRALLY LOCATED

GEORGE WARREN HOOPER, LESSEE

Visit the

Hoffman Cafe

Wm. J. Sullivan, Proprietor

Lunch, Grill and Wine Rooms

Half a block below Palace and Grand Hotels, S. F.

Fine Goods a Specialty. Merchants' hot lunch from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. An extra spread served on all holidays. Merchants' lunch served in Ladies Cafe and Grill, from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. Oysters, English Chops, Steaks and Delicacies a specialty.

Handsomest Cafe in America

Open all night. Private Dining Rooms for Ladies and Escorts

601 Market St. (S. W. Cor. 2nd and Market Sts.)

POODLE DOG RESTAURANT, CORNER Eddy and Mason Streets, San Francisco—Private dining and banquet rooms. Telephone 429.

A. B. BLANCO & BRUN, Proprietors

PALACE HOTEL

San Francisco, California.

TOURISTS and TRAVELERS will, now, with difficulty recognize the famous Court into which for twenty-five years carriages have been driven. This space of over a quarter of an acre has recently, by the addition of very handsome furniture, rugs, chandeliers and tropical plants, been converted into a lounging room, the

FINEST
IN THE
WORLD

THE EMPIRE PARLOR—the Palm Room, furnished in Cerise, with Billiard and Pool tables for the ladies—the Louis XV Parlor—the Ladies' Writing Room, and numerous other modern improvements, together with unexcelled Cuisine and the most convenient location in the City—all add much to the ever-increasing popularity of this most famous Hotel.

Techau Tavern

The most unique resort in San Francisco. There is not a more artistically appointed cafe in the country. . . . It is a place wherein the guest may feast the eye while dining sumptuously and being regaled with exquisite music. . . . The Tavern is now under new and experienced management, and patrons are assured of the constant attendance of the chief of the establishment, and of prompt service at all times. . . . Special attention is paid to luncheon, dinner and after-theatre parties. . . .

GOODYEAR'S "GOLD SEAL"

Rubber Goods the Best Made

Rubber Hose, Belting and Packings

We are headquarters for everything made of Rubber

GOODYEAR RUBBER COMPANY

R. H. Pease, Pres. F. M. Shepard, Jr., Treas. C. F. Runyon, Sec.

573-575-577-579 Market St., San Francisco

Those who read much

are more frequently subject to eye trouble than others. There are, however, numerous modern occupations which bring on eye troubles that injure the brain and the physical system irreparably. Avoid danger by

Using GEORGE MAYERLE'S GLASSES

His Glasses insure health and a clear vision. Consultation Free. Open until 9 o'clock every evening. Geo. Mayerle's GERMAN EYEWATER makes weak eyes strong, sore eyes well, rests tired eyes. Price 50c. 62c by mail. Mail order or Wells-Fargo. Geo. Mayerle's Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers insure clean lenses without scratching.

Showing effect of George Mayerle's
Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers

GEORGE MAYERLE, German Expert Optician

1071 MARKET STREET

Two Doors from Seventh

CAFE ZINKAND

After the Theatre call at this Palace of Delights and revel in the luxuries of a spread fit for the gods, or drink of some of the best wine that ever chased the skeleton from the feast or painted landscapes within the brain of man.—Hograve.

TOWN TALK

VOL. XIII. No. 625.

SAN FRANCISCO, AUGUST 20, 1904.

PRICE 10 CENTS.

"Happy Days"

A.P. Hotaling
& Co's

OLD

KIRK

Best Whiskey
on the Market

...THE...

German Savings & Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus	$ 2,448,948.13
Capital actually paid up in Cash	1,000,000.00
Deposits June 30, 1904	36,573,015.18

Board of Directors

JOHN LLOYD, President.
DANIEL MEYER, 1st Vice-President
H. HORSTMANN, 2nd Vice-President
Ign. Steinhart	Emil Rohte	H. B. Russ	N. Ohlandt
I. N. Walter	J. W. Van Bergen
A. H. R. Schmidt,	Cashier
Wm. Herrmann,	Asst. Secretary
Geo. Tournay,	Secretary
A. H. Muller,	Asst. Secretary
W. S. Goodfellow	General Attorney

San Francisco Savings Union

532 California Street, Corner Webb

Deposits July 1, 1904	$3,998,594.00
Paid Up Capital	1,000,000.00
Reserve and Contingent Funds	935,033.00

E. B. POND, President	W. C. B. de FREMERY	ROBERT WATT
LOVELL WHITE, Cashier	R. L. WELCH, Asst. Cashier

Directors: Henry F. Allen, William A. Magee, W. C. B. de Fremery, C. O. G. Miller, Robert Watt, George C. Boardman, Fred H. Beaver, Jacob Barth, E. B. Pond.

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Lands in the Country.

Receipts Deposits: Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

Office Hours: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

CONTINENTAL BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATION

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital	$17,000,000.00
Paid in Capital	3,500,000.00
Monthly Income	250,000.00
Homes built since organization	1,500

Home Office 301 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

DR. WASHINGTON DODGE, President
WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

It might be well to remember
when making a will

THAT THE

CALIFORNIA SAFE DEPOSIT
AND TRUST COMPANY

Is in a position to settle estates with the assurance that the administration will not change hands and that the estate will be prudently managed with absolute safety.

WILLS SAFELY KEPT WITHOUT CHARGE

OFFICES:

Cor. CALIFORNIA and MONTGOMERY STS.
San Francisco

Rathjen Bros.39 Stockton St.
Phone Main 5522

Complete Line of Imported and Domestic

GROCERIES, TEAS, COFFEES
WINES AND LIQUORS

Special Sale Days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday

Look for Items in all the Daily Papers

The Owl Drug Co.

is the largest concern of its kind in this country—it buys
its goods in such large quantity it can sell them for less
money than most any other
druggist pays for them.
Telephone orders filled at
once and delivered free.
South 356.

1128 MARKET ST., S. F.
BROADWAY & 10TH ST., OAKLAND

La Grande

BRANCHES

5 A Taylor Street
200 Mtgy. Ave. cor. Kearny
202 Third cor. Howard
1738 Market opp. Eleventh

Laundry

23 POWELL ST.
Phone Bush 12

Sew Buttons

Ordinary
MendingWork called for and
deliveredFREE
of chargeTONKIN, Photographer

1490 MARKET ST.

Bet. 7th and 8th Sts.

San Francisco, Cal.

GROUND FLOOR STUDIO

J. PORCHER

HATTER

Latest
Summer
Styles

JOHN A. STETSON CO.

1109 Market St.
Odd Fellows Building, S. F.

TOWN TALK

SAN FRANCISCO, AUGUST 20, 1904.

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

THEODORE F. BONNET - - - Editor
CHARLES S. SMITH - - - Manager

609 MISSION ST. FOURTH FLOOR Telephone BUSH 713

SUBSCRIPTION.—One Year, in advance, $3.00; six months, $1.75; three months, $1.00; one month, 40 cents; single copies, 10 cents. Foreign subscriptions (countries in postal union), $4.00 per year. Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application. For Sale by all Newsdealers.

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

RALPH A. GROVER Manager of Advertising
New York Representative, FREDERIC M. KRUGLER, Room 918.
150 Nassau Street.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N. Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 200 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

No attention is paid to anonymous communications, but the wishes of contributors as to the use of their names will be scrupulously regarded. We cannot undertake to preserve or return manuscripts.

TOWN TALK is mailed to subscribers every Thursday and should be received in this city and vicinity every Friday. Please notify us of tardy delivery.

The Sun's Latest Switch

The report that the New York Sun has decided to support Theodore Roosevelt should occasion no great surprise. Throughout its eccentric career that paper has been most consistently capricious and illogical. It is perhaps the most ably edited paper in this country, in a strictly academic sense, but politically it has never had any well-defined policy. It has always been subject to the whims of an elastic conscience. It has a genius for adapting itself to personal interests, and so fertile is it in reasons and distinctions, that even its most radical changes of policy are not accomplished without plausible explanation. For two years Theodore Roosevelt has been the target of the Sun's stinging ridicule and satire. So bitter have been its criticisms that the President himself complained of the unfairness of the paper. The lampooning has been particularly severe since the President's interference in the Pennsylvania coal strike. He has been charged with being a rank demagogue, and with having ruthlessly violated the Constitution. He has been pictured as a spectacular fakir and accused of having prostituted his high office. If Theodore Roosevelt were the unprepossessing personality that he has been pictured by the Sun then he would be unfit morally to occupy a position of trust or to associate with decent people. However, the Sun is for him because he is the standard bearer of a conservative party. Yet it has been said by that paper that he dominates and directs his party, and that he is dangerous because of his aggressive interference. We have not kept a file of the Sun, but we happen to have some copies of recent issue. In one bearing date July thirtieth, 1904, we find this paragraph:

The difference between the candidates is that Theodore Roosevelt has the courage to do what he knows to be evil, whereas Alton B. Parker is, alas! only too likely to be afraid to do what he knows to be right.

Accepting the Sun's appraisal of the relative character of the two men there is small margin for choice, but it is apparent from the preceding paragraphs that the estimate was based on a false assumption. The whole discussion of the two candidates was apropos of the suggestion that the most imperative need of this country is more respect for law and order. The Sun declared that neither Mr. Roosevelt nor Judge Parker dare affirm that the Constitution guarantees as its most sacred and vital and indispensable element, liberty of contract, the right of every man to sell his labor to whom he will for such price as he is willing to accept. In his letter of acceptance, delivered two weeks later, Judge Parker did so affirm. Nevertheless the Sun has come out for Mr. Roosevelt, of whom it has said, "he has placed himself frankly, fearlessly and unequivocally against the Constitution in gross and detail. He is not for the right of a man to sell his labor to whom he will for such price as he is willing to accept. He is against freedom of contract." It would be interesting to know what or who persuaded the Sun to get behind Roosevelt.

Newport Scandal-Mongers

It usually affords the American dramatic censor of morals, familiarly known as the dramatic critic of some daily paper, great pleasure to sneer at the decadent aristocrats of London, with whom we have become acquainted through the medium of the drama. We accept them as types of a caste and point to them as evidence of the demoralization of British society. We do not stop to think that, perhaps, the same species is to be found in this country, equally exalted and conspicuous. A new play by Henry Arthur Jones was produced in this city last week, and we found that it exploited some very unpleasant characters, among them being those familiar individuals who revel in the tearing of a woman's reputation to tatters. It was shocking to learn that such malevolent people should have the entree to cultured society. While the play was in its first week, the despatches from New York told of a great scandal in high society. Mrs. Ogden Goelet had been robbed of valuable jewels, and the affair was shrouded in mystery. The newspapers broadly hinted that the lady's most intimate gentleman friend knew more about the robbery than he cared to tell, and that it was to the interest of the lady to protect him. She told a story about finding the jewels in her safe, and thereupon Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, a leader of the Four Hundred, remarked: "It's all bosh. The jewels were not found in the way described." Other women said, "Mrs. Fish knows." Mrs. Fish is not a British aristocrat. She is a representative of American high-toned society, of which the other women who say that "she knows" are members. How very like unto Mrs. Taverender of "Joseph Entangled" are they. The scandal in which their friend, Mrs. Goelet, is involved is too good to be permitted to blow over. Her plausible explanation, like that of Sir Joseph, is too tame to suit the scandal-mongers. The more obvious conclusion regarding the robbery, reflecting as it does on their friend, is the one to which they are wedded.

Potter's Queer Performance

The Examiner says that Bishop Potter showed himself to be a man of courage when he dedicated a saloon with religious ceremony. Unquestionably he did, but that circumstance does not entitle the performance to high praise. Bishop Potter's excuse for giving episcopal sanction to an immoral enterprise was that the saloon is a harmless social necessity "to the poor man who cannot afford the privileges of a club," and that "the effort to close the saloon has been at once the most tragic and most comic in history." There are other "social necessities" which many people regard as harmless, and the efforts to suppress them have been both comic and tragic, but even Bishop Potter would hardly contend that it would be within the proprieties of his sacred office to convert them into religious agencies. No enterprise of immoral tendency is harmless, and no intelligent man doubts that the influence of the saloon is unwholesome. Bishop Potter has a creditable hatred of hypocrisy, but that does not justify him in spreading the mantle of religion over the altar of Bacchus. Conceding that the saloon is the poor man's club, it does not follow that it should be opened under religious auspices. It may not be any worse than the rich man's club, but it is surely no better, and people who have dedicated their lives to the salvation of their fellow men should not encourage either institution. Both may be social necessities, but neither is harmless, and it is not the office of a clergyman to compromise with evil, or dignify a vice. It is well for clergymen to be broad-minded, and liberal, and it is absurd for them to seek to coerce people into temperance, but they should always be careful to refrain from spectacular sacrilege.

The Summer School

Now that the summer school is a memory and the learned lights have shaken our dust from their feet, it would be a good time to take stock and see what it has all been about. What has been accomplished, and what was attempted? We know that a number of noted scientists have sojourned in California for six weeks and that they gave lectures, and were wine and dined and entertained. What else? Some of the gentlemen complained that our home talent, instead of staying about Berkeley, betook itself to mountain and seaside. Why not? What is a vacation for if not to get away from the shop? And of all the professions in the world, teaching is the one which calls for the most complete change from work to play. Most teachers have no idea of how to take a vacation. True they hie themselves to rural haunts, but usually they hunt in packs. Where there is one teacher, look for a score, and every hotel piazza and sea beach is immediately converted into an institute session where means and methods and percentages are discussed. Fond mamma and adoring papa of the finest baby in the world are not in it with the average teacher when it comes to discussing children, their capacities, limitations and accomplishments. Summer schools and Chautauquan Assemblies attract them as honey does flies, and instead of coming back to their work rested and refreshed they are tired out with the strain and stress of additional effort. The summer school is a great attraction for the adherents of the culture clubs, who hope to gain knowledge by absorption without effort, and they can always count on a coterie of those who think it is "the thing," and attend for no other reason than to be seen there. One of the learned gentlemen remarked on the disproportion between the sexes, apparently under the belief that the women who flocked to lectures were attracted by their interest in science, but women will always crowd in anywhere that they do not have to pay an admission fee, though the demand for a nickel apiece would be enough to keep them away. But now that it is past and gone, what is the net gain? Who has learned what, and how and why? Let us hope that the visiting professors enjoyed themselves and that the "students" had all the fun they expected.

The Typical American Farmer

Harold Bolce, writing for the Booklovers' Magazine on the subject of farming in Japan, says: "One of the secrets of the success of Japanese farmers is that the diversified character of their crops enables them to keep busy throughout the year. When not in the fields sowing, cultivating or reaping, the farmer is to be found in his warehouse stripping bark from his paper plants, rolling tea leaves, rearing cocoons, reeling silk or engaged in some one of many other phases of his multiform industry." He hazards the opinion that forty-five million Anglo-Saxons crowded into the same small tillable area would not live in comfort, pay large sums into the national treasury, and raise crops for export as well as for home consumption. And he is right. The American farmer is not a very industrious chap. He always hopes to make a crop without exertion. Such, at least, is the case in this State, where, as a rule, the farmer does not raise even a patch of green truck for his own table, and often there will not be so much as a seedling peach tree on a farm. Vegetable peddlers make regular trips through the farming country. All the fruit is bought. What the California farmer strives for is a big crop of hay, wheat or whatever he fancies. He is always in hope of a phenomenal yield which will sell at top prices, but he has no inclination to assist nature. Instead of going in for diversity, like the Japanese, and keeping himself busy all the year round, his ideal is something that he can plant with the least exertion, and when it is planted he tilts back in his chair and smokes or sits on the top rail of the fence and whittles while he laments hard times with his neighbor. It is no uncommon thing, on stock ranches, to find that there is no milk unless an occasional can of the condensed article, by way of special luxury, for it is too much trouble to gentle a cow for home use. President Roosevelt found the same conditions in his stock-ranching days. He found that people on a ranch lived on canned vegetables and went without milk, butter and cream rather than take a little trouble to have them. The western idea of a prosperous farm is to have as much land as possible and trust to luck to make it pay.

The Hub
CHAS. KEILUS & CO.
EXCLUSIVE
HIGH GRADE CLOTHIERS

The quintessence of science holds carnival in our Fall and Winter models. The Fall productions are certainly "terrors to tailors." We invoke every known kink and goodness in our clothes. Good smart dressers will appreciate them. Our stock is now complete—Suits—Overcoats—Trousers.

132
KEARNY STREET
Churlow Block

Engraved
Wedding Announcements
and Invitations

ROBERTSON 126 Post Street
San Francisco

The Scribbling Society Woman

James L. Ford has something to say in the August Munsey's on the subject of the scribbling society woman. He has freed his own mind and spoken for others in agreement with him, but as to the society woman herself, he might just as well have stayed his pen. She is impervious to criticism or satire and if she is afflicted with the scribbling mania the disease will have to run its course. With her, writing for publication is like croquet or golf or balloon sleeves or cartwheel hats. No matter whether she can play the game, or whether she looks a particular fright in that style of garmenture, if it is "the go," she will have to "go it" to the bitter end. Even though she loathe the pen and ink and was never known to have the ghost of an idea on any subject, she will be obliged to go through the prescribed motions, or else feel that she is out of it. It is not the mere writing that matters. Society women might do that and welcome, just as they practice their beauty stunts in the seclusion of their bedrooms. If it did no good, at least it would do no harm. But they are all suffering from a burning desire to see themselves in print and to read columns of adulation and puffery, and keep elaborate scrap books in which their praises are to be preserved for future generations. Once upon a time—it seems as long ago as when the fairy tales were new—a woman whose daily bread did not depend upon her daily work would have been content to write, if write she must, for private circulation among her relatives and near friends, and to display her work to the general public would have been thought little short of the indecency of exposing her underwear. But we have changed all that. Not only do women tear their souls to tatters, and do and dare all things for the sake of getting themselves into print, but in society, the most intimate undergarments are displayed and photographed for the newspapers, and the more, the merrier the exhibition. If society women were content to confine themselves to the field of fiction, and to exhaust their ink bottles in their attempts to write novels, it would not matter at all, for even a poor novel demands wholesome concentration and application. People are not obliged to buy the novels of society women, and unless curiosity is a large factor, they do not. Other society women may want to see what their rivals have accomplished, but the real reading public lets them alone. Novel writing by society women will not have any effect on the labor market. It will not take bread out of deserving mouths or grind the faces of the poor. Then, though it is an old saying that brains cannot be bought, it is more than whispered that they can be hired, so miladi who loves to lounge in bed till noon, and spend her time in shopping, calling on her dressmaker, dropping in at teas, and winding up at a dinner, the opera and a ball or two will not find it so very difficult, after all, to squeeze in a few hours daily for her literary labors. And as to the morality of it, why, if a trained scribe cannot get a book accepted under his own name, and yet the world is willing to pay for the privilege of reading it, why should he not make honest tradesman's wages?

Vagaries of The "Literary"

An Eastern editor recently received a communication in which the writer said: "I am anxious to know how I can discover, without losing time, whether as a writer I have extraordinary genius or not." The editor must have been favorably impressed by the modesty of the would-be author. It is not often that the amateur is troubled with doubts on the subject of his extraordinary genius. Usually he is quite convinced of it, and unable to fathom the fatuous folly of the editorial arbitre who does not appreciate his good fortune in having a chance to go down in history as a "discoverer." About the easiest way to find out whether a manuscript is worth printing is to submit it to an editor without any other accompaniment but the post office address and stamps for return postage. Two or three fruitless journeys will decide the matter, provided always, that a three hundred-page novel has not been sent to the Scientific American, or a technical description of some new piece of machinery to Munsey's. There is a great deal said about the long wanderings of various articles which have been systematically rejected by one periodical after another, and of the novels which have become best-sellers, when, after innumerable refusals, they have finally fallen into discriminating hands; but the truth of the matter is that the final draft which makes fame and fortune for the author is apt to bear but slight resemblance to the original form. Sometimes the author gains wisdom with years and sometimes the judicious criticism of a friend effects the modification. More often the suggestion comes from some editor who sees a germ of value in the manuscript. It is not the business of a publisher to edit and recast. He has a reasonable right to expect that when men and women of mature age submit their work it shall be in usable shape. "Extraordinary genius" appears to be a matter of locality, as much as of merit, and it is not safe for the poetess of the high school of Podunk to pack her grip and depart for New York because of the praise lavished on her by the village weekly. The bright, particular star of any family circle is apt to shine less brilliantly in another environment. "Literary centres" like art and music centres, are crowded with backwoods "geniuses" who have been encouraged by confiding friends and admiring relatives, none of whom have had sufficient perspective to see things in their true proportion. It is an amazing thing, too, that though would-be operatic stars can be convinced, though often at great and needless expense, that they are devoid of voices, and "artists" learn that they can neither draw nor paint, the dabblers in ink go down to their graves unconvinced of their own shortcomings but always certain that there is a "conspiracy to down genius," never once suspecting that real genius will not be downed. The poorest service an editor can render to the self-appointed contributor is that of praising, however faintly, faulty work. There is a duty owed to read-

For Breakfast

For Breakfast

For Breakfast

GILBERT and STOLL

Movers of Household Furniture and Storage Warehouse, have removed their offices from the Murphy Bldg. to Room 43, Donohoe Bldg., Market and Taylor Sts. Storage Warehouse: Mercantile Library Bldg., Golden Gate and Van Ness ave.

ers as well as writers, and since it is the readers who make publication profitable their claims should be the first to be considered. It is one of the curious freaks of the human mind that so many are convinced that authorship, like red hair, may be hereditary, and not only that but contagious as well, so that as soon as a writer attains a degree of prominence, his sister, if he has one, or perhaps his mother, or the second cousin of his wife, will bring out a volume of poetry, or his brother's youngest son will begin to give evidences, at the early age of his first tooth, of "possessing the family talent," and we can all mention whole families, whose contributions occupy space in magazines month after month, on the strength of a fortunate marriage of some one of the clan. It used to be said long ago that if a man had a son too indolent and useless for anything else, he was educated for the ministry. Now it looks as though the pen is first aid to incompetency.

Theoretical Naval Values

The mathematicians are at work again demonstrating that with the capture or destruction of the Port Arthur fleet, Russia will drop out of third place in the relative rank of the navies of the world, and the United States will rise to that rank; also that Russia will drop into fifth place while Germany moves up to fourth and that Japan will then be in seventh place. The reckoning is based on the number, tonnage, displacement, armament and armor of the various navies. The mathematicians never take into consideration, in making their calculations, several very important factors, such as preparedness, initiative, personnel, morale and marksmanship. These are usually excluded from consideration in the theoretical and purely mathematical appraisal of naval values, but in actual warfare they are of more importance than numbers, displacement and tonnage. Figures are never so deceptive as when used to demonstrate the naval strength of a nation. Considering the practice and experience that Japan has had in the present war it is absurd to give weight to the theoretical inferiority of her squadrons. Her navy has proved that it is in possession of qualities that go far toward insuring victory, and efficiency is always more important than mere bulk. Preponderance of ships is a good thing, but it does not count much if handicapped by inferior gunnery and matched against superior preparedness.

Our Anarchic President

In refusing, the other day, to commute the death sentence of a negro brute convicted of an assault on a girl, President Roosevelt took occasion to air his views on the misuse of the insanity plea. It is evident from the President's language that he is convinced that the insanity plea, in extenuation of crime, has been very much overworked, and that it is high time to call a halt. He expressed the opinion that in all except the comparatively rare cases of delusional madness, the victim should suffer the penalty of the law for his acts. He holds almost explicitly that any deed committed by a man who before he committed it would not have been adjudged sufficiently demented to deserve incarceration in an asylum should be punished as though it were the act of a sane man. The principle on which this theory is based is inconsistent with the fact that insanity is a disease which has a beginning. A crime is often the first manifestation of a disordered mind, and if an insane man is not responsible for his acts it is obviously illogical and unjust to determine in the manner suggested by the President, whether a penalty should be imposed. Unquestionably the insanity plea has frequently been interposed to cheat justice, but if the insane are entitled to the protection which the law accords them then President Roosevelt's views are all wrong. He probably believes, with some scientists and a few sociologists, that more stern measures should be adopted in restraint of insanity, but the humane sentimentalists who make the laws have not been educated up to the point of endorsing slaughter for the protection of the species. It is unfortunate that President Roosevelt deemed it necessary to vindicate his action, or that having deemed it necessary he did not call in his trusty friend, Mr. Root, to write his argument. We all appreciate the fact that it was embarrassing at this time to be called upon to commute the death sentence of a negro, and we would have been quite satisfied if he had merely declared that the facts warranted the belief that the condemned man was sane.

In Delay There Is Economy

It is somewhat premature to felicitate the people of this city on the decision of the Supreme Court affirming the validity of the bond issue. If the municipal government were now in the hands of men who had the interests of the city at heart, and who could be safely entrusted with the expenditure of large sums of money for public improvements, there would be occasion for general rejoicing, but the taxpayers of San Francisco have reason to view with alarm the prospect presented as a result of the decision. A great deal of the money is to be spent under the direction of the Board of Public Works, which, as at present constituted, is far from having the confidence of the community. It is to be hoped that the Supervisors will not make haste in the matter of the bond issue. Many public improvements for which money is to be raised are devoutly to be wished, but in these days of fine but costly distinctions between red rock and blue rock, let us not be impatient. If too big a hole is made in the big municipal sack before the end of the Schmitz administration, perhaps we shall discover a little later that the sum raised was not sufficient for all the purposes contemplated. We have waited long for a City Beautiful, and a few months longer will not make much difference. It is well, at this time, to remember that the City Hall cost about three times the original estimate.

DECORATIONS For Weddings, Dinners, Lunches, Receptions and Stores. Flower gifts attractively arranged. Bridal bouquets artistically specialized.

Original Designs in Favors, Name Cards, Menus, Almond Dishes and Candle Shades

MISS CHARLOTTE F. WILLIAMS

121 Post Street

Tel. John 1911

San Francisco

Out of Town Correspondence Solicited

The Much Discussed "Candida"

BY THEODORE BONNET.

If you are a theatre-goer and you are not familiar with the "shawl speech" you soon will be, for "Candida" is coming to town. "Candida" is the play that has caused George Bernard Shaw to be talked about more than did all his previous performances, and the "shawl speech" is the little talk made by the heroine to her husband which shocks some people, and gives many the impression that in it lies the crux of the psychological comedy.

I have never seen "Candida" played but I have read it, and I have followed its remarkable career since its production in New York last year. It is a well written play and is deftly constructed—more so than most of Shaw's pieces—but in the reading it is not convincing; its characters seem ridiculous and ludicrously unnatural. That they are plausible on the stage is evident from the tremendous success of the play in New York. At first nobody paid any attention to it, but presently the critics and intellectual people began to talk about it, and then the mob began to pack the theatre. It ran for months and was the one great success of the season. It gained its vogue largely by reason of the fact that it was believed to have some cryptic, occult significance. And of course it has a meaning. Shaw never writes for the mere purpose of exploiting a story. He is not an exponent of the bib-and-tucker drama. Like all sincere cynics who have "messages" to deliver, he is eternally gnawing at our ideals and mocking our silly pretensions for the purpose of illuminating us for introspection. Wherever he sees a sacred prejudice, or discerns a hypocritical pose, he takes a smash at it with a paradoxical audacity that shocks the smug sinner and the respectable Pharisee. He once declared that he assumed the role of a mountebank and practiced the arts of one to attract attention, and immediately people concluded that he was a fakir who prostituted his art for sordid gain. They failed to understand that sincerity might be behind the appeal of the mountebank; that it is necessary to attract public attention before it is possible to serve the public, and that genius is not to blame for the methods which it is sometimes constrained to adopt to make itself understood. Because Shaw was misunderstood it was suggested that his name should be spelled with a "P," and to this day he is not taken seriously in London.

However, "Candida" is one of the most serious of English comedies, and it is full of wit and exquisite characterization, idealism and the true gospel of art. Beneath its cleverness and originality is the hard-pan of truth, the subtle truth of the cynical polemist, the truth that provoked dissent in New York, and that has not yet ceased to be the subject of discussion. In "Candida" the truth is brought out by a conflict between an oddly juxtaposed pair. One is a clergyman, James Morell, an idealist, intent on doing good in the world, very much in love with his wife, but absorbed in his professional duties. The other is Eugene Marchbanks, an idealist, a poet, only eighteen years of age, impatient of the realities of life, inclined to apotheosize and worship the woman he loves, who happens to be Candida, the clergyman's wife. Convinced that the clergyman does not know how to love a woman, and that therefore Candida should be relinquished to him in whose arms she would find the bliss that her beauty and her personality entitle her to, he takes the husband boldly into his confidence, and opens the latter's eyes to the fact that his domestic integrity is in jeopardy. The poet argues the matter with him, and though Morell is enraged at the lad's audacity he begins to fear that perhaps the latter has aroused Candida's passion. A little later he is more than perplexed when Candida, who does not know of the poet's interview with her husband, tells the latter that she believes the boy is ready to fall in love with her. It is in this scene that the famous "shawl speech" occurs. Morell had told his wife that he had perfect confidence in her goodness and her purity, and she remarked that some day Marchbanks would learn what love was. She wondered if he would then forgive her. "Forgive you for what?" asked her husband.

"Don't you understand?" she asked. He shakes his head. "I mean, will he forgive me for not teaching him myself? For abandoning him to the bad women for the sake of my goodness—my purity, as you call it? Ah, James, how little you understand me, to talk of your confidence in my goodness and purity! I would give them both to poor Eugene as willingly as I would give my shawl to a beggar dying of cold, if there were nothing else to restrain me. Put your trust in my love for you, James, for if that went, I should care very little for your sermons—mere phrases that you cheat yourself and others with every day."

Later on Morell throws his wife and Marchbanks together for an evening, leaving them at home alone. The lad entertains her by reading poetry until she grows weary and invites him to her side. He is on his knees talking like a love-crazed poet when the husband enters. In the scene that follows after the withdrawal of Candida the poet, who thinks that he has won her love, tells Morell that he (Marchbanks) had gone to her like a beggar dying of cold asking for her shawl.

"She refused!" said Morell.

"She offered me all I chose to ask for," said the poet; "her shawl, her wings, the wreath of stars on her head, the lilies in her hand, the crescent moon beneath her feet."

Yet Candida remained faithful to her husband. In the end, when she is called upon to choose between the two, she

The Most Celebrated
Brand in the World

FROM

Duff Gordon & Co.

PORT ST MARY'S, SPAIN

CHARLES MEINECKE & CO.,
AGENTS P. C. SAN FRANCISCO.

sends the ecstatic poet out into the night, and gives herself to her husband because "he is the weaker of the two." To console the young poet she cold-bloodedly requests him to make a poem out of these lines: "When I am thirty, she will be forty-five. When I am sixty she will be seventy-five."

Candida is not an ideal wife, but she wins the sympathy of women because they believe in her philosophy though few have the courage to express it. She wishes her purity to depend on her love, not on innate goodness, for she knows that morals proceed from conventions. In other words, she is not a woman that cares for virtue for its own reward. She is an exemplar of the fatuity of a merely moral philosophy for human guidance, though it is by no means certain that such a woman would not have the courage to sin even though she had strong religious faith. If Shaw could be relied upon there would no longer be any doubt of Candida's psychical mechanism, for he discussed it in a letter to James Huneker. He calls her an "immoral female" who "seduces Eugene just exactly as far as it is worth her while to seduce him," and says that "without brains or strength of mind" she would have been a "slattern voluptuary." "She is straight for natural reasons, not for conventional or ethical ones," and he explains her farewell to the poet by the statement that she virtually meant, "All very well, my lad; but I don't quite see myself at fifty with a husband of thirty-five." But Shaw dearly loves a joke. Arnold Daly, the actor who produced "Candida" in New York, recently visited the playwright in England, and on his return he said that the brilliant Celt admitted to him that his letter to Huneker was a joke. The explanatory letter was surely a shock to the admirers of the woman who incited the young poet's ecstatic passion. They have argued that she was a womanly woman who was mother, sister and wife to her husband, and whose love was born of sympathy. But in real life the womanly woman does not have affection for such a weakling as Morell, who would tolerate the presence in his home of such a sentimental exponent of calf-love as Eugene Marchbanks. The husband who invites horns usually repels womanly love. Morell was an egoist whose confidence in his wife's purity and goodness was not so strong as his appreciation of his own personal worth and attractions. No husband is justified in having such confidence in his wife's purity and goodness as to subject her to the blandishments of a romantic lover in whom she has taken a deep interest. But if Shaw had not created such a husband, such a lover and such a wife, we would not have the play in which the brilliant cynic shows that a love of virtue is not essential to virtue in a woman.

Panoplied for War

CORRESPONDENTS MOVE THEIR LUGGAGE FROM TOKYO TO THE JAPANESE FRONT AT DALNY.

By "The Wanderer."

The second contingent of war correspondents lately marooned in Tokyo started for "the front"—at Dalny—yesterday. This platoon of war correspondents herded up fifteen in number as they assembled for their stirrup cups in the drink department of the Empress of India steamship. The Japanese call these distinguished journalists and litterateurs "the second batch." Imagine Richard Harding Davis and John Fox Junior reduced to the common denominator of a "batch"! They are referred to by the proletariat of the Yokohama bund as "a bunch." These humiliations are a sample of the "hardships" that John Fox Junior has not yet dared to expose in his monthly reports to Scribner's Magazine.

If John Fox Junior were of a mind to write of things personal he could add much to the gayety of the nation. For instance, a literary lady of Yokohama persists in speaking of this recent author as "The Little Fox of Kingdom Come"; and another fat-witted humorist calls him "The Foxy Shepherd of Kingdom Come." Surely, the notoriety of a new literary reputation is taxed beyond the penalty of its offense!

The material impedimenta that came aboard the Empress in the rear of the advancing correspondents was amply sufficient to outfit a regiment of Rough Riders. It consisted of everything needful in the field, from a button-hook to a Mexican saddle. Cases of Pear's soap mingled their perfume with the fragrance of Mr. Percy Fisher's favorite cheese. (Mr. Percy Fisher represents the London Times.) The Sybaritic bedding of Mr. G. Scull, of the New York Globe, mixed intimately with the Turkish rugs and silk pajamas of our esteemed fellow townsman, Mr. Grant Wallace. There was a constant conflict of opinion between the dress suit cases of Mr. George Lynch, who represents the London Daily Chronicle, and the gramophone kit of Mr. J. Gordon Smith, whose graphic war pictures have so frequently thrilled the esthetic subscribers to the London Morning Post. The patent flexible, reversible "bawth" tub of Mr. W. H. Lewis, representing the pro-Russian New York Herald, was cheek by jowl with the India rubber Turkish "bawth" apparatus of Mr. Franklin Clarkin of the mugwump New York Evening Post.

It was a wonderful jumble of camp comforts and contrivances for easing the fatigue of the correspondent in the heat of battle, in the heady fight, amid the turmoil and hurlyburly of the deadly melee, in the imminent breach, in bivouac, on the firing line—anywhere in the vicinity of the bubble reputation that is acquired at the cannon's mouth.

It ought to go without saying that every correspondent had concealed somewhere in his luggage at least three pairs of puttees, two cowboy hats, two pairs of calfskin

$200 Reward

For the arrest and conviction of any one assaulting members or employees of this association or destroying property belonging to them.

ALLIED EMPLOYERS ASSNS.
CITIZENS' ALLIANCE
SAN FRANCISCO

Report promptly to the Law Department, Citizens' Alliance, 217 Crossley Building.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
CITIZENS' ALLIANCE

leggings, five khaki suits, two pairs of corduroy riding trousers, two Norfolk jackets to match the trousers, a change of caps for morning and afternoon wear, and a revolving pistol.

Why it is necessary for a war correspondent to carry a six-shooter I have never been able to ascertain. I have asked veterans of the Spanish and Boer wars if they have ever had occasion to use their deadly weapons, and they have invariably answered, with some embarrassment, that thus far they had never had occasion even to wear the shooting irons. I have come to the conclusion, therefore, that the war correspondent's pistol bears the same relation to the war correspondent that Colonel F. J. W. Archibald's medals and decorations bear to Colonel F. J. W. Archibald, F.R.G.S. The pistol—securely scabbarded—is the war correspondent's insignia—his badge of official standing, as it were. Nobody would think he was a genuine war correspondent unless he could, at the “psychological moment” (pardon the slang), inform his gaping auditors that he had “just purchased one of the latest Mausers and had tried it successfully at a thousand yards.”

I have myself acted in the sublime capacity of a war correspondent, and I have been up against the real thing in what the war correspondents call “the front.” I am free to confess that when I go to the front I arm myself with a pistol—not for defense (the army that accompanies me is sufficient defense), but for business. It has frequently been my good fortune, and the misfortune of the enemy, to meet the latter at close quarters, and it was of course necessary that I should kill all antagonists within range of my gun. I have thirty-eight notches and two-hundred nicks on the stock of the pistol I carried through my last campaign. The notches are for those who died for their country at my hands, and the nicks are the wounded now drawing pensions from a grateful government for the permanent injuries they now thank me for inflicting.

You will believe me when I tell you that I have killed nobody in this Russo-Japponic war. Neither the Russians nor the Japanese have given me an opportunity to murder them, although I have been on both sides of the combat. Neither will the correspondents who started for the Japanese front at Dalny yesterday be permitted to use their forty-dollar, nickel-plated, many-calibred Roosky killers, either in self defense or murderous offense. Moreover they will never reach the Japanese front, which is like the Irishman's flea as that objective may concern the war correspondent. The Japanese front is a movable quantity—like the king in the lay-out of a three-card monte dealers. When the war correspondent is sent to the front in this war he invariably finds himself at the rear. That sounds like an Irish bull, but the war correspondents at Pingyang know, to their disgust, that it is a Japanese and a Roosky steer.

The reason the “second batch” was sent to Dalny was to rid Baron Kodama and General Fukushima of importunity. It was feared by the war council that if these newspaper men were not “jollied” more strenuously they would round robin the Foreign Office with a threat to smash the next Japanese war loan. The wind-swept banquet hall had lost its charm for the perfervid hypocrites whose oratory has not fooled the subtle Jap a little bit; the singing girl and the wiggling geisha are no longer a novelty; the tea house has lapsed into a yawning bore; the promises of the authorities have lost the savor of originality. The writing men could be sent home or they could be sent to Dalny. It was finally determined to send them to Dalny. And to Dalny this “second batch” is en route “on a certain transport” at the present moment.

Tokio, July 21.

Personal Emphasis

BY HARRY COWELL

The world which we inhabit, multifarious as it is in itself, if one may so speak, is all the more so by reason of the fact that from it as raw material is fashioned as many worlds as there are men. According to a famous Englishman, every one of our impressions “is the impression of the individual in his isolation, each mind keeping as a solitary prisoner its own dream of a world.” To the same effect an equally famous Frenchman. “Each one of us,” says De Maupassant, “forms for himself an illusion of the world.” Dream or illusion, make your choice—and not much there is to choose between them—but remember always that the great world is after all but your own little dream or your own little illusion. The realization of this truth, which as a rule comes late in life, leaves us very lonely and very tolerant.

A botanist and an entomologist go over the same ground, as we say, and each writes a book, the result of his observations; how much the books differ the one from the other is matter of common knowledge.

What we are pleased to call the “facts of life” are before us, but emphasis of one set of facts gives us, for instance, an Emerson; of another, let us say, a Schopenhauer. No writer can possibly set forth the whole of life; each offers but his peculiar selection from it. Men who, like Emil Zola, see for the most part en laid, are at no loss to find adequate justification for their unprepossessing view of life. Nowhere on this imperfect sphere are the uglinesses far to seek. Fortunate, indeed, is he who has to look for them outside of himself. On the other hand, for those who see en beau, beauty is everywhere. Between the blue beauty above them and the green beauty below, they lead a charmed existence, exquisite like that of the high gods, their souls saturate with sunshine and with song. In their happy sight, ever divinely fair, never satyr-like, is the face of the baby bowman, whose fateful arrows shot at a venture find a penetrable joint in every harness, no matter how cunning the workmanship; and even the face of Death itself is veiled only to hide its surpassing loveliness. What a man has eyes for, that will he find, sooner or later, within him or without, somewhere or other, in this multifarious world.

And because things mundane are many-sided and because his days are few and short, man must needs choose. Out of almost infinite ways possible, in one only is each hour of life actually passed. The precious years wasted in nosing like a rag-picker among the written rubbish of the

DRS. A. C. MOORE & B. P. SHEPHERD
OSTEOPATHISTS

Now Located at 204 SUTTER ST., Cor. Kearny
Will REMOVE, September 1st, to
ALTA BUILDING, S. E. Cor. Kearny and Bush Sts.

Have you thought of Swedish massage and movements? Inquire of Lindstrom & Einarson, 406 Sutter St.

day might be well spent in reading the masterpieces of literature. And yet, time and again have I, who am thus preaching in ridiculously inartistic disguise, laid down the latest best seller, or some Sunday supplement or other, to muse—upon what I had read? O, no; by no manner of means—to muse upon the day of my death and the goodly number of noble books unread that might then rise up in judgment against me.

After all, however, it is not what a man does or leaves undone, but what he emphasizes, or to come a little closer to the truth, what he is in the habit of emphasizing, that is characteristic and serves as a peep-hole through which we may catch an occasional glimpse of the solitary prisoner in his pitiful isolation. Many a good look have I had into the strange world of another's dream by this noting of the things upon which he was wont to lay emphasis.

How easily the little wooden hobby a man rides assumes in his sight the proportions of a Pegasus; becomes a winged thing and wonderful! With equal feeling this old philatelist recalls the day whereon he won the woman of his desire and that whereon he became possessed of a unique stamp on which he had long set his heart. At times he wonders if he did right to marry: how his collection suffered thereby! Her place in his affections has never been filled; but then neither has that gap yonder that represents the cost of her burial. Long since his conscience has exonerated him for denying her that coveted gown of Irish poplin in favor of a rare issue.

Out on the tennis courts in our Golden Gate Park, were a man as many geniuses in one as was Leonardo da Vinci and as beautiful withal, and he were still a lesser person than the veriest nincompoop with a pretty backhand or an unreturnable drive.

In the printing office, the unkempt crapulous compositor who can set his fifteen hundred ems an hour, or the machine man who rattles off his sixty thousand a day on the linotype, is greater than a Horace Greeley who is but an average hand. I remember once hearing an old "comp." of fifteen-hundred-an-hour fame recount, with the utmost unconcern—nay, with gusto—how he had spent the night previous in the police station, having been picked up "paralyzed" from where he lay in the gutter. That very day, however, being naturally a little more nervous than usual, he had "pied" a stickful of solid nonpareil, and for weeks thereafter for very shame he could not look the devil in the face.

"The English," says Henry James in one of his delightful Partial Portraits, "forgive a great deal to those who ride well." Here the emphasis is upon a "good seat"; and many a learned ethnologist has burned much midnight oil and in the end let in less light on that great nation than does this luminous little sentence of the noted psychological novelist. Indeed, if I remember aright, it was more admiration of a good seat than fear of the law that some years back stayed the uplifted hand of the Irish peasant farmer and kept him from pitchforking the fox-hunting landlords who destroyed his crops, broke down his fences and sent his flocks and herds flying in all directions. In the heart of the Celt had been transplanted, as it were, a tendency to "forgive a great deal to those who ride well."

The relative size of football hero and "dig" about the time of the big game and about the time of final "ex.es" is a standing college joke.

Or again—but what is the use of multiplying illustrations of curious emphasis? Nor is there need of telling the thoughtful how with each of us the stress shifts from year to year, much to our astonishment and not infrequently much against our will. Enough to say that in proportion as a man makes a habit of emphasizing the petty or the important is he great or small.

The Saunterer

Those Disgruntled Commissioners

Since the return of Governor Pardee from St. Louis I have learned that he spent most of his time in that city trying to restore harmony in the Californian Commission. Though there are only two commissioners the discord is greater than that which disturbed the memorable commission that exploited the products of the Golden State in Paris. For a long time Commissioners Filcher and Wiggins did nothing but scowl when they met. Their mutual contempt was prodigious, and Secretary Wiggins became so disgusted with both that he packed his suit-case and returned home. Governor Pardee, in the role of pacificator, listened patiently to arguments from both sides and then exhorted his commissioners to settle their quarrel and join hands in the interest of the State. They did so, but neither retracted his expressions of opinion regarding the other. The Governor has not talked much about the row, since his return, but it is said that he has come to the conclusion that the objections urged against the appointment of Mr. Filcher, and which he declined to consider, were not without foundation.

The Alarming Rumor

I hear that insurance men have been alarmed over the rumor that Fire Chief Denny Sullivan is to be ousted from his position to make room for Commissioner Parry. This rumor has been bobbing up sporadically for months, but I think it is without foundation. Chief Sullivan is a very sick man, and is now on leave of absence granted at his own request, but there is hardly any likelihood of his being retired unless he should ask that such action be taken. His health has been shattered, but he is a young man—only forty-one—and with the robust constitution with which he was blessed he should have splendid recuperative powers. His retirement would be a great loss to this community, for as an executive officer of a fire department, Denny Sullivan has no peer in the world. His supremacy is admitted by competent judges in all the large cities. He has always been an enthusiastic fireman, and has kept pace with the progress that has been made in the science of handling conflagrations. Indeed, nowhere has such progress been made as under his direction. He is a much admired and beloved official and one in whose integrity absolute confidence has always been reposed. His involuntary retire-

IMPERIAL
STUDIO
744 Market St.
San Francisco - Cal.

THE IMPERIAL STUDIO'S PARCHMENT PROOFS

Are the swellest thing the Photographer's art has yet produced. There are plenty of imitations. The real thing is a little more expensive, but it's worth the difference.

ment would provoke a riot; his retirement on account of ill health would cause universal regret. As for Mr. Parry, it is conceded that he is an industrious commissioner and a competent cigar dealer. He dearly loves to watch a fire, and if he doesn't watch out the fire laddies will do to him as they loved to do, in former years, to a veteran commissioner who no longer responds to the tapper—play the hose on him.

Poker and Statesmanship

Charley Shortridge is in jubilant mood these days, having been assured that he is the organization candidate for Congress in the Fifth district. He was fearful for a time of the opposition of the Hayes brothers of San Jose, but they have been persuaded that it would be to their interest to assume a less aggressive attitude. Charley Shortridge is a hold-over Senator, and an uncompromising programmer, and it is not good politics to rub him the wrong way. He proved his ability as a campaigner when he ran for the Senate as an independent candidate and scoffed at the Hayes brothers. They have been eager for revenge ever since, but Shortridge has out-manoeuvred them. He shifted his residence to the northern end of the Fifth Congressional, and pulled the wires from a point beyond the reach of the Hayes influence. Though he is now a San Franciscan, the people of the Santa Clara valley look upon him as a political exile, and they still claim him. They are confident that he will become an influential Congressman, because he is an expert poker player. Few men ever achieve any great influence in Washington until they prove themselves capable of holding their own in one of the big poker games that engross the attention of the leading statesmen. It is more difficult to break into one of those big games than it is to conciliate the Hayes brothers of San Jose, but Charley Shortridge promises to open a jack-pot within a week after he takes his seat. It was as a poker player, by the way, that Victor Metcalf first won recognition in Washington, and Tom Geary says that unless a man is an expert at the great American pastime he should keep out of the halls of legislation in Washington.

The Unhorsing of McNab

It looks like a fight to a finish between Gavin McNab and the Examiner with the odds in favor of the monarch of the dailies. The boss appears to be reaching the end of his string. The exposure of his duplicity has alienated many of his friends, and his only strength now is derived from the Examiner's Republican rivals. They know McNab to be a trickster and a knave, but they are ever ready to give him encouragement and support in his efforts to prevent the Examiner's proprietor from dominating the Democratic party. They are useful in primary elections, but not in furthering the interests of Democratic candidates for office. They owe allegiance to the Republican party and are not likely to be more than lukewarm in their espousal of the cause of Democratic job-chasers. In being loyal to McNab they forfeit the esteem of the Examiner, and the average politician is not likely to make a sacrifice the inevitable consequence of which is retirement to private life. It was because he saw his end approaching that McNab entered into the compact with Hearst which the Bulletin scared him into breaking on the eve of the Santa Cruz convention. He was then presented with the alternative of losing the Bulletin's friendship or proving faithless to Hearst, and he adopted a middle course which resulted in a victory for Hearst under circumstances that justified the latter in believing that he was under no obligations to the cunning boss. Hence the movement to reorganize the party.

The Creature of Journalists

Gavin McNab was pitchforked into power by the Examiner, and he lost the friendship of that paper when it was discovered that he was engaged in intrigue with its Republican contemporaries. McNab has always scoffed at the press but he has never underestimated its power. For nearly twenty years he has been a hanger-on in newspaper offices, cultivating the friendship and confidence of editors and reporters. On every daily newspaper are men who believe that they are his intimate friends, and who have learned from him the conceits and shortcomings of their rivals. He long since discovered that newspaper men are ever to be won with news, and he has always been a prolific source of information. He plays no favorites, but on each newspaper are men laboring under the delusion that McNab confides in them alone. He has used them all successfully in the furtherance of his interests, and to their gratitude which he has capitalized he is indebted for all the political prestige he has enjoyed. He is distinctly a newspaper-made boss.

His Air of Respectability

It must be admitted, however, that his prestige has been due, in a measure, to his reputation for respectability. He has convinced people, by professions that were not always in accord with performances, that he was a sincere exponent of good government. When he was seeking a foothold in politics he emulated Buckley by nominating some good men for office, men who would not take small bribes, and men who were anxious to become known as reformers, but he never had any hesitation in taking a fee to appear before them as an attorney, precisely as Abe Ruef has been doing. McNab is not so coarse as Ruef, but when Mayor Phelan appointed commissioners who did not owe allegiance to the boss the latter was very much offended, and took no pains to conceal his disgust. He even went so far as to complain when Chief of Police Sullivan employed an attorney who was not connected with the organization. Mr. McNab may be a very honest man, but he is a lawyer and a boss, and I doubt whether he would scruple at enriching himself by indulging some of the practices that have proved profitable to Ruef. The Examiner says

The Star Hair Remedy—best of all tonics and restoratives. Stops falling hair, cures dandruff, restores color. Not a dye. At druggists and hair-dressers. Accept no substitute. Star Remedy Co., 1338 Polk street. Telephone Sutter 31.

BOHM

BRISTOL ©.

Every piece of our comprehensive display of

SILVERWARE AND CUT GLASS

reflects the perfect workmanship of masters of the art.

104-110 Geary Street
San Francisco

that he has paraded judges in public, and so he has, and at the risk of offending said judges I am constrained to remark that in view of his occupation, a proper sense of delicacy would have restrained them from accepting his hospitality.

Oxnard and His Folders

Last week it was reported that Henry T. Oxnard was no longer taken seriously as a Senatorial candidate, but a few days ago I was apprised of the fact that he had established a literary bureau in Los Angeles, for I received a folder through the mail on which was imprinted his "counterfeit presentment" and the pages of which fairly hummed his virtues and superior qualifications. It is evident that Mr. Oxnard is taking his candidacy seriously, but I cannot warmly approve the judgment that affirms the efficacy of "literature" of that sort in a Senatorial canvass. The choice of the next legislature for United States Senator will be the man whom the organization regards with the most favor, and the "organization" never reads political literature. It is now a foregone conclusion that Senator Bard is out of the running. It has been demonstrated that the perfected Republican organization, comprising the railroad machine and the Perkins Federal brigade, is the most powerful that was ever operated in this State, and that it is sublimated folly to buck against it. Perkins bucked the old machine successfully, but he had a solid organization behind him, and it has been merged into the new one which has been rapidly driving the "antis" to cover. To win the support of this organization—in other words, to get on the program—Mr. Oxnard does not have to swell the mails with his folders. I believe that he still stands a good chance of becoming the compromise candidate of the South.

"Why, he used to have money to burn."
"I know, but he's sifting the ashes now."

A Belated Despatch

Once more have I caught my daily contemporaries napping. Two weeks ago I related, on the authority of a correspondent in New York, that mutual disappointment had disturbed and shortened the honeymoon of Captain Glen Collins and Natalie Schenck; that it was the result of the discovery by each that the other was not possessed of great wealth, and that the Englishman had tried to borrow large sums of money without security. As my paragraphs are not copyrighted the dailies were privileged to help themselves, which they frequently do, but in this instance they waited a whole week and then paid telegraph tolls on a despatch from the East that told an incomplete story. The Associated Press is sometimes awful slow. It took the representatives of that association in New York a whole week to corroborate a tip sent on from this city on the strength of my paragraph.

For The Good of His "System"

The gossips, say the despatches, now have Mrs. Cornelia Baxter Taxis engaged—as I rumored some weeks since—to Lord Rosslyn. It is a good thing for that erratic plunger if the rumor is true. It has been said that ever since his divorce Lord Rosslyn has been looking for somebody with money who will finance his famous "system" on the turf. Rosslyn is known as the "system king" in sporting circles, his "system" consisting of the simple one of doubling up losses. He spent a fortune trying to break the bank at Monte Carlo, and then took to the stage. He was a failure as an actor, and later he was employed for a short time as dramatic critic for a New York daily. His first criticism was of Mrs. Langtry in "The Crossways" and his condemnation of the play and the actress was very severe.

Merely a Coincidence

Subsequently, in discussing the criticism, Mrs. Langtry told an anecdote that provoked a deal of comment at the time. She said that a few years before, at Monte Carlo, she had met a young lord who was flat broke. He asked her to go to a jeweler's with him and look at a valuable set of pearls and at the same time represent herself as his sister, the Duchess. He explained that if she would do that he could get the pearls on approval for a fortnight, pawn them, and by his infallible system, break the bank at Monte Carlo and redeem the pledged property. She had introduced this episode in her play, "The Crossways," and she was very much amused to see the young Britisher in the audience on the opening night of the production in New York. Everybody wondered whether she referred to Lord Rosslyn.

The Rosslyn Divorce

It was two years ago that Rosslyn filed a suit for divorce against his wife on the ground of desertion. She was so glad to get rid of him that she filed no answer. She was Violet Aline, daughter of Robert Gray Vyner of Grantley Hall, a man of immense wealth. He tied it up securely, however, so that the lord with a system should not be able to get a penny from it. Lady Violet was at the time of the divorce considered the most beautiful woman in London society. Eva Withrow painted her portrait and it was much talked of when placed on exhibition and had much to do with advancing the interests of the Californian artist in London.

Ruinart

The champagne of exquisite quality which fits the fancy of those who appreciate a contrast.

HILBERT MERCANTILE CO.
Pacific Coast Agents

V. W. GASKILL, Special Agent
SAN FRANCISCO

FAIRCHILD SUITS, WAISTS AND CORSETS

TO ORDER ONLY

The latest Parisian creation, front lacing Corsets. Made perfectly to conform with the figure—high or low, light or heavily boned, as the form requires.

Phone Larkin 862      1211 SUTTER STREET

How the Mistake was Made

The Bulletin's beauty contest is over, but Mrs. Gus Taylor has not yet recovered from the shock to her nerves caused by the unauthorized publication of her picture. Mrs. Gus Taylor is not a vain woman, and therefore it must have pained her very much when she found herself featured as an aspirant for a beauty prize. The pain must have been intensified during the progress of the contest when she found that nearly all the competitors were of the polloi. However, the Bulletin explained that Mrs. Gus Taylor had not authorized the publication, but that the paper had been misled. The explanation was somewhat vague. It seemed to hint that relatives of the lady were responsible. I hear that Mr. Gus Taylor was very indignant when he found his wife figuring in a beauty contest, and that he visited the Bulletin office to demand an explanation. He was told that Mrs. Gus Taylor had given her consent by telephone. Such was the belief of the Bulletin's editor, but upon investigation it was learned that the lady who responded to the phone was Mrs. Will Taylor. The reporter who had the conversation with her believed that he was talking to Mrs. Gus Taylor. She said that he could have her picture and also that of her sisters—the other Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. McNear. She also kindly consented to instruct photographer Genthe to give the pictures to the reporter. It was thus that the Bulletin was misled.

More of Hamilton

Gertrude Atherton has been publishing her "Prologue of an Unwritten Play" in the London Outlook. The "Unwritten Play" is a view of Alexander Hamilton from the north-north-west. When Mrs. Atherton decided upon him as a hero she at first intended to write a serious biography. Then she slithered round and wrote a nondescript mixture of biography, historical romance and idealization in which she roped, tied and branded all the virtues for her hero and all the vices for any one else who happened to be handy. Next we heard that Hamilton was to figure in a drama, but somehow, the idea was sidetracked. Apparently however, the projected play was laid out on the same lines as the biographico-romance, and "Mrs. Hamilton" is represented in rhapsodizing over the genius which her son is to display, long before the child was son or daughter. Really, one would imagine that Mrs. Atherton had invented Hamilton.

Her Engagement Broken

Mrs. "Jimmy" Robinson has the blood of romance in her veins, that of the De la Guerras, but there is a strong practical streak in her disposition that counterbalances the Spanish blood. She is said not to have looked with favor on her daughter Elena's attachment for Martin Kay, the young mining engineer. However, being a wise woman, and knowing that opposition frequently stimulates a passion, she permitted the engagement to be announced. But within a few days after Miss Robinson's return home the betrothal was declared off, and no one was much surprised thereat. Mrs. Robinson was only seventeen at her own marriage, but she does not approve of early marriages.

S. KRAMER*Suits, Jackets and Outer GarmentsMade to OrderLADIES' ARTISTIC TAILORING

Phone Black 3831      218 Powell St., San Francisco

Elena Robinson was the most popular debutante of her season, and she is not only clever, pretty and accomplished in the polite arts, but excels as a horsewoman and tennis-player. She has a simple, cordial manner, too, that adds to her attractions. The Robinsons are by no means in straightened circumstances, as some imagine. Mrs. Robinson inherited rather a good-sized fortune from the Horace Hawes estate. The De la Guerra family still owns considerable land in the southern part of the State.

The Newport Mystery

Because Mrs. Ogden Goelet, mother-in-law of a Duke, mislaid two hundred thousand dollars' worth of jewels, her friends in Newport winked the other eye and threw out a few broad hints on which the newspapers reveled for a week. There were many queer circumstances in connection with the mislaying of the jewels, but it is unfair to Mrs. Goelet to assume that if she shielded anybody she was actuated by other than charitable motives. Some newspapers have clearly sought to convey the impression that she was mainly interested in shielding herself and no doubt they so suspected. Such is the penalty of prominence in the smart set which Colonel Henry Watterson inveighed against in extravagant terms two years ago. Colonel Watterson confounded the behavior of individuals with the conduct of the class, insisting that a few bad men and women justify the condemnation of all society as composed of rakes and cocottes. And now if a woman is identified with the Newport smart set her conduct is likely to be misconstrued whenever she acts as though she does not care to take the world into her confidence.

Our Own Picturesque Cyril

No doubt Melville Ellis has a genius for sartorial display, but he is far from being as picturesque as Cyril Tobin, Esq. Mr. Tobin's togs are sometimes detonating, and even Burlingame opens its eyes in wonder at the marvels of the tailoring art that caress his fashionably tall and slender figure and the gay broad-brimmed hats with robin's-egg blue bands that adorn his classic brow. To heighten the color of his costume he affects flaming red cravats pierced with bizarre scarf pins. Mr. Tobin is certainly unconventional in attire. His clothes proclaim him a man of sensational temperament, but that is because he lives in San Francisco. On Broadway he would not attract attention.

Elizabeth and Her Dogs

Elizabeth Stuart Phelps is writing a dog novel. She has been writing dog short stories for several years, and one of the reasons why she was suspected of the authorship of the anonymous "Confessions of a Wife" was the dogginess of that tear-sprinkled volume. There are dogs and dogs. Mrs. Phelps has a partiality for the lap variety. Her favorite heroines are the elderly spinsters of the gentlewoman caste, with means enough to live alone in the ancestral mansion and deck themselves in old lace. Her canine darlings are of the variety that inspire men to wring their little necks, and readers with red blood to skip the magazine pages devoted to laudation of their virtues. The wretched little beasts cannot be blamed for their bad bringing up, but they are like pampered children. One longs to spank them and put them outside, where they will have to rough it among their kind and have a few elementary virtues knocked into them.

From a Wedding to a Funeral

The long arm of coincidence cast a shadow over the Hamilton-McDonald wedding in Santa Rosa last week. Across the street from the beautiful McDonald home on McDonald avenue lived a girl friend of the bride who had been in poor health. Two days before the wedding she passed away and the funeral was set for the same afternoon as the wedding, though several hours later. From the gay affair on one side of the street most of the guests hastened to their homes, changed to more sombre apparel, and appeared at the sad rites across the way from the scene of gayety in which they had participated.

The Minan-Marks Match

The marriage of Miss Ruth Minan and Charles Marks will be solemnized the first week in September. Mr. Marks is a young man from Kentucky whom Sallie Maynard took under her wing and introduced in society. At one time it was reported that he was in love with Marie Louise Parrott, but that was tea-tattle. Mr. Marks is a man of attractive personality.

When Mrs. Sterling Postley was in New York she bought some lovely gowns and hats, and as her mother, Mrs. Cook, did likewise in Paris, they will be the two best-dressed women in San Francisco when the contents of their trunks see the light. Mrs. Cook and her son Clifford took a trip around the world and when in China bought a lot of valuable curios.

Isolated In The Crowded Ballroom

The Daughters of the Confederacy are to give their annual ball during the early part of November. It will be the first dance of the season and will doubtless be a huge success—financially; the Confederate balls always are. Socially they are scoffed at by the smart set because they are not exclusive. They are hailed with great joy by those who like to rub elbows with the elect, but the purse-proud swells who attend these functions keep cold air on tap to freeze the uninitiated. A well-known belle, who was persuaded by one of the patronesses to attend the ball last year, insisted that under no circumstances should she be introduced to anybody. She danced and sat in state all evening as unapproachable as though she were within a barbed-wire enclosure. She afterwards said she had a splendid time. Like the English, she took her pleasure sadly.

The Sculptress Is Safe

The rumored death of Gertrude Boyle, the sculptress, in the recent train wreck near Pueblo, caused quite a sensation in art and Bohemian circles. But the Gertrude Boyle whose name appeared in the list of unfortunates was not our Gertrude who is now making her home in Arizona. I hear she intends meeting William R. Hearst on his trip to the Grand Canyon and making a bust of him. It is believed that this achievement will attract attention to her work.

Miss Blanding in Europe

I hear that Suzanne Blanding's trip across the water has not been as beneficial as her family and friends expected. She is said by Californians who have seen her on the other side to look wretched. She speaks calmly of her broken engagement and says she did not love Mr. Maddox enough to marry him.

He's An Eligible

Sir James Talbot Powers, who comes to the Templars' conclave as representative of King Edward, is to be the guest of the Cosmo Morgans at "The Bungalow," Mountain View. This country house is one of the most picturesque in California. It is expected that the Morgans will give at least one great entertainment for the distinguished visitor and the young women of the exclusive set are hoping to be included in the list of guests. Sir James, be it known, is a bachelor. He will also be entertained in San Francisco by Percy T. Morgan.

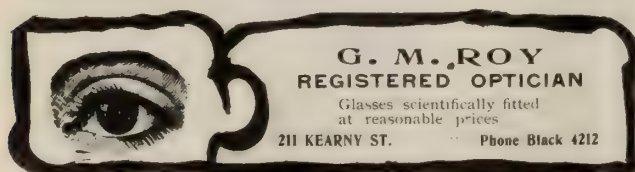

BALMORAL CASTLE

JOHN BEGGS

LOCHNAGAR

Scotch Whisky

As supplied to all the Royal Palaces for over fifty years

G. M. ROY
REGISTERED OPTICIAN

Glasses scientifically fitted
at reasonable prices

211 KEARNY ST. Phone Black 4212

A Honolulu Romance

It is said that Honolulu's society folk were greatly surprised at the marriage of Marian Dillingham with the Reverend John Erdman, a comparatively unknown Presbyterian missionary. The surprise was not only due to the fact that Marian might have married almost anybody, owing to her popularity and the fact that her father, B. F. Dillingham, is Hawaii's great sugar magnate, but it was supposed that her heart was in the keeping of a young naval officer who made his headquarters in Honolulu whenever the exigencies of Uncle Sam's service would permit. It now appears that the wedding was the culmination of a romance. At a reception in Honolulu two years ago, Miss Dillingham first met the young missionary, who was en route to Japan. It was a case of love at first sight on both sides. When Mr. Erdman went away he bore with him the promise that in due season Marian Dillingham would renounce society life to become the wife of a missionary among the little brown people of the Orient. It is said that it was only after opposition proved useless that the Dillinghams agreed to the union. The marriage was celebrated in Oakland last Wednesday, the Rev. Albert Erdman, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Morristown, New Jersey, officiating. The old clergyman had journeyed all the way to the coast to say the solemn words that should unite his son to the girl of his choice. It was because the Morristown clergyman could not go to Honolulu that the Dillinghams came half way to meet him. An innovation at the wedding was the attendance of Harold Dillingham, brother of the bride, as knight of honor, in place of the customary "maid." Walter Dillingham, another brother, was best man.

A Missionary Romance

When Dr. Silas Johnston, formerly a Los Angeles physician, departed for Africa as a missionary, his fiancée, Laura Mosher, decided that rather than endure a long separation she would also become a missionary. The congregation of the First Presbyterian church in Pasadena, which was organized by her father, the pioneer Presbyterian pastor of the State, agreed to pay for the labor of a woman missionary, and Miss Mosher departed for Africa. As the marriage laws of West Africa prescribe that a residence of several months shall precede the wedding ceremony in that country the only way to get about them was to have the wedding on board the ship before reaching the shores of the Dark Continent. In order to do this Dr. Johnston would have to hire a tug and put out beyond the land limit. The tug was to be decorated and to carry a clergyman, bridesmaids and a wedding feast, and now Miss Mosher's friends are anxiously awaiting details. The two young missionaries will be located at the Eufalen Mission, eighty miles inland from Batangas, in the Kameeran mountains. Those acquainted with the two enthusiasts say that when Laura and Dr. Johnston take an African in hand he might just as well be a "good nigger" first as last.

The Date Not Changed

I hear that the Bohemian Club seriously thought of holding its low jinks on Friday instead of Saturday night, but when the matter came to be voted upon such a howl went up from the members that no change was made. As many members only go to the camp for the one night, to have the low jinks precede the high would be a blow to the belated ones. The new club house was dedicated last Saturday night, and the jinks will come off this Saturday night. Will Spencer has been substituted for Jack Wilson as Apollo in the cast of the woodland drama. Since his marriage Wilson has been leading such a regular life that he is no longer of graceful figure so fast has the fat accumulated. Spencer is a man of magnificent physique.

The Gibbons Girls

Owing to the family's being in mourning, Marjorie Gibbons's marriage with Lieutenant Shinkle will not take place until next spring, although the trousseau is well under way. Florence Gibbons, Marjorie's sister and a debutante of last season, is a very bright girl, an adept at all athletic sports and a fine horsewoman.

The Tallants

The Fred Tallants are among the many society people who are tired of housekeeping. When they return from San Rafael they will go to one of the large hotels for the winter. Elsie Tallant is the most popular girl in San Rafael this summer. Pearl Landers, her cousin, no longer seems to care for the merrymaking of the younger clique, but has identified herself with the married set. Next year, it is predicted, she will be playing bridge with the dowagers.

Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Duperu and the latter's sisters, the Misses Franetti, with their cousins, the Sandman sisters, have taken the Harry Jerome house in Belvedere for the autumn.

DIAMONDS*$5.00 PER MONTH

Beautiful, Brilliant, Pure White and Flawless Diamonds,
$5.00 per Month

Write for Catalogue or Phone James 4086 and we will send selection. Written guarantee with every stone sold.

PAUL V. GARIN

138 Montgomery Street, or 802 Hayward Building, San Francisco

Old J.H. Cutter Whisky

FROM OLD KENTUCKY

DISTILLED AND BOTTLED BY
C.P. MOORMAN & CO.
LOUISVILLE, KY

SHERWOOD AND SHERWOOD
DISTRIBUTORS
212-214 MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO.
HARRY G. HOWELL
SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE

THE BEST AFLOAT OR ASHORE

With The Correspondents

The readers of Town Talk have doubtless noticed that this paper is engaged in the performance of a unique service. All other papers in the United States are at present engaged in chronicling what purports to be news of the war in the Orient. It has long since become apparent to their readers that the so-called news is akin to the most entertaining chapters of the world's history, being a plausible compound of fiction, fabrication, misrepresentation and deduction. Not caring to compete with my contemporaries in the dissemination of the kind of war news that is being supplied to the press of the country, I urged my correspondent to chronicle the doings of his associates, so that my readers should be informed as to their methods of making history, and the facilities afforded by the belligerents for the gathering of material. The real history makers in the Orient at present are not the hostile armies but the war correspondents, and there should be as much interest in them as there is in the Japs and Russians. It will be seen from the letters of "The Wanderer," who is an eminent journalist, that he does not take war corresponding seriously—at least not the kind that is being done in the Far East.

Miss Eells' Engagement

The engagement of Miss Gertrude Eells and Lieutenant Babcock was a genuine and delightful surprise. Miss Eells is such a pretty and attractive girl that one could not believe she would remain disengaged for many seasons. The Eells girls marry young, as their parents did before them. I think that the senior Eells' were barely of age when they married, and they were as poor as the proverbial church mice. But they have prospered, a blooming family has grown up about them and they are grand-parents at an age when most people are taking ten-year-olds through the measles.

"I suppose your husband always comes home from the club in his automobile?"

"Not always; sometimes in an ambulance."

The Dancing Clubs

The patronesses of the dancing clubs met recently to discuss a plan of campaign for the winter season. It is understood that Mrs. Voorhies will resume management of the Assemblies, and it is believed that she will have the assistance of Mrs. Will Irwin, Mrs. Bowman McCalla and probably Mrs. Malcolm Henry. Mrs. McClung will not be a patroness this year and consequently there will be some important changes in the invitational list. Nobody knows yet whether the Fortnightly dances are to be resumed. Everything depends on Mrs. Salisbury, who has not yet recovered her old-time spirits. Her relatives and friends are not anxious to assume the responsibilities of management, so it is thought that the Fortnightly dances that have so long been a feature of San Francisco social life will not be revived. Ned Greenway will continue to regale society with dances and champagne, and I hear that he intends raising the price of tickets to thirty dollars. His invitational list is not to be enlarged. It is also reported that the price of Assembly tickets is to be raised to ten dollars.

MILLS & HAGBOM TAILORS

EMIL W. HAGBOM, formerly with James W. Bell Son & Co., New York
EDWARD MILLS, late of Bullock & Jones

PHELAN BUILDING, Rooms 1, 2, 3

Phone Main 5387

Our Two Great Heiresses

The H. E. Huntingtons will arrive in town within a week. Last season they did more entertaining for the younger set than any other family, and their friends are hoping that they will be as generous in their hospitality next season. Marian and Elizabeth Huntington are two of the biggest heiresses in town, and they are consequently very attractive to fortune-hunters, but they are said to have old-fashioned notions about marrying for love, and to be entirely devoid of social ambition. The Princess Hatzfeldt has been anxious to introduce them in London society, knowing that her chaperonage of two great American heiresses would make her one of the most popular hostesses in the British capital, but the Huntington girls have repeatedly declined her services. The gay social whirl of the big metropolis has no attractions for them.

A Disappointed Huntington

One of the millions left by Collis Huntington was spent by Archer Miller Huntington on a collection of Spanish books, coins and other articles of interest which he has presented to the city of New York, and he is going to build a museum in the metropolis, the principal feature of which will be his Spanish collection. I hear that Huntington is broken-hearted over his failure to win distinction in the literary world. He hoped to become a great poet or novelist, and he has done some fairly good work, but nothing remarkable. The best known of his works is a translation of "Le Cid." He is a man of great culture and wonderful personal beauty.

A Rivederci

After all, San Francisco is not to have that popular young Italian, Signor Faccini, as a permanent resident. He has shaken the dust of our City Unbeautiful from his slender soles forever, and returned to Italy via New York. It is rumored in society that the fascinating Faccini cherished a hopeless passion for Miss Hyde-Smith, and has gone away to seek surcease of heart-pain in a change of scene. Count Grimani is also soon to leave us, his promotion to an Oriental post being on the way.

What was it
then, that won him friends twas
Rainier
the
BEST OF ALL

JOHN RAPP & SON,
Agts., S. F.
Distributors in every town on the coast

Artists in Camp

Lorenzo P. Latimer brought back a fine lot of paintings of the redwoods and Russian river, near Guerneville, where he had his camp this summer. He painted the redwoods in all lights, early dawn, broad noon, in the slanting beams of the afternoon sun and as twilight fell. He will show some of them at the Hopkins and Bohemian Club exhibitions. When Latimer went up to the woods he permitted only six of his pupils to accompany him, for he wanted time to paint for himself, but before he knew it fifteen more ambitious young artists had planted their easels in his vicinity, and he had to hold class after all. But the students had a great time and when they were not painting they were making rhymes. Miss Crelling's muse was inspired to the extent of two jingles, dedicated to the head of the camp:

There was a young man I know,
Whose "Redwoods" became all the go; ...
He sold them for Money,
And ate bread and honey,
And said: "I'm quite pleased, don't you know."

There was a young man named Lat',
Whose head got too big for his hat;
He painted so bad,
That Nature got mad,
And said: "You don't know where you're at."

One day Miss Charlotte Williams summoned Mr. Latimer to lunch. Genius was burning, and he objected to the interruption, whereat Miss Williams returned to camp and wrote the following:

There was a man named Latimer,
A girl called him to lunch
And he SAT-ON-HER!

Jules Mersfelder, after three years in Chicago, has decided to make his home in San Francisco. He has taken a studio with Will Wright, who designs book covers.

Clever Mrs. Mumford

Ethel Watts Mumford has a new volume out from the Scribners' press. She has arranged one hundred of the amorous quatrains of a thirteenth century poet, Kamal Ad-din. Mrs. Mumford is far better known in San Francisco by the limericks and "Cynic's Calendar" that she did with "Addie" Mizner than by her serious works. I don't suppose more than one in a hundred of her society friends here know that she is the author of "Dupes," a novel that created a tremendous sensation among the Blavatskyites when it was published a few years ago by Putnam. "Dupes" explained how new religious cults spring into being and was more than a merely clever novel. Mrs. Mumford made her first appearance, I believe, in San Francisco three years ago, coming here from Honolulu, where she had spent ten months. She is a large, handsome woman, very modish in dress, clever, witty and independent in speech. Her husband is also a writer. Somebody once asked Mrs. Mumford where her husband was and she answered: "I don't know. The last I saw of him he was at a semi-colon. When he reaches the period I suppose he will come home."

FAT FOLKS

I reduced my weight 70 pounds, bust 6 inches, waist 6 inches and hips 14 inches in a short time by a guaranteed harmless remedy without exercise or starving. I will tell you all about it. Enclose stamp. Address

MRS. E. S. RICHARDS,
226 E. 9th St., Riverside, Cal.

Our Big Salon

I hear that there is dissatisfaction in the Sequoia Club because the membership has become so large. When it was announced that Miss Robinson purposed establishing a salon it was thought she would have some difficulty in rounding up a sufficient number of people of brains to make such an institution worthy of the name. But Miss Robinson has very broad ideas on the subject of a salon. Her plan was to lure people of talent by holding out a little social bait. She resolved to establish a salon in which the fashionable herd would have an opportunity to mingle with the cultured, and thus make membership an object of interest both to the "quality" and the merely talented. The club has over five hundred members and is growing. But the would-be exclusives are groaning. They are talking of seceding and organizing another club whose membership shall be limited to one hundred and fifty. Meanwhile the officers of the Sequoia are looking for quarters down town where women may sip tea and men may drink cocktails. Both beverages, it is understood, are aids to brilliant conversation. There is inspiration in tea-leaves as well as in whisky.

Visiting Sport—I hear that San Francisco is wide open.

Local Sport—Dat's dead right, old pal, and the keys have been trun in de sewer.

Going Abroad

Mrs. Helen Curtis Magee will leave early next month for England, to visit her sister, Mrs. Denis O'Sullivan. She will also seek the best surgical advice for her little daughter's ankle, which has been operated upon several times in the East, but not satisfactorily. The O'Sullivans did not come to California this year, but they intend to pay their accustomed visit in '05, and every summer thereafter.

The Italian Consul Signor Serra and his wife will spend the winter at the Knickerbocker. Signora Serra finds housekeeping, even at the Empire, too much of a task, so will try hotel life for a change.

Artistic Interiors Designed and Decorated

Ideas and Estimates furnished for all classes of
Decorative Work

L. TOZER & SON

762-764 Mission St.

San Francisco, Cal.

Shocking

Even in Berkeley, the seat of culture and repose, where even the dogs in the street have a classical air, the tittle-tattle of the drawing-room is not always refreshing from an intellectual standpoint. It is occasionally tinged with the bitterness and envy that are characteristic of the chit-chat of the social dawdler. There is sometimes a spice to Berkeley gossip that is positively shocking. Recently I was an unwilling auditor to a discussion of the wearisome hauteur of the most exclusive of the faculty wives. "She even turns up her nose at the lovely Mrs. —, who is probably the wealthiest woman in Berkeley, and also one of the most cultured," said one of the group of gossips.

"Yes," said another, "I hear that she objects to her because her husband is in trade."

"That's strange," said a third, "because her own father was in trade; true he was a professional man, but he couldn't make his profession pay, so he peddled eggs."

The Board of Regents Shocked

Regent Foster of the State University gave quite a shock to his associates at the last meeting when he declared that he had no confidence in the men at the head of the medical department of the affiliated colleges. He said that to his own knowledge several of the men connected with the management had made great profits out of it.

Shaw May Go

A flattering offer has come to Professor George W. Shaw, assistant professor of agriculture, technology and sugar expert at the University of California. He has been offered the position of chief chemist of the new agricultural experiment station now being organized by the Cuban Government. Less than a year ago, Professor Shaw was offered a position in Dublin, Ireland, which he declined. It is thought however, that he will accept the present offer as it is in a line of work for which he has especial aptitude and for which his long service in the State University has well fitted him.

Archaeological Lore

The publication of manuscripts written on papyrus in the offices of Menches, who from the year 12 to 11 B. C., held the post of government scribe at Kerkeosiris, has been made possible through the generosity of Mrs. Hearst, who has given the necessary money for that work to the University of California. In the volume, which contains six hundred pages, is a remarkable collection of papyrus found at Tebtunis, Egypt, by the Hearst party. Valuable knowledge is to be gained through its pages of life in Egypt during the two centuries before Christ. While excavating at Umm el Baragat, for the University Dr. Bernard P. Grenfell and Dr. Arthur S. Hunt of Oxford, England, discovered mummified bodies of crocodiles wrapped in sheets of papyrus closely written in Greek characters. The long inscriptions on about two hundred of the papyrus found on crocodile mummies have been published, both in the Greek text and in the English translation.

Concerning The Crocodile

In this book is told in language as simple as a childish fable and in story much more fascinating, how the crocodile was worshiped in every village in the Fayum, throughout the Ptolemaic period. The ceremonies performed by the priests at the burying of the sacred reptile, after its mummification, are described in most entertaining manner. Literary bits from lost Greek manuscripts, royal ordinances, official and private correspondence, together with documents dealing in detail with the peculiar form of government, as well as with the system of wire-pulling in the time of the Pharaohs, are to be found in this interesting volume of the most highly organized governments ever known. Menches, from whose office the papyrus now published were written, was, perhaps, the most important scribe of his time and was regarded as an authority in the region where he lived. Voluminous details are given concerning the taxation, cultivation and ownership of lands belonging to the crown, as well as of the military service and of the temples of ancient Egypt.

More Literature To Come

It is the intention of the University of California to publish two more bulky volumes containing the remainder of the valuable papyrus found. The next or second of these works to be given to the public will deal with papyrus of the Roman period, together with an exhaustive account of the Hearst excavations in the Fayum and minute descriptions of the precious antiquities there unearthed. In the third volume of the series there will be fac-similes and translations of a vast number of papyrus, many of them dating back to the third century before Christ. The work of deciphering these is a laborious one, and many of the parchments have not yet been unrolled. Owing to their fragility after twenty centuries of entombment, it will be necessary to handle them with the utmost care.

The Misses Schussler, who have been visiting Mrs. Poett (nee Carolan) at Menlo, will soon leave for Nice, where they will pass the winter.

In Sausalito

The new home of the Hickmans in Sausalito is finished. One of its features is a ball-room, which is the only one worthy the name in a private house in Sausalito. The Hickmans are going East shortly, but will be back in time to do some large entertaining this winter.

STOP DRINKING

L. L. C. CO., Inc.

Absolutely Sure. Perfectly Harmless.
Pleasant to Take.
Private Cure. No Sanitarium.

50c Box Stops Drinking
$1.00 Box Keeps it Stopped
$2.00 Box Cures Forever

417 Hayward Bldg., San Francisco

A good
glove for a dollar and a half
Centemeri

200 Post Street

The Glorious Present

In these pessimistic days of the calamity howler and the prophet of evil, it is refreshing occasionally to hear the reassuring voice of the amiable optimist. Some weeks ago that grand old New Englander, Senator Hoar, contributed an instructive article to an Eastern magazine, on the subject of the public conscience. He pointed out that things were not as bad as they seemed; that virtue in public life is more highly appraised now than it was when he first entered upon his career in Washington. He contrasted the present with the past, and showed that in the old days corruption was far more widespread than it is now. A few days ago we were further enlightened along the same line by Justice David J. Brewer of the United States Supreme Court, who, in a most entertaining magazine article, expressed views similar to those of Senator Hoar. He says that the surest guarantee of the future prosperity and stability of this country is the growing earnestness of the demand for highest integrity in all official life. "No one," says Justice Brewer, "can compare generation with generation without being conscious of a wonderful improvement," and he argued that integrity in official life is becoming more and more the rule because of the increasing integrity in personal life. Incidentally he set forth that old, familiar proposition that officials will never be better than the people for whom they act. There are some that hold that they are always as good as those for whom they act, but that is a proposition that the people of this city, at this time, would deny most emphatically. And yet if we are to believe Lincoln Steffens, who has spent a lot of time investigating municipal mismanagement, it is not far from the truth.

Lament of the Britisher

For a number of years past no theme has attracted the British journalist like that of the extravagance of the Americans sojourning in London. No other topic has appealed so strongly to the amateurs of society or to those whose strong card is a dissent from things as they are. Now behold, an exceeding bitter cry is rising from these same British throats. Either the moneyed Americans have seen all they care to of England or else they have profited by the lessons written for them. At the present moment John Bull in London and his brother in the rural districts are lamenting the loss of American patronage and the vanishment of the profits they counted as all but in their pockets. The large hotels, which looked forward to having their choice suites occupied by Midas Americanus, find their rooms empty. Either he and his tribe remain away entirely, or else they stop but a few days and then push on to the continent. Even those who stay for a brief spell have furnished another note to the chorus of complaint. There are a few genuine American restaurants opened in London, and instead of taking rooms and board on the once "American plan," they take rooms only and have their meals at the restaurants. And the inn-keeper has a similar plaint. After going to the expense of preparing their hostelries for the automobilists who should have stopped for teas and dinners at least, there are no auto tourists and ruin stalks along the roads. One has always to make a considerable allowance for exaggeration in these laments. First it was the heiresses who bought up all the eligible titles, next, the chorus girls who ousted the native variety, and then the American playwright who crowded the Britisher on his own lawn. After that, the American novelist came in for a share, and now it is the Boniface who suffers. It will not be such a bad thing for Americans or America if there is some truth in the lament.

A NEW DEPARTURE.*The Famous Sorosis Shoes now made for Boys and Girls as well as Women.

It has always been a matter of pardonable pride with Sorosis that they have conducted their business along original lines, and have repeatedly broken the traditions of the trade when occasion demanded.

In placing so good a shoe as Sorosis on the market, and compelling it to be sold at a reasonable price ($3.50), they rendered a distinct service to the women of this country, which, they are pleased to say, has been appreciated.

The claims they made for this shoe were proved by test to be truthful, and they now ask the consideration of their friends to their Boys' and Girls' Shoes.

They did not enter the juvenile field without long and careful experimental work. They knew they could not hope for success unless they had something unusual to offer.

The quality of their Boys' and Girls' Shoes, and their scientific construction, are their chief claims to distinction.

Heretofore no manufacturer has ever made a scientific study of the needs of growing feet. This claimed their first attention, and to aid them in designing the proper lasts the most eminent orthopedic authorities were summoned to their aid.

The result is something wholly new in juvenile shoemaking.

The problem of economy has also been solved by them in a unique way.

It is achieved not by low cost at the start, but by long service in the end.

Boys and Girls are harder on shoes than their elders. They take many more steps, and their shoes lead a strenuous life every moment of their waking hours. Under what conditions, therefore, should a shoe be made to meet this trying service cheaply and effectively.

Will it be obtained by using the very cheapest possible stock, inefficient and unskilled labor, and rushing them helter-skelter through the factory in any old way?

No, indeed. The Sorosis idea of meeting this demand is to use the best possible material money can buy, or skill and experience suggest.

Sorosis Shoes for Boys and Girls are identically the same in quality, in material and in workmanship with their women's line, but with, in addition, this great fact, to which they have already referred, but which cannot be emphasized too strongly.

They are scientifically designed to train the growing feet at the formative period when it is most susceptible to correct influences. Absence of foot troubles, etc., in later years is only one of the advantages derived from wearing Sorosis at this early period.

It is impossible to make a good shoe, and sell it for less than they ask. This is their honest conviction after long and careful experimenting.

In making a Shoe for Boys and Girls, perhaps higher than the average price, they realize that they are again going directly against the time-honored custom of the trade. But their position has been carefully thought out, and rests on a solid, substantial basis.

The future of Sorosis is with the rising generation, and they dare not disappoint their young friends. It is to them that they look for their business of to-morrow. They are building not for to-day, but for all time. They are content to abide by their judgment.

They believe parents are willing to pay a price sufficient to warrant them in expecting first-class material, skilful workmanship, and great durability. This they guarantee in Sorosis for Boys and Girls.

Only to be had at the Sorosis Shoe Parlor, 214 Post St.

The Clan Spreckels

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spreckels expect to take possession of their new home very soon. Mrs. Spreckels is busy shopping nowadays for the furnishings. The Jack Spreckels are the most active socially of any of the Spreckels clan, and Mrs. Jack has a great fondness for entertaining. Grace and Lily Spreckels have tired of San Francisco society, I am told, and it is said will go abroad this winter. The Gus Spreckels are threatening to become permanent residents of New York. I hear that they have secured the backing of Mrs. Gouverneur Kortright, who has been with them in Europe, and that she has agreed to open for them the portals of Newport society.

Bread Cast Upon The Waters

As soon as Katherine Dillon formally announced her engagement with Lieutenant Winship, she began to reap the benefit of her generosity. For years she has been presenting fiancées with lovely engagement cups, and the recipients are now reciprocating.

The Hills at Carlsbad

The Horace Hills are at Carlsbad. Mr. Hill is taking the waters. The date of their return here is uncertain, though Mrs. Hill writes that she is very anxious to come home. Mrs. Hill, who was a Napa girl, is a great friend of Lady Waterlow, who was Maggie Hamilton of that town, and when they meet abroad they are always delighted to talk over old times.

Moss-Pierce

A marriage of interest to San Franciscans will take place in Milwaukee, Wis., on Wednesday, the twenty-fourth of August. On that date Miss Antoinette Moss, only daughter of the late Charles H. Moss, the millionaire lumber manufacturer, will become the bride of Norman Pierce of San Francisco. Miss Moss is a very clever and accomplished girl, and is a graduate of Lassel Seminary. Mr. Pierce is very well known in business circles. He is the head of the Norman Pierce Company, publishers. After a tour through the East and a visit to the St. Louis fair, Mr. and Mrs. Pierce will return to San Francisco, and will reside at the California hotel.

Sex Literature

F. Hopkinson Smith predicts that in the course of time we shall have novels written by women and read exclusively by women, which will be utterly incomprehensible to men; on the other hand, men will write for men, and women will be unable to understand or appreciate them. To some extent we have that condition now, for though the Duchess brand of fiction is turned out in carload lots on both sides of the Atlantic it is pretty hard to imagine even a schoolboy dieting his mind on it. It is women who wear out their eyesight and waste their time over "Airy Fairy Lillian," or some other daisy with winning ways, disturbing the peace of mind of half a dozen dukes. On the other hand, women, as a rule, find Kipling and London and other straight-out writers too brutal. Even a good romance of political or business life has to be watered down by a love episode or so in order to gain even passing attention from them. There are books which are read by most women and some men, and others which are read by most men and some women. If one wants hot house flowers and pretty lace and embroidery the women's books are the place to look for it. And what I call women's books are not all written by women, by any means; neither are the men's books always the work of men.

"I hear that Brown was full when she accepted him."
"Yes, and when he proposed, too, poor fellow."

Moth-Killers Over the Bay

Fashionable dames and damsels in the towns of Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda are spending their mornings in watching the lines where their Paris—and other—gowns are taking the sun cure for moth-balls and camphor. At a recent "exclusive" wedding the bride nearly fainted from the closeness of the atmosphere, saturated as it was with "moth-killers." It has been gently hinted that the woman who desires to attend future weddings will be more welcome if she will air her gown beforehand.

The Coming of the Towers

Oakland society people are anxiously waiting for Ambassador and Mrs. Charlemagne Tower to make their appearance across the bay. Though it has been announced several times of late that they were coming, nobody has any definite information on the subject. Though Mrs. Towers is very fond of her Oakland home it is thought that she might possibly find so many attractions in the Eastern social whirl that she will not have time to come to the coast. She has entertained so many visiting Americans in St. Petersburg and Berlin that she has friends all over the country eager for an opportunity to reciprocate. At all her functions attended by royalty, "American beauties have graced the occasion." Mrs. Tower dresses magnificently and in exquisite taste. Her jewels are famous at court, although she exercises praiseworthy restraint, and wears what the best authorities describe as "just enough."

PIERCE-RODOLPH STORAGE CO. Inc.

STORAGE, MOVING, PACKING AND SHIPPING

WAREHOUSE: EDDY ST., near Fillmore

Specially built for the Storage of Household Furniture

OFFICE: POST AND POWELL STS.

Phone Private 571

DEAFNESS

Those troubled with deafness are cordially invited to demonstrations of the MASSACON and ACOUSTICON at the offices of the

HUTCHISON ACOUSTIC COMPANY

W. B. EGAN, Pacific Coast Agent Phone Priv. Ex. 216
417-418 Starr-King Bldg., 121 Geary St., San Francisco

A Special Bunk for Bootes

Tall Captain John T. Bootes, of the Marines, was in town a few days ago from the Mare Island Navy Yard, where he is temporarily quartered pending the commissioning of the battleship Ohio, the marine guard of which he is to command. When it was learned that he was assigned to the Ohio it was found necessary to lengthen his bunk to fit him, and the lengthening process was so extensive that a hole had to be cut in the bulkhead separating his state-room from the adjoining one, making a sort of box extension to accommodate the long-sparred Captain's extremities.

Our Crack Ordnance Expert

The assignment of Commander N. E. Mason to the chieftancy of the Naval Bureau of Ordnance, with the rank of Rear-Admiral, was a happy one, and quite in line with the present but hitherto unprecedented policy of appointing men to such offices for fitness rather than seniority, as in the case of Chief Constructor Washington Lee Capps, the navy's youngest Rear-Admiral. Mason has long been an ordnance expert, one of the best in the service, and his natural inclinations in this direction have been developed by many years of experience at a gun factory and proving ground. In the minds of those who know both men, Mason is believed to be much better fitted for head of the bureau than Rear-Admiral George A. Converse, who preceded him for a brief period after Rear-Admiral O'Neil's retirement. The navy is rapidly developing a corps of high-grade ordnance specialists, and the future may yet have in store a regular ordnance corps for the navy, as for the army.

A Naval Hell-Hole

It has long been the practice of the United States Navy to have a few stations to be used for those officials who do not stand in high favor at the Department. Key West and Pensacola, Fla., Port Royal, S. C., and Bremer-ton, Wash., are three samples of these places of exile, but I hear that none of these ranks with the new station at Guantanamo, Cuba. Officers who have served everywhere say that this spot, close though it is to the Atlantic seaboard, is a veritable hell on earth. Aside from its isolation and desolation, it is hot and depressing, and men who have been there and on the pestilential Isthmus of Panama agree that the latter is the preferable spot. Hereafter, when an officer is detailed to the Guantanamo naval station, it may be safely assumed that his name is on the black-list of the office of detail.

An Ideal Military Camp

Every army officer who has seen the Henry ranch is loud in his praises of it as a site for a permanent military camp, combining as it does within relatively small area, the various topographical features that troops are apt to encounter in the field. The terrain is greatly diversified, including long, broad, level plain, ample for the tents of a whole army corps if needed, and streams, defiles, woods, knolls, hills and even, at the boundaries, fair-sized mountains. There is excellent opportunity for practical marches and deployments, under conditions of real service, and at the same time there are roads enough to furnish the conveniences necessary for speed in covering the ground by umpires, spectators and commanding general. If the State militia wanted an object lesson in military life they have certainly had it at Camp Atascadero.

Our Spectacular Militia

Some interesting echoes reach me from Camp Atascadero, where the regulars and the State Militia are now engaged in joint manoeuvres. It appears that the arrival of the latter last Saturday was not without interesting incident. Some of its high officers made their debut in camp in a manner painful to behold. One major and a colonel were thrown from their horses early in the game. The former, Major P. F. Simonds of Sacramento, I regret to say, was painfully injured, having his collar bone broken. The Colonel was J. F. Hayes of San Francisco, who suffered a severe abrasion of his nose, which, I am told, came in violent contact with his sword, resulting in his entry to camp with a patched up face as though fresh from the firing line. There were feats of horsemanship, it seems, which awakened the envy even of the omnipresent army mule.

The Baron's Barbed Wire

There are many topographic obstacles to be overcome by the soldiers during the manoeuvres, not the least of which is the barbed-wire fence surrounding the ranch, which, by special orders issued by General MacArthur, is "to be regarded as impassable." Woe betide the over-zealous warrior who trespasses on the forbidden baronial estate. The Baron is a frequent visitor to camp himself. Wire fences are no barrier to the exchange of hospitalities between himself and the officers.

HOTEL SEVILLE

S. W. Cor. 29th St. and Madison Ave., New York

JUST FINISHED. NOW OPEN.

12 story ABSOLUTELY FIREPROOF modern hotel; contains 100 bath-rooms and is sumptuously furnished; every conceivable convenience; 28th and 29th sts., crosstown cars direct to and from Erie, Pennsylvania and Lehigh Valley, 23rd street ferries. Within five minutes of New York's two main shopping thoroughfares and principal theatres, but while enjoying these advantages of location it is just far enough from them to be quiet. A high class restaurant and a ladies' and gentlemen's cafe are special features. The cuisine is of a superior character.

Single Rooms with Running Water from $1.50 per day, and with Bath from $2.00 per day upward. EDW. PURCHAS, Manager

Hotel Richelieu

1012 VAN NESS AVENUE

Having renewed our lease, and entirely renovated this Hotel, we will continue making it the finest and leading Family Hotel of this Coast.

AND

HOTEL GRANADA

1000 SUTTER ST.

HOTEL RICHELIEU CO.

The Angelus

LOS ANGELES

NEW MANAGEMENT

Summer Rates to December 1st

LOOMIS BROS., Proprietors

DR. NAGEL, Oculist. Practice Limited to the Eye.

Has Removed to 731 Sutter St., Atkinson Bldg.

Hours 10 to 12 A. M. and 1 to 3 P. M.

Phone East 1247

Residence, 1919 Vallejo St.—Phone West 1103

Shifts in the Navy

As I predicted four months ago, Lieutenant Clarence M. Stone, U. S. N., has at last received his orders to the battleship Ohio, his brief assignment to the Concord for the northern cruise having been terminated, as I expected. Stone's detail to the Ohio adds another officer, as popular as he is capable, to that crack ship's personnel. Another notable detachment from the Concord is that of Lieutenant-Commander J. E. Palmer, who goes to the Marblehead as chief engineer. "Venus" Palmer, as he was called in the old Academy days, is one of those quiet fellows, mild of manner but suave of speech, who generally manage to extract a goodly share of contentment out of life in a quiet, philosophic way.

The Irrepressible Schley

If any further testimony were needed to support the criticisms I passed some months ago on Rear-Admiral Winfield Scott Schley, it has been amply furnished by his latest ebullition in a Philadelphia weekly paper. Not satisfied with the revelations of the famous court of inquiry of 1901, Schley has the effrontery to bob up again, now that Sampson is dead, a victim of a deluded public's ingratitude, insisting as posing as the hero of Santiago. To those who were on the Cuban blockade of 1898, Schley, "the Grand Old Windbag" of the U. S. Navy, is intolerable. His Cienfuegos hesitation, his evident reluctance to find Cervera, his famous "engage-at-ten-thousand-yards" order, his effort to return to Key West after Cervera was located, his "loop," and numerous other military crimes, for any one of which he should have been court-martialed, are too deeply impressed upon those acquainted with the inside facts to permit him to steal the honors that belong to another—in his grave. In the anxious days of June, 1898, there was a common saying in the North Atlantic squadron that there was only one pair of cold feet in the whole fleet, and they belonged to Winfield Scott Schley. That he should have the poor taste and the miserable judgment to attempt to revive the closed book is quite in accord with his inglorious naval record.

The Vanderlynn Stows are back from Europe, where they spent four months, their trip including a cruise on the Mediterranean.

Jack Baird, "Addie" Mizner and young Eastland are expected in town any day now. They were at the St. Louis fair at last accounts.

NEW YORK'S NEWEST HOSTELRY.

San Franciscans now in New York write in enthusiastic terms of the new Hotel Seville, recently opened in the big metropolis. The Seville is situated at Madison avenue and Twenty-ninth street, and is therefore very convenient in location, being near the theatres and in walking distance of the business centre, yet removed from the noise of the street-car and roar of the streets. It is the latest thing in hotel architecture, and contains the very newest modern improvements. One thing about its furnishings that pleases is the unostentatious luxury, comfort and refinement. The rooms are arranged singly, with or without baths, and in small suites of parlor, bedroom and bath. There are also larger suites of four or five rooms, with private halls. There is a telephone in every room or suite. Something unusual in a New York hotel, and a feature which Californians particularly take note of, is the fact that every room has sun and light, the location of the Seville on two wide streets providing against dark corners. The cuisine is in charge of the chef who was formerly in charge of the St. Denis kitchens, and the service is maintained after a high standard. The rates of the Seville, which is under the management of Edward Purchas, the well-known hotel man formerly of the Savoy, are reasonable. A pleasant room with bath may be had for two dollars and a half per day; without bath, one dollar and a half; suite of parlor, bedroom and bath, five dollars per day and upwards.

THE LIFE BEAUTIFUL

will enter wherever it finds a home. To make friends with one's surroundings and congeniality among the useful things one lives with—this is the craft's idea.

Crafts Shop (work in furniture and the useful arts), Art Gallery, and private oriental collections of Dr. Orlof N. Orlow, free at all times for the inspection of visitors.

UNITED CRAFTS AND ARTS

(Formerly 2203 Central Avenue)

147 PRESIDIO AVENUE

SAY WHEN!

and when you say it, it will be with a solid feeling of satisfaction if it is over a bottle of

Old Rose Bud or Daisy Rye Whiskey

Whether you are in the woods, on the water, or in your cozy home, our liquors are always welcomed as a friend indeed.

RATHJEN WINE CO.

46 ELLIS STREET

Phone Main 5171

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

ALASKA REFRIGERATORS

FOR GROCERS
BUTCHERS
FLORISTS AND HOUSEHOLD -

TILE, OPAL OR
ZINC LINED -
PACIFIC COAST AGENTS

W.W. MONTAGUE & CO.
309-317 MARKET ST.

The Tavern Lights were Twinkling Through the Trees

(Chant Royal.)

BY LOUIS A. ROBERTSON.

Though to forbidden haunts she sometimes goes,
As oft she went before, her nights and days
Are not so fast and frequent since she chose
The life that lies in more sequestered ways;
She walks now with a favored few who tread
On thornless roses, and who never dread
The coming morn; but even as a maid
She knelt to Venus, unto whom she prayed
Her palpitating pulses to appease;
The goddess heard, and when she lent her aid,
The tavern lights were twinkling through the trees.

They ever shine for her; the devil knows
She's worth the winning, and he makes them blaze;
She loves the purple path where Passion strows
The reddest roses; through that tortuous maze,
E'en as a girl, her way she'd quickly thread;
For once when they believed her safe in bed,
She left her boarding school and with me strayed
To where our waiting coursers chafed and neighed,
Eager to bear us swifter than the breeze
To where Love's burning thirst was soon allayed:
The tavern lights were twinkling through the trees.

She loved the pace, for she was one of those Whom rash, rebellious impulse often sways,
And all as ravishing as she who rose
From out the fabled Cytherean sprays.
The silver moon burst through the clouds o'erhead,
As swift along our midnight way we sped;
Through eucalyptus grove and gloomy glade
We galloped on, till in the lessening shade,
The longed-for haven panting Pleasure sees;
Then, as we turned adown the darkened grade,
The tavern lights were twinkling through the trees.

A stable-boy, a friend of "Ostler Joe's"
Looked at us through a blinking, boozy haze;
He took the steeds to where the trough o'erflows,
Then rubbed and blanketed the breathless bays;
I followed them beneath the sheltering shed,
And saw them safely haltered, housed and fed,
And then—the rosy, reckless renegade
Was mine at last! One glorious hour we stayed
Within that home of fizz and frogs and fees;
When back we cantered from that escapade,
The tavern lights were twinkling through the trees.

Across the Nile a longing look she throws—
The flesh-pots still allure her backward gaze;
Before her, too, a glamouring prospect glows—
The "stolen waters" still their voices raise;
She loved their murmuring music, though it led
To where the revel in her pulses bred
The fever that her passions oft obeyed;
But round her brow her lover loves to braid
The myrtle still; the sword of Damocles
Hangs ever on the hair—a harmless blade;
The tavern lights are twinkling through the trees.

ENVOI.

Prince, many a woman has been falsely weighed,
And for her frailties too often flayed,
But diamonds, dresses, drinks and debauchees
Have power these fatuous fair ones to persuade;
The tavern lights are twinkling through the trees.

August, 1904.

NEW YORK.
Telephone Call 3177 Broad.

SAN FRANCISCO.
Telephone Call Main 3070.

E. F. HUTTON & CO.

Bankers and Brokers

MEMBERS
NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE.
NEW YORK COTTON EXCHANGE.
NEW YORK COFFEE EXCHANGE.
CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE.

Stocks, Bonds, Cotton, Coffee, Grain, Provisions

RICHARD E. MULCAHY, Manager
San Francisco

490 CALIFORNIA STREET 33-35 NEW STREET
SAN FRANCISCO NEW YORK

MME. GILLINGHAM

COMPLEXION SPECIALIST

Will guarantee to permanently remove every wrinkle (no matter how deep) crows feet, small pox pittings, freckles, bagginess of the eyes, restore lost contour, making you a new skin as clear and fresh as in youth. No surgery or electricity used. There are ladies at the Parlors who have one half of the face treated, showing the thoroughness of the treatment.

All Consultation, either by mail or person, free and confidential.

Parlors, 131 POWELL ST., Near Ellis

The Stage

Poor Janauschek

What is fame? Fanny Janauschek has become an inmate of a sanitarium, and a few lines in obscure corners of the newspapers are all that tell of the closing tragedy of an actress once honored on two continents. Money gone, health wrecked, old age imposing its dreadful penalty, this woman is as distant from the present generation as if she had died in the fullness of her artistic glory twenty years ago. What a lesson in this woman's end on the folly of the passing show! Once the favorite of kings, now the charity inmate of a sanitarium. Not a tie binding her to the triumphant past, waiting for death in the knowledge that every day moves her a little farther out of the memory of those who once grew frenzied in applause! "Let them remember me as Meg Merrilles and Lady Macbeth," said Janauschek only two years ago; but how many remember now? It is just five years since the actress left the stage, yet in that brief span has come forgetfulness of her achievements. She was born in Prague, July twentieth, 1832. At ten she was a brilliant pianist, and in 1848 she aroused enthusiasm at her first appearance on the stage in her native city. On the eighteenth anniversary of her birth she became the leading woman in the Stadt theatre, Frankfort, and when she resigned that position eleven years later she was looked upon as one of the greatest tragediennes of the time. In 1867 she brought her own company to America, and presented "Medea" in German. Her triumph was instant and complete. So strong became public affection that Janauschek decided on a long stay here and in a few months she mastered the English language. Her popularity increased with her performances as Lady Macbeth and Marie Stuart. No actress had a firmer hold on public esteem and her annual tours in repertory came to be looked upon as the feature of the succeeding seasons. She played Lady Macbeth with Booth before she learned the language, and she often has told of the actor's dislike to that arrangement. He took little interest in the performances, and Janauschek used to call him back to the interest of the moment by squeezing his hand or plucking his clothing. One by one the jewels that were showered upon the actress by the royalty of Europe went to the pawnbrokers. The last ornament to be spared was a Greek bracelet, a gift from Ludwig, the mad King of Bavaria. Ludwig raved over the acting of Janauschek and he had the court photographers catch her in many poses in all her characters. The pictures were then bound in an album with a bronze figure of the Goddess of Tragedy on the cover, and one of these albums now is among the few treasures zealously preserved by the actress. Janauschek's sorrow at lost fame is tempered by the knowledge that such is the way of the world. What pathos is contained in these words, with which the actress ended what probably will be her last interview: "What matters the past now? I am only a forgotten woman who cannot even sell the priceless Spanish lace that Mme. Rothschild gave me, because no one has the interest to buy."

A Daly Comedy

Frances Slosson had her opportunity at the Grand this week, and fulfilled expectations of those who had observed her talent in small parts. She is Jo, the "prize" in "The Lottery of Love," and is comedy personified. Miss Slosson is a very pretty girl, with expressive features and a petite, graceful figure. Miss Gilman is also very good as the maid-of-all-work, the ubiquitous Ann Eliza, and Miss Chapman is Diana, whom the gay Adolphus loves before his second fancy comes upon the scene. Miss Andrews has the role of Mrs. Zenobia Sherramy, who butts in—always at the proper moment. Mr. Neill as Adolphus is at his debonair best, and the other actors all seem to enjoy their light roles. The audiences enjoying the Neills' productions during this season have been large, and always drawn from the best class of our theatre-goers.

Plucky Miss Clifton

Ethel Clifton, the Central's new leading woman, is a woman of "nerve." Most actresses are women with nerves; they need them in their business, but few of them have the nerve of Miss Clifton, who rose from a sick bed Monday night despite the protests of her physician, to make her San Francisco debut. And she gave a strenuous performance such as the strenuous play called for. A Central first-night audience is as critical as a Columbia audience, and is perhaps less easily pleased. If an actor or actress fails to make good, the audience, particularly the gallery end of it, does not fail to express its disapproval. It is to Miss Clifton's credit that she won her audience's approbation; that, too, in a weepy melodrama full of impossibilities. "For Her Children's Sake" is one of Theodore Kremer's popular melodramas. It is of the nerve-racking, tear-drawing order, and fulfills its mission because it is just what it proclaims itself. I do not wonder that Kremer has accumulated a fortune since he deserted the higher walks of playwriting and went in for this sort of thing. He knows how to put together a series of sensational episodes reading like an old Saturday Night or Fireside Companion novel, and there are always plenty of people who enjoy this kind of play better than all the Ibsen, Shaw, Pinero, Jones and Fitch dramas ever written.

"The Manxman"

A stock actor plays many parts in his time, and he sometimes tests his versatility beyond its capacity. This week Luke Conness is playing Phillip Christian in "The Manxman," and the part is not suited to his temperament. Phillip Christian was not the polished villain that he looks in the person of Mr. Conness. He was a man of some tone and breeding who was led into deception by a woman's passion that appealed to his own. The Phillip of Mr. Conness reminds one of a prosperous San Francisco politician who has been caught cheating at a primary election. Mr. White Whittlesey is very much at home in the role of Peter Quil-

JULIA HEINRICH,
With Max Heinrich at the Orpheum next week.

ARNOLD DALY,

as he appears in the Bernard Shaw play of "Candida." Daly created quite a furore last season in New York with this sensational success. He has commanded attention by his remarkable versatility and the cleverness of his character work. Not alone has he done this but has demonstrated that the public was ready for plays beautifully written, admirably constructed, and which present powerful psychological situations with force and truth, despite all the polished mockery and subtle, biting irony of the egotistic Mr. Shaw. Arnold Daly deserves all of the success that has come to him for his courage in producing "Candida" at his own expense, for the carefulness of the presentation, for the players about him and for his own wonderful portrayal of the poet with the diseased imagination who loves the wife of the smug, matter-of-fact, always preaching clergyman. Daly and his company have come direct from New York to the Columbia theatre and will give "Candida" for two weeks commencing with next Monday night, August twenty-second.

lian. He is the Manxman, the uncultured nobleman to the life. This week's production of the play at the Alcazar does not compare favorably with the performance of a year ago. It is not half so convincing. Miss Lawton's Kate is perfervid but her art is too obvious. She is entirely too melodramatic.

A Genius in Vaudeville

Walter C. Kelly of this week's bill at the Orpheum is new to us. He came unheralded, and one cannot help wondering that San Francisco never heard of him before. He is one of the exceptionally good things in vaudeville—a dialect comedian who can amuse without the aid of "make-up." He pictures a court-room without "props," invests it with life and atmosphere, and peoples it with characters that appeal most vividly to the mind's eye. Mr. Kelly is a genius. His stunt is artistic, wholesome and exquisitely humorous. It is as refreshing as the philosophy of Peter Finley Dunne or the broad wit of George Ade.

The Tivoli's "Toreador" production has "caught on" as I predicted that it would, and it will no doubt have a long run. I have not yet heard Forrest Dabney Carr, the new basso, but the press-agent informs me that he has a voice of fine quality and unusual power. Before coming to this city he was on tour with the Danrosch orchestra and formerly he sang in grand opera in the Savage company. He will sing Alvarado in "The Serenade" which will follow "The Toreador."

The New "Belasco"

Los Angeles has had an amazing number of new theatres built upon paper, but the only one to materialize in the form of bricks and mortar is The Belasco, which is just north of the Hotel Van Nuys on Main street. It is named after Frederic Belasco, and controlled by Belasco, Mayer & Co., who will give Los Angeles, at last, a really first class stock company, in high class dramatic novelties. The policy will be that which has made the Alcazar, in this city, so wonderfully successful. The new Belasco opens Monday, August twenty-ninth, with Belasco and De Mille's "The Wife," and "Mrs. Jack," which was such a hit here, will follow. The house, it is claimed, will be the most beautiful and luxurious in America, devoted to stock. The color scheme will be green, ivory and gold; the seating capacity, twelve hundred. Adele Block, Martin L. Alsop, Ozza Waldrop, Howard Scott, Agnes Ranken and Richard Vivian, all Alcazar favorites, are engaged, and other well known players are George W. Barnam, Starr King Walker, Robert Rogers, James A. Bliss, Louis Bishop Hall, Louise Mackintosh, Mary Graham and Faye Wallace. The resident manager will be John H. Blackwood, formerly dramatic critic of the Washington (D. C.) Times and recently manager for Mrs. Carter. E. D. Price is on the ground overseeing everything and Frederic Belasco will stage the production of his brother's play. Los Angeles society looks forward to the opening with keen interest.

Josef Hoffman to Open the Concert Season

Manager Will Greenbaum announces as the first musical star of the season, Josef Hoffman, the pianist, who created such a sensation here three years ago, and the only one of the child pianists who fulfilled the promises of his youth. Hofmann drew larger audiences than any pianist who has visited this city with the exception of Paderewski, and his intelligent interpretations, combined with rare skill and technique, made the deepest impressions on our musical public, and his return will be welcomed especially by teachers and students who gain so much by hearing masters of the art of the rank of Hofmann, Harold Bauer and De Pachman. It is the opportunities the student has in Europe to hear such artists that make study over there so valuable, and when a truly great artist comes this way no student can afford to miss the chance of hearing him. Hofmann will give three concerts at the Alhambra in October, after which he will tour the coast.

New York Gossip

William H. Crane has returned from Europe and is rehearsing "Business for Business," to be produced in September under Charles Frohman's management. The comedy is an adaptation from the French, and the original made a great hit at the Comedie Francaise. William Gillette will appear in "The Admirable Crichton" in September. Annie Russell's season in "Brother Jacques" opens in October. Mrs. Gilbert begins her starring tour soon in "Granny," Clyde Fitch's new play. Fitch also wrote "The Coronet of a Duchess" which Clara Bloodgood will star in. Ethel Barrymore will appear in "Sunday," with Bruce McRae as her leading man.

Touring Travesty Stars

Harry James, manager of the Weberfieldian company now touring Australia, has written me from Sydney that his "American Travesty Stars" opened there on July sixteenth, in "Fiddle Dee Dee," and scored a tremendous hit. The biggest individual hit was made by his soubrette, Lilly Sutherland, who took Flossie Hope's place. He is confident that the venture will prove a great financial success.

WM. WILLIAMS & SONS

(LTD.) OF ABERDEEN.

V V O

Scotch Whisky

Importers - MACONDRAY & CO.

The New Bills

"Candida" will easily crowd the Columbia during the two weeks of its run. A big guarantee was offered for the San Francisco production before it could be brought West, and all the New York cast will appear in the play. After "Candida" will come Kyrle Bellew in "Raffles," and then "The Wizard of Oz" and "San Toy."

For the ninth week of White Whittlesey's successful engagement at the Alcazar will be given "The Pride of Jennico," the play taken from the Castles' romantic novel of the same name. The plot is a complicated one, and includes a marriage based upon mistaken identity, followed by a series of startling adventures. Whittlesey will play Basil Jennico, the hero, and Miss Lawton will be the Princess. Harry Hilliard returns to the company, after his vacation, in this production. "Nathan Hale," the Revolutionary drama Clyde Fitch wrote for Nat Goodwin, comes next, the first presentation of the play in this city.

Fischer's has made great preparations for the production of "The Anheuser Push," the burlesque written by Will Carleton and Lee Johnson, and the company says that it is worthy of the money and time that have been spent upon it. I. W. Norcross, formerly of the New York Casino, and Fred Conger, who was the original Little Billee in "Trilby," and an actor of experience, have succeeded Charles W. Jones in the stage management. The new burlesque will reintroduce the popular Georgia O'Ramey as soubrette, and all the strength of the present company will be in the cast. Dorothy Morton will sing a Venetian serenade, "My Gondolier Queen," and "Wilhelmina," a charming waltz song. Fischer's has many good things in preparation. J. C. Crawford of the Call has written a burlesque, and Howard Tacot of New York has just finished "Tommy Rot," a musical comedy, for which Herman Perlet, Belle Thorne's husband, has written the music, and which will be given at Fischer's. Colgate Baker and Mrs. Dexter have each written new musical comedies that will be given later in the season at this theatre.

"The Toreador" is still playing to immense houses at the Tivoli. Fully thirty-four thousand people have seen the show during the three weeks it has been on. Forrest Dabney Carr now sings the title role. "The Serenade" is to be revived after "The Toreador."

A play founded on thrilling incidents of the present Russo-Japan war will be the Central's attraction. "A Spy at Port Arthur" is the title, and Japs and Cossacks, American and English soldiers and sailors will make the cast a picturesque one. There will be some fine scenic displays, naval warfare of course figuring in the situations. It is quite apropos at this time and as it is said to be both stirring and exciting it is sure to crowd the Central during the week of its production. Francis Powers's great little play, "The First Born," will be the Central's attraction for the week of September fifth. The bill will be a double one, the curtain-raiser being Daly's delightful comedy, "Lost—A Day."

James Neill will begin the eighth week of his engagement at the Grand Opera House tomorrow matinee, with an elaborate production of William Gillette's famous drama, "Held By the Enemy," the first play ever written dealing with the Civil War. This will be the first time "Held by the Enemy" has been presented in San Francisco at fifteen, twenty-five and fifty cents, and its production will in every way equal the higher priced ones that have preceded it. Sunday matinee, August twenty-eighth. Mr. Neill will begin the last week of his season with a magnificent production of "Under Two Flags."

Eva Williams, "The Duse of Vaudeville," and Jac Tucker, comedian and mimic, will make their first appearance in this city at the Orpheum in "Skinny's Finish," an episode of Scrap Alley, a classic in slang. An announcement that will prove of interest is the engagement of Max Heinrich, the distinguished basso cantante, composer and pianist, and his daughter, Julia, the eminent contralto. This will be their first joint appearance in vaudeville. Treloar, the ex-Harvard oarsman and champion athlete and winner of the one thousand dollar prize for the most perfectly developed man in the world at the recent Physical Culture Exposition at Madison Square Garden, New York, will give an interesting performance. His act is entitled "The Awakening of a Statue." Miss Tempest's gowns are said to be the handsomest creations ever worn in vaudeville. The Orpheum motion pictures will include scenes at the training quarters of Jack Munroe, showing the heavyweight in action with Kid McCoy.

At the Chutes will be Marcus and Gartelle, comedy skaters; Mayer and Irwin, clever vocal comedians from New York; Maud Rockwell, contralto, and Rouble Sims, the tramp cartoonist; the Budd Brothers, comedy acrobats, Mabel Lamson, the illustrated song singer, and the American Biograph. —The Playgoer.

GRAND REVIEW CAMP ATASCADERO SUNDAY, AUG. 21

Special Rates

ROUND TRIP, $5.00

Gen. MacArthur has arranged for a general review of militia and regulars near Ascuncion, now the army station, which will be one of the striking features of the encampment. For this event the Southern Pacific will make the above special rate from San Francisco to Ascuncion. Tickets good going on all trains Saturday and Sunday, August 20th and 21st; good returning on certain trains on Sunday, and on Monday, the 22nd. There being no accommodations for visitors at the camp, passengers may stop off at Paso Robles to secure same, taking later trains, on which their tickets will be good to Ascuncion.

Special train service to Paso Robles, and between there and Ascuncion. Garage for automobiles provided for guests at Hotel El Paso de Robles, social headquarters, and automobile service from hotel to Ascuncion and from Ascuncion to the camp.

Buy above special tickets at Third and Townsend depot, or at

CITY OFFICE

613 MARKET ST.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

At the Resorts

Colonel Gaines Lawson, U. S. A. retired, has taken rooms at Byron Springs hotel for an extended stay.

Among the many recent arrivals from San Francisco at Byron Hot Springs hotel are Mrs. A. Tonn, Wm. P. Harrison, Mrs. M. Kirstein, Mrs. C. C. Morehouse, L. Less, Dr. and Mrs. Geo. Drucker, E. P. Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Waterhouse, Dr. Louis Stern, Mr. N. Steinberger, Mr. Edward Pollitz, Mr. James E. Levin, Mr. P. J. Knudsen, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Bergstein; from Honolulu, R. D. Mullen, John F. Bowler, Geo. H. Robertson; from Oakland, Miss Katherine Madden and Miss Margaret Slavich.

Visitors at Rowardennan during the past week included: Hiram W. Wadsworth and family, Pasadena, Mrs. A. N. Lewis, Alameda, E. C. Wagner, Stockton, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Bennet, Fruitvale, George Richmond, San Jose, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Anderson, James M. Goewey, Milton S. Latham, F. W. Bert, Junior, Judge W. C. Van Fleet, General Geo. Stone and Samuel F. Booth.

A number of changes will be made in the management of the great manufacturing house of Studebaker Bros. Mfg. Co. of South Bend, Ind., on January 1st, 1905, among which are the following: Col. Geo. M. Studebaker will relinquish the management of the Carriage Department, become more closely identified with the Executive Department, and, as President of the Studebaker Automobile Co., give especial attention to the direction and development of that business. Mr. Lloyd F. Weaver will relinquish the management of the San Francisco Branch and assume the management of the Sales Department at the Home Office. Mr. Chester N. Weaver will become the Branch Manager at San Francisco.

ONE-HALF TON OF TEA.

1,000 LBS. OF THE FAMOUS "BEE" BRAND OF CEYLON TEA distributed free by the Call to its want ad patrons. The Call has bought of Goldberg, Bowen & Co., the importers and distributors, this large invoice of their favorite brand of family tea and it will be given free to every want advertiser in next Sunday's Call. Only one packet of this high class tea will be given to a want advertiser, and none but those presenting a bona fide want ad to the business office of this paper on Thursday, Friday and Saturday for insertion in the want columns of next Sunday's Call will be entitled to receive this premium. See announcement, classified pages of the Call.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. 2. No. 91829.

KATE BAIRD, Plaintiff.
vs.
CHARLES W. BAIRD, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The People of the State of California send Greeting to:

CHARLES W. BAIRD, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of plaintiff for the period of more than one year continuously, next immediately preceding the date of the commencement of this action, and also upon the ground of defendant's failure to provide for plaintiff the common necessities of life he having the ability so to do, for the period of more than one year continuously next preceding the date of the commencement of this action; also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 5th day of August in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk.

By JAS. R. McELROY, Deputy Clerk.

LOUIS H. BROWNSTONE, Plaintiff's Attorney.

ALL THE WINNERS of the EASTERN RACES given by the

For sale at Sausalito Ferry, Scott's 84 Ellis St., Office 759 Market St., opp. Phelan Bldg., and delivered by carrier.

Miss Millicent Levenberg is in town for her vacation. Miss Levenberg has met with much success with her physical culture classes in New York, and will return there in the autumn.

ALCAZAR THEATRE

Phone "ALCAZAR"
Belasco and Mayer
Proprietors
E. D. Price, Gen. Mgr.

Monday, Aug. 22, one week

Evenings, 25c to 75c

Regular Matinees Thursday and Saturday

Matinees Thursday and Saturday 25c to 50c

WHITE WHITTLESEY

And the Alcazar Stock Company

In Abbey Sage Richardson and Grace L. Furniss' Great Romantic Play

"THE PRIDE OF JENNICO"

From Incidents in Agnes and Egerton Castle's Novel

Monday, Aug. 29—White Whittlesey in "Nathan Hale"

Orpheum

O'Farrell between
Stockton and Powell
Streets

Week Commencing
Sunday Matinee,
Aug. 21st

VAUDEVILLE VERY BEST!

Williams and Tucker. Max and Julia Heinrich. Treloar, assisted by Miss Edna Tempest. Emmett Devoy and Company. Guyer and O'Neil. Three Juggling Barretts. Little and Pritzkow. Orpheum Motion Pictures, showing Jack Monroe in his training quarters, and last week of WALTER C. KELLY.

Regular Matinees Every Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday

Prices: 10c, 25c and 50c.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Phone "Grand Opera House"
Grand Opera House Co.
Lessee

Regular Matinee Saturday

Week beginning tomorrow
(Sunday) Matinee

MR. JAMES NEILL

In a Magnificent Production of

William Gillette's Great War Drama

"HELD BY THE ENEMY"

First Time at 15c, 25c, 50c. Sunday Matinee, Aug. 28—"Under Two Flags"

Fischer's THEATRE

O'Farrell between Stockton and
Powell Streets

Phone "Fischer's"

Beginning Monday Night, Aug. 22. A complete and original musical comedy

"THE ANNHEUSER PUSH"

By Will Carleton and Lee Johnson

A Fountain of Fun. Up-to-date novelties and laughable situations.

Our high salaried burlesque artists—Dorothy Morton, Georgia O'Ramey, Flossie Hope, Rice and Cady, Bobby North, Edwin Clark, Ben Dillon

See the magnificent and beautiful Panorama of the St. Louis Exposition Grounds at Night. "The Annheuser Busch" Brewery in St. Louis.

Attend the opening of the magnificent new "Fairmount Hotel", Nob Hill. Matinees Saturday and Sunday Same Popular Prices

*TIVOLI*

Cor. Eddy and Mason Sts.

Evenings at 8 Sharp

FOURTH BIG WEEK

Every Night at 8.

FOURTH BIG WEEK

Smokers' Paradise in the Promenade Circle

The Superb Tivoli Sensation

"THE TOREADOR"

By Ivan Caryll and Lionel Moncton

With an Unrivalled Cast

Usual Tivoli Prices—25c, 50c and 75c.

Only Matinee Saturday

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATRE

Attraction Extraordinary

Beginning Next Monday, Aug. 22nd

Direct from New York especially for this engagement and his own company in Bernard Shaw's greatest play

ARNOLD DALY

"CANDIDA"

The sensation of the season.

Every Night.

Matinee Saturdays only.

CENTRAL

Belasco & Mayer, Props. Phone South 533
Market Street near Eighth
Opposite City Hall

Week Beginning Monday, August 22nd.

Matinees Saturday and Sunday

The New Sensational War Drama

"A SPY AT PORT ARTHUR"

Prices: Evening, 10c to 50c

Matinees, 10c, 15c, 25c

Next—"THE FIRST BORN"

THE FIRST WINTON QUAD SHOWN IN SAN FRANCISCO

Photo by T. A. Lath.

The above photograph of the new four-cylinder Winton touring car was taken immediately upon its arrival in San Francisco, in front of the Pioneer Automobile Company's garage, with Jefferson Square as the background. The personnel of the party in the car is: Messrs. H. A. French, Byron Jackson, L. E. Lee, E. P. Brinegar and John Munford. This is the machine that has attracted so much attention throughout the East. It is the latest product of Alexander Winton's big factory in Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Winton has been working on this machine for the last four years, but, inasmuch as he does not believe in experiments, the machine has just recently been placed on the market. It has four cylinders situated between the dash and the seat of the driver. It is built with the same style of engine as that used in the famous Bullet with which Barney Oldfield broke all records last season. Has twenty-four to thirty horse-power and the side door entrance is the feature of this machine. It is the 1905 model. The Winton Company will build but one hundred of these machines this season. The Pioneer Automobile Company, early in the season, or at the time of the New York show, placed their order for twenty of these machines. From present indications and the amount of enthusiasm shown, it will not be many weeks before they dispose of the number of machines contracted for. The machine is now on exhibition at the Pioneer Automobile Company's garage, No. 901-925 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco. (Phone Private Exchange 1000.)

In Financial Circles

The long expected advance in sugar stocks has come and with it a spontaneous and considerable increase of business on the Stock and Bond Exchange. The condition of low prices for sugar stocks and the continually advancing price of the staple product, raw sugar, was too inconsistent to endure. As predicted by me repeatedly, investors have begun to realize that Plantation shares ought to be attractive investments. The result is illustrated by this week's sharp advance and increased business.

Raw sugar is now quoted at 4 1/4 cents, the highest in years, and much higher figures are expected by people in the trade. The world's consumption, during the year ending September next is said to show an increase of over a million tons, and crop reports from Europe point to an enormous shortage. No wonder there is great glee in the Hawaiian Islands. The difference in the proceeds of their crop, from the low to the high record, is now somewhere between seven and eight millions.

Transactions in the Board amounted to $171,000, bonds, and 5,422 shares, divided as follows: 590 lighting, 267 water, 530 miscellaneous, 10 bank and 4,030 sugars.

No noteworthy change in any group but sugars. Hawaiian sold up to $56, Honokaa to $14.1-2, Makaweli to $26.1-4, Ononoca to $27, Hutchinson to $10, and Paahau to $16.

Jules', 315 Pine street, is in no way connected with any other restaurant.

The Supreme Court has declared the seventeen million bond issue, by the city, legal and the Board of Supervisors will proceed to issue about $5,000,000 forthwith. The bonds will undoubtedly find ready takers. —The Financier.

The Emporium
CALIFORNIA'S LARGEST
AMERICA'S GRANDEST STORE

OUTFITTERS FOR AUTOMOBILISTS

¶ The only complete assortment of Auto clothing and sundries in the city. The stock includes the products of O. Strom & Fils, Paris, and Saks & Company, New York.

Chispa's Sensational Stunt

BY ROBERT MACE.

It was a sensational night at the vaudeville theatre. The most sensational "turn" and the one that was awaited with feverish interest, especially by the jeunesse doree of the gay metropolis of the Pacific Coast, was that of the beautiful, ravishing Chispa, on a high trapeze. It was not her performance so much as Chispa herself that enthralled the spectators. And yet it would not be correct to say that her performance was without charm. Her skill as an acrobat was not great, but she was exceedingly graceful, and her stunt was captivating, especially in its disrobing scene. Indeed the disrobing feature was what the management paid for. If Chispa were less beautiful, if the lines of her throbbing figure had less of a curve to them, if, in other words, what she had to reveal was commonplace, she would not have been a top-liner in the vaudeville show.

But Chispa was one of the fairest of her sex—faultless of form, slender yet muscular, and her face was illuminated with dreamy ecstatic eyes. The critics said that her act was sensational. But on this particular night it was far more sensational than ever before. It thrilled the jeunesse doree as they had never been thrilled.

Chispa was a woman with a past, though she was quite young—not more than twenty-five. She was born in a circus somewhere in the Middle West. Her mother was an equestrienne. Mother despised her profession, and she resolved that Chispa should never earn a cent in the tan-bark ring. But when Chispa grew up, and finished her high-school education, her mother was still in the circus, and one day Chispa met the press-agent of the show. The press-agent fell in love with her dreamy eyes, and before long they became very friendly. He had formerly been the press-agent of a dramatic show, and he inspired Chispa with a longing for histrionic honors. Chispa compromised by becoming a trapeze performer. The press-agent suggested the disrobing scene and spent much time booming her in the newspapers. One night after the performance Chispa met a gay broker, who treated her to champagne, and after that she took no interest in the press-agent. A few weeks later the poor devil of a press-agent who had hoped to marry the beautiful trapeze artist committed suicide.

When Chispa heard of the tragedy she shed as many as four or five tears, and that night she dined with the broker. The broker was a generous chap and bought Chispa diamonds and furs. One day there was a slump in the market and the broker was a financial wreck. About that time Chispa moved on to the next town on the vaudeville circuit.

One night after the performance she met Stanley Rand, the plunger, famous on the turf for his wonderful luck, and his big bets. Rand was a fine looking fellow of good family who had spent a fortune in his youth—a fortune left him by his father—and who made several more on the race-track. He was a well-educated man with the polished manners of a Parisian. His was a fascinating personality that commanded the hysterical worship of women. The play of his wit was dry and brilliant, and his dark beauty was intoxicating to susceptible females. But he did not take them seriously. He loved the diversion of a pleasant hour or so in the company of a woman of the world, but he was a cynic and never permitted entangling alliances. He had no confidence in the loyalty of women, and wished them to understand that they should expect none from him. Whenever a woman attracted by the charms of his unique personality became unduly affectionate Rand lost no time in cutting short the amorous relationship. He was quick to suspect women of sinister designs. Their candor was regarded by him as theatrical effect. He was so free from conceit that he never believed that he inspired women with love.

When Chispa met Rand her heart seemed to stop beating. He impressed her as she had never been impressed before.

They went to supper the night of their first meeting, and the beautiful trapeze artist was in high spirits. Rand greatly admired her vivacity and her seeming freedom from guile. There was no suggestion of the designing woman in her. He considered her a fine type of the brilliant and well-mannered "good fellow" girl.

Rand and Chispa saw a great deal of each other in the next few days and nights. The plunger attended her every performance, and accompanied her from the theatre. Chispa's friends at the theatre soon noticed a change in her. She wore an abstracted air, and occasionally her brow was furrowed. She stood in the wings every night and tried to locate Rand in the audience.

As soon as her "turn" was over she rushed to her dressing-room, made a quick change of attire and joined Rand in the foyer. Even the stage hands soon knew that the rollicking, devil-may-care Chispa was in love. Soon they knew, too, that she was jealous of the man who had won her affections.

Meanwhile, though Rand was very fond of the little trapeze performer, he never grew sentimental. He treated her with great courtesy and deference, but he continued to be the impassive, inscrutable being for whom beautiful women were merely instruments of pleasure.

Chispa wanted his love, and one night she told him so. He smiled and told her she was joking.

She burst into tears, and her body trembled in a paroxysm of repressed passion.

Rand put an arm tenderly around her and kissed her, and told her to be a good girl, and that he liked her very much and would always be very fond of her.

"But you do not love me," she sobbed.

Rand made no reply.

"Oh, Stanley, I love you with all my soul. Tell me that you believe me. Say that you know you are a god to me."

Rand kissed her again.

At that moment the summons came for her entrance.

Chispa's sparkling, tear-stained eyes looked pleadingly into Rand's and he was about to kiss her again but she quickly broke from his embrace and rushed out of her dressing-room.

It was on that night that the dashing, beautiful trapeze performer gave her most sensational performance. Her disrobing scene had never approximated in realism the one that thrilled the jeunesse doree and shocked the women in the audience that memorable night. Chispa began as usual, smiling piquantly on the sea of upturned faces. Presently she laughed outright. She had never done so before. It was an hysterical laugh. When she had divested herself of everything but her tights the audience realized that Chispa was not herself. Her laughter was demoniacal. And when she began taking off her tights it became apparent that she was introducing a new feature. She had made considerable headway before the stage manager was apprised of what was happening. The curtain was dropped just as the audience was about to become panic-stricken.

Chispa is now in an insane asylum.

VALUABLE JEWELRY LOST

During the summer months much jewelry is lost traveling and at summer resorts. This can be avoided by leaving yours with the Baldwin Jewelry Co., 906 Market St., who make advances on diamonds and jewelry.

The Dinner Setting is Incomplete
without

White Rock
LITHIA Water

A Selected Water is as Essential
as a Selected Wine

P. J. WENIGER & CO.
DISTRIBUTORS

101-103 Powell St.
SAN FRANCISCO

ELECTRICAL WIRING AND SUPPLIES

Lamps, Telephone Batteries, Bells, Etc.
Repairs Given Prompt Attention

National Electric Company

455 SUTTER ST., San Francisco

Telephone Bush 396

Massage and movements applied intelligently and faithfully. May as well ask of Lindstrom & Einarson, 406 Sutter St.

The Girl with the White Sunbonnet

BY IRENE CONNELL.

"Who is that girl with the white sunbonnet?"

"Her name is Grace De Courcy. She is engaged to young Grayson."

"She'll never marry him."

"How do you know?"

"I know by the glance of her eye, the turn of her head. She is looking for bigger game than Harry Grayson."

"They seem very devoted."

"He is. She is only practising."

"Well, at any rate," retorted my wife, "don't go and put her into one of your horrid stories."

"I don't know about that. She would make a good study."

The subject of our little tilt was one of an interesting party of four then summering at Inwood. The other members of the quartet were Miss Grace's father and mother, and young Grayson, her fiance. Grayson had just come home from Central America with a bad attack of fever. He was making a record for himself down there as an engineer, and it was understood that he would be married to Grace before he went back. The engagement was an old affair, and had the full sanction of the young lady's parents. Grayson was indeed an open, manly young fellow whom one could at once like and respect. Grace was like a kitten. She was a clear-skinned brunette with rosy cheeks and scarlet lips. When in a good humor she was all smiles and wiles, yet you felt by instinct that she had sharp claws hidden somewhere about her. She had very peculiar eyes. They showed no sparkle of light nor play of color, but were as soft and yet as opaque as black velvet. They belied the innocence of her other features. In short, they were the eyes of a sphinx in the face of a baby.

Miss De Courcy was very dainty in her dress, and was particularly addicted to the wearing of a certain white sunbonnet which became her mightily.

About three miles from Inwood was another resort called The Craggs. There was a family of nouveaux riches called Cox staying there, and Miss De Courcy was rather patronized by Juliet and Isabel Cox. The girls were well enough, but they had a most insufferable brother. Sometimes a party would come up to Inwood on horseback and take Miss De Courcy off for a canter. I believe Grayson was invited at first, but the physician forbade his riding for a time, so they got into the way of leaving him out. Grace was very fond of riding, and her fiance was not selfish enough to have her forego a pleasure simply because he could not share it. She went with the Coxes, therefore, as often as she wished, and that was rather too often, I thought, but then I am an old bear.

One day they were off on a ride when a regular mountain storm came up. It rained heavily, and there was thunder and lightning. By dinner time Grace had not returned, and her father rang up The Craggs. He learned that the party had returned some hours before, changed their clothing and dined, and Miss De Courcy had started for home under the escort of Cyril Cox. Still the hours passed; it was nine o'clock, and yet there was no sign of Grace. We were now sure of an accident, and were just organizing a search party when the delinquents were seen coming up the road. Miss De Courcy dismissed her escort and came in alone.

She fended off all questions by saying that they had gone to the Indian Spring and missed the way back. She was evidently tired, cross and excited, and was accordingly not plagued by minute inquiries. Mrs. De Courcy, with motherly solicitude, busied herself about a bath, hot drinks and other precautions against a possible cold, so no more was seen of the young lady until the next day.

I saw the white sunbonnet flitting in and out among the trees, and concluded that Grace was none the worse for her adventure. She was in her sweetest mood, smiling on everybody, petting her father, patronizing her mother and devoting herself to Harry until he was in the seventh heaven of happiness.

At the end of a week Cyril Cox came up to Inwood. He had been drinking, and was making an ass of himself. He said he had come up to see his wife.

"Well, do you see her?" asked some one.

"Yes, by God, I do," he answered, and made straight for the porch where Grace De Courcy was sitting in the midst of an after-dinner group.

"Hello, Grace," he called unsteadily. "how are you, old girl?"

In an instant Harry Grayson had him by the throat. I thought he would choke the breath out of him. I was afraid for Harry and went up to the two men.

"Let go, Grayson," I said, "and I will get him out of this. It is not worth while for you to get excited. He does not know what he is saying."

Harry let go and I took Cox by the arm.

"I want to see my wife," he persisted. "Can't a fellow speak to his wife, eh?"

Harry was making for him again. "If you insult Miss De Courcy—"

"She's Mrs. Cox. Shay, Grace, ain't you? You can't deny it. Shay, weren't we married last Thursday?"

Grace gave one scream and fainted in her father's arms. She was borne to her room and in the excitement I got Cox off to bed. Miss De Courcy was in hysterics all night. When Cyril Cox got sobered up and Grace De Courcy recovered from her hysterics, the truth came out. They had been married the day of their late ride by a justice of the peace down in Dunsmore. They had meant to keep their secret until their return to the city, but it was too much for the bridegroom's discretion. The De Courcy family left Inwood at once. Harry did not go with them, but departed for Central America on the first steamer. I read of his death only the other day. He caught yellow fever in British Honduras.

Mrs. Cox is a woman of fashion. She knows how to spend Cyril's money to good advantage. Her sisters-in-law have never spoken to her since the wedding.

Private Rooms	Phone Main 5966	Jules Wittmann
JULES' RESTAURANT
Regular Dinner with Wine, 75c Sundays and Holidays, $1.00
315-317-319-321-323 Pine St.	Music Sundays	Open Evenings
JULES IS IN NO WAY CONNECTED WITH ANY UPTOWN RESTAURANT

	DR. E. H. RETSLOFF
	2504 CLAY ST.	Phone Geary 2259
	WRINKLES, Crows Feet, Lines, Scars, Tan, Freckles, Yellow and Flabby Skin and all FACIAL BLEMISHES REMOVED by my new scientific Parisian method. No pain, no inconvenience, no bad after effects. SUPERFLUOUS HAIR removed.
	RETSLUFF CREAMS AND ASTRINGENTS Invaluable to ladies of refinement Will teach others the Profession—Dr. Retsloff will form a class for teaching any part of her wonderful treatment to those who desire to make a profession of Facial and Skin Treatment. Call or write.

MRS. L. WARWICK
(Formerly of the Waldorf)
ELECTROLYSIS, FACIAL TREATMENTS
Superfluous Hair, Warts and Moles Removed with ELECTRIC NEEDLE
Room 603 STARR KING BUILDING	121 GEARY STREET
Phone Private Exchange 216

MRS. E. L. RYAN
DERMATOLOGIST
APARTMENT 500	THE IROQUOIS
524 ELLIS STREET
Phone Private Exchange 719
Wrinkles and all Facial Blemishes and Superfluous Hair removed. Manicuring, Hair Dressing, Scalp Treatment.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR and all other Facial Blemishes
are removed by MISS LOIS GRAY, Donahue Building, Rooms 28 and 29, 1170 Market St., with the Electric Needle, without pain or scar. Permanency guaranteed. Hours 1 to 4 P. M. Phone Folsom 3783.

Corey's Cafe, 600 Mission. Mercantile Lunch 11 to 2. Cedar Brook Whiskey, formerly W. H. McBrayer—10 yrs. old.

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER
DENTIST—Phelan Bldg., Rooms 6, 8, 10, 48. 806 Market St. Phone John 3841

The Life of Yesterday

BY MABEL PORTER PITTS.

What is the use of the toil and striving
And what will matter the tear and smile,
The well-laid plan and the deep contriving,
When lost in the dusk of the after-while?

Why fret the flesh with an unhealed sorrow?
The world wants laughter, it shares no grief,
Why slight today for a vague tomorrow
That shadows all hope for the soul's relief?

Sweet were the faith to believe, and cherish,
This life a spark strayed from parent flame,
To hold no fear that its light will perish—
Instead of the darkness, the unknown name.

Saddest of all is to know, at parting,
The grief is mine, that the world holds none,
To know the blush of the dawn's faint starting
Will shed its red glory on all—save one.

If there be friend who shall mourn my going,
Though grieved my loss in a single breath,
'Twill send a thrill through my poor clay glowing
And out of the grave snatch the chill of death.

August, 1904.

SAN FRANCISCO BLUE BOOK.

THE FASHIONABLE PRIVATE ADDRESS DIRECTORY.

Now Being Compiled and Reservations Made for the Season of 1904-5.

It will contain an alphabetical arrangement of the names and residential addresses of the leading families, designating Matron and Maid, Benedict and Bachelor, embracing one hundred cities and towns in California, viz.: San Francisco, Oakland, Alameda, Berkeley, San Rafael, Sausalito, Belvedere, Palo Alto, Menlo Park, Burlingame, San Mateo, Redwood City, San Jose, Los Angeles, Pasadena, Elk Grove, Paradise, Placerville, Maywood, Redding, Sacramento, Willows, Woodland, Calistoga, Eureka, Napa, Petaluma, Sonoma, Watsonville, Hollister, Centerville, Niles, Newark, Decoto, Irvington, Sonoma, Stockton, Tuolumne, Vallejo, Armona, Bakersfield, Dinuba, Fowler, Fresno, West Park, Hanford, Kern, Lemoore, Oleander, Porterville, Reedley, Sanger, Selma, Tulare, Visalia, Alhambra, Avalon, Azusa, Briggs, Carpinteria, Covina, Downey, Lompoc, East Whittier, Long Beach, Moneta, Monrovia, Pomona, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, Santa Maria, Santa Paula, Santa Monica, South Pasadena, Satcoy, Ventura, Colton, Corona, Fullerton, Highland, La Jolla, La Mesa, Ontario, Perris, Placentia, Redlands, Santa Ana, Riverside, San Diego, San Jacinto, National City, Fair Oaks, Nevada City, San Bernardino and Nome, Alaska.

Also San Francisco Street and Avenue Guide, Theatre Diagrams, Clubs and Societies, Prominent Residents of the Pacific Coast, Personnel of the Press, Shopping Guide, Permanent Guests at the Leading Hotels, San Francisco Street Railway Guide, First and Last Cars, Car Routes and Transfer Points.

The greatest care will be exercised in selecting only responsible and honest concerns among the advertisements.

Shopping, by mail order and telephone call, is one of the modern conveniences extended to subscribers, through the announcements in the Blue Book.

Address all communications to Chas. C. Hoag, Publisher. Telephone Main 1760. Office, 320 Sansome Street, Room 47, San Francisco.

The Printing, Binding and Art Work will be executed by Morris & Bain, Printers, 320 Sansome St.

ANOTHER MEET AT DEL MONTE

There will be a gathering of the automobile clubs at Del Monte next week, August 25-28, and all society will be at that favorite resort. A large number of Los Angeles and Portland auto experts will also be on hand to participate in the elaborate program.

MURINE EYE REMEDY

THOSE
LUSTROUS
EYES ARE MURINE
EYES

Sunlight Intensified by Reflection

from Ocean Beach and Desert Sand unrelieved by foliage. Winds and mineral laden poisonous dust, all bring eye-troubles in their wake, Granulated Eyelids, Red, Itching, Burning, Tired and Watery Eyes, Impaired Vision and Eye Pain. Prevention, Relief and Cure are found in MURINE EYE REMEDY, mild and harmless. Murine aids those wearing glasses, doesn't smart, but soothes and quickly cures. Is an Eye Tonic. Sold by Opticians and Druggists. Fifty Cents.

EXCURSION RATES

ST. LOUIS

ROUND TRIP Excursion Tickets to St. Louis and Chicago on sale Sept. 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 8, 19, 20, 28, 29, and dates in other months later at the following rates:

TO ST. LOUIS . . . $67.50
TO CHICAGO, passing one way through St. Louis . . . $72.50

RETURN LIMIT three months. Stop overs allowed on both going and returning trip.

THESE RATES GOOD ON ANY TRAIN

Ask about the Through Tourist Cars direct to the Exposition.

613 MARKET STREET

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

Automobile Topics

E. P. Brinegar, president of the Pioneer Automobile Company, has received several letters from S. D. Hewson, who is at Camp Atascadero in charge of the War Department's Winton machine. Since Mr. Hewson left the ranks of the San Francisco Chauffeurs' Association, of which he is the president, to join the army, he has been given the title of Major by his associates. Whether or not he will receive this title in the department matters little to Mr. Hewson. In a letter received from Major Hewson, dated August eighth, he speaks of his trip as follows: "Arrived here this day noon, after a very successful trip of two hundred and ninety miles over all kinds of roads, river bottoms and hills, without any hitch whatsoever; running time, fourteen hours. The auto is in fine shape and ready for business in the field. This afternoon I took General MacArthur and Colonel West and two other officers all over the camp. Am going out over the hills again tomorrow. So far, they think the Winton is the real thing and seem delighted with the machines." On August ninth he wrote: "Did forty-eight miles of field running today with General MacArthur. This ranch is twelve miles long and three miles wide, so you see to get forty-eight miles of running inside of the twelve by three miles, we had to run all over the place, which we did; went up on the highest hills, over creeks and through meadows and valleys. The General thinks the auto is the best thing that hit camp. Total mileage to date, three hundred and fifty-seven miles, and auto in fine order." The sample four-cylinder Winton touring car is due to arrive here some time during this week. It is the intention of the Pioneer people to put this machine through some touring stunts that will give the public an idea of the standard of a real touring car. Mr. Brinegar, with a party of friends, will leave with this machine very shortly after its arrival for Camp Atascadero.

A carload each of Oldsmobile runabouts and touring cars is due to arrive at the Pioneer garage this week. The tonneaus are all sold and all but three of the twelve runabouts have been disposed of. The Oldsmobile people advised their agents here, however, that by the first of September they hope to be caught up in such a manner as to be able to make immediate deliveries.

E. H. Cox, the well known lumber man and capitalist of Fresno, last week purchased from the Pioneer Company a Stevens-Duryea machine. Messrs. P. C. Thede and F. A. Lathe left in Mr. Cox's machine yesterday to drive it through to Fresno via San Jose. A telegram was received from them on Sunday last stating that they had reached Gilroy at seven-fifteen in the evening. Mr. Cox purchased this machine especially for a trip through the Mariposa Big Trees and the Yosemite Valley.

On Sunday, Max Schwabacher accompanied by Mrs. Schwabacher and Mr. Edwin Bachman, went to Byron Springs from Oakland in Mr. Schwabacher's four-cylinder Winton. They made the trip from Oakland to the hotel in two hours and fifteen minutes. Mr. Schwabacher states that the roads are in excellent condition and that that portion of the road which was oiled about six weeks ago is now in better condition than before oiling.

The following item appeared in the Motor Age of August fourth: "Big Pierce Order.—Frank E. Hartigan, manager of the Mobile Carriage Company of San Francisco, recently left for the East to make arrangements to get cars for the remainder of this year and for 1905. It is reported Hartigan placed an order amounting to one hundred and fifty thousand dollars' worth of Pierce cars, the majority to be of the four-cylinder type. These cars made a tremendous hit in 'Frisco, and it is principally on account of this fact and to be able to depend upon a large supply, that the San Francisco agent started on this business trip."

Mr. and Mrs. Horace W. Morgan and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Alexander made the trip to San Jose on Sunday in the four-cylinder Pierce Arrow. The return trip was made in less than an hour and a half.

The Mobile Carriage Company has taken the agency of the Thomas touring car. The 1905 model is one of the most attractive cars on the market. It has a twenty horse-power, three-cylinder engine, capable of making forty miles an hour. This car will be modern in every detail, selling in San Francisco for $2,650.

GEO. P. MOORE & CO.

Phone South 697

AUTOMOBILE SPECIALTIES

305 VAN NESS AVENUE

SCHOOLS and COLLEGES

HEALD'S

LEADING BUSINESS COLLEGE of the WEST
Over 24 Post St., San Francisco, Cal.
Established 40 years. Open entire year, day and night Write for circulars (free.)

St. Mary's College

OAKLAND, CAL.

Literary, Scientific, Commercial Courses.

Studies resumed August 1, 1904.

Send for Catalogue.

BROTHER VELLESIAN, President.

Santa Clara College

SANTA CLARA, CAL.

The next session will begin August 2, 1904. Send for full particulars to

(Rev.) R. E. KENNA, S. J., President.

Hoitt's

School for Boys; 14th year begins August 9th; larger and stronger faculty than ever; perfect sanitation; illustrated catalogue. W. J. MEREDITH, Vice-Principal. Menlo Park, Cal.

Irving Institute

Boarding and day school for young ladies and little girls. 2126 California St. Will reopen August 1, 1904. Accredited to the universities. REV. EDWARD B. CHURCH, A. M., Principal.

Miss Bolte's School

2174 Post St., prepares for universities and colleges. Music by graduate professor of Berlin and Leipzig conservatories. Conversational and grammatical French and German; English. Board, English, French, German, music, $30 month. Next term July 25. Steiner 656.

San Francisco Business College

Scott & Van Arsdale Building, 738 Mission St., between Third and Fourth. We are located in our new quarters. The finest schoolrooms in the West. Come and see them whether you want to go to school or not. Business men know where we are. We had eight calls for help this week.

Callagher Marsh
Business College

is the most practical; recommended by expert court reporters. Send for catalogue.

1382 Market St., San Francisco.

The Melbourne Institute

For stuttering and stammering teaches a new scientific course for cure. It is successful. It has been established in this city for three years under teaching of Prof. F. G. Norcross, acknowledged mental expert, whose work has won the admiration of reputable physicians and other deep students of mentality. The services of the Melbourne may be enlisted with the utmost confidence. Address MELBOURNE INSTITUTE, Van Ness Ave. and Market St., San Francisco. Hours 1 to 5 P. M. Telephone Mint 2626.

THE LYCEUM

Jordan or any Stanford professor. L. H. GRAU Ph. D., Principal. Rooms, 333-346, 5th floor, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

CALIFORNIA BUSINESS COLLEGE

The largest and finest quarters in the city; refined residence locality. Position for every graduate. Thorough, modern. 75 Page Catalogue on request. R. L. DURHAM, President.

925 Golden Gate Avenue. San Francisco

Kent Law School

THIRTEENTH YEAR

Day and Night. Always open. No Vacations. Books Free. 536 Parrott Building (Emporium). Phone Folsom 3031

Century Electric Corporation

SUPPLIES, CONSTRUCTION, MANUFACTURING AND REPAIRING. BUILDINGS WIRED

16 and 18 SECOND STREET

Telephone Bush 352

San Francisco

The modish woman's stationery is as much a part of her nowadays as her dainty wardrobe. Cooper & Co., 746 Market Street, are showing the newest modes in paper and envelopes, dies and seals.

REPAIRS MADE AND SUPPLIES FURNISHED
AT THE

Hotel Vendome Automobile Garage San Jose

Stable accommodations free to guests. Record time on road from San Francisco to San Jose, two hours.

PIERCE
STANHOPE

Price, $1350 without Top; $1450 with Top

Pierce Arrow Touring Car (French) $2650
Northern Runabout, $800

MOBILE CARRIAGE CO.

GOLDEN GATE AVE. AND GOUGH ST.

Phone Private Exchange 770

San Francisco

AUTOMOBILES FOR HIRE

Downtown Offices:

Palace Hotel Occidental Hotel St. Francis Hotel

INDIAN and RAMBLER MOTOCYCLES

Won first five places in endurance contest in East, July 2 to 7, and were the ONLY machines making perfect scores in ALL events. In ONE-PINT economy test—Indian first; distance 31 miles, 1400 yds.; time, 1:16:39.

C. C. HOPKINS
Larkin & McAllister

"SOLUTION OF TIRE TROUBLES" FISK DETACHABLE

ONLY A WRENCH NEEDED
CAN'T COME OFF THE RIM
CAN'T PINCH THE TUBE

MORE MILEAGE
MORE COMFORT
MORE SATISFACTION

CALL OR WRITE PACIFIC COAST BRANCH
PHIL. B. BEKEART CO. 114 SECOND ST.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

ON the HILLS NOT THE RACE TRACK

is the test of power. The Annual Hill Climbing Contest of the Minneapolis Automobile Club was held on Saturday, June 11th, on Kenwood Hill, when the

Rambler

again demonstrated its superiority over cars costing three times its price, and, for the second time, won

FIRST PRIZE

finishing the course, 2680 feet, on a 10 per cent grade, in 1 minute, 7 3-5 seconds.

ENTRIES AND TIMES

Class No. A, Machines Valued at $2,750 and over—

Owner	Make	Time
J. H. Queal,	Pope-Toledo	:59
A. F. Timme,	Pope-Toledo	1:05
Die. Ferris,	Pope-Toledo	1:05 4-5
F. T. Heffelfinger,	Peerless	1:08 1-5
Ralph Bagley,	Packard	1:11
Bert Strong,	Stearns	1:22

Class No. B, Machines Valued bet. $2,750 and $1,750—

A. C. Bennett,	Winton	1:11
G. W. Cappelin,	Winton	1:25
George Shear,	Knox	1:41

Class No. C, Machines Valued bet. $1,750 and $1,000—

M. E. Clark,	Rambler	1:07 3-5
C. C. Pillsbury,	Franklin	1:10 1-5
Dr. A. P. Walrath,	Rambler	1:14

Send for our latest illustrated Catalogue "C"; it explains RAMBLER construction; the records prove its value.

RAMBLER AUTOMOBILE AGENCY

Tenth and Market Sts., San Francisco

The CADILLAC

MODEL B. Price $950
With Tonneau $1050

"Canopy Top Extra"

August 8th from Del Monte to 12th and Broadway, Oakland, 6 hrs, 5 min.

October 18th the same run was made in 5 hrs, 38 min., without stopping the car or refilling with gasoline or water, breaking all records.

The only successful tour of the Yosemite Valley was made by a party of four in a CADILLAC.

CUYLER LEE, Agent

201-203 LARKIN ST., S. F.

This is the White Steam Touring Car complete with canopy top, curtains and glass front, baskets, acetylene lamp equipment, and extra tonneau seat.

WHITE STEAM TOURING CAR COMPLETE

AUTOMOBILE GARAGE
SAN MATEO

PAUL L. NOISAT PHONE BLACK 111
GARAGE AND REPAIR SHOP
B ST. NEAR THIRD AVE.

Cuyler Lee received the following telegram from the Cadillac Automobile Company of Detroit, Michigan: "Cadillac officially first to finish the New York and St. Louis run; roads almost impassable."

A Cadillac Model B touring car was delivered to Dr. C. D. Gilman of Oakland. He and his friends have had many pleasant rides through Oakland and San Jose. A. N. Hawkins of Woodland has recently purchased a Model B Cadillac. Mr. Hawkins and party left San Francisco for Hollister to visit friends and from there will go to the Del Monte races. Robt. J. Tolmie, of San Francisco, who left two months ago in his Cadillac for a hunting lodge in the Trinity mountains, returned last Wednesday and reports a very delightful trip. He said his machine worked perfectly all through the trip. He is the first automobilist to make the trip and he believes it will not be done again. The mountains there are very rugged and steep and in fording the south fork of the Cottonwood river the water came up to the box of his machine, but he was able to reach the other side safely.

Chas. H. Wiggin, manager of the Whitaker & Ray Company, has long had the automobile fever and last week gratified it by purchasing a White stanhope. W. M. Gardiner, assistant manager of the White Sewing Machine Company, has purchased a White stanhope for his private use in Oakland. It is not very often that one who has worked with an automobile concern and can run one when he pleases purchases a machine for his own use, so Mr. Gardiner's purchase is quite a tribute to his confidence in the White carriage.

S. M. Rice of Dixon has sold the Orient buckboard he formerly owned and has purchased a new White stanhope.

A. C. Aiken has just returned from a trip to Calaveras county in his White. L. P. Lowe and S. G. Buckbee went to Pescadero last Sunday in White touring cars.

Geo. A. Pope has entered his four-cylinder Pope-Toledo car to race at the Del Monte tournament, August twenty-sixth, twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth. Geo. P. Fuller will also be a contestant with a four-cylinder Pope-Toledo. E. R. Dimond, James L. Flood and Marshall C. Harris will compete in the five mile race at Del Monte for fully equipped touring cars. All of the above gentlemen are owners of four-cylinder Pope-Toledos.

The Pope-Toledo Touring Car Company has thus far sold thirty-seven four-cylinder Pope-Toledo touring cars in California since January first. The company has sold Dr. J. B. Sargent of Stockton a four-cylinder Pope-Toledo touring car.

The following telegram was received by the Pope-Toledo Company which indicates that theirs is both a speedy and reliable car: "Pope Toledo Touring Car Company, 134 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, Cal.: Just received following telegram from Keeton at St. Louis: 'All of the seven Pope-Toledos reached St. Louis right on schedule time. Mr. Lesh of Boston came through without so much as a puncture. Soules with Pope party arrived eighteen hours ahead of all, covering nineteen hundred and seventy-eight miles averaging seventeen and one-half miles to a gallon of gasoline and taking no water between New York and St. Louis. Of all the foreign cars starting only forty per cent finished.'—Pope Motor Car Co." Mr. Boyer, the manager of the Pope Toledo Touring Car Co., says the above is a record to be proud of. The Automobilist.

"I hear that Brown is taking French lessons."

"Yes, his wife is quite a French scholar you know, and she talks in her sleep."

RESERVED SEAT EXCURSIONS. CAZADERO BIG TREES.

Commencing next Sunday and continuing each Sunday until further notice, the North Shore will resume its popular reserved seat excursions to the Cazadero Big Trees, Duncans Mills, Mesa Grande, Monte Rio and Camp Meeker. Special train with observation car departs (Sausalito Ferry) at 8:30 a. m., returns at 8:55 p. m. Allows 3 to 5 hours among the Russian River Redwoods. Views of bay and ocean beach, mountain and vale. Grand scenic ride. Opportunity to inspect cottage and camp sites. Round trip including reserved seat, $1.50. Tickets purchased in advance at 626 Market street, San Francisco.

THE OLDSMOBILE TOURING CAR

Handsome Lines      Greatest Power
Most Thoroughly Built      Easiest Running
Easiest Controlled
Most Satisfactory Car for the Money
Always Goes

PRICE COMPLETE WITH LAMPS, HORN AND TOOLS

$1050.00

PIONEER AUTOMOBILE CO.

901-25 Golden Gate Ave.      -      San Francisco
Oakland, 355 Tenth Street

AUTOMOBILE REPAIRS

81 CITY HALL AVE.      Telephone South 1039

De Dion Plugs
De Dion Porcelains
Electric Cable

ANDREWS, KEENAN & BLASAUF

"Pope-Toledo"

POPE TOLEDO TOURING CAR CO.

Phone South 1142

G. A. BOYER, Manager

134-148 GOLDEN GATE AVE.

Music

[Communications addressed to this department should be received not later than Tuesday noon.]

The Heinrichs

The coming of Julia and Max Heinrich to the Orpheum is an event worthy of the attention of music lovers. The Heinrichs gave recitals here some years ago, and Julia appeared one season on the vaudeville circuit, but this is the first time her father has appeared here in an Orpheum program. The Heinrichs are exponents of the best in vocal music.

Wagner Liked American Dollars

After all the talk about "Parsifal" and the "desecration" of presenting it outside of Bayreuth, an old letter of Wagner's, written in 1858, seems to show that Wagner would not have minded the "desecration" if it brought him good American gold in return. The letter shows that a certain New York impresario named Ullmann had made an offer to Wagner to tour the United States, the proposition being made through Dr. Von Hartenfels, a friend of Wagner's. In his reply the composer admitted that he was impecunious and without either fortune or settled income, and he said he would not entertain the idea of going to America unless he received a positive assurance of very considerable financial advantages. He added: "I am very little concerned over the fate my operas meet with in America, but hope Director Ullmann will secure the scores from me and remunerate me in accordance with their worth."

Fannie Francisca, the San Francisco girl who has made such a success abroad in opera, will be heard in concert here next month.

Trebelli-Dolores is singing in London, where she is a great favorite.

The famous Garde Republicaine band of Paris is to play at the St. Louis fair next month.

The farewell tour of Eugen d'Albert will begin in January. He will be accompanied by Madame d'Albert, who will sing some of her husband's songs.

Sig. Campanari, the baritone, has forsaken the metropolitan opera stage for the concert platform. He is camping with his family at Lake Placid, working up new concert programs for his tour.

Fritzi-Scheff is back in the United States after a vacation spent in Europe with her mother. She has a new opera by Stange and Englander, called "The Two Roses," which will have its premier in Chicago.

Percy A. R. Dow has reopened his studio, 1511 Larkin street, for the season of 1904-5. Mr. Dow teaches tone production and the art of singing according to Vannini and Henschel. His classes in Oakland meet on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

David Bispham will devote the season to oratorio, concert and recital. He will give a dozen recitals in California, Oregon and Washington next February and March. Mr. Bispham has arranged for this tour four song cycles by Beethoven, Schumann, Schubert and Brahms, each of which will occupy an evening.

Johanna Gadske will make her first American transcontinental tour in concert and song recital this coming season. Beginning in November with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mme. Gadske will give recitals in New York and Boston, the North-western cities, the Pacific coast from Vancouver to San Diego, and return by way of Texas, or about eighty concerts, extending through next April.

HOTHER WISMER (Violinist)

ENSEMBLE INSTRUCTION

Will resume teaching about August 8th, at his residence and studio, 844 Grove Street near Fillmore.

"Too much technical drilling stupefies and brutalizes the mind. It actually sends pianists into idiocy, and I could prove this assertion if I had statistics." This statement was recently made by Dr. Frederick Niecks, professor of music in the Edinburgh University, and in the course of his remarks he quoted Sir Frederick Bridge's amusing criticism of the many who come to him to learn the pianoforte, but who would like to do nothing but sit down and practice eight hours a day: "They won't go to hear a symphony played and they won't read a book; they will do nothing but thrash a pianoforte as if they regarded that as the business of their lives."

—The Music Critic.

Obscurity and wilful obliquities are tolerated in a writer if he is known to be a genius.

GRAND REVIEW OF TROOPS.

Gen. MacArthur has arranged for a general review at Camp Atascadero for Sunday, August 21. It will take place near Ascunacion, the army station, and will be a fine spectacle.

$5.00 for round trip from San Francisco to Ascunacion. See Southern Pacific ad in this issue for further details, or inquire at 613 Market street.

Miss June—They say it's lucky to postpone the wedding day.
Miss Sereleaf—Not if you keep on doing it.

Talk of cereal coffees—it's all nonsense. A pure coffee, the genuine product of the bean, is the only thing that satisfies the connoisseur. Armer's Very Best coffee is delicious to the taste, wholesome and nutritious.

REMOVED

Patrick & Co.

Rubber Stamps and Metal Signs

to

111 and 113 Sansome Street

Fire of Life, known for years as the most remarkable remedy for the cure of

RHEUMATISM

A trial of this remedy will at once show its great merit as a rheumatic cure.

ROWELL & BROWN
32 Turk St., S. F.

THE OAKLAND TRIBUNE

is delivered into more homes of the masses and classes of Oakland, and Alameda County than all other Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley dailies combined. Reason—it's the best newspaper.

W. E. DARGIE, Pres.

T. T. DARGIE, Secy.

GOODYEAR'S "GOLD SEAL"

Rubber Goods the Best Made

Rubber Hose, Belting and Packings

We are headquarters for everything made of Rubber

GOODYEAR RUBBER COMPANY

R. H. Pease, Pres. F. M. Shepard, Jr., Treas. C. F. Runyon, Sec.

573-575-577-579 Market St., San Francisco

LOUIS CREPAUX

(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

SCHOOL OF TONE PLACING (PALATAL SYSTEM)

Vocal Phonetics—Besides the
"Palatal Tone Placing System"

taught in the Louis Crepau School, another and most important feature is the teaching of the English phonetic sounds. The study of the five vowels is not all that is necessary to sing in a language, and particularly so in English. Very few English-speaking people are able to sing the phonetics of their language exempt from throatiness. Fundamentally, English phonetics cannot be emitted in singing as uttered in speech. From a vocal standpoint and through ten years of experience in teaching English-speaking singers, Mr. Crepau has made a vocal classification of all the English phonetic sounds. This classification enables English-speaking singers to master all the English phonetic sounds and renders them harmonious and easy to sing.

Apply at the School Mondays and Thursdays, from 2:00 to 2:30 p. m. Y. M. C. A. Building, Ellis and Mason Sts.

THE BURROWES COURSE OF MUSIC STUDY

FOR CHILDREN (KINDERGARTEN AND PRIMARY)

Studio, 2209 Broderick St., bet. Washington and Jackson.

Reception Hour, Tuesdays and Fridays, 1:30 to 2 P. M.

MRS. FRANCES B. WILLIAMS, Piano Teacher

Representative of Katharine Burrowes

Telephone

Teachers taught the Burrowes System and outfits furnished.

Geary 2472

LOUIS H. EATON

ORGANIST AND DIRECTOR OF THE CHOIR

TRINITY CHURCH

Teacher of Singing, Piano and Organ

Special advantages offered singers in choir training

Studio and Residence 1676 Broadway

Between Van Ness Ave. and Franklin Street

H. B. PASMORE

TEACHER OF SINGING

Specialty—Shakespeare's system of tone production.

1424 Washington Street

573 Fifteenth street, OAKLAND, on Thursdays after August 1st.

M. GERTRUDE JUDD

Teacher of Whistling

785 Geary St., S. F.

Phone Hyde 933

JOSEPH ROECKEL and MME. COURSEN-ROECKEL

Assisted by Mlle. Elena Roeckel, Concert contralto

NEW VOCAL CLASSES Placing of Voice and Solo Practice
1060 FULTON ST. Opposite Alamo Square

Conrad W. Fuhrer

TEACHER of Violin and Ensemble Playing. 1676 Page St.
Phone Fell 3373. Also care of Sherman, Clay & Co.

CHICKERING Best in the World
PIANOS Oldest in America

100,000 IN USE

BENJ. CURTAZ &amp; SON, 16 O'FARRELL STREET

SOLE AGENTS

Dr. H. J. STEWART

TEACHER OF VOCAL MUSIC

Pianoforte, Organ, Harmony and Composition

Special course for singers desiring church appointments

Studio, 1105 Bush St.

MR. ANDREW BOGART

TEACHER OF SINGING

METHOD of the ELDER LAMPERTI

Home Studio: S. E. corner Buchanan and Page Sts.

PHONE PARK 202

SIGNOR ABRAMOFF

The only teacher of the famous California Prima Donna, Miss Edith Decker (Dramatic Soprano), Miss Paraskova Sandelin (Contralto), Mr. Emil Arnold (Tenor) and of several other singers prominent in the profession.

VOICE CULTURE (OLD ITALIAN METHOD)

Signor Abramoff Equalizes, Beautifies and Strengthens the Tone. Corrects Nasal and Throaty Production Produces apertamentos, and Covered tones with Open Mouth.

703 SUTTER ST.

HOURS: 10 to 1 and 3 to 7 Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday

MR. THEODOR

SALMON

Concert Pianist and Teacher. Pupil of Kullak, Reinecke, Jadassohn and Richter. Studio, 546 Sutter St. Phone James 1281. Residence, "The Nordhoff."

Von Meyerinck
School of Music

Telephone Park 223

841 FULTON STREET

Offers all the advantages of Eastern and European conservatories for a thorough musical education.

STAFF OF TEACHERS.

Voice Culture - - - MRS. ANNA VON MEYERINCK
Art Expression, Opera and Drama, MRS. MARY FAIRWEATHER
Piano Harmony and Composition MR. FRED ZECH, JR.
Violin and Viola MISS MARIE H. MILLS
MR. W. F. ZECH

Competent staff of assistant teachers. Special teachers for Languages (German, French and Italian), Physical Culture, Fencing, Elocution, and Stage Dancing. Prospectus upon application.

SIGNOR PAOLO LA VILLA

(Of Florence, Italy)

N. B.—Special Terms for Professionals.

Vocal Studio: THE ROOSEVELT, 546 Sutter St.
Phone James 1282

Letters

"A Texas Matchmaker"

This is the logical first of the promised trilogy of the cattle industry which Andy Adams has undertaken to write. "The Log of a Cowboy," which appeared about a year ago, really forms the second of the series, the third of which is to deal with the cattle in the market. The narrator of "A Texas Matchmaker" is Tom Quirk, who kept the "Log of a Cowboy," and his story is related in the same temperate, unexaggerated manner. The time in which the story is set is the period between the close of the war and the building of the transcontinental railroads, the palmiest days of cattle ranching. Las Palomas is the property of old Lance Lovelace, whose patriarchal and paternal policy extends to his Mexican vaqueros and his Caucasian hired men. In spite of his own luckless adventures in matrimony, he has not lost faith in the institution, and the dearest wish of his heart is to see his boys settled in cottages on his ranch, with families growing up around them. He is ever ready and anxious to assist them and makes offers far more liberal than the average father does for his own sons, but all to no avail, for there are eleventh-hour disappointments, and mistakes and misunderstandings without end, and in spite of all of old Lance's efforts to let others profit by his own experiences he finds that they must learn by their own. It is an Arcadian life which Tom Quirk describes, where any one within fifty miles is a neighbor and each takes it for granted that the rest will act with him. So Lovelace never hesitates a moment about contracting to sell more cattle than he has in stock, making sure that he can call on Senor Gonzales and the McLeods and the Vaux's to help him make up the tale and thank him for giving them the chance. And when there is a celebration of any kind every one goes as a matter of course and all enjoy themselves to the full. The men are as good friends as the masters and there is peace and plenty. Unlike most tellers of tales of pioneer life, Mr. Adams has discarded entirely the Houp-la style of narrative. Tom Quirk, who does all the talking, tells of the roping and branding, the gathering of the herds and breaking of horses, the hide hunting and the extraordinary exertions to provide water for the stock in the time of drouth, not as if they were particular stunts gotten up for the edification and astonishment of the city visitor and the special writer, but in a simple, matter of fact way, just as they would appear to the men who did these things as part of the day's work. It is an interesting and convincing style and has the merit that it will remain intelligible long after the slangy and exclamatory fashion has lost its vogue and the current expressions are forgotten. The last chapter gives a pathetic view of the great industry in its decline. Quirk, in the capacity of purchasing agent twenty years after the bulk of the story, calls on his old employer and finds him still hale, though feeble and well on toward his ninetieth year. The railroad has come, and the wire fence, and with it the distrust of neighbors and suspicion of strangers. The quality of the stock has deteriorated, and the old class of employees drifted away. "A Texas Matchmaker" is a well-told tale of a time that is gone forever. Mr. Adams is doing for the cattle industry what Frank Norris had planned to do for wheat. If the third story of the series is as well told as the first two, and there is no reason to suppose it will not be, the three will form a perfect picture of one of the most pictur-

SUMMER RESORTS

The following Resorts will send descriptive booklet when requested.

GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM

A Sanitarium, cottage plan; not a hospital. Equipped for the scientific application of Water, Electricity, Massage, Tissue Oscillation, Electric Light, X-Ray, Dry, Hot Air and all minor treatments. Large grounds, 5½ acres, shade, etc. Separate treatment apartments for men and women. Fifteen minutes walk from centre of city; one block from car line. Beautiful scenery. Write for literature. GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM, San Jose, Cal.

Hotel Rowardennan

"IN THE MOUNTAINS BY THE SEA"

Ben Lomond, Santa Cruz County. Opened under entirely new management. Round-trip Tickets from San Francisco, $3. For booklet apply PECK'S BUREAU, 11 Montgomery St., S. F.; or to WM. G. DODGE, Lessee.

The Monterey

Most Elegantly appointed Hotel on the Pacific Coast. Hot and cold water; Electric and Gas Lights; Private and Public Baths; Telephone in every room; four Private Dining Rooms; Fine Sample Rooms. American Plan, $2.50 and upwards; European Plan, 75c and upwards. Hageman & Jones, Props., Monterey, Cal.

Spend Your Vacation

A great many San Francisco people are planning to spend the entire summer at Hotel Del Monte. No other resort in California offers such a combination of attractions--sea bathing, golf, automobilism, bowling, tennis, fishing, and all out-of-door sports. Instead of going from place to place seeking comforts, the wise ones of society are planning already to put in several enjoyable weeks down at Del Monte by the sea. Address Geo. P. Snell, manager, Del Monte, California.

At Hotel Del Monte

Byron Hot Springs

Open all the year. Unexcelled climate. Luxurious Mineral and Mud Baths, and the most curative waters known for Rheumatism, Gout, Sciatica, Liver and Kidney and Nervous troubles, also Malaria.

Hotel unique in cuisine, service and appointments.

Rates $17.50 per week in Cottages. $3 per day and upwards in Main Hotel.

Reached by Southern Pacific, 2 1-2 hours from San Francisco. Trains leave San Francisco at 8:30 and 10 A. M., and 6 and 8:05 P. M. Dining Car on the 6 P. M. train.

H. R. WARNER, Manager

Byron Hot Springs Post Office, California

Kenilworth Inn

Mill Valley

One of the most popular resorts in Mill Valley, situated at the foot of Mt. Tamalpais; only 30 minutes' ride from the city; rates reasonable.

MISSSES PALMER & HULETT.

Tahoe Tavern

On Lake Tahoe, the largest and most beautiful body of water in the world at this elevation, now open. The tavern will be conducted this season by Mr. F. W. Richardson, manager of California's famous mission hotel, The Glenwood, Riverside; a guarantee that it will be strictly first class. The table supplied with all delicacies; fishermen constantly employed to furnish lake trout. For rates address F. W. RICHARDSON

The Grove

Lake Tahoe

Half mile east of Tallac on Lake Shore. Rates $2 per day; $10 per week; meals 50c. Good saddle horses and the best of livery; boats free to all guests. J. E. FARMETER, Prop., Tallac, Cal.

Hotel Ben Lomond

SANTA CRUZ MOUNTAINS--NO STAGING

Table first-class. Electric lights, boating, swimming, fishing, hunting, tennis, croquet. See booklet, S. P. Company, 613 Market St., or B. DICKINSON, Ben Lomond, Cal.

Hotel Bon Air

Go to Hotel Bon Air for your summer outing. Thirty-seven minutes from San Francisco. Bowling, tennis, boating, bathing and fishing. Escalante R. R. Station. MR. AND MRS. J. E. MANLOVE, Props., Ross P. O., Marin County.

The Tallac

Lake Tahoe, Cal.

Cafe European. Nurses, Maids and Children, American Plan. Prices now as low as any hotel on Lake. Service, accommodations, boating and livery superior to any. Address M. LAWRENCE & CO., Tallac, Cal.

Brockway

Lake Tahoe

Opens June 1st. Write FRANK B. ALVERSON, Mgr. Brockway, Cal.

THE MART
1348 MARKET STREET

DOMESTIC AND IMPORTED BEERS
WINES and LIQUORS, for Camping,
Picnics and Vacations, at
REDUCED PRICES

Phone South 1176

esque and exciting industries of the Great West. Published by Houghton, Mifflin & Company of Boston.

One of the literary monthlies has been giving attention to the opinions of authors concerning the matter of illustration, and the result would seem to be that on the whole they find the artists' conceptions of their characters and scenes no more satisfactory than readers have pronounced them. Ellen Glasgow frankly admits that she does not care for illustrations, either of her own books or those of others. Josephine Dodge Daskam considers herself rarely fortunate in the pictorial accompaniments to her stories, and her readers will agree with her. C. L. Hinton was remarkably successful in depicting Emmy Lou, that most delightful little heroine of Mrs. George Madden Martin's and W. D. Davis is doing well with Myra Kelly's little East-siders. Mary Hallock Foote had the rare felicity of being able to do her own illustrating. Booth Tarkington, who, we were long since told, makes the rough draft of his story in pictorial form, but who has hitherto steadfastly refused to make any other use of his artistic ability, is going to furnish the illustrations for his next novel. Readers, as a rule, pronounce pictures unsatisfactory, and authors likewise have been known to wonder aloud whether the artists ever took the trouble to read the specific scenes or descriptions, much less the whole story. Illustrations certainly add to the cost of production, so, though one rarely finds amongst one's own acquaintances any one who cares for the pictorial accompaniments, there must be a steady demand for them somewhere.

The question, What do some people buy books for? is forcibly suggested by the experience of the Macmillan Company, which has amongst its recent issues "Whistler as I Knew Him," by Mr. Mortimer Menpes, the English artist. Now, one would naturally take it for granted that any one with a sufficient knowledge of Whistler to be interested in laying out money on a volume concerning him would not be in ignorance of his famous white lock of hair, yet a number of purchasers have written to complain that there is an evident blemish in the frontispiece portrait, which leaves a white patch just above the forehead, and of course, an intimation that a perfect copy in exchange would be no more than is due them. These artist lovers must be cousins german to the family of classic renown, who did not enjoy their tourist sojourn in Venice because the streets were all flooded and the inhabitants were driven to the necessity of making their way about in boats. It is all very well to deplore the tendency of the times and the floods of cheap fiction that are snatched up, but what on earth do some people want with anything better?

—The Bookworm.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. —.

ELLA VAN BENTHUSEN, Plaintiff
vs.
THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN, Defendant

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:
THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's alleged willful and utter neglect of said plaintiff for more than four years last past, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 30th day of June, in the year of our Lord; one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk,
By CHAS. C. MORRIS, Deputy Clerk.

N. F. FLOOD, Plaintiff's Attorney
1122 Market St., Rooms 1, 2, 3 and 4.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. —. No. 91429

ELISE KOEBSCH, Plaintiff
vs.
CHARLES W. F. KOEBSCH, Defendant

Action brought in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said City and County of San Francisco, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:
CHARLES W. F. KOEBSCH, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of plaintiff; also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 8th day of July in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk,
By GEO. W. LEE, Deputy Clerk

McCLELLAN & McCLELLAN, Plaintiff's Attorneys.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA, a Corporation, Plaintiff,

vs.

WILLIAM HORSTMAYER and FREDERICK HORSTMAYER, copartners doing business under the firm name of William Horstmeyer & Co., Clara Horstmeyer, wife of William Horstmeyer, et al., Defendants.

No. 89,714—Depart. 10, SUPERIOR COURT.

Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure.

Under and by virtue of an Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure, issued out of the Superior Court, Department No. 10, of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, on the 8th day of August, 1904, in the above entitled action, wherein the CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA, a corporation, the above named plaintiff, obtained a Judgment and Decree of Foreclosure against WILLIAM HORSTMAYER, et al., defendants, on the 25th day of July, 1904, which said Judgment and Decree was, on the 2nd day of August, 1904, recorded in Judgment Book 87 of said Court, at page 523, I am commanded to sell all that certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and bounded and described as follows:

Lot Number Thirty-nine (39) in Block "B" fronting on the Southerly line of Merritt Street, between Rose and Hattie Streets, as per map entitled Map of portion of Park Lane Tract; surveyed March, 1885, by T. W. Morgan, and filed in the office of the Recorder of the City and County of San Francisco, on April 22, 1885; being between Seventeenth and Eighteenth Streets, and a portion of the San Miguel Rancho.

PUBLIC NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that on Friday, the 2nd day of September, 1904, at 12 o'clock, Noon, of that day, in front of the New City Hall, Larkin Street wing, in the City and County of San Francisco, I will, in obedience to said Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure, sell the above described property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to raise sufficient money to satisfy said Judgment, with interest and costs, etc., to the highest and best bidder, for lawful money of the United States.

JOHN B. REILLY, Commissioner.

San Francisco, August 10, 1904.

E. B. YOUNG and F. A. DENICKE, No. 14 Sansome Street, San Francisco, Cal., Attorneys for Plaintiff.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of JAMES NEILL, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Mary A. Daly, Administratrix, with the will annexed, of the estate of James Neill, deceased, to the creditors of said persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Mary A. Daly, Administratrix, with the will annexed, of the estate of James Neill, deceased, at Room 498 Parrott Building, No. 855 Market Street, San Francisco, California, the same being her place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

MARY A. DALY, Administratrix, with the will annexed, of the Estate of JAMES NEILL, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, August 6, 1904.

JOHN J. BARRETT, Attorney for Administratrix, with the will annexed.
Parrott Building, 855 Market Street.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of ELLEN HOLLAND, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned Josephine Mockler, administratrix of the Estate of Ellen Holland, deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Josephine Mockler, Administratrix, at Room 498 Parrott Building, No. 855 Market Street, San Francisco, California, the same being her place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

JOSEPHINE MOCKLER, Administratrix of the Estate of Ellen Holland, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, August 13, 1904.

JOHN J. BARRETT, Attorney for Administratrix,
Rooms 497-498 Parrott Building, San Francisco.

Bonestell, Richardson & Co.

DEALERS
IN

PAPER OF ALL
KINDS

FOR PRINTING AND WRAPPING } 401-403 Sansome St.

VERUS GUARANTEED PILES
OR $50. FORFEITED. One application relieves. Cures while you work. Price $2. Send only 25¢ with your druggist's name and we will send a $2 package of Verus prepaid. Send us the balance when cured. VERUS REMEDY COMPANY, Dept. E, Los Angeles, Cal.

HAIR GOODS

G. LEADERER
Wig Maker and Hairdresser. Scalp treatments, Shampooing, Manicuring, Hair dyeing, Switches, Ornaments, Toupees. Complete line of pure Hair Goods only. 123 Stockton St.

KIMONOS AND JAPANESE GOODS

KIMONOS
Silk and Cotton; Custom made and made to order; of every description at special low price. Call and inspect our large and artistic line. The Orient, 633 Sutter St. near Taylor.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR REMOVED

BEATRICE ST. JOHN
Hair, Face and Scalp Specialist. 426 Sutter St. Phone Black 153. Superfluous Hair killed root and branch by absorption—guaranteed permanent, $1.00.

HAT RENOVATORY

PANAMA HATS
Bleached and Blocked. 423 Sutter Street. 424 1/2 Montgomery Street. Telephones Black 4616. Red 3212.

Residence 814 Grove St., S. F.
Telephone Page 81

HENRY P. TRICOU
Notary Public

Telephone Main 1680 306 Montgomery St.
Bet. Pine and Bush

VEUVE
CLICQUOT
PONSARDIN

The most delicious
Champagne
of the Age
Yellow Label, Dry
Gold Label, Brut

Cruse &
Fils Freres
Clarets and
Sauternes

Creme des Grands
Crus
(Creme of Cognac)

A. Vignier Co.
429 & 431 Battery
San Francisco

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy

1051 Market St., bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.

The largest of its kind in the world.
Book "The Philosophy of Marriage" mailed free—
A Valuable Book for Men.

The Monk and the Youth

Though a great deal has been written of late about George Sand, anent the revival of interest in her works, I have not seen told anywhere the story of her visit to the monastery of Grande Chartreuse, which Alexandre Dumas the elder used to relate with great gusto. Women were not permitted within the monastery walls, but some of them disguised themselves in men's clothing and thus obtained entrance. One day three travelers knocked at the door of the Grande Chartreuse, two being men of advanced age and one a youth with black eyes and curly brown hair. The prior received the travelers kindly, but noticing the tiny feet of the youth he suspected the latter's sex. To determine it, he tried the famous apple trick for the detection of women in masculine disguise. But the youth, instead of holding his knees apart to catch the luscious fruit the prior threw in his direction, drew them together in manly fashion and the prior was satisfied his suspicions were groundless. Three days the travelers remained at the monastery, the prior and the youth becoming great friends. Some months later, Alexandre Dumas visited the Grande Chartreuse and in conversation with the prior the latter spoke of the charming youth whom the monastery had sheltered, and how he had passed through the apple trial. Dumas laughed. "I know the story," he said, "she told it to me. Your young man was a woman. It was George Sand and, as a daughter of Eve, she did not trust the apple."

"Is it possible?" exclaimed the good prior, "but do you know that she spoke on dogma, canon law, moral, like a D.D.?"

"She is a great mind," said Dumas, "and by the way, she even told me: 'Ah, my dear friend, it was time for me to leave; for if I had stayed three days longer, I would have been converted!'"

Origin of the Templars

Few people who have seen the modern Knights Templars in all their gorgeous trappings know how the order originated, except that it had something to do with Constantine and his vision, "By this sign ye shall conquer." The originators of the Knights Templar order were two young French Knights, Godfrey de St. Omer and Hugh de Payens. They joined themselves with seven other nobles who had won their spurs in battle, and calling themselves Poor Brothers in Christ, devoted themselves to His service and that of the Virgin Mother. They took vows in the presence of the Patriarch to cut themselves off from all worldly interests; the vow of chastity, poverty, absolute obedience to the Patriarch and to the one chosen as their head. They took the field as mounted police on the

W. SCHEPPLER &amp; SON

Dealer in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry.
1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

SOHMER
PIANO
AGENCY

WARRANTED 10 YEARS
BYRON MAUZY
The CECILIAN — The Perfect Piano Player

PIANOS
308-312 Post St.
San Francisco.

pilgrims' road. A wing of the palace of the Latin kings, on the site of Solomon's Temple, was set apart as a pilgrims' home, and for the residence and station of their guards. The knights had their suites of rooms, and place for their horses and servants, and from this they took their name as Brothers of the Order of the Temple. Their chapel was the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. They had a Gothic hall, and suits of armor on the racks, with long-swords, cross-bows and battle-axes. It was here the Knights Templars began their existence, the nine originators rapidly adding to their numbers, until now the order that sprang from them is one of the largest fraternal organizations in the world. The Knights of the original order, of ancient times, spent their days in fighting for the good cause. They had a battle-cry, "Bea-seant," which nobody has ever been able to explain exactly, but it is believed to have been an old cry of the Burgundian peasantry.
—The Historian.

AN EDISON PHONOGRAPH

and
EDISON GOLD MOULDED RECORDS

make a musical combination that leads the world. They make music possible in every home.

PETER BACIGALUPI

Pacific Coast Headquarters
786 Mission St. SAN FRANCISCO

For those who appreciate comfort
and attention

Occidental Hotel

SAN FRANCISCO

AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN PLAN
A QUIET HOME
CENTRALLY LOCATED

GEORGE WARREN HOOPER, LESSEE

Visit the

Hoffman Cafe

Wm. J. Sullivan, Proprietor

Lunch, Grill and Wine Rooms

Half a block below Palace and Grand Hotels, S. F.

Fine Goods a Specialty. Merchants' hot lunch from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. An extra spread served on all holidays. Merchants' lunch served in Ladies Cafe and Grill, from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. Oysters, English Chops, Steaks and Delicacies a specialty.

Handsomest Cafe in America

Open all night. Private Dining Rooms for Ladies and Escorts

601 Market St. (S. W. Cor. 2nd and Market Sts.)

POODLE DOG RESTAURANT, CORNER
Eddy and Mason Streets, San Francisco—Private dining and banquet rooms. Telephone 429.
A. B. BLANCO & BRUN, Proprietors

PALACE HOTEL

San Francisco, California.

TOURISTS and TRAVELERS will, now, with difficulty recognize the famous Court into which for twenty-five years carriages have been driven. This space of over a quarter of an acre has recently, by the addition of very handsome furniture, rugs, chandeliers and tropical plants, been converted into a lounging room, the

FINEST
IN THE
WORLD

THE EMPIRE PARLOR—the Palm Room, furnished in Cerise, with Billiard and Pool tables for the ladies—the Louis XV Parlor—the Ladies' Writing Room, and numerous other modern improvements, together with unexcelled Cuisine and the most convenient location in the City—all add much to the ever-increasing popularity of this most famous Hotel.

Techau Tavern

The most unique resort in San Francisco.

There is not a more artistically appointed cafe in the country.

It is a place wherein the guest may feast the eye while dining sumptuously and being regaled with exquisite music.

The Tavern is now under new and experienced management, and patrons are assured of the constant attendance of the chief of the establishment, and of prompt service at all times.

Special attention is paid to luncheon, dinner and after-theatre parties.

OUR STANDARDS

Sperry's Best Family.

Drifted Snow.

Golden Gate Extra.

Sperry Flour Company

Sarkspur

Ideal suburban property, beautifully situated in Marin county on the N. S. R. R. Completely sheltered by Mount Tamalpais from ocean wind and fogs. Extensive water works, sewerage and electric light systems. Attractions abound—such as sea-bathing, boating, groves of redwood, madrone and laurel, picturesque walks and drives, sunshine and wildwood vistas. The wonderful equability of the climate cannot be surpassed; flowers bloom perennially. The journey from San Francisco is short, enjoyable and full of interest. You can have a charming country home at a moderate price, and on easy terms.

American Land and Trust Co., 708 Market St., Mutual Savings Bank Bldg.

Those who read much

are more frequently subject to eye trouble than others. There are, however, numerous modern occupations which bring on eye troubles that injure the brain and the physical system irreparably. Avoid danger by

Using GEORGE MAYERLE'S GLASSES

His Glasses insure health and a clear vision. Consultation Free. Open until 9 o'clock every evening. Geo. Mayerle's GERMAN EYEWATER makes weak eyes strong, sore eyes well, rests tired eyes. Price 50c. 62c by mail. Mail order or Wells-Fargo. Geo. Mayerle's Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers insure clean lenses without scratching.

Showing effect of George Mayerle's Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers

GEORGE MAYERLE, German Expert Optician

1071 MARKET STREET

Two Doors from Seventh

CAFE ZINKAND

After the Theatre call at this Palace of Delights and revel in the luxuries of a spread fit for the gods, or drink of some of the best wine that ever chased the skeleton from the feast or painted land scares within the brain of man.—Hograve.

TOWN TALK

VOL. XIII. No. 626.

SAN FRANCISCO, AUGUST 27, 1904.

PRICE 10 CENTS.

Photo Vaughan & Keith

FLORENCE ROBERTS
AS "TESS OF THE D'URBERVILLES"

...THE...

German Savings & Loan Society

526 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

Guaranteed Capital and Surplus	- - - - -	$ 2,448,948.13
Capital actually paid up in Cash	- - - - -	1,000,000.00
Deposits June 30, 1904	- - - - -	36,573,015.18

Board of Directors

JOHN LLOYD, President.
DANIEL MEYER, 1st Vice-President
H. HORSTMANN, 2nd Vice-President
Ign. Steinhart	Emil Rohte
I. N. Walter	H. B. Russ
A. H. R. Schmidt,	J. W. Van Bergen
Wm. Herrmann,	Asst. Cashier
Geo. Tourny,	Secretary
A. H. Muller,	Asst. Secretary
W. S. Goodfellow	General Attorney
	N. Ohlandt

San Francisco Savings Union

532 California Street, Corner Webb

Deposits July 1, 1904	- - - - -	$33,908,594.00
Paid Up Capital	- - - - -	1,000,000.00
Reserve and Contingent Funds	- - - - -	935,033.00

E. B. POND, President	W. C. B. de FREMERY	} Vice-Presidents
	ROBERT WATT

LOVELL WHITE, Cashier	R. M. WELCH, Ass't Cashier
-----------------------	----------------------------

DIRECTORS:

Henry F. Allen, William A. Magee, W. C. B. de Fremery, C. O. G. Miller, Robert Watt, George C. Boardman, Fred H. Beaver, Jacob Barth, E. B. Pond.

Loans upon San Francisco and Oakland Real Estate, and Farms and Farming Lands in the Country.

Receives Deposits: Country remittances may be made in checks payable in San Francisco, Post Office or Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Money Orders, or coin by Express, but the responsibility of this bank commences only with the receipt of the money.

No charge is made for pass-book or entrance fee.

Office Hours: 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and Saturday evenings, for receipt of deposits only, 6:30 to 8 o'clock.

CONTINENTAL BUILDING & LOAN ASSOCIATION

OF CALIFORNIA

ESTABLISHED IN 1889

Subscribed Capital	- - - - -	$17,000,000.00
Paid in Capital	- - - - -	3,500,000.00
Monthly Income	- - - - -	250,000.00
Homes built since organization	- - - - -	1,500

Home Office 301 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco

DR. WASHINGTON DODGE, President
WM. CORBIN, Secretary and General Manager

It might be well to remember
when making a will

THAT THE

CALIFORNIA SAFE DEPOSIT
AND TRUST COMPANY

Is in a position to settle estates with the assurance that the administration will not change hands and that the estate will be prudently managed with absolute safety.

WILLS SAFELY KEPT WITHOUT CHARGE

OFFICES:

Cor. CALIFORNIA and MONTGOMERY STS.
San Francisco

Rathjen Bros.

39 Stockton St.

Phone Main 5522

Complete Line of Imported and Domestic

GROCERIES, TEAS, COFFEES
WINES AND LIQUORS

Special Sale Days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday

Look for Items in all the Daily Papers

The Owl Drug Co.

is the largest concern of its kind in this country—it buys its goods in such large quantity it can sell them for less money than most any other druggist pays for them. Telephone orders filled at once and delivered free. South 356.

1128 MARKET ST., S. F.
BROADWAY & 10TH ST., OAKLAND

La Grande

BRANCHES

5 A Taylor Street
200 Mtgy. Ave. cor. Kearny
202 Third cor. Howard
1738 Market opp. Eleventh

Laundry
23 POWELL ST.
Phone Bush 12

Sew Buttons

Ordinary Mending

Work called for and delivered

FREE of charge

TONKIN, Photographer

1490 MARKET ST.

Bet. 7th and 8th Sts.

San Francisco, Cal.

GROUND FLOOR STUDIO

J. PORCHER

HATTER

Latest
Summer
Styles

JOHN B. STETSON CO.

1109 Market St.

Odd Fellows Building, S. F.

Sunset

MAJOR GENERAL ARTHUR MACARTHUR U. S. A.
COMMANDER AT CAMP ATASCADERO

TOWN TALK

SAN FRANCISCO, AUGUST 27, 1904.

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

THEODORE F. BONNET - - - Editor

CHARLES S. SMITH - - - Manager

609 MISSION ST.

FOURTH FLOOR

Telephone BUSH 713

SUBSCRIPTION.—One Year, in advance, $3.00; six months, $1.75; three months, $1.00; one month, 40 cents; single copies, 10 cents. Foreign subscriptions (countries in postal union), $4.00 per year. Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application. For Sale by all Newsdealers.

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

RALPH A. GROVER Manager of Advertising
New York Representative, FREDERIC M. KRUGLER, Room 918,
150 Nassau Street.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N. Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 200 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

No attention is paid to anonymous communications, but the wishes of contributors as to the use of their names will be scrupulously regarded. We cannot undertake to preserve or return manuscripts.

TOWN TALK is mailed to subscribers every Thursday and should be received in this city and vicinity every Friday. Please notify us of tardy delivery.

Stung By Criticism

Another representative of the predatory rich has confessed that he has been hurt by public criticism. His confession is in the nature of accumulative evidence of the virtue of the stinging rebuke. Mr. Rockefeller's tough hide was so successfully blistered by the lash of criticism that he decided to curtail his activities in the industrial world, and the sensitive Mr. Morgan's feelings were so badly lacerated that he went to Europe to recuperate. Mr. Charles M. Schwab, who has been disgorging some of his ill-gotten gains, is the latest Captain of Industry to confess that he doesn't like to be excoriated for his misdeeds, and that the diatribes that have been hurled against him jolted him severely. He is only one of a multitude of men who have, in recent years, invited public criticism by their acts, and who have suffered by it in varying degrees. If the criticism were not deserved the victims of it would have protested, but they have no defense to make. They practiced deception on the public, and enriched themselves by swindling enterprises for the launching of which they should now be wearing stripes. Discouraging as it is to feel that their wealth saved them from criminal prosecution, it is nevertheless solacing to know that despite their high financial station, and their exclusiveness, they are not immune to the stings of public reproach.

Lawson's Startling Message

As "The Story of Amalgamated" progresses in Everybody's the more deeply do we become convinced that Thomas W. Lawson, the Boston multi-millionaire, is actuated by the highest motives in exposing the infamous practices of the unscrupulous exponents of high finance. So accustomed have we become to viewing the professions and even the performances of our Captains of Industry with suspicion, that when Mr. Lawson began his remarkable narrative we were inclined to scoff. Knowing as we do that the possession of great wealth is prima facie evidence of a sordid, selfish spirit, and that in accumulating it our predatory plutocrats stifle sentiment and sympathy, and dull the edge of all the finer sensibilities, we believed that when Mr. Lawson resolved to expose the swindling practices of his erstwhile partners he was moved by the spirit of revenge. We could not conceive of his becoming a public benefactor at the instigation of a generous impulse, and we were prepared to accept his testimony as that of a prejudiced witness. But now we believe that our suspicions were without foundation. Mr. Lawson's story has the ring of true sincerity, and now the Boston millionaire presents himself to our mind's eye as a man with a soul accessible to repentance which has yielded to the spirit of goodness and right action. Mr. Lawson is engaged in the performance of a great public service. It entitles him to rank among the benefactors of humanity; not merely because he is paving the way for great commercial reforms, but on account of the inevitable salutary influence on the most precious of his country's institutions. His testimony of the nefarious practices of the unscrupulous Standard Oil pirates is more impressive than all the reform movements that have been started in the last quarter of a century. We know that his utterances are authoritative; that he is not dealing in mere deductions from hearsay report; that he is reciting history made before his eyes, and that his startling revelations are of great sociological and political significance. He is calling our attention to the fact that the Government itself is in the grasp of a most infamous band of corruptionists, and that the stability of the Nation must be threatened unless something is done to curb the growing power of the insatiable vampires that constitute the Standard Oil clique. It is no wonder that he "sees visions of a marching people bearing aloft grisly heads on gory poles" and hears "above the low bestial murmur of the mob the cry for bread and revenge." This reads like the sensational maunderings of the irrepressible anarchist, but no reflective, intelligent person can read the story of "Frenzied Finance" without feeling that Thomas W. Lawson is far from being a dreamer, and that he is justified in taking a serious view of the conditions that have been brought about by the greed of gold.

The Cats of Newport

Talk about the "cats" of London society that purr and hiss through the British drama—surely they are no worse than the American bred feline who invites the boot-jacks of decent people as she sits and caterwauls alongside a bag of soiled linen on a Newport lawn. According to a New York daily there seems to be a concerted movement by people snubbed in the past by Mrs. Goelet to discredit the story told about the recovery of the jewels, and the Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish clique insist that the only way that Mrs. Goelet can have peace of mind is by joining her children in England. In other words, Mrs. Fish, the leader of the fastest set in Newport, hopes to drive Mrs. Goelet out of town by giving credence to the scandalous version of the jewel robbery. It is not because Mrs. Fish is squeamish or has a top-lofty contempt for impropriety of conduct. Mrs. Fish is one of the most tolerant of Newport matrons. She numbers among her intimate friends the gayest and most indiscreet of Newport married women. The notorious Harry Lehr was her protegee. It was against her set that Colonel Henry Watterston thundered. The set over which she presides is emulous of those aristocrats of London whose pursuit of low pleasures has prompted prominent writers to ask the question whether the moral foundations of the British nation are crumbling away. If the fierce denunciations of high-class New York society have been unjust, it was because all the fashionables were confounded with those of the Fish-Belmont clique who have created the impression by their ridiculous extravagances and unconventional pastimes that they considered etiquette old-fashioned, respectability provincial and rectitude a something that dampened the joy of living. Mrs. Fish is one of the most liberal-minded of women, but she is also a high-toned "knocker." She demonstrated that in a certain memorable interview published in a St. Louis paper when she was en route to this city. If the newspapers have not exaggerated, the conduct of her friends toward Mrs. Goelet has been positively brutal. They have stirred up factional strife through their anxiety to make a scandal of the jewel robbery, and now some of Mrs. Goelet's defenders are becoming reminiscent. So on the whole a very nasty mess has been stirred up.

Great Slaughter By Wire

The official despatch senders of St. Petersburg are far more destructive of life and property than are the engines of war operating in the Far East. Every little while they sweep away the armies of Japan like chaff before the wind, and such havoc have they wrought in the neighborhood of Port Arthur that it seems as though the Mikado has an inexhaustible supply of troops. It is evident that the news from Manchuria concerning the strength of Japan in that province is all wrong, because the official despatch senders of St. Petersburg have annihilated three times the number of men that have been sent there. Japan's forces would long since have been exterminated were it not either for the recuperative powers of the Japs after death, or the miraculous reinforcement from Tokio. There is something weird in the performances of the Mikado's men, but the Czar of Russia is not awed by them. He has faith in the Power that presented him with the brand of olive branch for which he had been praying. In spite of the pitiable plight of his country he was of good cheer when an heir to his throne was born, and owned that the event filled him with greater happiness than he could experience even at the news of a great victory. He also remarked that he could calmly and without alarm face the future feeling as he did that the birth of his son was a sign that the war would be brought to a happy conclusion. Meanwhile all the indications are that the proud spirit of the Autocrat of all the Russias is soon to be humbled; and the sooner the better it will be for the country whose crimes against humanity have alienated the sympathy of the civilized world.

Reign of The Bigot

The managers of the St. Louis exposition have followed the usual custom of Sunday closing, as a concession to the prejudices of the so-called religious element. Why the religious element should claim so much more consideration than the law abiding who do not profess any special sanctity is, as the immortal Dundreary says, "one of the things no fellow can find out." There seems to be an idea that if every other source of recreation and relaxation is cut off people will be herded into churches by the sheer force of ennui. Perhaps it would be so if the church people could gain control of the railroads, the open-air parks and the saloons, but as it is now they succeed only in cutting off the desirable institutions from patronage, and thus practically driving the weak and irresolute into dissipation. It does not make any mountain of difference in the end, why young men or old men or middle-aged men do not go to church, or why their sisters, their cousins and their aunts follow their example, so long as they do not go. There is the main point—that the churches remain for the most part empty. There are, in every city, a large number of people of all ages and conditions, who are without special family ties. They work all the week, in store or office or factory or ditch, and they live as best they may in cheap boarding houses. The one day of the week on which they are free to feed their souls is Sunday, but on Sunday art galleries, the libraries, and any other institutions through which quiet pleasure and profit might be acquired, must be rigidly closed. Meanwhile the saloon remains open and the game of chance may be found by the diligent seeker thereafter. The Sabbatharians seem never to be able to grasp the simple fact that the proletariat cannot gain a few hours in the course of the day or the week by better management of their work, but that they are rigidly fenced in between certain definite periods. The factory worker cannot get up at daylight, nor work till dark on any particular day in order to have the daylight hours of the next at his own disposal, nor may the seamstress or the stenographer burn the midnight oil on Monday that she may make her own hours on Tuesday. The Sabbath day is none the less kept holy because rational enjoyments have been permitted to the class most in need of them. It is decidedly worse for both the day and the people that the noisy Sunday excursion and the saloon flourish. The Sunday closing of the St. Louis exposition is as illogical as the abolition of the army canteen. A few narrow-minded bigots gain a nominal victory, and are correspondingly jubilant, but the net result of their interference is bad. They pride themselves on their uprightness in refusing "a compromise with evil," and the consequence is that the evil ignores them and has things its own way.

Maternal Faddists

There is as lively a discussion going on over the relative merits of Josephine Dodge Daskam's "Memoirs of a Baby," and Philip Verrill Mighels's "Bruvver Jim's Baby"

The Hub
CHAS. KEILUS & CO
EXCLUSIVE
HIGH GRADE CLOTHIERS

The quintessence of science holds carnival in our Fall and Winter models. The Fall productions are certainly "terrors to tailors." We invoke every known kink and goodness in our clothes. Good smart dressers will appreciate them. Our stock is now complete—Suits—Overcoats—Trousers.

132
KEARNY STREET
Churlow Block

Engraved
Wedding Announcements
and Invitations

ROBERTSON 126 Post Street
San Francisco

as there is over the presidential election, and up to date it looks as though Bruvver Jim would poll more votes as an ideal mother than Miss Daskam, or rather, Mrs. Bacon. It is really too funny, the way the psychologists and child-studyists have taken arms against this purely imaginary sea of troubles. Miss Daskam is accused of being a reactionary, indelicate and unmaternal, but no doubt she is very well pleased by the criticisms, for all her fun is poked at the silly over-watchfulness and the far-fetched conclusions drawn by the admiring students from the involuntary, or only apparent actions of the "subject" under observation. These faddists who are so profoundly convinced that great events hang on the accurate observance and recording of the first object or the first color or the first sound which attracts the attention of an infant are not one step in advance of the old Saxons, who presented a book, a knife and a piece of money to a new born child, and whichever the tiny hand grasped at was taken as an indication of its future career—the knife for a soldier, the money for a merchant and the book for a scholar. Who can say whether an infant is roused to any emotion whatever by a strain of music? What do the twitchings of the little lips indicate, or the movement of the limbs? Is it the color or the shape of an object which attracts? Or perchance, is it neither? Some scientists of high rank scoff at the whole theory of pre-natal influences, claiming that were the mother so susceptible to outward impressions it would be far more likely that she would be the one to show the effects, not the child.

The Nature Study Fad

A philanthropic lady is contributing to one of the magazines a series of articles in which she relates her experience in establishing Sunday schools and day schools among the children of the "poor whites" in one of the Southern States. Apparently it has been a much neglected region, and according to her narrative, any efforts to give the children a chance to gain an education have been enthusiastically seized upon. The lady is evidently abreast of the times and well up in the fads and fancies of the hour, for she remarks regretfully that "they know nothing about Nature." With all due deference to her superior advantages in the way of observation it is much more likely that it is she who knows nothing about children. If there is any one special characteristic of the well-intentioned child, no matter what its environment, it is a strong desire to please. Children will acknowledge the most appalling ignorance or make claim to the profoundest knowledge for no other reason than that they think their answers, yes or no, to leading questions, are going to gratify their interlocutor. Israel Zangwill tells, in his "Children of the Ghetto," of one little girl who acquired an entirely new name on her first appearance at school. The whole proceedings were strange to her and she was in an hypnotic trance from terror of the inquisition, whose purport she did not comprehend, so, when asked her name, she repeated the sounds made by her predecessor, for no other reason than that the other little girl had escaped instant annihilation by means of that mysterious shibboleth. Not so long ago one of these nature faddists undertook to gather statistics in the primary schools of Chicago, and came out with a brilliant report in which it appeared that the majority of the urchins had never seen a rose and those who acknowledged having seen flowers of any kind could not tell a rose from a violet or either from a dandelion. It is extremely probable that these little Southern ignor-amuses are unable to fit "memory gems" to every occasion, and that they know nothing of the lore of pollen and stamens and anthers and corollas. It is more than likely that they have never heard of Shelley, much less his "Ode to a Skylark," and they might regard it as supremely silly to address rhyming remarks to the trees, but to say that children who practically live out of doors know nothing of Nature is to show a profound ignorance of both Nature and childhood. It is not the possessor of the glibest tongue or the one with the best recollection of what others have said who is the Nature lover. The people who quote Emerson and Thoreau are apt to be the ones who have no eyes of their own, and no less an authority than John Burroughs has said that no lover of Nature was ever made by deliberate study-tasks and none ever will be, certainly not under the guidance of those who themselves know nothing at first hand. Says a writer in Sports Afield, in discussing the fad: "If reading of what some one else has seen and heard and thought is in itself education, I know no reason why teachers who know nothing of birds at first hand should not teach what they do not know, even although the third grade teacher who has the jay, and the lady who has the catbird in the fourth grade might very readily have their respective specimens changed on them without discovering the imposition. * * * After all, it is the outdoors that comes to us naturally, in the course of our everyday work or play that is valuable. No one ever got much pleasure by saying to himself: Now I will go out and study the birds and the flowers and feel the fresh air on my cheeks and enjoy the gorgeous sunset.' Nature has her reserves and will not parade her charms for such a one. The farmer who sells his farm and moves to town to 'take it easy' is generally perfectly and abjectly miserable and soon takes a longer rest than he figured on." The real lover of Nature does not go about loaded down with three-decker adjectives with which to greet the bees and ants. It is apt to be a subconsciousness of which he is made aware only when he is removed from the source of pleasure. Deep feelings do not manifest themselves in idle chatter. This making a fad and a business of Nature study is going to do for plants and animals and insects, clouds, sunsets and rainbows, precisely what the "study" of literature has done for books. Every creature and inanimate object which has been turned into an object lesson in school will become an abomination to the forced student.

GILBERT and STOLL

Movers of Household Furniture and Storage Warehouse, have removed their offices from the Murphy Bldg. to Room 43, Donohoe Bldg., Market and Taylor Sts. Storage Warehouse: Mercantile Library Bldg., Golden Gate and Van Ness ave.

For Breakfast

For Breakfast

For Breakfast

The Badgered Conductor

A suit for damages against one of the New York railroads has just been decided in favor of the complainant. The matter has some passing interest for all classes of the community, since all are more or less patrons of the cars. A woman tendered a twenty-five cent piece in payment for her fare, and the conductor neglected to give her her change. When, later on, she asked for it, he refused, calling her a dead-beat and a swindler. She brought her action on the ground that her reputation had suffered damage through the action of the company's servant and the court decided in her favor. On the face of it this seems fair enough. It is not a pleasant experience for any one, man or woman, to be publicly reviled, and it behooves employers, individual or corporation, to take measures to secure such servants as will properly represent them in dealing with patrons. On the other hand, something is to be said for the conductors. There are women, plenty of them, who do not hesitate for a moment to claim that the nickel they have handed to a conductor is a quarter, and a man does not need any lengthy experience on the platform before he learns the wisdom of keeping the coin in his hand until the transaction is closed. There are others who make it a point to lay aside all the doubtful coins that come into their possession and to deliberately "work them off on the conductor" when they find themselves on a crowded car, trusting to fortune that either he will be so busy as not to notice what he has taken or else that they will escape being identified as the passer of the "queer." Women of wealth have been known to buy doubtful coinage at a discount for the purpose of using it as carfare, relying on their well-dressed appearance to avert suspicion. Possibly they labor under the error of supposing that the railroad companies can afford the loss, and so, perhaps, they might, if it fell on the treasury. But the companies carefully check their returns and hold their employees responsible, so that a conductor whose wages amount to two dollars and a half a day is at a serious loss if he happens to have relieved someone else of a bogus dollar or been bullied out of twenty cents change from a nickel. On the whole, car men are a patient and long-suffering class. They perhaps, more than any others except dry goods clerks, are at the mercy of feminine vagaries and if, once in a while, some poor fellow breaks loose, it is well to remember the innumerable times when he has kept his temper in spite of provocation.

Port Arthur's Doom

At this writing the capture of oft-taken Port Arthur is still among Japan's prospective achievements. But its fall cannot be long delayed. The garrison has been putting up a stubborn defense but Marshal Oyama cannot be denied. According to military experts, to make an assault on a fortified position a success the proportion of besiegers to defenders must be as five is to one. The Port Arthur garrison has been reduced to about ten thousand and the besiegers number over seventy thousand. Nevertheless the taking of the Russian Gibraltar is a most expensive operation, one that is costing Japan a great deal in ammunition and men. Though valor has not been a conspicuous virtue of the Russian sailor, the Russian soldier in Port Arthur is exhibiting great heroism. It is important that he should keep Oyama busy as long as possible, for as soon as the latter has finished his task he will turn his attention to General Kuropatkin, who, meanwhile, is making preparations either to reach a place of safety or to fortify himself against attack. He will have the entire Japanese force on his trail as soon as Port Arthur is taken. The Japanese have conducted the campaign in a masterly manner and should soon have the situation well in hand.

The Judiciary in Politics

Justice Brewer approves the indisposition of the American people to transfer their servants from judicial to political life. He says that he would favor constitutional amendment forbidding such transfer. He thinks that over the judicial door should be inscribed, "Who enters here leaves all political hope behind." He sees an advantage to the people in long terms or life tenure in the judiciary, and the peril of holding out hopes of political preferment to judges. They are only human and a judge who desires a political office may, consciously or unconsciously, shape his decisions so as to appeal to the powers capable of giving him a nomination for the place he covets. These may be corporations or they may be labor or other organizations. The advisability of removing the judiciary from the demoralizing influence of politics is nowhere more apparent than in California. Very few men on the bench in this State dare ignore the powers that dictate the doings of political conventions. It is notorious that judges keep in close touch with the bosses, and that they court the favor of lawyers with political influence. Owing to the shortness of the judicial terms our judges are always "doing politics." On the eve of an election those judges who are candidates for re-election are compelled to side-step all litigation involving matters of great public interest, and upon which there is division of sentiment in the community. So well is the expediency of evasion understood that in the Superior Court those judges who are not candidates for re-election courteously assume the responsibility that the timorous ones shirk. The practice is one of many that bespeak the weakness of our boasted judicial system and the wisdom of Justice Brewer's suggestion.

"White Horse Cellar"

Scotch Whisky

FROM

MACKIE & CO., Islay, Scotland

Never in Bulk

CHARLES MEINECKE & CO.,
SOLE AGENTS P. C. SAN FRANCISCO

FAIRCHILD SUITS, WAISTS AND CORSETS

TO ORDER ONLY

The latest Parisian creation, front lacing Corsets. Made perfectly to conform with the figure—high or low, light or heavily boned, as the form requires.

Phone Larkin 862

1211 SUTTER STREET

Business Honor

BY THEODORE BONNET.

When a Chicago street sweeper found a diamond bracelet and returned it to its owner, some days ago, an Eastern editor was moved to remark that "honest men are by no means so rare as they are reported to be." He added that the ultimate basis of all business transactions is honesty, and that it is stress of adversity or misfortune which makes men dishonest. The Eastern editor evidently philosophized under misapprehension as to what constitutes honesty. If we understand it to be, as it is, uprightness of conduct in general, then it is not true that the bulk of the dishonesty in this world is the result of adversity or misfortune. The worst forms of dishonesty are the result of a natural perverseness and some innate defect in the heart and these are not characteristic of the humble and the unfortunate. It is moral decadence that makes men dishonest, and the germ of that disease is not so readily propagated in the hovels of the poor as in the palaces of the rich where there is impatience of the monotony and restraints of respectable life. Dishonesty is rampant not among the poor and lowly, but wherever the greed of gold is keenest.

To assert that honesty is the ultimate basis of all business transactions is to utter sublimated cant. Our whole business life is poisoned by a virus more noxious than the deadliest forms of political corruption, and from the perversity of our commercial practices flow most of the evils that gnaw at the vitals of the State. The prosperous merchant who devotes himself to the multiplication of material blessings six days in the week, and attends divine service on the seventh, is often more unscrupulous than the unblushing grafter who fattens at the public crib. Lying and cheating are ingredients of business principles, and a sensitive conscience is a handicap to commercial enterprise. The fleecing of the unwary is the keynote of trade. Tradition has given the color of respectability to many dishonest practices in business life, and the casuistries of commerce palliate many shady bargains. If we scrutinize closely the methods in vogue in all branches of trade today, and apply to them the rigid standards of Christian ethics, the conclusion is inevitable that we have advanced in subtlety without progressing in honesty.

It is only by dealing in illogical distinctions that we differentiate from the common swindler the astute financier of the Pacific-Union Club who gives an extravagant bonus to the country banker to persuade unsophisticated depositors to invest in water-logged stocks. It is only by approving dishonest business principles that we justify the conduct of railroad directors who, while supposed to be engaged in protecting stockholders, are fattening their bank accounts with the profits of other corporations in which they are interested and which have made extravagant contracts with the transportation company. We become indignant when we discover that some tradesman is buying our trade from our Japanese cook, but upon reflection it occurs to us that this is only a phase of the "commission" fraud that permeates our whole commercial system. We know that the largest and most honorable firms subsidize the employees of houses that patronize them; that builders tip architects; that druggists tip doctors, and that none of these transactions would be possible were clear consciences preferable to full purses.

It is neither misfortune nor adversity that leads to sporadic scandals in Merchants' and Stock Exchanges whose directors have given way to the base demands for relaxation of standards in order to afford facilities for gain at any sacrifice. When bucket-shop and blind-pool operators are admitted to those institutions it is evident that the time-honored compass of upright principles has been cast aside.

The conspicuously dishonest men of today are not the mechanics and the salaried employees of the commercial world, but the predatory plutocrats, the founders of giant combines, the men so rich that they should be considered beyond the lure of temptation. They are the men who dishonor the places consecrated to legitimate commerce, whose conduct implies that money alone, however obtained, is the sole consideration in business life.

It is ridiculous to close our eyes to the fact that sordid utilitarianism holds the moral sense of our generation in captivity. We prate of idealism but only by way of ostentatious display of the refinement we flaunt but do not feel. We place utilitarianism above idealism not only in the counting house but in our halls of legislation, and we make it the basis of our diplomacy and of our international intercourse. Our statesmen are keen to commercial advantages and insensible to moral checks and balances. Our political reformers extol honesty only because it is expedient. "Honesty is the best policy!" shouts the leading, upright citizen, and he does not dream that it has any other motive. Hence it is that the reformer whose perception of the moral law is vague sometimes considers that dishonesty is the better policy, and then he becomes an unscrupulous grafter.

In politics it is usually the high-toned recruit from commerce who upsets calculations by breaking his word. He is so accustomed to putting everything in black and white and affixing his signature to make it binding, that when the formality is dispensed with he is not to be depended upon. When the untutored south-of-the-slot mechanic "gives his word" he considers it a sacred pledge and treats it as such. Not so, the ultra-respectable club man, smug and affluent. His promises are like the proverbial pie-crust.

DECORATIONS For Weddings, Dinners, Lunches, Receptions and Stores. Flower gifts attractively arranged. Bridal bouquets artistically specialized.

Original Designs in Favors, Name Cards, Menus, Almond Dishes and Candle Shades

MISS CHARLOTTE F. WILLIAMS

121 Post Street

Tel. John 1911

San Francisco

Out of Town Correspondence Solicited

Some years ago a most distinguished reformer who was then a member of the Board of Supervisors, and who established a reputation for incorruptibility, promised to vote for a candidate for an office, appointment to which was made effective by the confirmation of that body. Another candidate brought a pull to bear on the reformer, and the latter used this language to him: "I've given my word to your opponent, but I'm going to fall down on him. I want three places in your office." That incorruptible gentleman still enjoys the confidence of the people. In that same Board of Supervisors was a south of Market street politician, who owed allegiance to the late Boss Rainey. He was known as one of the Solid Nine. He agreed to vote for one of the candidates, and Rainey asked him as a special favor to vote for the other man. His reply was: "I have given my word; I cannot break it."

The story is told by way of illustration of the fact that honesty is of several forms, and that we are prone to indulge in unwarranted distinctions. It is because of their faith in the theory that honesty is the better policy that many crooks at heart, like the reformer of my story, are successful in deluding the public for years. The expediency of honesty appeals to them until they think they have exhausted the generosity of the public and then they turn crooks, and retire with a fortune.

What society needs is a clearer perception of the moral law. Meanwhile, if Diogenes were out with his lantern and appealed to me for advice, I should suggest that he keep away from Montgomery, Sansome and Battery streets, and follow the gangs of street-sweepers.

By His Own Petard

WRITTEN IN THE HOPE THAT TWO WISE MEN MAY BE TAUGHT THE FOLLY OF THEIR WISDOM.

BY THE WANDERER.

I hope it is not yet too late for the military expert of the Argonaut to learn that he doesn't know much about the war in the Far East; and something less, perhaps, about the war correspondents who are giving him the information on which he bases his lack of knowledge.

Will you kindly inform this military person that while he may be a very competent strategist and a tactician at whose feet Marshal Oyama and General Kuropatkin might sit with profit, he is still egregiously ignorant when he attempts to tell his readers where the battles were fought. If he had been giving the war correspondents advice and admonition concerning the futility of sending despatches from the battlefield of Russian Hill he would not write the name of the place "Russianhill Hill." He would avoid this tautology because he knows all about Russian Hill; but having no knowledge whatever of Chinese localities or Chinese nomenclature he writes of Nanshan Hill, which is the same as if he had written "Russian hill Hill." Nanshan is merely "South Hill" if transliterated into Argonaut English.

And the joke of it is that this crass ignorance is used as one of the weapons of the editorial warrior to slay the reputations of the war correspondents!

Nanshan Hill!

What a guffaw went round when I called the attention of some of these correspondents to the article in the stray number of the Argonaut that had accidentally fallen into my hands!

Then we proceeded to vivisection that military expert in this fashion:

"I observe," said one of the newspaper men, "that this wise critic spells the name of Feng-huang-cheng 'Fung Wang Cheng.' I wonder what map he is using?"

"And why spell Feng-huang-cheng 'Fung Wang Cheng,' when he spells Chiulien-cheng with two hyphens?" another wondered.

"And why does he make Shanghai all one word?" a third asked.

"I suppose he would tell the readers of the Argonaut that there are places here called 'New Chwang,' 'Shan Hai Kwan,' or 'Ta Shih Kiao,'" said the Oldest Campaigner.

"Oh, no," answered the Best Seller of the "literary set," "for I see that he spells 'Pingyang' all right."

"He didn't spell it," retorted the Rough Rider. "He copied that name from the Manila Sun."

"Besides, it's wrong," the Missionary declared; "Pingyang should be spelled with a hyphen."

"Then why don't we spell Peking and Chefoo with hyphens?" queried the ex-dramatic critic sarcastically.

"Because such wild asses as this Argonaut idiot have corrupted the orthography of those towns," sneered the Man Who Was Managing Editor.

"Anyway, the blithering fool takes our 'fakes' for facts when it suits him," was the consolatory rejoinder of the Tien-tsin Looter.

"Are there no maps of Asia on sale in San Francisco?" inquired the Escape from Port Arthur.

"And is it possible that Mr. Carnegie has neglected to supply his library with at least one copy of Playfair's Geographical Dictionary of China?" asked the Friend of Kuroki.

Thus the war correspondents roasted the critic who had roasted them.

But seriously, is it fair to the readers of the Argonaut, whose cock-suredness on all things is as insufferable as that of the Colonial Englishman, that they should be so grossly misinformed by an editorial ignoramus?

The military editor of the Argonaut has evidently presumed on the intelligence of his readers. If in any instance he has insulted that intelligence he has probably acted with the deliberation that comes of familiar acquaintance with the mental capacity of those who depend upon him for their opinions.

Speaking of the military editor of the Argonaut reminds me of William Ellery Curtis.

Never heard of him!

IMPERIAL
STUDIO
744 Market St.
San Francisco - Cal.

THE IMPERIAL STUDIO'S PARCHMENT PROOFS

Are the swellest thing the Photographer's art has yet produced. There are plenty of imitations. The real thing is a little more expensive, but it's worth the difference.

DRS. A. C. MOORE & B. P. SHEPHERD OSTEOPATHISTS

Now Located at 204 SUTTER ST., Cor. Kearny

Will REMOVE, September 1st, to

ALTA BUILDING, S. E. Cor. Kearny and Bush Sts.

Thus you argue yourself unknown. Why, William Ellery Curtis, special correspondent of the Chicago Record and the Washington Star, is one of the brightest lights in the firmament of modern journalism. In the Far East he is a cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night. He is known (on his own introduction) in all the newspaper offices of the Asiatic littoral from anywhere East of Suez to everywhere south of Saghalien. It is his boast that he has written special correspondence to fill a proof slip long enough to encircle the globe three times.

Think of that!

Seventy-five thousand miles of William Ellery Curtis! And he hopes, if he is spared, to write as much more.

He visited the Philippines and the result of that two weeks' sojourn was eight letters on the history, habits, religions, politics, aspirations, ethnology, paleontology, geology, archaeology, commerce and gossip of the islands. To be sure the bulk of this stuff was ancient and stale and consequently unprofitable to the readers of the Record and the Star, but what shall it profit the owners of those newspapers if they gain the whole of what a Curtis may dig out of musty archives and lose the price of the hire of their correspondent?

I have seen William Ellery Curtis at work and I assure you that the Christian at Work wasn't a circumstance to

William Ellery Curtis. His method was as follows:

"But, my dear Consul, isn't it a fact that the trade of America is increasing by leaps and bounds in the Orient?"

"I can't say that as far as my observation extends such is really the fact."

"It is certainly increasing?"

"That may be, but I haven't the data to prove that it is."

"Have you any data?"

"I have."

"Will you let me use it?"

"With pleasure."

That night the typewriter of William Ellery Curtis worked overtime to show from an interview with Consul Bragg or McWade that the commerce of the United States with the Orient is "increasing by leaps and bounds."

That was the opinion of William Ellery Curtis and there was no valid reason why it should conflict with the opinion of a mere consul on the spot.

I am astonished that you have not heard of William Ellery Curtis. He is as well known in Shanghai and Hong Kong as is Frank G. Carpenter. But Carpenter is probably the more vivacious writer of the two.

Tokio, July 23.

Just a Mood

BY HARRY COWELL.

Who is there who has not repeated to himself again and again some well-known word, or common, everyday speech, until it has come to sound strangely foreign and unfamiliar, almost grotesque, altogether meaningless, no more than a nonsense word, a quaint neologism such as children make use of in their play, one with "runcible," "bong," and the like? Lately, for instance, as I chanced upon the word "church," it went to pieces in this way under my eyes. As I read, it caught my attention as though it had undergone a surprising change since last I had seen it. The word was, so to speak, misspelled. To put it to rights, I repeated it a couple of times, which was, of course, fatal. Finally, "ch" at either end, with "ur" in the middle was but a mockery to the eyes, a noise in the ears, stood for nothing, seemed monstrously absurd.

At times, too, for no assignable reason, the whole world goes suddenly insane, becomes, as it were, a world thus reiterated out of all semblance to its normal self. Unaccountably strange the voice of our beloved, the face of our friend, the frolics of our children. Things happen as in a dream—incongruities all. There is nothing relevant nor real. The old wind is weird and out of place in the universe, and droll the familiar aspect of the heavens. The stars are an absurdity to smile at, and the moon a madness. And the serious way in which the various gnomes around us take themselves is laughable in the extreme. The curious felicities of creation which none can contemplate without a just wonder—felicities which Evolution in no wise explains away; which, on the contrary, cause even the most scientific in their off moments to fall back upon the doctrine of design—are now forgotten and we find ourselves surrounded by all sorts of ineptitudes. While the mood lasts things refuse to hold together on any theory whatever. In our happier moods—whether we then see more clearly or are blinded a bit I know not—in our happier moods this earth of ours seems beautifully sane and assuringly substantial. Now it is but the Bedlam of the solar system, wholly mindless and miserably insecure.

Or else, things, standing somewhat in their wonted relations, become dim as in gray dawn or purple dust of evening, and this most material planet is as the underworld of the dead, a shadow land peopled with shades, a phantasmagoria that came into being with our birth and must needs pass with us when we pass. The wraith that writes these insubstantial lines looked up but now from his work, and the walls of his think-shop, hung all over with lens-studies of dear faces and engravings of that "vasty inn," that famous roadhouse of the most traveled of all ways—walls through which the ghostly guest might pass his hand of nothingness at will. He had need to verify a quotation, but upon his much-abused Shakespeare (he would look up a passage in "The Tempest") seemed to lie a discomfiting dust, so that he feared to take the volume from the shelf lest, like the books occasionally found in old coffins, it crumble at a touch.

"Love," he said to himself, apropos of nothing, vaguely recalling an irony written by one of the authors (to specify which were an impertinence) on the flyleaf of a presentation copy of "The Kempton-Wace Letters"—"love: it is a great word; you'll find it in all the diction-

More useful than you suspect, and useful for more disorders than you suspect, very likely: Swedish massage and movements. Inquire of Lindstrom & Einarson, 406 Sutter Street.

STOP DRINKING

L. L. C. CO., Inc.

Absolutely Sure. Perfectly Harmless.
Pleasant to Take.
Private Cure. No Sanitarium.

50c Box Stops Drinking
$1.00 Box Keeps it Stopped
$2.00 Box Cures Forever

417 Hayward Bldg., San Francisco

aries." L-o-v-e, love; what a nice little noise it makes! Life and death are likewise great words, to be found likewise in all the dictionaries. L-i-f-e, life, d-e-a-t-h, death—do they, I wonder, spell things as different as most persons imagine? Do they spell realities at all? Does love? Are there any realities? (Here the aforesaid wraith goes to the window. Yes; there, to all appearance, in their usual places, are the houses of his home city, the bay, Goat Island, the spectre-like ships, Berkeley, Oakland, Alameda, Mount Diablo in the distance, the blue void above. The view, however, is not vivid but faint; beheld as it were by memory, not by the eyes.) All the words in all the dictionaries have, it seems, been reiterated so as to be now meaningless. The world has said the selfsame things over and over again: Life, love, death; life, love, death—how queer they sound and seem! Droll, aren't they, friend, thus repeated; and in the end equally nothing!

By the way, I have had brides come to me—lay confessor that I am; feeless doctor of advice which no one dreams of taking—with tears in their eyes, unanswerable questions on their lips, and the problem of satiety in their hearts. They had been reit—what am I saying? They had, as they assured me a dozen times or more, an impersonal, philosophical interest in the general problem of satiety; and the tears were for imaginary women (and men, of course) in sore perplexities. But I digress, do I not—unpardonably digress? Moreover, am not I too vowed to secrecy, or as good as vowed? How irrelevant it makes one, to be sure, to write in this vein! And what possible interest could any reader have in the philosophical interests of a bride? One thing certain: I will not repeat a word of what any bride has said to me in my capacity of lay confessor. Repeated, it would no doubt begin by sounding a little strange, and reiterated, end in utter nonsense of God knows where.

By this time, the matter-of-fact reader, if he have not already given up in disgust, will have asked himself not once nor twice what in the world I am driving at. For his part, he can make neither head nor tail of the whole thing. For the life of him he cannot gather a single definite idea from this waste of words; etc., etc. For my part, I am heartily glad to hear it. Were it otherwise, and I had been writing all to no purpose. For what I am driving at is not to convey one or more definite ideas, but to cause him to share with me as far as possible a mood wherein the world is as a familiar word mouthed over into strangeness, into mere sound and fury, signifying nothing. If by means of these, my meanderings, I have haply succeeded in occasioning in Mr. M.-of-F.'s shrewd mind a doubt of my own sanity, great indeed has been my success. I am too modest, however, to believe that for a flattering moment my good friend seriously considered me a trifle unbalanced. Were I to meet him tomorrow, he would most certainly be at considerable pains to convince me that he had found me unusually logical, lucid and everything else as far removed as you please from alienation. The very thought of him, you see, brings me back at once to my senses. How like, after all, is life to this little essay: it begins in a mad mood, makes a ridiculous digression or two, and winds up inappropriately enough, malapertly even, in the most matter-of-fact way in the world.

The Saunterer

Chasing The Toga

The toga-chasing contest continues to engross the attention of leading Republican politicians. Frank Flint, the young Los Angeles lawyer who shied his castor into the ring about the time that it seemed as though Bard and Oxnard had the field to themselves, and who is now considerably in the lead, came to town the other day to begin aggressive work in the North. He was cordially received by the leaders of the organization, with all of whom he is friendly, but of course they will not get behind him unless he is to decide upon as the organization candidate. Flint is what is known as a good "mixer" and he has many friends, but he is under so many obligations to the organization that in the event of its becoming expedient to give the senatorship to some one else he will not attempt to smash the program. Meanwhile Senator Bard is contributing to the gayety of the politicians by hurling defiance at the railroad and the whole organization. His forces have been so completely routed that he has no more chance of re-election than I have of reaching the North Pole, and I am not thinking of taking an Arctic trip. But he is still defiant, and in an open letter he has made the somewhat paradoxical statement that he is not a candidate for re-election but that he cannot withdraw from the contest because Riverside pledged its Assemblymen for him.

Belated Recognition of Pippy

It is soon to be demonstrated that membership in the Union League Club is not a bar to political advancement.

Colonel George Pippy, most active of all the Union-League colonels, is to become a Presidential elector. For many years Pippy has been eager to serve his country in some capacity more exalted than that of gubernatorial staff colonel. Though very successful as an ornamental hero he longed for other distinctions. He has been variously mentioned as an aspirant for a congressional nomination, as available mayoralty timber, and as eligible for delegate to the National convention. So frequently did he see his fond hopes decay that his friends suggested that perhaps he was tottering under the weight of the Union League Club hoodoo. But it is soon to be demonstrated that the suggestion was unwarranted. However the recognition which he is to be accorded has been a long time coming, for he has long been identified with Republican activities, especially in the banquet-room.

Where They Never Do Politics

The Union League Club, by the way, is an extraordinary institution. It is the swagger Republican organization of the Pacific Coast. It includes among its members all the leading Republican statesmen and most influential Republican politicians of California. It is purely political

G. M. ROY
REGISTERED OPTICIAN
 Glasses scientifically fitted
 at reasonable prices
 211 KEARNY ST. Phone Black 4212

in character, and all the big party pow-wows at which distinguished visitors are lionized, are pulled off under its auspices. Yet it is never taken into consideration when party patronage is to be distributed. It cuts no ice in the councils of the party. The men that make the slates and formulate the programs conduct most of their business in the Palm room of the Palace Hotel, and they never think of seeking the seclusion of the club, though its apartments are within easy access. I hear that when the club moves into its new quarters there will be a revival of interest, and that there is already a movement on foot to take the control of the organization away from the gallant colonels who have long held sway over the deserted rooms.

The Bohemian Club Jinks

Even the men who have sired previous Jinks—and each man always modestly prefers his own to any other—admit that the recent Jinks of the Bohemian Club came very near touching high water mark for appropriateness and general beauty, though not nearly as much money was spent as in previous years. There was an exceedingly large attendance of club members and visitors—about three hundred and fifty men in camp. In this gathering was a large number of new members—University presidents and professors who represent the recent disaffection in the University Club and who had never before witnessed a Jinks. They had heard it was a drinking bout. They found deep thinking rather than deep drinking, and having come to read and run, if necessary, they looked and stayed, and were loud in their acclaim. Among the distinguished new members were President Benjamin Ide Wheeler, Professors Bernard Moses of "California" and Stanley Stillman of Stanford, and they had, as their guests, Professors Loeb and Arrhenius and a half dozen other representatives of the late, lamented summer school.

A Beautiful Spectacle

The High Jinks of the Hamadryads was a beautiful spectacle. George Lyon looked after the staging and his artistic effects were simply but wonderfully produced. On each redwood tree from which a Hamadryad was to appear was a canvas box with a practical door, so deftly painted to match the bark that the contrivances, even by daylight, were invisible. Judge of the effect by night under the calcium. When the God of Care knocked at the trees, these doors swung open and one Hamadryad after another made his appearance. A very artistic bit of stage business was done by the first Hamadryad, Charles K. Field. When he appeared he was nothing but a knot of clothes, for he was supposed to have been asleep for years. Gradually he unfolded and threw his arms aloft, amidst the shouts of the delighted spectators. The tree nymphs and the large chorus—each one supposed to be the inhabitant of a tree—were garbed alike in brown tights over which long green shirts torn in strips fell like a mantle of leaves, with more leaves from the head. The effect was uniquely beautiful. A great novelty was the appearance of two tiny girls, clad like the other tree-inhabitants, and representing the spirits of saplings. The Cremation of Care was probably the best in the history of the club and the funeral oration of John McNaught was undoubtedly the finest. It was courtly, polished and oratorical, quite a contrast to Peixotto's sophomoric effort of last year.

The Star Hair Remedy—best of all tonics and restoratives. Stops falling hair, cures dandruff, restores color. Not a dye. At druggists and hair-dressers. Accept no substitute. Star Remedy Co., 1338 Polk street. Telephone Sutter 31.

Dinner and Dedication

The dinner which precedes the Jinks is always one of the events of the year. This year it was no exception. Vice-president Hall presided ably and many short and pithy speeches were made. Telegrams and cablegrams from all over the world from absent Bohemians, not unmindful of the great annual event, were read. Among these was a letter cabled from London by President Phelan. The affair was as jolly as a wedding breakfast. The housewarming of the new club house was most informal. David Bush presided and the affair took on the complexion of a smoker and beer-bust. There were many pipes and steins and only an informal attempt at speech-making.

The Low Jinks

After the midnight supper came the Low Jinks, which was extremely funny. The fine music for the High Jinks had been led by the composer, W. J. McCoy, and the orchestra this year was much larger and finer than ever before. Paul Steindorff was excused by the Tivoli for one night and led the music for the Low Jinks, which was composed of selections from new and popular songs. The hit of the Low Jinks was the topical song written by Charlie Field, on the theme "Everybody's Awfully Good to Me, Don't Cher Know?" The stanzas were capital and Mr. Field sang them well. He was a thing of beauty in white with a blonde wig and he took the part of the Angel of the Show. The performers in the Low Jinks were proclaimed: The Inimitable Itinerants on tour in Vaudeville, vivid and voluptuous, with a wealth and magnificence of costuming and accessories never before achieved or attempted by any other road show in the dramatic history of this or any other age, sparkling, spontaneous, superb, every player a star and every star of the first magnitude. The performers were: Hamilton Fatter, owner and manager of the show, an actor and singer second to none on the stage today, J. C. Wilson; Longworth Green, treasurer of the troupe and a polite comedian and distinguished interpreter of classic melodies, W. B. Hopkins; Richard Henry Irvingfield, greatest living exponent of the legitimate in dramatic art, H. A. Melvin; Professor Jingle, music master of the Itinerants, a most gifted vocalist, H. J. Maginnity; Little Sunshine, premiere danseuse of the aggregation, also its treasured mascot, W. H. Smith Jr.; A. Goode Thyng, a person with money and a taste for theatricals, Charles K. Field; Bill Barker,

Ruinart

The champagne of exquisite quality which fits the fancy of those who appreciate a contrast.

HILBERT MERCANTILE CO.
Pacific Coast Agents

V. W. GASKILL, Special Agent
SAN FRANCISCO

spieler and advance agent, Rufus P. Jennings; Sig. Roly Boly, the strongest man in the world, bar none, who challenges any and all in the audience to a test at weight-lifting or any other game, A. R. Hardin; Alfresco, the athlete, unbeaten and unbeatable, graceful, spectacular, and thrilling in his matchless feats of strength and skill, all executed without a net, Russell H. Cool; The Shadow, Noble Eaton; The Hostler, E. S. Simpson; The Singers, T. V. Bakewell, C. T. Wendell, C. H. Lamberton, J. S. Murdock, E. H. M'Candlish, B. M. Stice, M. M'Currie, and J. B. Melvin, and the world-wide wonder, the Scottish trio, Isidor M'Pherson, R. M. Hotaling, Wully Ferguson, C. K. Bonestell and Saunders M'Saunders, Gordon Ross.

Sire Simpson's Song

One of the lyrics, the words of which were written by E. S. Simpson, sire of the Low Jinks, and the music by Dr. H. J. Stewart, is as follows:

If things are coming wrong
And life seems overlong,
Why, run and tell your troubles to the owl.
If you're wholly out of cash and your credit's gone to smash,
Take a drink and charge it to the owl.
If you've missed the Oakland boat and your molars are afloat
You can go and hold a session with the owl.
If your family's out of town and your tongue is coated brown
You can go and lean your head against the owl.

Chorus.

For the owl is dumb but his hearing is acute;
He is everybody's friend and more than that, he's mute.
You may tell him all your sorrow, he'll forget it by tomorrow,
And the only cry he utters is a "hoot!" "hoot!"

Why spend your coin on shoes or on anything but booze?
"Why, indeed?" is the query of the owl.
Get your name upon the board for the wine you can't afford;
After while you can square it with the owl.
While the lunch crowd kicks and squeals,
Let us hoist the price of meals
And buy a little building for the owl.
Let the "deck-hands" sign the cards
For the artists and the bards
For the bar's a source of profit to the owl.

A hamadryad is a thing
That can neither act nor sing
According to the judgment of the owl.
Billy Irwin wrote the play and then traveled far away
To escape the criticism of the owl.
The verse of it is blank
And the sentiment is rank
And the motif seems immoral to the owl.
With a man in every tree
How about posterity?
Is a question that mystifies the owl.

The orchestral concert on Sunday morning which always follow the Jinks, was this year under the direction of that artistic dilettante, Joe Redding. The music from the last three Jinks, with a rendering of a summary of the lines by Richard Hotaling, which is scheduled for the Tivoli for the afternoon of September first, will be a delightful affair, interesting to all the wives and sweethearts and friends of Bohemia. It is rumored that a good many of the wives of prominent club men and participators in the Jinks were smuggled in among the trees this year, but they will be glad to hear the music of previous Jinks. Most of the tickets have been taken by members of the club and the proceeds will go toward the city club-house fund.

Joe and Jere

The two speeches of the jinks dinner were Joe Redding's and Jere Lynch's. Joe is always good and brilliant. His allusion to the people coming to his tent at three in the morning stumbling over Greek roots, when every other tree in the grove was ornamented with a Greek sign, was capital. Jere Lynch's address will be long remembered in the club. When he arose to speak, the clubmen greeted him with the song "The Girl from Maxim's." He knew he was in a box and so did everybody else, and he extricated himself in a marvelous manner. When he said that he had always been told that it was better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all, but that in his opinion it depended upon whether the poets or the press described the event, pandemonium reigned. He had won, and the balance of his speech, though good, was not listened to. The Don Juan, however, will probably be more discreet "next time."

"What is President Roosevelt doing nowadays?"

"He's taking a strenuous rest, and if he doesn't watch out the unusual strain on his nerves will kill him."

Going Back To The Stage

Camille D'Arville is once more to return to the stage. When she appeared here some months ago, in "The Highwayman" it was said that she had grown weary of the dull monotony of Oakland, and returned to the footlights to drive away the blues. At the close of that brief Tivoli engagement it was understood that she had forsworn the limelight forever, and intended to reconcile herself to the commonplaces of domestic life in a San Francisco apartment house. But within a week Henry Clay Barnabee has been quoted as saying that he would revive "Robin Hood" and that D'Arville would be in the cast. Since the collapse of the Bostonians Barnabee has gone into vaudeville in an operetta with Campbell Donald and Agnes Cain Brown, who was prima donna of the Bostonians when that famous organization disbanded. According to Barnabee Miss Brown and Mrs. Crellin will alternate as Maid Marian in the "Robin Hood" revival.

WM. WILLIAMS & SONS
(LTD.) OF ABERDEEN.

V V O
Scotch Whisky

Importers - MACONDRAY & CO.

Keeping Up The Bars

Some of the wealthy bachelors in society are thinking of organizing a dancing club for the winter season. They contemplate limiting the membership to one hundred and fifty, and inviting that many women. Some of the younger married men are interested in the project. I hear there is to be a great slashing of the invitational list of the assemblies this winter. The patronesses wish to make it the most exclusive of the dances. It is amusing to note the craving of our newly-rich for exclusiveness. There is a protest all along the line against letting down the bars, and yet from the personal experience of many now lolling in the precious inclosure they should know that the bars are of meagre utility. If they could not be climbed over and crawled under there would be no smart set in San Francisco.

The Strenuous Social Life

Mrs. Salisbury has decided to take apartments at the Palace hotel this winter. Her children persuaded her to do so as they thought that an establishment such as she kept up last winter was too much of a tax on her nerves. There has been some talk of the Fortnightly functions being perpetuated under the management of Mrs. Salisbury's daughters, Mrs. Keyes and Mrs. Boardman, but the husbands of these young matrons have interposed objections. They think there is too much notoriety and responsibility attached to the management of big social functions. Mr. Keyes, I hear, is especially emphatic in his objections. He has never cared much for the fashionable whirl. The patronesses of the local dancing clubs lead strenuous lives. They are always criticised severely for their invitational lists. Some people knock because their friends are not invited and some because people are asked who do not meet with their approval.

The Baron's "Two Hundred" Colony

Baron von Horst is soon to utilize his social pull in a commercial way. Some social leaders sell champagne but von Horst is going into the real estate business. His friends say that he is not actuated by pecuniary motives. He is a man of generous impulses as he demonstrated at the time that he pulled off the bachelors' ball just to give the ladies a treat. Now he is in sympathy with those fashionable folk who have been viewing with alarm the invasion of Burlingame by the nouveau riche on which I commented several months ago when Mose Gunst bought a country home down there. Baron von Horst has spent much time in Europe, and he has observed how the nobility are hedged in from the common herd, and he feels that San Francisco's aristocracy should have some retreat where they could solace themselves in their aloofness from the madding crowd. He has chosen an ideal spot on the Marin shore near Tiburon, and there he is to establish a fashionable colony, the most exclusive on the coast. The little burg is to be named after a celebrated Italian watering place, and villa lots are to be sold to two hundred people. None others need apply. This colony will be known as the Two Hundred. Baron von Horst is a very enterprising young gentleman and he is full of European ideas which he is quite willing to share with the benighted swells of San Francisco. I have not been taken into his confidence and therefore I do not know that his exclusive colony scheme is in the nature of a vulgar real estate enterprise. I should prefer to regard the baron as an idealist or a philanthropist for the amelioration of the sorrowful condition of the rich. He has not divulged his plans but I presume that his swagger settlement is to be reached by a drawbridge over a very broad and deep moat.

"Am I asking too much," asked the deprecatory purchaser of stamps, "in desiring you to weigh this parcel?"

"Not at all, ma'am," answered the drug-clerk, "most women that buy stamps expect me to lick them for them."

Californian Writers in the East

Word comes to me from New York that Bertha Smith and Sarah Comstock, formerly of the Call's Sunday department, are both on the road to fame and fortune. With no pull and only their ambition and energy to back them up, these clever young women set out for the great metropolis some months ago. Miss Comstock is now working regularly for McClure's and Miss Smith had two stories in that magazine this summer, for which she was so well paid that she need not fear the wolf at the door for many a moon. She has also sold stories to other magazines. Richard K. Culver, also formerly with the Call, and one of the best cartoonists of the West, has left the Los Angeles Herald, on which he has been working for three years, to accept a position with the Baltimore American. Culver is a Stanford frat. man. S. W. Gillihan, of "off again, Finnigan" fame, is another former Herald man now of the American.

Our Browning Cult

The Browning Club, the most fashionable of our literary clubs, has mapped out some interesting plans for the winter. They have arranged to give several Browning plays to which those without the sacred circle will be bidden. The first play to be given is "In a Balcony," which Mrs. Le Moyne with the assistance of Eleanor Robson and

DEAFNESS

Those troubled with deafness are cordially invited to demonstrations of the MASSACON and ACOUSTICON at the offices of the

HUTCHISON ACOUSTIC COMPANY

W. B. EGAN, Pacific Coast Agent Phone Priv. Ex. 216
417-418 Starr-King Bldg., 121 Geary St., San Francisco

Strathmill
Scotch Whisky

an aged whisky distilled
from barley malt—not corn
CROWN DISTILLERIES CO.
GENERAL AGENTS

Otis Skinner produced with such success in the Eastern cities. The local cast will be composed of Miss Grace Llewellyn Jones and Lionel Lowdner, the English actor. Later the club expects to give "Colombes' Birthday" and "Strofford." The Browning Club has exquisitely furnished rooms for its meetings. One of the leading members of the club has such a fierce attack of the Browning mania that she has taught her two children, aged five and seven respectively, to recite for company long passages from "Pippa Passes" and "Sardello." When her children were born she insisted on naming them after some Browning hero and heroine, but her husband objected so strenuously that she had to give in.

For the Finishing Touch

Mrs. Mayo Newhall leaves in a few days for a trip East to place her young daughter in some fashionable boarding school, probably Miss Ely's, which is considered the swellest finishing school in the country. The King girls attended that school as did also their friend, Miss Herrick. The Newhalls have been spending the summer at Burlingame, where Miss Margaret has become a great favorite. The Edwin Newhalls have returned to the city from Blithedale. They have broken the dullness of the summer season here by their frequent yachting parties.

Mrs. Horace Davis expects to leave for Europe some time the early part of September to be gone a year or more. Mr. and Mrs. Norris Davis will occupy their house in Gough street during her sojourn abroad. Mrs. Norris Davis has been taking on considerable flesh of late and is now the typical grande dame.

Josaphare's Novel Wedding

Lionel Josaphare, poet and philosopher, who recently joined the rapidly growing colony of Californian litterateurs in New York's broader field of endeavor, is evidently prospering, for he has taken unto himself a wife. He has written me of his marriage in characteristic vein:

Married to Miss Maud Josephine Coan of San Francisco. Done at Homecrest Presbyterian church, Long Island. It was the second wedding in the history of the little church, and most of the villagers, about twenty-two, although we knew none of them, attended. Regular old-fashioned country wedding; games on lawn; dancing in barn; lone fiddler seventy years old. Pessimistic man at King's Highway railway station where I was residing, said real estate man at Homecrest wanted to boom the place and responsible for demonstration.

He Will Be Missed

Count Grimani is going to China, I hear. The Count will be missed for he has been quite a social lion, and has been enjoying the social booming of Mrs. Eleanor Martin, Mrs. Parrott and Mrs. Hyde-Smith. Our society girls have never been able to make any impression on him, and he seemed to have a horror of having his name linked with any of them. However he is a great favorite in our most exclusive sets. Among his own countrymen he has never been very popular. They consider him too aristocratic and too exclusive.

MILLS & HAGBOM TAILORS

EMIL W. HAGBOM, formerly with James W. Bell Son & Co., New York
EDWARD MILLS, late of Bullock & Jones

PHELAN BUILDING, Rooms 1, 2, 3

Phone Main 5387

She Amazes Her Swagger Friends

All Newport is reported to be amazed at the devotion of Mrs. Peter Martin to her infant son. It is a unique mother who is ever seen in public with her babe in Newport but Mrs. Martin frequently wheels her baby carriage down Bellevue avenue, and sometimes she is seen playing with the youngster on the lawn. Her friends consider her eccentric, and marvel at the change the advent of the baby has made in gay and frivolous Lily Oelrichs. Babies are regarded as incumbrances in Newport, and are always left to the care of nurses. It is considered bourgeois for a mother to give public exhibitions of maternal affection.

The Findley-Gardiner Wedding

Though the marriage of Edith Findley and George Gardiner was celebrated in Sausalito, it was decidedly the social event of last week. The Findleys, who are acknowledged to be the foremost family in exclusive Sausalito, have hosts of friends in San Francisco, which was for years their home. Therefore little Christ church was packed to the doors, and those who came late had to stay outside. The bride's gown was one of the most beautiful ever seen here. It was of white crepe de chine, trimmed with rare old point, a family heirloom. The happy pair thought they were going to deceive every one as to where they were to spend their treacle-moon. They departed on a tug that steamed for Belvedere, Sausalito's rival. No sooner did they arrive at the hotel than they found themselves surrounded by their friends who were spending the summer there. News of their intention had preceded them, and they found their rooms turned upside down and hilarity reigning. Deciding that Belvedere was no place for them, they immediately secured another tug and came to town. Later they went to Sonoma county, where the Will Ashes had turned over their country home to them for the lune de miel.

Reckless Driscoll

Tom Driscoll, who was so severely injured in a polo match last year, is so far recovered that he is able to indulge again in his favorite sport. He is in Santa Barbara and has been playing polo with renewed enthusiasm since his recovery. Driscoll is Mr. Devil-May-Care when on horseback and his recklessness gives his friends considerable cause for worry. They expect to see him killed every time he mounts a pony for a match.

NEW YORK. Telephone Call 3177 Broad.	SAN FRANCISCO. Telephone Call Main 3070.
E. F. HUTTON &amp; CO.
Bankers and Brokers
MEMBERS NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE. NEW YORK COTTON EXCHANGE. NEW YORK COFFEE EXCHANGE. CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE.
Stocks, Bonds, Cotton, Coffee, Grain, Provisions
RICHARD E. MULCAHY, Manager San Francisco
490 CALIFORNIA STREET SAN FRANCISCO	33-35 NEW STREET NEW YORK

"Candida's" Producer

Arnold Daly, the young Irishman who leaped into fame over the head of George Bernard Shaw, is as interesting off the stage as on. In discussing "Candida" the other day, he said, "For five years I had begged every manager in New York to produce this play. I had begged every leading actress in the country to play the title role. But no, they couldn't see it. What right had I to judge of the value of a play? was the opinion of a good many managers. Men I worked for some years ago for five dollars a week assumed that because of that I had no brains, had no right to express an opinion, couldn't be a judge of anything, didn't know the value of anything. They didn't know that in those very five-dollar-a-week days I used to sit back in their offices, open-mouthed, in wonder at the fact that successful managers slaughtered the Queen's English with such intelligent remarks as: 'I done it' and 'I always knowed it would succeed.'"

Abhors The "Intellectual Element"

In the foyer of the Columbia Monday night, I heard several men discussing the "intellectual drama." It would probably interest them to hear Daly dilating on that subject. "'Candida' isn't a success because it's intellectual," says Daly. "It's a success because it's a great play. If there's one thing I've become weary of, it's the so-called intellectual element. Most of the talk about intellectual drama is rot. One of my greatest regrets when I first announced 'Candida' was the impression that prevailed that I was out to please a cult of long-haired men and short-haired women. Those people do not make the success of the theatre. They do a lot of talking but it's all talk and ends in talk. 'Candida' succeeded because it is a great play. I think it is the greatest play I ever read. I think Shaw is as big as Ibsen." Mr. Daly has been condemned for his violent theatrical manner in "Candida," but the fact is that he follows accurately the author's minute stage direction given in the book. Marchbanks is described in the book as "writhing in anger," as "collapsing into a seat," as "starting up in wildest consternation," all of which he does, even to emitting "a heartbreaking wail" when he hears that Candida has been blacking the stove. He says, "I have acted every one of Mr. Shaw's directions to the letter, as far as I am able, with one exception, and that is where Marchbanks goes 'trotting' across the stage to the fireplace. I'm too heavy to 'trot' as Shaw meant."

A Mat

Before Jack Baird went to Guatemala, he was a guest one evening at a dinner where he was placed between Mrs. Eleanor Martin and Jennie Crocker. His conversational muse deserted him, and someone remarked:

"Jack Baird is not talking tonight."

And a club wit who was also among the guests returned:

"How can he? He is seated between seventy millions and seventy years, and she's asleep."

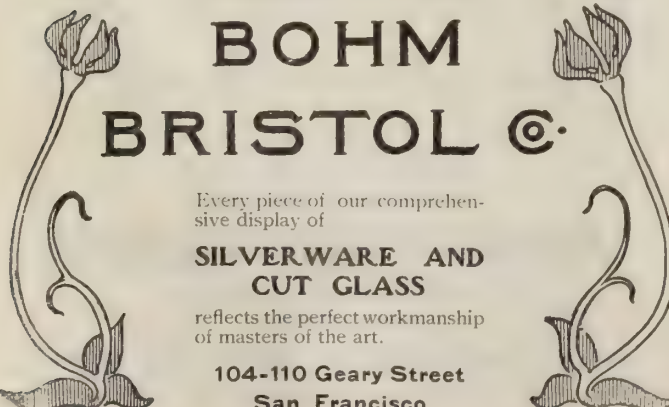

Mr. and Mrs. Will Ashe will spend the winter in town, and are looking for a house where they may deposit their household gods during the gay season.

Death Spoils the Sharon Romance

Mrs. Florence Sharon Allen is coming back to her girlhood home with her brood of pretty children. The death of her husband in the East was a serious blow to her for the marriage of Florence Sharon and Peter Allen was a rare love match. She was very young, rich, and adorably pretty. The representatives of the Oakland branch of the Sharon family have never made any display of their wealth and have selected their friends for qualities not commercially rated. Among those who had a warm welcome in the Sharon home was Peter Allen, the violin teacher. He was a handsome man, slightly lame, but with a splendid physique and a charm of manner that won cultured regard everywhere. Almost from the time that Florence Sharon was old enough to hold a bow he had given her violin lessons and when she grew to womanhood Cupid took a hand at the bow himself. After the wedding, which was a simple church affair, the violinist took his bride to Seattle and their studio was the place where all the artists and musicians of the Northwest foregathered. It was while visiting the Roycrofters at East Aurora that Mr. Allen was suddenly taken ill and died.

Ethel Dorn Whitlock's Choice

Judge Dorn still nurses parental ire against the young medico who dared to marry his pretty and accomplished daughter. The romance and marriage of Ethel Dorn and Walter Whitlock was hand embroidered by the artists on the daily papers, so there is no need for further

BOHM
BRISTOL CO.

Every piece of our comprehensive display of
SILVERWARE AND CUT GLASS
reflects the perfect workmanship of masters of the art.

104-110 Geary Street
San Francisco

I HAVE A
BEER OF QUALITY

IT'S Rainier
BEER

JOHN RAPP & SON, Agts., S. F.
Distributors in every town on the coast

exploiting this latest prank of Cupid. But the last time the story was dressed in printer's caps for Mr. and Mrs. Public to discuss with coffee and rolls the bride was said to be living under her father's roof and the impetuous young husband biding at his fraternity house and incidentally attending lectures at Cooper Medical College—for he is still a physician in embryo. But now the young folks are "housekeeping." Judge Dorn offered his daughter her choice between a tour of the world as a tonic for lovesickness and facing the world with her impecunious young husband. She chose the latter, and they are now living in a two-by-four apartment on the proverbial bread and cheese and kisses. Judge Dorn was determined to make his daughter acknowledge that she had married in undue haste and failing to bring her to this viewpoint he is playing the adamant role of the injured papa. It is said that young Whitlock and his wife had to practically elope a second time, so closely was Ethel Dorn Whitlock guarded in her father's home. But she managed to escape the watchful eye and steal away to the modest home her husband had prepared for her.

Judge Dorn's Gilded Marriage

Judge Dorn has always been an ambitious man and his own marriage with Miss de la Montanya a year or two ago gilded his affairs beyond the hopes of most middle-aged men with mature families. However Jennie de la Montanya proved a very agreeable step-mamma to the two pretty Dorn girls and it was said that she sympathized with Ethel in her affair with young Demorest. Demorest was a Chilean, reputed a rich young eligible, and a member of the swellest fraternity at the University of California. During his college career he was devoted to Ethel Dorn and it was popularly supposed that he was engaged to that dashing co-ed. There is no doubt that at one time Miss Dorn was interested in Demorest, but it was learned that the story of his wealth was exaggerated, and Papa Dorn frowned down the affair. Ethel Dorn went to Merced to visit the Whitlocks and the handsome young son of the household caught her heart on the rebound and her interest in Demorest flickered out. The story of how she returned to her father's home and kept the secret of her marriage; of his wrath when the news was broken to him and his threat to break the match or cut her off without a penny, has been warmed over and served several times. Dr. Whitlock Sr. is not a man of means and he has not been able to more than modestly finance his son through college, but the young pair are courageous and will make their own way in the world without any of the De la Montanya ducats to pay the cost of smoothing out the creases.

Rise of the Dorns

The Dorns are all self-made men themselves, but like most self-made men they are not in love with their own make-up when it is presented to them in the shape of a son-in-law who has to hew his own way out of the woods.

While Dorn was a struggling lawyer in Salinas his two younger brothers, Marcus Aurelius Dorn and D. Socrates Dorn, worked their way nobly through the university. They built a cabin near the head of Strawberry creek and "bached" there on beans and bacon. After they were graduated they established a law practice in this city and were very successful. They became active in politics and manipulated conventions. Dick McDonald, who wanted to be Governor, turned the legal business of the Pacific and People's banks over to them, and they were in at the scandalous finish of those institutions. D. S. Dorn became the attorney of the De la Montanya widow, and he has managed all her affairs and those of the family. He is now one of the most prosperous attorneys in San Francisco. Meanwhile the brother in Salinas drifted into a judgeship and served with distinction on the bench. Not long ago he shifted his residence to this city and married the daughter of his brother's wealthy client.

Luncheons for Charity

The lady managers of the Crocker Old People's Home are going to give a series of luncheons for the benefit of that institution on September fifth, sixth and seventh, at 207 and 211 Grant avenue. Their purpose is to raise a fund for the rebuilding of the structure known as the Crocker Home, which was recently damaged by fire. Never before have they appealed to the public for assistance. The home was not, as some people imagine, endowed by the Crockers, but they contribute to its support. No tickets are to be sold for the luncheons, but it is hoped that they will be liberally patronized. The members of the Board of Directors will attend to the service. The officers are: Mrs. E. A. Bresse, president; Mrs. C. C. Wadsworth, vice-president; Mrs. A. J. Watt, secretary; Mrs. William Dick, treasurer. Among the directors are, Mrs. W. Willis, Mrs. S. Wenban, Mrs. George A. Knight, Mrs. W. R. Shaw, Mrs. A. W. Scott, Mrs. Fred McWilliams and Mrs. William Watson.

High Grade Knitted Wear

FORM-FITTING UNDERWEAR

Made in Lisle, Linen, Wool or Silk

Fits the form perfectly, and gives great comfort to the body.
Made for both men and women.

LADIES' KNIT JACKETS

Beautiful patterns in pure worsted goods, made to order or from stock, as desired.

Men's and Boys' Sweaters and Jerseys

All pure worsted goods, in an infinite variety of patterns.

Bathing Suits

Gymnasium Suits

Athletic Supplies

Tennis Goods

J. J. Pfister

KNITTING CO.

60 GEARY ST.
San Francisco, Cal.

Catalogues freely furnished upon application

THE ONLY PLACE IN TOWN

For an Excellent Shampoo
Expert Manicuring and Good Hair Dressing

Facial Treatments and Scalp Treatments a Specialty

THE WALDORF HAIR STORE

241-243 Geary St. Phone James 4471

Rough Treatment of the Militia

When the joint mobilization of the regulars and the militiamen was projected, General MacArthur said that there would be no "play soldier" about it. Others said that the experiment would "make or break" the National Guard. Both statements have been proved to be true. There has certainly been no "play." It was a case of "drill, ye tarriers, drill," all the time. If there were ever an instance of gross misjudgment in the handling of men, it was in Camp Atascadero, where the sole object of the various problems seemed to be to try the strength and endurance of the troops to the utmost. They were subjected to wholly unnecessary ordeals, and the zeal and interest with which the camp opened quickly gave way to disgruntlement and disgust. General MacArthur was not to blame. It was the men responsible for the schedule of problems, chief among whom was Major W. P. Duvell, of the General Staff. Duvell seemed to think that he was the whole thing throughout. As chief umpire, he acted as though he thought he was a bigger man than General MacArthur himself and all his staff officers. Much hard feeling was created by his demeanor. As for the "make or break" prophecy, it is not unlikely that more "break" than "make" will result from the manoeuvres. National Guardsmen are human beings who voluntarily make personal sacrifices to be soldiers. They are not men who have to gain a livelihood by it. It is safe to say that not five per cent of the militiamen at Camp Atascadero learned anything of value to them while there. They were generally too tired and disgusted to learn anything.

An eloquent argument in favor of the canteen was furnished at Camp Atascadero. It is safe to say that if a canteen had been established there the general spirits of the hard-worked soldiers would have been raised.

The Hospitable Baron

Baron von Schroeder has made himself the hero of Atascadero. Although his adjoining ranch was made immune from invasion at the hands of the warring "Blues" and "Browns" during the manoeuvres of the past two weeks, the Baron has himself done a little invading of the most welcome kind. One particularly hot day, when the khaki-clad warriors were pretty thoroughly fatigued by their hard "hiking," the Baron had the thoughtfulness to send a wagon loaded with ice water, beer and sandwiches to the firing-line. His name has been blessed ever since.

Some Social Reminiscences

Admiral Watson, who is reported to have reached the age limit, has many friends in this city. Watson married into the Thornton family, the members of which were at one time leaders of the local haut ton. They were people of very pronounced Southern proclivities. The grandmother of the family was a Crittenden of Kentucky, sister of the famous John J. Crittenden, a loyal Union man throughout the war. Both young ladies of the family who were of marriageable age at the time of the war, married Union officers, Lizzie becoming the wife of Admiral Watson, and Ann Mary, of Lieutenant Todd. At a later period Gertie Thornton married Lieutenant, now Commander Glass, and dying a few years thereafter left him with a little daughter, who is soon to sustain family tradition by marrying an army officer in Manila. The Thorntons were for many years prominent in the affairs of St. John's Presbyterian church, of which Judge J. D. Thornton was a ruling elder. I recall that in those days a social feud grew out of a grand ball given by Mrs. Thornton Sr. at her home in Van Ness avenue. The ball was given to introduce the granddaughter of the head of the house to society, and large though the house was it was not large enough to receive all the friends of the family. The line had to be drawn somewhere and it was drawn at the church set, much to the indignation of the uninvited. The minister's younger son was among the invited but his fiance was overlooked.

One of the debutantes at that historic ball was pretty Margaret Thornton, who was once expected to figure in an international romance. Russian Consul Olovarovsky was infatuated with her, and wanted to make her his wife. He sought the permission of her mother to press his suit, but that lady turned him down, saying that she would not permit her daughter, still in her teens, to become the wife of a man old enough to be her grandfather. Margaret Thornton afterwards became the wife of Abbott Kinney of Los Angeles.

Bilger—It seems to me that gossip is increasing.

Gabsen—Not at all; it's the things people gossip about that are increasing.

Gossip from Los Angeles

Two grandsons of Franz Joseph of Austria are staying at the Angelus in Los Angeles, and matchmaking mammas, ignoring the fact that morganatic marriages give the one of non-royal birth no social position worth mentioning, are sitting up and taking notice. The beach resorts are being deserted in consequence, while the hotel where the royal youths are staying is high in favor. The young men are the Counts George and Howard Wartenberg and accompanied by a baron they are traveling for educational purposes. They are only nineteen and twenty years of age respectively, mere infants. They have just finished "doing" the St. Louis exposition, and Mexico, and will be in San Francisco probably before this item is on the press.

FAT FOLKS

I reduced my weight 70 pounds, bust 6 inches, waist 6 inches and hips 14 inches in a short time by a guaranteed harmless remedy without exercise or starving. I will tell you all about it. Enclose stamp. Address

MRS. E. S. RICHARDS,
226 E. 9th St., Riverside, Cal.

A good
glove for a dollar and a half
Centemer
200 Post Street

Mrs. "Jack" Johnston, Bernice Landers that was, is becoming quite a favorite in Los Angeles society. When she first went South after her marriage, the Los Angeles women whom she met thought her inclined to be patronizing, writes my correspondent, and neither Mrs. nor Miss Angelena will stand for that. But the impression wore off and now Mrs. Johnston is as popular in Los Angeles as she was in San Francisco. She likes Los Angeles, and instead of going to San Francisco this summer remained at home. This of course added to the favor in which she is held, for "like me, like my city" is the general feeling in the city of angels. "Jack" is very much in love with his wife, and she with him, and they are a happy pair. Mr. Johnston has grown quite stout and tips the scales now at nearly two hundred, but he does not seem to mind that, his good nature being on a par with his size.

When Lucy Goes To Paris

Lucy Banning, the divorced wife of millionaire John Bradbury of Los Angeles, has wearied of the tame diversions of the citrus belt, and has announced her intention of going to Paris. Synchronously with the announcement comes the report that Charles Hastings, the Sierra Madre millionaire, was about to take a trip to his native England. Hastings has been unremitting in his attentions to the fair Lucy, and his friends were confident that he would claim her as his bride. But it is said that the dashing grass-widow enjoys her liberty too much to think of sacrificing it again. However, Hastings is taking no chances, and when the pretty widow reaches Paris the devoted millionaire will not be far away.

The Parade of Wealth

Los Angeles, San Francisco and Oakland society were well represented at Santa Barbara, during the tennis tournament last week. One of the most attractive as well as interesting features was the display of wealth, in Parisian finery and handsome jewels, by some of the guests at the Hotel Potter. Mrs. "Charlie" Clark (nee Tobin) divided the honors for sumptuous ornamentation with Mrs. John Singleton of Los Angeles. They were the two most beautifully gowned women there. Each appeared daily at dinner in stunning gowns and jewels to match. Mrs. Clark, with a dainty pink chiffon wears a set of rare black pearls, one of which was a wedding gift from Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt Jr. Mrs. Isaac Requa of Oakland chaperoned a party of young folks at the ball given at the Potter last Saturday evening. Miss Marguerite and Marie Butters, the two attractive young daughters of Henry Butters, who will be among this season's debutantes, were of the party. The Butters family have been spending the summer at Santa Barbara, but will return to "Alta Vista," their Piedmont home, September first.

What the Rev. Baker Learned

When the Rev. Ernest E. Baker, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Oakland, returned to his charge last week from a vacation tour through the Eastern States, he brought with him a number of new ideas as to church affairs and Sunday-schools. One evening shortly after his return the reverend gentleman was sauntering down Thirteenth street, in Oakland. He was accosted by a prominent member of his flock, who, after shaking hands warmly with the genial preacher, said: "Of course you have come back to us full of renewed energy for doing the Lord's work, Brother Baker, and no doubt with many new ideas."

"Yes, yes," replied the man of God, enthusiastically, "plenty of new things in church work, and, let me tell you, I learned the dandiest stroke in billiards; I must go around to your house next week and show it to you."

"We are not quite up to the East in church matters," suggested the deacon, "but—"

"No," interrupted Dr. Baker, "and we are centuries behind in billiards and golf. It does one good to have the rust worn off though, and I shall do great work this winter."

An Historic Cup

Mary Barker of Oakland, who was married to Wallace Alexander a few days ago, has the proud distinction of owning the finest collection of engagement cups in Alameda county. One of the cups is an antique of exquisite coloring and graceful design. This is a cup with a history, for, according to the note that accompanied it, an ancestor of the donor received it as a gift from the luckless Queen Marie Antoinette just four hundred years ago. Some skeptical Oaklanders rushed to their histories, and since then they have been wondering how the unfortunate Marie managed to do it. They have absolute confidence in the veracity of the ancestors of the Oakland society lady.

The Picturesque Mrs. Mein

Oakland society is enjoying the sensational developments in the case of Mrs. Thomas Mein, widow of the great African miner and millionaire, who was robbed by a servant and who is now threatened with death if she does not cease the prosecution. Mrs. Mein is a picturesque figure in Oakland society. Her wardrobe is so magnificent and her gowns are so numerous, I am told, that she is easily the Queen of the "quality." She buys her costumes in Paris and they are ordered in twelve dozen lots. It is one of her customs to leave everything open to any member of

PIERCE-RODOLPH STORAGE CO. Inc.

STORAGE, MOVING, PACKING AND SHIPPING

WAREHOUSE: EDDY ST., near Fillmore

Specially built for the Storage of Household Furniture

OFFICE: POST AND POWELL STS.

Phone Private 571

S. KRAMER

Suits, Jackets and Outer Garments

Made to Order

LADIES' ARTISTIC TAILORING

Phone Black 3831

218 Powell St., San Francisco

her establishment, and to this is due the loss of trifles amounting in the aggregate to over one thousand dollars. Mrs. Mein is said to wear her evening gowns of "point lace and diamonds" just at "any old time when she happens to feel like it."

The Bruguieres in Newport

"The California Bruguieres are all of a sudden making a great splurge," says an Eastern paper, and immediately the news is wired to the San Francisco dailies. Mrs. Emil Bruguire Sr. has purchased a Newport cottage, and Newporters think that she has resolved to match her son Louis to a daughter of the Four Hundred. So doubtless we shall hear a great deal of the Bruguire social campaign in the near future. Already New Yorkers have been told through the public prints that the Bruguieres are descended from a noble Provencal house that wrote its name "de Bruguire." How delighted Papa Bruguire would be if he could be apprised of the progress his family is making. The gods of the late Emil Bruguire were the gods of swelldom and wealth. He was an ideal beau of his day. He was considered one of the handsomest men of local society and clubdom. His life was spent in flowery places, and the only bitterness that tinged it was due to the failure of his sons to marry wealth and social position. His own glorious success cast a halo of perfect satisfaction over a life undimmed by any untoward event till his eldest son Pedar made that much talked of marriage with Madeleine McKisick, who was cultured and of good family, but not a great heiress.

Some Family History

Bruguire started life here in Pedar Sather's bank. He came of good French stock, and notwithstanding his humble position he enjoyed the entree to local swelldom. He drew his prize in life when he married Josephine Sather, the daughter of his millionaire employer. She brought him the fortune that he used to gild his life and he used it without stint. When his son Pedar married Miss McKisick the old gentleman fumed with indignation. First he cut his son's allowance and then he cut his son's wife in public. When the young people separated Bruguire pere was elated. There was much gossip at the time, and to silence it Mrs. Bruguire Sr. procured a card to a tea at the Holbrooks and sent her there on the arms of her sons, Emil and Francis. Later young Mrs. Bruguire went on the stage and still later she was divorced. And now Pedar is the husband of Marian Andrews. Fortunately Bruguire pere did not live to witness the later marriages in the family, for he would no doubt have regarded all of them as mesalliances, owing to the humble stations of the ladies. Emil, of the musical soul, who composes music with both hands, married Miss Vesta Shortridge, and Francis married Lila Convere, a charming young actress. Louis takes after his father and may be depended upon to do nothing rash.

Mamma Bruguire Not a Climber

Although Mrs. Bruguire Sr. has acted as Louis's Mamma Domo all through his social campaign, she herself has slight inclination for social triumphs. But Louis has always been devoted to his mother and they are most companionable. So when he annexed himself to the Newport set she wandered after him, willy-nilly, but not until Louis could assure her that he had earned a place for her, for Mrs. Bruguire does not fancy "climbing." She is really one of the most lovable and amiable women in the older set and has humored her children at every twist of their inclinations. Despite her tact it is doubtful whether she will be able to open the portals of the Four Hundred to Mrs. Pedar Bruguire, who recently went to Newport. The latter is a very pretty woman—far and away prettier than most paper-vaunted society "beauties," but her social position before her marriage was hardly blue-bookish, though she mingled with nice people. Her husband disdains the fashionable herd, and if she has social aspirations she is not likely to receive much encouragement from him.

Flint Is Repentant

Tom Flint pleading to be taken into the fold is a sorry spectacle. But that is what the erstwhile gubernatorial aspirant has been doing, I am told. Tom has promised the bosses that he will behave himself, and be very demure and obedient if they will give him the nomination for Senator. He agreed some days ago to vote for the program candidate for the United States Senatorship after the first ballot. He said he wanted to cast his first ballot for Bard, but he was told that there would be only one ballot.

Wheeler's Sensational Talk

A review of President Wheeler's addresses to the students at the first university meeting of each college year will show that never before this term has he ventured to utter the sound, practical advice which is regrettably not out of place to the audience which faces him on these occasions. It may be that the president has won to such an extent the confidence of his students that he may make with impunity a forcible suggestion to the effect that a

The Guest Chamber

provided with a bottle of Pond's Extract, reflects the care of the hostess for the physical comfort of her guests.

A rub with

POND'S EXTRACT

after a bath is a tonic refreshment. For Complexion, Sunburn, Insect Bites, Chafing, Prickly Heat, Sore Muscles and Tired Body, nothing equals "The Old Family Doctor."

Sold in Ornate Sealed Bottles under Buff Wrapper

Accept No Substitute

TO LET

MR. H. B. PASMORE'S STUDIO

At 1424 Washington St., Near Hyde

Suite of three fine rooms, capable of seating 125 people, with flat of seven well lighted rooms and garden in the rear.

BALDWIN & HOWELL, 14 Post St.

daily bath is a physical and moral necessity; and that salacious habits of body or thought result in evil to the physical and mental well-being. Or it may be that the need of such a talk has finally forced it from the man who calls the university one great family. "Keep your body clean," says Wheeler. "Bathe daily. Washing the parts conveniently exposed to the weather is not a bath. Keep your mind clean. Unclean thoughts inevitably taint the mind. Dwelling upon them rots it to putrefaction. One of the commonest causes of insanity is unclean thinking. Sexual uncleanness opens the surest way to bodily decay and moral death. Of the substance of your daily thoughts will in time be shaped the ideals of your life. What your ideals are, that in time will you become. They will govern all your acts; and with the years they will come to peer out at your eyes, and debase or glorify your countenance."

Certainly President Wheeler shows in these utterances no trace of the shyness of which he has been accused, and still less of the lack of sincerity which made his tones ring hollow to the assemblies in the Harmon Gymnasium. When he leaves his general and rather indefinite lines of advice to intrants, his broad truisms concerning life and conduct show that he has the courage of his convictions to an admirable degree. And that they are convictions may be inferred from certain whispers coming from the direction of the Harmon Gymnasium and Hearst hall. Some years ago a student of prominence for scholarship and equal prominence for physical uncleanness, was presented with a cake of soap at class day exercises in the presence of seven thousand people. And the feeling was so strong against this indecent expose, that the audience hissed. That is why it is whispered by those who have to deal with the physical well-being of the students that many of the men and women who attend the university need advice and training in the matter of personal cleanliness. It is a thing they have not dared to say aloud. And yet it is a thing which, for the moral effect on those who need it, should be said, not only aloud but also forcibly.

"How did he come to marry her?"
"Just through gallantry."

Discord To Continue

With the assistance of the Republican press and the backing of some deluded cow-path publications, Gavin McNab has succeeded in retaining his hold on the Democratic machine. Now it remains to be seen whether the gang of party-workers will succeed in working up any enthusiasm. The Republican papers that support McNab in his rule or ruin policy are not likely to boost Democratic candidates. The party is now in a badly demoralized condition, and it will be a long time recovering from the effects of the present disaffection. The job-chasers who stuck to McNab during the fight for reorganization will no doubt be given the recognition they desire, but in view of the apathy that exists recognition from the boss is about all that they will get.

ABOUT September First, we will remove to the new and commodious store, 139 MASON ST., near Ellis. A select stock of Groceries and Delicatessen will be added to our present line of Wines and Liquors ♣ ♣ ♣ ♣ ♣ ♣

RATHJEN COMPANY

Fire of Life, known for years as the most remarkable remedy for the cure of

RHEUMATISM

A trial of this remedy will at once show its great merit as a rheumatic cure.

ROWELL & BROWN
32 Turk St., S. F.

Artistic Interiors Designed and Decorated

Ideas and Estimates furnished for all classes of
Decorative Work

L. TOZER & SON

762-764 Mission St.

San Francisco, Cal.

Leslie Sterilized Salt

For the Table Kitchen or Bath

The Height of Salt Perfection, No Clogging, Runs Freely, Clean, Sanitary, Not an Impure Grain in a Ton

Gayley The Atheist

Hazing in a mild form is still one of the amusements of students at the University of California and much diversion was created this week in the ranks of the initiated by the jokes played on those just entering the college. One of the most laughable episodes—that is from a student's point of view—occurred when two or three men entered the hall and representing themselves to be a committee from the Young Men's Christian Association, proceeded to interrogate the green ones. There was a youth fresh from Bakersfield and to him the "committee" addressed itself. "Do you know Professor Charles Mills Gayley?" was the first question.

"No, but I admire him very much," enthusiastically replied the freshman, feeling that he was on safe ground.

"Have you heard that he is an atheist, and as such, the greatest enemy of religion the university has?"

"No, but I have been told—in fact my pastor said that his example was to be my star, or something like that; I do not recall the exact words."

"Evidently not," said the chairman of the "committee," sarcastically. "But do not be deluded; keep away from Gayley, for although he is a swell reader of the Bible, he knocks its pure teachings on every occasion."

"Do you know Mrs. Hearst?" was the next question.

"I have heard of her quite often," was the reply.

"You are sure she is not a myth of Berkeley, a college fiction, as it were?"

By this time the Bakersfieldian discovered that he was being joshed. He grew indignant and challenged any member of the "committee" to fight. All begged to be excused.

Honoring "California's" Faculty

Marked honor is being paid the University of California in the Eastern States and especially in the assignments given to members of the faculty at the International Congress of Arts and Sciences which is to open in St. Louis on September nineteenth. The various departments in which the professors from Berkeley will be heard are: Department of History of Languages, Benjamin Ide Wheeler, President of the State University; Philosophy, Professor Howison; Biology, Professor Loeb; Economics, Professor Miller; Astro-physics section of the Department of astronomy, Professor Campbell; Mining Engineering section of the Department of Technology, Professor Christy; Commerce and Exportation section of the Department of Economics, Professor Plehn; Educational Theory section of the Department of Education, Professor Brown; Colonial Administration section of the Department of Politics, Professor Moses. Two of the leading departments will be under the direction of men from Berkeley: Professor Charles Mills Gayley will preside over the section on English, while the Geographical section will have Professor Davidson at its head.

The University's New Buildings

To one who has not visited the University of California for a few months the progress of the buildings will be surprising. Under the management of John Galen Howard, a group of buildings is being constructed that when finished will compare favorably with the finest structures in the world devoted to education. First in importance is the mining building, which is to cost five hundred thousand dollars. It is to be the finest structure of its kind in the world. It has been under construction for two years and will not be ready for occupation until the fall of 1905. California hall, where the administration offices and class rooms are to be situated, is the next in importance and cost. It is to be opened in the spring.

It is the J. D. Tallants, not the Fred Tallants, who have tired of housekeeping and intend to winter at one of the large hotels. The Fred Tallants are still at 2321 Buchanan street.

HOTEL SEVILLE

S. W. Cor. 29th St. and Madison Ave., New York

JUST FINISHED. NOW OPEN.

12 story ABSOLUTELY FIREPROOF modern hotel; contains 100 bath-rooms and is sumptuously furnished; every conceivable convenience; 28th and 29th sts., crosstown cars direct to and from Erie, Pennsylvania and Lehigh Valley, 23rd street ferries. Within five minutes of New York's two main shopping thoroughfares and principal theatres, but while enjoying these advantages of location it is just far enough from them to be quiet. A high class restaurant and a ladies' and gentlemen's cafe are special features. The cuisine is of a superior character.

Single Rooms with Running Water from $1.50 per day, and with Bath from $2.00 per day upward. EDW. PURCHAS, Manager

For those who appreciate comfort and attention

Occidental Hotel

SAN FRANCISCO

AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN PLAN
CENTRALLY LOCATED

A QUIET HOME

GEORGE WARREN HOOPER, LESSEE

Hotel Richelieu

1012 VAN NESS AVENUE

Having renewed our lease, and entirely renovated this Hotel, we will continue making it the finest and leading Family Hotel of this Coast.

AND

HOTEL GRANADA

1000 SUTTER ST.

HOTEL RICHELIEU CO.

The Angelus

LOS ANGELES

NEW MANAGEMENT

Summer Rates to December 1st

LOOMIS BROS., Proprietors

Byron Hot Springs

Open all the year. Unexcelled climate. Luxurious Mineral and Mud Baths, and the most curative waters known for Rheumatism, Gout, Sciatica, Liver and Kidney and Nervous troubles, also Malaria.

Hotel unique in cuisine, service and appointments.

Rates $17.50 per week in Cottages. $3 per day and upwards in Main Hotel.

Reached by Southern Pacific, 2 1/2 hours from San Francisco. Trains leave San Francisco at 8:30 and 10 A. M., and 6 and 8:05 P. M. Dining Car on the 6 P. M. train.

H. R. WARNER, Manager

Byron Hot Springs Post Office, California

The Hobarts' New Home

The Walter Hobarts are building a new home for themselves in San Mateo, much larger, I am told, and more ornate than that of the Charles Clarks. It is designed not so much for entertaining purposes as for the comfort of the Hobart children. Mrs. Hobart is an ideal mother, and has her own ideas about the proper thing in children's sleeping and play-rooms. The decorations of the Hobart children's rooms were designed by a great lady in London who supplements her limited income by successfully doing things of this nature. It was considered something of a social triumph for the Californian mother when she obtained the services of this high-born architect of juvenile apartments. She had done one or two suites for Newport children, but none in America outside of that gilded circle.

Mrs. Baldwin's Illness

There is very little hope, I am told, that Mrs. Charles Baldwin will ever recover the health she once enjoyed. She is back at her Mountain View home, but cannot go about much and sees but few people. It is said that she contracted her malady long before her marriage, when as Ella Hobart she was a tennis expert. Carelessness in guarding against cold after a heated game of tennis resulted in lung trouble.

Frank Griffin Ill

It is said that Frank Griffin, who married Lillie Folis, is a very sick man. Mr. Griffin's father was a very wealthy mining man of Butte county and when he died his widow, son and daughter were left a large fortune. Mrs. Griffin Jr. is a very attractive young woman, wealthy in her own right, and is a cousin of the Floods. She made her debut the same winter that Margaret Salisbury, Marie Oge, Marie Wells, Ethel Keeney and Leontine Blakeman came out. She is not very strong and enters the society whirl only at rare intervals.

Gossip and Mosquitoes

I believe it was Alice Hager who had all her mail directed to the "Sanitarium Rafael" when she was sojourning at the Baron's inn some years ago. She did so, she said, because it was such a quiet retreat, with nothing to disturb the monotony but gossip and mosquitoes. Well this year the hotel has sustained its reputation for peace and quiet, and also for gossip. Being an annex to Pastori's, or rather Pastori's being an annex to the hotel (I have never been able to differentiate the two), the stimulus to gossip cannot be avoided. But gossip is essential to existence at a summer resort. And if there was no such place as Pastori's near San Rafael the guests of the hotel would find it hard to break the monotony.

It Was Latham's Home

That beautiful home of the Timothy Hopkines at Menlo Park, which Madame Bavarde says was built by Mark Hopkins, was originally the home of Milton S. Latham. It was erected by that gentleman to rival in magnificence Ralston's mansion at Belmont. It was of that home that D. O. Mills once said: "Latham has always before his eyes a view of the money he has spent and which he will never get back!"

DR. NAGEL, Oculist. Practice Limited to the Eye.
Has Removed to 731 Sutter St., Atkinson Bldg.

Hours 10 to 12 A. M. and 1 to 3 P. M. Phone East 1247
Residence, 1919 Vallejo St.—Phone West 1103

Old J.H. Cutter Whisky

THE BEST AFLOAT OR ASHORE

FROM OLD KENTUCKY

DISTILLED AND BOTTLED BY
C.P. MOORMAN & CO.
LOUISVILLE, KY

SHERWOOD AND SHERWOOD
DISTRIBUTORS
212-214 MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO.
HARRY G. HOWELL
SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE

$200 Reward

For the arrest and conviction of any one assaulting members or employees of this association or destroying property belonging to them.

ALLIED EMPLOYERS ASS'NS
CITIZENS' ALLIANCE
SAN FRANCISCO

Report promptly to the Law Department, Citizens' Alliance, 217 Crossley Building.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
CITIZENS' ALLIANCE

ALASKA REFRIGERATORS

FOR GROCERS BUTCHERS FLORISTS AND HOUSEHOLD -

TILE, OPAL OR ZINC LINED -
PACIFIC COAST AGENTS

W.W. MONTAGUE & CO.
309-317 MARKET ST.

THE ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION

If you are going to the Exposition, or anywhere else, you want a trunk or a dress suit case; no assortment so great and no prices so low for good traveling outfits as our Leather Goods Department, Sanborn, Vail & Co., 741 Market St.

At the Resorts

Arrivals at Rowardennan during the past week included: From San Francisco, Mrs. Philip Cadue, J. Murphy, G. S. Pomerooy, Mrs. V. Carius Driffeld, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred K. Durbrow, Miss Clara Durbrow, Miss Henrietta M. Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Sessions and child, Dr. and Mrs. J. E. Young, Miss Genevieve Brenhlinger, Mrs. A. M. Conroy.

Arrivals at Hotel del Monte last week included: Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Sherwood, C. E. Worden, San Francisco; A. W. Simpson, Stockton; Mrs. J. F. Francis, Miss G. M. Doninguez, Mrs. E. S. H. Day, Los Angeles; T. A. Castillo, F. A. Castillo, Mexico; J. D. Barnhill, New York; Winston Mallery, Miss Beatrice Maybury, San Jose; Mrs. L. P. Weil, San Francisco; Dr. Chas. H. Walter, San Jose; Wm. Haas, J. J. Crooks, Mrs. Crooks, San Rafael; J. S. Severance, Judge Sloss, Mrs. J. H. Hecht, J. E. Clinton, M. S. Grinbaum, Maurice Stern and family.

Among recent arrivals at Byron Hot Springs, from San Francisco, were Mrs. A. P. Hotaling, Mrs. R. M. Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. L. Ackerman, Mrs. C. Meyer, Mrs. Adams and Dr. F. L. Stow; from Sacramento, W. A. Soule; from Oakland, Lilla M. Tenney, M.D., T. A. Cox; from Stockton, Monroe P. Marks; from Fresno, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Cameron.

Recent arrivals at El Carmelo, Uacific Grove, from San Francisco, included: B. A. Norris, H. C. Dexter, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Moore, J. W. Kimball, W. W. Tripp, Mrs. and Miss Forbes, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Rock, Mrs. John Boggs and Miss Boggs.

BEAUTIFUL COLUMBIA RIVER FOLDER.

The passenger department of the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company has just issued a beautiful and costly panoramic folder entitled "The Columbia River, through the Cascade Mountains, to the Pacific Ocean." From Arlington to Portland, and from Portland to the Pacific Ocean, every curve of the river and every point of interest is shown, while Mt. Hood, Mt. Adams and Mt. St. Helens, perpetually covered with snow, stand out in all their beauty. On the back of the map is an interesting story in detail of the trip from Huntington to Portland, and from Portland to the ocean, not overlooking the beaches and the San Francisco trip by ocean. A copy of this folder may be secured by sending four cents in stamps (to pay postage) to A. L. Craig, General Passenger Agent of the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company, Portland, Oregon. By sending the address of some friend in the East, and four cents in postage, the folder will be promptly mailed.

OUR ARTISTIC PHOTOGRAPHER.

Photography is today an art that ranks with music, painting and literature. None can succeed in modern photography unless he puts time, money and undoubted talent in his work. There is the management of lights and shadows to be considered, the proper pose of the subject so as to bring out his or her best points, and the numberless details that go to make an artistic picture. A few years ago, a ground-floor studio would have been thought impossible. Now some of our finest photographic studios are situated on the ground-floor. One of the most thoroughly equipped of these is that of Tonkin, 1490 Market street between Seventh and Eighth. Tonkin has built up a large patronage by reason of the excellent quality of his portraiture, and the very reasonable prices asked for his artistic photographs. All the latest modes of photographs are taken at this studio, and mounted in the newest styles. Tonkin makes a specialty of children's photographs, and has brought the art of child photography to the highest point obtainable in this branch of camera portraiture.

Eva B. Wallace, 139 Post street, returns from Paris September first with latest Parisian models in millinery.

Rigs that run.
Ask the man that owns one.

"ST. LOUIS"

Pacific Coast
Department

ST. LOUIS MOTOR CARRIAGE CO.

49-53 CITY HALL AVE.

F. D. DORMAN, Mgr.

In Financial Circles

The week's business again showed a marked improvement and it looks as if former activity in sugar stocks were to be revived. While there is no material improvement in prices, the demand for that class of stocks is becoming more urgent.

Beet sugar remains stationary at 4 1-4 cents, and according to all sugar journals a steady advance may be looked for.

The latest reports from the different plantations give a very flattering complexion to the condition of crops.

Transactions at the Stock and Bond Exchange for the week amounted to $124,000 in bonds and 9,015 in shares, divided as follows: 690 lighting, 85 water, 1,852 miscellaneous, 48 bank shares and 6,340 sugars.

S. F. Gas & Electric gained about one point under moderate trading. In the "Unlisted Department," United Railway Investment Co. preferred stock advanced about $3.00 per share and showed considerable strength at the close. —The Financier.

That well-known printing firm, the Gilmartin Company, now at 1019 Market street, will move in a few days to 19 First street, where they will conduct one of the largest printing, stationery and lithographing establishments in the West.

THE HOFFMAN.

Though the Hoffman Cafe at 601 Market street has passed into new hands, it will be continued on the old lines that made it so popular during the reign of William J.—familiarily known as "Pop"—Sullivan. The Hoffman is as famous a resort in its way as the Hoffman in New York, which has entertained so many celebrities. "Pop" Sullivan not only beautified his cafe after the highest art of the decorator but he bought many valuable paintings by great artists, and though other connoisseurs tried to buy them of him he preferred to retain them for the Hoffman gallery. He always kept a chef, too, in charge of the cuisine, and the chef will remain though "Pop" himself is retiring. The latter will remain in charge a month or so longer, until the new people get the run of things. Under the new management the Hoffman will tonight (Saturday) have its formal opening. The new Hoffman Cafe Company consists of S. T. Bernhard, president, who is also president of the Bernhard Mattress Company and proprietor of Bushnell's photograph gallery; W. M. Hopkins, vice-president; M. Selig, secretary, and Charles Hilderbrecht, treasurer. Every one knows "Charlie" Hilderbrecht, who will be manager of the Cafe, upon his return from Alaska, where he is on a two months' vacation.

It is true that coffee does not agree with everybody; neither do watermelons. However that is no reason why this should ban coffee as being injurious to all. Coffee—good coffee, such as Armer's Very Best, which is grown on the Armer Bros.' plantations, and prepared by them—is exhilarating without reaction, invigorating, and indispensable at the breakfast table.

A GREAT SUNDAY PAPER.

Get a copy of "The San Francisco Call" next Sunday. It will contain one of a series of cartoons by Homer Davenport, the premier cartoonist. Stories and sketches by the following writers of national repute: Peter F. Dunne (Mr. Dooley), Edward W. Townsend, Jerome K. Jerome, Marie Corelli and others.

DIAMONDS

$5.00 PER MONTH

Beautiful, Brilliant, Pure White and Flawless Diamonds,
$5.00 per Month

Write for Catalogue or Phone James 4086 and we will send selection. Written guarantee with every stone sold.

PAUL V. GARIN

138 Montgomery Street, or 802 Hayward Building, San Francisco

The Stage

Shaw's "Candida"

Last week I wrote of "Candida": "In the reading it is not convincing; its characters seem ridiculous and ludicrously unnatural. That they are plausible on the stage is evident from the tremendous success of the play in New York." After seeing the play I am impelled to the conclusion that the plausibility of the characters depends on the mood you are in. If you view the play as a "message" from the dazzling cynic and take it seriously you are likely to feel about it as does my unromantic bachelor friend, Peter Robertson, who pronounces it "tommyrot." But taking it for what it is worth as a bit of stage fiction, just as you would "The Royal Family" or "If I Were King" or any other literary fabric woven in the brain of a poet, you will feel that it is exceedingly witty and entertaining. Perhaps behind it all is the enigmatical Shaw laughing at you in the belief that you are perplexed. Bull-baiting an audience is a favorite pastime of the talented Celt; but why should we care so long as it is entertaining, and surely no one will deny that "Candida" is that. It is more—it is a remarkable piece of artistic play-writing. The author has been loyal to the traditions of his art, and has given us an odd commingling of caviare and perfume in a play of absorbing interest, whether you view it as pure comedy or serious drama. Its characters seem at times a mere assortment of masquerade puppets and at others as intensely real beings. For a little while you are laughing at the inflated sentimentalities and poetical vaporings of the eighteen-year-old lover, and suddenly you find yourself sympathizing with the alarmed husband who has become fearful of the loss of his wife's love. Those who discern hieratic significance in every stroke of Shaw's pen will doubtless find it hard to smile at the emotions of the clergyman, but those whose sense of humor is keener than their thirst for psychological study will not fail to be amused even in the soberest and most passionate scenes. Of course the play is one of poetic unrealities, but it is nevertheless serious drama despite the seeming absurdities that give it the semblance of broad farce. Shaw may be a cynic and a bull-baiter, and he may love to score the delusions of his audience, but he does not delve passionately into the minds of others for the mere purpose of catering to the prurient. If "Candida" were not robed in the garment of sincerity it would be salacious farce of the most pronounced Parisian type; the shawl speech would be vulgar, and the tete-a-tete by the fireplace, in which scene the poet talks of entering the Kingdom of Heaven, and gives the impression of one passionately pleading a sensual suit, would become positively indecent. It is the evident sincerity of it all that commands respectful attention. There is nothing politely funny in the wooing of a married woman in the glow of a fireplace, by a frenzied purple poet. That sort of thing does not excite the risibles. It stirs nothing but the red corpuscles; and it is because you know that the poet is an idealist who believes in himself, and in the virtue of his cause, that you take the scene with respectful seriousness. You know that he is a crazy poet whose philosophy is that of a dreamer, and you are amused by him. You know that Candida is a sympathetic woman, and Bernard Shaw to the contrary notwithstanding, as you see her in the play, she is not intent on practicing the arts of the seducer. Her philosophy in the shawl speech is not that of the ideal wife, but if Shaw intended to present her as an immoral woman he failed to do so. James Morell, the clergyman, is a paradoxical character, decidedly inconsistent, but he serves the purpose of the playwright and hence his creation. None but a clergyman of Christian spirit could give vraisemblance to the play. The part is played most convincingly by Mr. Dodson Mitchell. Arnold Daly gives the impression of being enthusiastically en rapport with the spirit of Marchbanks. None but an actor with the soul of a poet could so thoroughly merge himself into the role. He is admirable in all but make-up. His grotesque wig and kalsomined countenance give him the appearance of a decadent poet. There is nothing boyishly spirituelle about him. Such a poet would be more likely to give a woman the horrors than anything else. But he acts the part as though he were saturated with the sentiments of Candida's lover. In voice and mannerism he is remarkably reminiscent of Frank Worthing. Dorothy Donnelly plays Candida gracefully but pitches it at times in too low a key. She has not a great deal of magnetism but she has abundance of art. The little company has not a weakness to mar the performance, with the exception perhaps of Daly's make-up. Indeed, each one in the cast makes a distinct hit. The Prossy of Louise Closser is a fine character study and the breeziness of Herbert Carr, as Mr. Burgess, is infectious. Burgess, by the way, is an excellent character creation.

—Theodore Bonnet.

Mayall as a Big Brown Man

Little sympathy is wasted here upon the Russians, in the war in the Orient, judging by the applause given to the Japanese spy in the play at the Central. "A Spy at Port Arthur" is not more sensational than some of Jules Verne's dramas, and would be as well received by audiences north, as south of Market street. The first act occurs in Washington, D. C., and introduces the Japanese spy, in conventional evening dress, at a social function at the Willoughby home. Here also are met Captain Dubroski, a Russian officer; Wilbur Townsend, a newspaper correspondent; Mark Graham, an English attache; Jules Farien, the villain of the cast; Anne Willoughby, a charming American girl, and her mother and chum. There is a duel in this act, a nice, polite crossing of swords, in which the brown man comes off victor, and later shows his magnanimity toward his enemy by burning without reading a disputed paper which was the primary cause of the fencing match. The second act shows Port Arthur by moonlight, and introduces the noble Japanese spy attired as a coolie. He gives an exhibition of his strength, as a porter wheeling huge hogsheads into place. From three of the hogsheads emerge a trio of adventurous Americans, Anne and her chum and the Willoughby's negro servant. Some very good comedy comes in this act. The third act rescues the prisoners from a tight place into which they have brought themselves, by means of the wireless telegraph, and the fourth act sees the brown hero happily gazing upon his countrymen's victory, the flag of the Japanese waving from Port Arthur's turrets. The author of "A Spy at Port Arthur" is not named on the bill, but whoever he is, he certainly deserves applause for having written a remarkably good melodrama, up-to-date in plot and details, and with nothing tedious or absurd in its complications. Mayall is rather too tall to fill the role of a "little brown man," but otherwise he is Japanese enough in bearing to be a real native of the land of chrysanthemums and geishas. Some admirable patriotic sentiments are placed in Osada Sakichi's mouth by the author, and Mayall voices them so

Exceptionally

the most uniform, old and mellow whiskey is

Hunter Baltimore Rye

In quality and flavor it is the finest and maturest whiskey made.

HILBERT MERCANTILE CO.
136-144 Second St., San Francisco, Cal.
Telephone Exchange 313.

that none of their significance is lost. Nicholls as the Russian officer and Shumer as the unprincipled Farien are natural enough to win the gallery gods' opprobrium, and that is what their parts call for. Howell, who was once a newspaper man himself, plays Townsend with some bright touches, and is vastly better than the average stage war correspondent. Daniel Halifax, the new juvenile, is excellent as the attache. Corrigan's comedy talent comes in well as the old negro. Miss Clifton and Miss Castro have little to do except look pretty and smile occasionally. In their boys' clothes, in the second act, they are very natural, just like boarding-school girls masquerading in their brothers' garments. Miss Blanc, Whipple and Edwards fill out the cast acceptably.

The Evolution of a Soubrette

Georgie O'Ramey is unquestionably a bright girl. Some months ago, when she made a hit at Fischer's and excited the jealousy of Maud Amber, she was quick to take advantage of the circumstance. Maud had friends on the Rialto who boomed her on the stage because of her good-fellowship rather than for her artistic ability. Georgie O'Ramey was unknown on the Rialto, but she had friends in the newspaper business to whom she confided the secret of Maud's jealousy. The story reached Ashton Stevens, who has a fine nose for news as well as a high appreciation of the dramatic art, and he interviewed the shrewd soubrette. She told him of the jealousy she had aroused and he vouchsafed her a page of the Examiner over which she spread the picture of her troubles in black and white. From a newspaper standpoint it was a capital story. The dear public loves to be taken behind the scenes, and Mr. Stevens chaperoned his readers right into the wings. The next day Miss O'Ramey awoke and found herself famous. The story aroused the chivalry of O'Farrell street. The hearts of the patrons of Fischer's went out to the industrious soubrette whose efforts to entertain them had evoked the glassy, not to speak of the green eye, of her associates on the stage. People who had seen her and thought her worthy of her hire went to the theatre just to see the scowls of the other mummies. Georgie O'Ramey became the pet of Fischer's, not because of her soubrette genius but in token of the disapproval of the reprehensible spirit that she had aroused. One page in the Examiner did the work. Her departure a few weeks later was mourned, and her successors were greeted with nothing but invidious comparisons until the coming of Miss Bayes, and then the fickle theatre-goers forgot that an O'Ramey ever existed. But manager Fischer has a retentive memory, and when he lost Miss Bayes he offered Georgie her old job. As Georgie had not been setting the rest of the world afire, and as Maud had gone to the Antipodes, the clever soubrette was glad to return to the scene of her great triumph. And once more she is making good. For Georgie O'Ramey has talent. She is no Marie Dresser; neither does she rank with Fay Templeton. She could not cause me to forget Nora Bayes, but she has magnetism and temperament, and she will earn her salary at Fischer's. She does a few good stunts in the new musical hodge-podge, "The Anheuser Push," and her old sympathizers are there every night to affirm their fealty. But there is other talent at Fischer's, and the performance is highly entertaining because there is a varied assortment of good things contributed by the comedians. It is a rattling good show from start to finish, and I do not think that Miss O'Ramey will have occasion to complain of the jealousy of her present co-workers.

Bogart Engaged by the Tivoli

An announcement that should arouse considerable local interest has just been made by the Tivoli, and is to the effect that Andrew Bogart has been engaged to sing one of the principal roles in "The Serenade," which is to follow "The Toreador." Mr. Bogart's vocal ability is well known to the readers of Town Talk for it has been frequently exploited in these columns. That he is possessed of dramatic ability as well was demonstrated some months ago when he appeared in Shafter Howard's comic opera at the Alhambra. He has had some experience in musical comedy in the East but he has yet to make his professional debut on the operatic stage in his native city.

Good Times in Vaudeville

It's a good augur for vaudeville's bright future when artists like the Heinrichs adorn an Orpheum bill. It's a better sign when the audience listens in charmed silence while such artists give selections that would be in place on a high-class concert program, and applaud ecstatically at the number's finish. Julia Heinrich had been here before, two years since, but this is the first time that eminent baritone, her father, has toured in vaudeville. Miss Heinrich's songs this week were pretty, classic trifles in which her well-schooled contralto was heard to advantage, and the patriotic song given by Mr. Heinrich pleased both parquet and gallery. A good thing on this week's bill is Eva Williams, who uses slang in a soft voice with the ease of the clever heroine of "In the Bishop's Carriage." Guyer and O'Neill have a lively sketch and Treloar, once a famed oar of Harvard, gives an interesting exhibition.

MISS VIRGINIA BRISSAC,
Ingenué, with White Whittlesey at the Alcazar.

Gillette's old war-drama, "Held by the Enemy," is the Neills' contribution to the week's theatrical program. It is well acted, but it strikes me that it would be well for the company to add some new plays to their repertory. "Held by the Enemy" is old enough now to be a classic, but there are other classics that one would more enjoy seeing.

Whittlesey Kills Seven at a Blow

"The Pride of Jennico," by Agnes and Egerton Castle, was a mighty good novel. "The Pride of Jennico," dramatized by Abby Sage Richardson and Grace Furniss, is anything but a good play. It simply revels in blood, and when the hero is not killing his scores with his trusty blade, his friend Beddoes is filling the intervals with his. The play was given last season during Whittlesey's engagement, and except for some changes in the cast there is very little difference in the production. Like all the romantic dramas, the hero only exists to slash his way to love and victory, and Whittlesey does this with grace and animation, seconded by Hilliard as Sir John, and Maher as Janos, the major-domo. Conness is the wicked Prince Eugen, who hankers for Jennico's Princess and stops at nothing to achieve his end. Miss Lawton is the Princess, who wins her husband by a stratagem, loses him because of his family pride, and is reunited to him in the end. Miss Brissac has the part of the phlegmatic foster sister. It is not suited to her girlish charms, but she plays it with more intelligence than Marie Ottilie herself possessed. Miss Mifflin has the strongest of the feminine roles and save for an excess of gesture her portrayal of the gypsy girl is admirable. Osbourne as the Lord Chamberlain wears a remarkable nose, and is delightfully true to the character as the Egertons drew him in their novel.

Florence Roberts

The appearance of Miss Florence Roberts at the California theatre, supported by her own company, marks another step in the evolution of our brilliant and progressive San Francisco favorite. Beginning as a stock star at the Alcazar theatre, each season has signalized for Miss Roberts a notable advance both in artistic power and in popular appreciation. And as step by step her art has grown in vitality and breadth, so also the field of her activities has widened, until now in all the territory from the Pacific ocean to the borders of the middle West she is everywhere recognized as a great emotional actress. Though her tours have been thus far limited to the West Miss Roberts's fame has spread to the Eastern centres, and it is not likely that we will be able to claim her much longer as exclusively our own. At the California she will inaugurate her fourth season under the management of Frederick Belasco in "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," in which her charming and magnetic personality should have fine play, for she is an artist from the tips of her toes to the ends of her fingers. She has made a special study of Tess, and as she always makes a point of avoiding the beaten tracks, her interpretation will be awaited with keen anticipation of pleasure and profit by the intellectual public. The play is laid in rural England and gives splendid scope to Miss Roberts's distinguished players to show their ability. With such capable artists as Messrs. Hobart Bosworth, Lucius Henderson, Wm. Yearance, Sterling Lord-Whitney, Philip Lord, Gregory Rodgers, Christopher Lynton, Forest Seabury and the Misses Georgia Woodthorpe, Katherine Blanchard, Louise Royce, Lillian Armsby, Anita Allen and Ollie Cooper in the cast there will be no doubt about results. Much attention has been paid to the scenic detail and a picturesque production is promised.

Manager Greenbaum has received word from Ben Greet that he is now actively rehearsing his company for the coming season at his theatre in London. The entire company sails for the United States on September fifteenth, and after playing a few special open-air performances around New York, will come direct to California, opening at the State University with a production of "Hamlet," Saturday, October first. The repertoire of the organization includes "Everyman," "The Star of Bethlehem," "Hamlet," "Merchant of Venice," "Twelfth Night," "As You Like It," "She Stoops to Conquer," and a new version of the charming comedy, "Masks and Faces."

The "Majestic" Stock

On Saturday evening of next week will be inaugurated the stock season of the big, new Majestic theatre in Market street opposite Larkin. This will be a notable event in the theatrical

We are selling agents for "Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen" and sole agents for "The Marshall," the best $1 pen in the world. Stationery Department, Sanborn, Vail & Co., 741 Market St.

Mrs. Alfred Keley, the Clever Comedienne at the Orpheum.

history of San Francisco. Oliver Morosco has come to town to manage the theatre, and he has organized a strong company which will have its capacity tested in a sumptuous production of "In the Palace of the King." Conspicuous among the people who have come to swell San Francisco's colony of mummies is Miss Grace Reals, who was for several seasons leading woman of the Dearborn theatre, Chicago, and one of the theatrical idols of that city. J. H. Gilmour, the leading man, is said to be a handsome fellow who will appeal to matinee-goers. Joseph Callaghan, who starred as Mephisto in "Faust," is the leading "heavy" and Eleanor Gordon, the pretty ingenue, is also a member of the company which will no doubt receive a warm greeting on the opening night.

Next Week's Bills

"Candida" will fill the Columbia all next week, and then will come Kyrle Bellew in "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksmen," seats for which will be on sale next Thursday. In the cast will be E. M. Holland, who has not been seen here for some years. It is ten years, by the way, since Bellew played in San Francisco. He was at the Baldwin then with Mrs. Potter.

CURES

Bythinia

NATURAL LAXATIVE WATER

CONSTIPATION

FOR SALE AT DRUG STORES AND BARS

The tenth week of White Whittlesey's Alcazar season will introduce a novelty, Clyde Fitch's "Nathan Hale," never before given in this city. The play was written for Nat Goodwin, and is based on incidents in the life of the great American patriot-martyr. Whittlesey will have the Goodwin role, and Miss Lawton will be Alice Adams, the heroine. Miss Brissac will also be of the cast. To follow, beginning with a special Labor Day matinee, Monday, September fifth, the first San Francisco production of Brandon Tynan's version of "Robert Emmet" will be made with Mr. Whittlesey in the title role.

James Neill will begin the ninth and last week of his successful engagement at the Grand tomorrow matinee, with a magnificent revival of "Under Two Flags." Mr. Neill will repeat as Bertie Cecil a former triumph, and Edythe Chapman will as Cigarette present the greatest hit of her extensive repertoire. This will be the first production of "Under Two Flags" at fifteen, twenty-five and fifty cents. Sunday matinee, September eleventh, "The Princess Fan Tan," a new and original Japanese extravaganza, will be magnificently produced with gorgeous Oriental scenery, costumes and effects. Three hundred clever children will be in the cast.

The weekly attendance at the Tivoli has averaged over ten thousand people since "The Toreador" was put on, and interest in the production continues keen. "The Serenade" is in rehearsal. There will be a special matinee of "The Toreador" on Labor Day.

The greatest bill of the Central's year will be put on Monday night, in Francis Powers's famous Chinese drama, "The First Born," with all the original scenery and music and a number of the actors who created the roles when the play made its tremendous hit and record-breaking run here. Walter Belasco, who accompanied the drama to New York and London and received the most flattering praises for his artistic portrayal of the Chinese rag-picker, will repeat his unique characterization at the Central and the whole performance will be given under his personal supervision. "The First Born" will be produced positively for one week only, and during its run the curtain will be rung up at eight p. m. sharp each night, on account of the double bill. The three-act comedy, "Turned Up," will precede the Chinese play, and the curtain will rise for "The First Born" at ten p. m. The matinees on Saturday and Sunday will begin promptly at two p. m.

"The Anheuser Push" has drawn very large houses all the week at Fischer's and will easily fill the theatre during its run. J. C. Crawford's new burlesque, "Miss Mazuma," will follow "The Anheuser Push." It is in rehearsal under the direction of J. J. Jaxon, the new stage manager.

Kronau's great military sensation, "Our Boys in Blue," headlines the Orpheum's bill. The production is strictly military, illustrating the life, work and habits of the American soldier. The young men chosen for the presentation are members of a military regiment in Indiana and are drilled in every detail of artillery, infantry and coast defense practice. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Kelsey return with their latest success, "A Young Parson's Predicament." Harry Klein and Pearl Clifton, eccentric dancers and legitimate comedians, will make their first appearance in this city, assisted by their trick dog, "Santo." Another newcomer will be Paul Barnes, a monologist and singer. The Musical Goolmans, high class novelty musicians, will also be heard for the first time here.

A banner bill is promised at the Chutes this coming week, headed by the Empire Comedy Four, who kept the Orpheum audiences laughing for three weeks recently. Campbell and Johnson, the comedy cyclists, formerly of the Zarrow trio, and Marcus and Gartelle, the skating comedians, all of whom are Orpheum favorites of a late date, will keep the fun going and Andy Lewis, a clever Hebrew impersonator, will make his first appearance here.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Dr. A. C. Moore and Dr. B. P. Shepherd, the osteopathic physicians, formerly of 204 Sutter street, have leased the entire first floor of the Alto building, southeast corner of Bush and Kearny streets, and will be ready for practice after September first. The offices are equipped with all the latest and best inventions to correct deformities and cure chronic ailments.

CENTRAL

Belasco & Mayer, Props. Phone South 533
Market Street near Eighth
Opposite City Hall

Week Beginning Monday, August 29th

Matinees Saturday and Sunday

Francis Powers' Famous Chinese Drama

"THE FIRST BORN"

Prices: Evening, 10c to 50c

Matinees, 10c, 15c, 25c

MAJESTIC

Frisco's Finest Theatre
Market St., Opposite Larkin St.

Eight Nights, Starting Saturday, Sept. 3rd

MAJESTIC THEATRE COMPANY

Direct from New York, Presenting

"IN THE PALACE OF THE KING"

Night Prices, 25c, 35c and 50c (A few front rows in the Orchestra, 75c).

Bargain Matinee Every Thursday, 25c (Reserved). No higher.

Regular Saturday and Holiday Matinees, 25c and 50c.

Seat Sale Monday, August 29th

CALIFORNIA

Week commencing Sunday, Aug. 28th Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays

Mr. Frederic Belasco Presents

FLORENCE ROBERTS

For a Limited Engagement In Four Elaborate Productions Beginning with

TESS OF THE D'URBERVILLES

Lorimer Stoddard's Dramatization of Thomas Hardy's Famous Novel

Prices, 25c, 50c, 75c and $1.00

Orpheum

O'Farrell between
Stockton and Powell
Streets

Week Commencing
Sunday Matinee,
Aug. 28th

A BIG NEW SHOW!

"OUR BOYS IN BLUE." Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Kelsey. Klein and Clifton. Paul Barnes. The Musical Goolmans. WILLIAMS AND TUCKER. Preloar assisted by Miss Edna Tempest. Orpheum Motion Pictures and Last Week of

MAX AND JULIA HEINRICH

Regular Matinees Every Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday

Prices: 40c, 25c and 50c.

During the week commencing Sunday, September 4th, Conclave Week, there will be a MATINEE EVERY DAY at the Orpheum.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Phone "Grand Opera House"
Grand Opera House Co.
Lessee
Regular Matinee Saturday

Beginning tomorrow (Sunday) Matinee Last Week of MR. JAMES NEILL Magnificent Production of

"UNDER TWO FLAGS"

Dramatized from Ouida's famous novel. First Time at these prices, 15c, 25c, 50c.

Beginning Sunday Matinee, Sept. 11th, the Japanese Spectacular Extravaganza, "PRINCESS FAN TAN" 300 Clever Juveniles in the Cast

Fischer's THEATRE

Success of Successes

"THE ANHEUSER PUSH"

By Will Carleton and Lee Johnson

Nothing ever like it here. Brimfull of Up-to-date Novelties and Laughable Situations. Remarkable Burlesque Cast. Most Magnificent Scenes.

Great Chorus of Forty.

Matinees Saturday and Sunday Same Popular Prices

Special Matinees—Labor Day and Admission Day

Next Burlesque "MISS MAZUMA" by J. C. Crawford

COLUMBIA THE LEADING THEATRE

Tonight, Sunday Night and for Another Week

ARNOLD DALY

Announces Bernard Shaw's Delightful Comedy

"CANDIDA"

The Season's Sensational Success

Sept. 5th—Kyrle Bellow in "Raffles: the Amateur Cracksman"

ALCAZAR THEATRE

Phone "ALCAZAR"
Belasco and Mayer
Proprietors
E. D. Price, Gen. Mgr.

Monday, Aug. 29, one week
Evenings, 25c to 75c

Regular Matinees Thursday and Saturday
Matinees Thursday and Saturday 25c to 50c

WHITE WHITTLESEY

And the Alcazar Stock Company

In Clyde Fitch's Thrilling Romance of the Revolution

NATHAN HALE

As played by Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott

Monday, Sept. 5th—Beginning with Special Labor Day Matinee, White Whittlesey, in "Robert Emmet." The Original Brandon Tynan Version.

Cor. Eddy and Mason Sts.

*TIVOLI*

FIFTH BIG WEEK

Every Night at 8

Evenings at 8 Sharp

FIFTH BIG WEEK

Smokers' Paradise in the Promenade Circle
The Superb Tivoli Sensation

"THE TOREADOR"

By Ivan Caryll and Lionel Moncton
Usual Tivoli Prices—25c, 50c and 75c.

With an Unrivalled Cast
Only Matinee Saturday

In Rehearsal, "The Serenade"

Supposition

BY ANNE THURBER.

"Howard will miss his wife," said Harding, as he and Deal left the church.

They had just attended the funeral of their friend's wife. The church was crowded, and many curious eyes were cast upon the chief mourner. Many commented upon his attitude, drawing their own inferences, all widely varied, from the expression on his mobile features.

"I'm not so sure about that," returned Deal, "after a few weeks his liberty may seem sweet to him."

"But Howard loved his wife," replied Harding, "he never seemed to care for his old mode of pleasuring after he married."

"That does not always follow. You must remember that though that was his first experience of the altar, he had seen halts — temporary ones — before that."

"Perhaps he'll marry again," suggested Harding.

"I don't think he will. Mark my words, he'll come back to the club inside of a month, and will forget he was ever tied down to a home."

While his friends were discussing him, Howard was following to the grave the casket that held all that remained of her whom he had held dear for five years.

When the casket was lowered into the grave, he did not shed tears. He had none to shed. His senses were benumbed. He did not realize his loss.

But when he returned home, courteously declining the companionship of those of his relatives or friends who wished to cheer him in his solitude, he went into the library and sat down before the fire, to think. The servant brought him something to eat and drink — he did not notice what — and set it beside him. "Go away," said Howard, then. "I wish to be alone."

His thoughts flew back to the first day he had met Edith. He had not been especially attracted to her. He was a single man, it is true, but he had "kept house" with Paula Tanquerays and their kind, and when his mother had singled out Edith as a proper wife for her moneyed son, the idea did not fall at once upon fertile ground.

But Howard met Edith again and again. His mother saw that the meetings should happen. Then by some chance words she let drop, he discovered that Edith cherished a deep affection for him. He was not one of those egotistic men who imagine themselves magnets to draw all women towards them. But he paid more attention after that to Edith's conversation when they were thrown into a deus situations, and it was soon forced upon him that the chance words of his mother were a truthful revelation.

Almost any man is apt to become interested in a woman whose love for him has been revealed in this way. Howard began to study Edith. He found new excellencies in her every day. One day, on an impulse, he proposed to her, and was accepted.

They were married. On the honeymoon trip, the indifferent lover became inspired with a most passionate love for his wife. Her love drew him. He began to compare the feelings he had felt for those other women with this inspired by his wife. They were as the stars to the sun.

When the lune de miel was over, Howard entered upon a new life. He cared no more for the gay delights he had formerly indulged in. Once or twice he left his wife at home and went off with his old associates, merely as an experiment, to see whether he had made a mistake.

The experiments were successful inasmuch as they revealed to him his complete change of character. He was not happy in any diversion which his wife could not share.

Edith was his companion of companions, his dear chum, his bewitching mistress — the infinity of woman.

He had been a passionate admirer of beauty. Edith, after her marriage, lost much of her comeliness. Her rounded figure shrunk to leanness. Her brilliant complexion faded to sallowness. But, though Howard noticed the change in her, his love did not grow less. Her increasing delicacy only made him cherish her the more.

As the last illness came swiftly upon her, he could not, he would not, even at the final moment, believe she was dead.

As he sat there alone, his dinner untouched beside him, the whole depth of his loss swooped down upon his consciousness, like a tempest. He wept, those bitter tears that come to a man few times in his life.

Surcease of his sorrow — would he ever find it? When a man's life is interwoven with that of a woman, as Howard's with that of Edith, could he ever come again to find joy in living, with her dead?

Corona Cafe New Montgomery and Mission St. Mercantile lunch 25c. Always good, try it.

"I suppose Howard is terribly broken up tonight," said Harding, at the club, over his game of dominoes.

"Oh, he'll get over it, don't you fear," returned Deal. "I've seen men lose their wives before."

Was he right?

NEW PICTURES AND FRAMES

We have a world of new things for the fall trade and newly fitted rooms to show them in. Visitors welcome. Sanborn, Vail & Co., 741 Market St.

The Dinner Setting is Incomplete without

White Rock

LITHIA Water

A Selected Water is as Essential as a Selected Wine

P. J. WENIGER & CO.
DISTRIBUTORS

101-103 Powell St.
SAN FRANCISCO

ELECTRICAL WIRING AND SUPPLIES

Lamps, Telephone Batteries, Bells, Etc.
Repairs Given Prompt Attention

National Electric Company

455 SUTTER ST., San Francisco

Telephone Bush 396

Private Rooms

Phone Main 5966

Jules Wittmann

JULES' RESTAURANT

Regular Dinner with Wine, 75c
Sundays and Holidays, $1.00

315-317-319-321-323 Pine St.

Music Sundays

Open Evenings

JULES IS IN NO WAY CONNECTED WITH ANY UPTOWN RESTAURANT

REMOVED

Patrick & Co.

Rubber Stamps and Metal Signs

to

111 and 113 Sansome Street

GOODYEAR'S "GOLD SEAL"

Rubber Goods the Best Made

Rubber Hose, Belting and Packings

We are headquarters for everything made of Rubber

GOODYEAR RUBBER COMPANY

R. H. Pease, Pres. F. M. Shepard, Jr., Treas. C. F. Runyon, Sec.

573-575-577-579 Market St., San Francisco

REPAIRS MADE AND SUPPLIES FURNISHED
AT THE

Hotel Vendome Automobile Garage San Jose

Stable accommodations free to guests. Record time
on road from San Francisco to San Jose, two hours.

MOBILE CARRIAGE CO.

DIRECTORS
J. A. Marsh, Pres.
Livingston Jenks
H. C. Tilden
C. K. Harley
C. L. Tilden

Pacific Coast Agents for

Pierce Arrow 4 Cylinder Touring Car	$4,150
Pierce Arrow 2 Cylinder Touring Car	2,650
Pierce Stanhope with Top	1,450
Thomas 3 Cylinder Touring Car	2,650

Immediate Deliveries on all these Cars. Finest Garage in America
Largest Automobile Service in the World

LOS ANGELES BRANCH HOUSE, 331-33 SOUTH MAIN ST.

MOBILE CARRIAGE CO.
SAN FRANCISCO

INDIAN and RAMBLER MOTOCYCLES

Won first five places in endurance contest in East, July 2 to 7, and were the ONLY machines making perfect scores in ALL events. In ONE-PINT economy test—Indian first, distance 31 miles, 140 yds a time, 1:46:34.

C. C. HOPKINS
Larkin & McAllister

"SOLUTION OF TIRE TROUBLES" FISK DETACHABLE

ONLY A WRENCH NEEDED
CAN'T COME OFF THE RIM
CAN'T PINCH THE TUBE

MORE MILEAGE
MORE COMFORT
MORE SATISFACTION

CALL OR WRITE PACIFIC COAST BRANCH
PHIL. B. BEKEART CO. 114 SECOND ST.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

ON the HILLS NOT THE RACE TRACK

is the test of power. The Annual Hill Climbing Contest of the Minneapolis Automobile Club was held on Saturday, June 11th, on Kenwood Hill, when the

Rambler

again demonstrated its superiority over cars costing three times its price, and, for the second time, won

FIRST PRIZE

finishing the course, 2680 feet, on a 10 per cent grade, in 1 minute, 7 3-5 seconds.

ENTRIES AND TIMES

Class No. A, Machines Valued at $2,750 and over—

Owner	Make	Time
J. H. Queal,	Pope-Toledo	:59
A. F. Timme,	Pope-Toledo	1:05
Die. Ferris,	Pope-Toledo	1:05 4-5
F. T. Heffelfinger,	Peerless	1:08 1-5
Ralph Bagley,	Packard	1:11
Bert Strong,	Stearns	1:22

Class No. B, Machines Valued bet. $2,750 and $1,750—

A. C. Bennett,	Winton	1:11
G. W. Cappelin,	Winton	1:25
George Shear,	Knox	1:41

Class No. C, Machines Valued bet. $1,750 and $1,000—

M. E. Clark,	Rambler	1:07 3-5
C. C. Pillsbury,	Franklin	1:10 1-5
Dr. A. P. Walrath,	Rambler	1:14

Send for our latest illustrated Catalogue "C"; it explains RAMBLER construction; the records prove its value.

RAMBLER AUTOMOBILE AGENCY
Tenth and Market Sts., San Francisco

The CADILLAC

Price $950
With Tonneau $1050
Canopy Top Extra

August 10, 1904,
CADILLAC officially first to finish in the
New York and
St. Louis run.
Roads nearly im-
passable.

CUYLER LEE, Agent
201-203 LARKIN ST., S. F.

This is the White Steam Touring Car complete with canopy top, curtains and glass front, baskets, acetylene lamp equipment, and extra tonneau seat.

WHITE STEAM TOURING CAR COMPLETE

AUTOMOBILE GARAGE
SAN MATEO

PAUL L. NOISAT PHONE BLACK 111
GARAGE AND REPAIR SHOP
B ST. NEAR THIRD AVE.

Automobile Topics

The Mobile Carriage Company has sold through its Los Angeles branch a Pierce Stanhope to Dr. Milbank Johnson, president of the Los Angeles Automobile Club. Dr. Johnson is one of the oldest automobile owners in Southern California and his selection of a Stanhope is a substantial endorsement of that car. The Mobile Company has made special preparation at the annual race meet at Del Monte for the care of its regular patrons' cars. The service is rendered gratis. The four-cylinder Pierce Arrow touring car which has been recently received by the Mobile Company is creating a very favorable impression among prospective purchasers. The Arrow is considered the finest American built automobile. Frank E. Hartigan, manager of the Mobile Company, visited Los Angeles last week. The conditions and demand for high grade cars for the coming year is sufficient to make room for a considerable trade at that point.

Max Schwabacher was surprised to learn that he had made the run from Oakland to Byron Springs last week in two hours. He says it is practically impossible to make the run in that time. His trip consumed three hours and a quarter, and that was quick time.

William E. Metzger was in the city last week. This is the first time he has ever been in San Francisco and he was very much pleased with it. He thinks the motor car business here looks very bright. He left Sunday night for the East.

M. Tansey, of the Hartford Rubber Works, received a Cadillac Model B touring car last week.

S. N. Wood has presented his daughters, Mrs. Green and Mrs. Pyser, with a Model B Cadillac touring car. Mrs. Green has already become quite an enthusiastic automobilist.

The White Sewing Machine Company is very much pleased with the showing made by its cars in the run from New York to St. Louis. There were five Whites on the run as against only two of any other make. Motor Age says: "It seems eminently fitting that Windsor T. White, among the first to broach a big club tour to St. Louis, should benefit by having the White car strongest in the field. 'The Silent Five,' as the White brigade has come to be known, has drawn universal attention through traveling together along the run. Like a flock of doves the White brigade sails along over the roads, and the equal speed of the cars is shown by the fact that all finished at Buffalo in a bunch in two hours and fifty minutes after seventy-two miles of running." At Cleveland the White cars were reinforced by two more, making seven for the final run to St. Louis.

The White Company is at work on its racing steamer which is entered for the Vanderbilt cup race on October eighth. It is the first time that the White Company has entered one of its cars in so important a race as this, and it is exciting great interest. Mr. Rollin White, the designer of the car, says: "I think we have a good fighting chance to finish first in the big race; the White cars have always a little more than held their own in endurance contests, and I do not see why we should not expect to do as much in the Vanderbilt race; we have attained a speed of better than a mile a minute, and we have every hope of making a good showing. Webb Jay will drive the White racer."

Clinton L. Walker, of Minneapolis, who is sojourning in California this summer, making his headquarters at Fall River Mills, Shasta county, has written a very interesting letter to the White Company, recounting the experiences of a trip he recently took through Shasta and Siskiyou counties, well toward the Oregon line. He left the road and struck across the country several times, and the only difficulty encountered in the tour was the constant annoyance of grease-wood brush, which more or less hindered the progress of his car and caused him some annoyance in becoming entangled in the under part of the machine. Other than this he writes: "I have had no trouble with the mechanism of the car, and other than the annoyance caused by the grease-wood brush, made a perfect trip. It is a most remarkable machine."

Leon Roos is back from his run to Los Angeles in his White car. He is very enthusiastic over the successful trip he made.

GEO. P. MOORE & CO.

Phone South 697

AUTOMOBILE SPECIALTIES

305 VAN NESS AVENUE

THE OLDSMOBILE TOURING CAR

Handsome Lines      Greatest Power
Most Thoroughly Built      Easiest Running
Easiest Controlled
Most Satisfactory Car for the Money
Always Goes

PRICE COMPLETE WITH LAMPS, HORN AND TOOLS

$1050.00

PIONEER AUTOMOBILE CO.

901-25 Golden Gate Ave.      -      San Francisco

Oakland, 355 Tenth Street

AUTOMOBILE REPAIRS

81 CITY HALL AVE.      Telephone South 1039

De Dion Plugs
De Dion Porcelains
Electric Cable

ANDREWS, KEENAN & BLASAUF

"POPE"
Toledo

POPE TOLEDO TOURING CAR CO.

Phone South 1142

G. A. BOYER, Manager

134-148 GOLDEN GATE AVE.

On the front seat, at the left-hand side, is Mr. Wm. E. Metzger, general manager of the Cadillac Automobile Company of Detroit. To his right is Cuyler Lee and directly in back of him is Phil B. Bekeart, and to the right of Bekeart is Norman Church of Los Angeles.

Henry Miller, accompanied by Miss Hilda Spong and other members of his company, made a trip to Burlingame last week in a Winton touring car. Mr. Miller, who is particularly familiar with French cars, stated on his return from Burlingame that it was the best automobile ride he had ever taken. This statement is much to the credit of American manufacturers.

E. P. Brinegar takes pleasure in stating that the famous and long-watched-for four-cylinder Winton touring car arrived here on Saturday last and is now on exhibition at the Pioneer Automobile Company's garage, No. 901 Golden Gate avenue. All are cordially invited to call and inspect this wonderful piece of mechanism.

W. T. Robertson and party of friends made a record run from San Jose to Oakland in a Winton on Sunday last. The time consumed was one hour and twenty-four minutes. J. J. Avis in company with his wife and family drove a Winton touring car to Niles last Sunday. The trip was made without an accident of any kind, which is most remarkable when taken into consideration that it was Mr. Avis's second attempt at playing the part of chauffeur.

The new three-cylinder St. Louis has just arrived and may be seen at the Del Monte meet. George J. Wellington's new St. Louis is seen daily in front of the Haywards building. H. M. Holbrook expects to make a run to the Del Monte meet in his new St. Louis. H. F. Dutton has just returned from Port Townsend, where he had a very successful tour in his St. Louis car.

Henry Dernham has just purchased a four-cylinder Pope-Toledo touring car. A four-cylinder Pope-Toledo has also been delivered to William Kaufman.

George A. Pope, George P. Fuller and the Pope-Toledo Touring Car Company have all stripped their four-cylinder Pope-Toledo cars, which will be raced at the Del Monte tournament, and good time is expected from these three machines.

The world's record in continuous automobile speed and endurance was broken by a Packard machine when Charles Schmidt on the Grosse Pointe (Mich.) mile track drove an American made car, a standard Model "L" Packard, one thousand miles without stopping the motor in twenty-nine hours, fifty-three minutes, thirty-seven and three-fifths seconds, averaging thirty-three and one-half miles per hour for the entire distance. The motor was never stopped and the only stop of the car itself was on account of tires. Mr. Schmidt was relieved at intervals by E. Roberts, foreman of the Packard factory, and by S. D. Waldron, manager of the sales department at Detroit, who conducted the trial. Its object was not so much to break records as to test the endurance and efficiency of the machine. The fact that a large proportion of the time elapsed was during the night, when, in order to obviate risks, the speed was lowered, makes the record still more remarkable.

The second annual race meet of the Automobile Club of California is now on at Monterey. The racing committee of the club consists of L. P. Lowe, chairman; S. G. Buckbee and C. C. Moore. Great interest is being shown in the event. For the twenty races about one hundred and thirty entries have been received. All the local automobile agencies are represented in the events. Tomorrow will occur the hill-climbing contests.

Motocycle Items

The Pacific Motocyclists will hold reliability runs the two next Sundays, one of which will probably be around the bay and the second one to Livermore and return. It is proposed to establish secret controls at different points along the routes and compel the riders to travel at a regular gait the entire distance or be penalized.

C. W. Risdon of Los Angeles arrived in the city last Sunday evening, having ridden up from the Southern metropolis on his Indian. He left Los Angeles Friday morning. His riding time was twenty-seven hours for the four hundred and seventy odd miles. Mr. Risdon will spend several days in San Francisco and may participate in the reliability run of the Pacific Motocyclists.

C. C. Hopkins is in the country on a business and pleasure trip, riding his Indian, and before his return to the city will take in the automobile races at Del Monte. —The Chauffeur.

The Emporium
CALIFORNIA'S LARGEST — AMERICA'S GRANDEST STORE

OUTFITTERS FOR AUTOMOBILISTS

¶ The only complete assortment of Auto clothing and sundries in the city. The stock includes the products of O. Strom & Fils, Paris, and Saks & Company, New York.

MR. CHARLES SCHMIDT, in his 22 H. P. Packard Voiture Legere, "Gray Wolf." Mile record, 46:2-5 sec.

A Posthumous Love Poem

[This poem was written by the late B. F. Taylor, in his youth, to the lady who afterwards became his first wife. It was found among her papers, after her death, by one of her relatives. The supposition is that it was never published, as it does not appear in any of the author's books. The manuscript was given to me by B. F. Taylor's grand-niece, who resides in this city.—Ed.]

Old Time on his pinions so blithely goes by,
He leaves smiles on thy cheek and a light in thine eye;
And if he could e'er from his duty be free,
He would smooth his rough brow while gazing at thee!
If Time were a lover—and thy beauty could feel,
His scythe would grow rusty—his glass would stand still!
But soon he will come in his white wintry dress,
And with a chill snow-wreath, thy fair brow he will press—
He'll dim thy bright eye;—from thy cheek every rose,
The Frost-King shall wither, when life's springtime shall close!

But will naught that is lovely of thee then remain?
No charms that will bloom in new beauty again?
Oh, yes; there's a light that's the brightest—the clearest,
When deep gloom envelopes—when night is the drearest—
A treasure, the wreck will still leave behind,—
Thy heart's pure affections—the charms of thy mind!

Pat's Quick Courtship

BY ARTHUR DELROY.

Paddy had a little cot
Adjoining Widow Fagan's,
'Twas lonely in his little cot,
And there were no young Fagans.

"It seems a sin to see the smoke
From both them chimneys rising,"
Said Pat, when with the widow's woes
He once was sympathizing.

The widow must have thought so, too,
For they no longer tarried,
And on the self-same afternoon
The neighbor friends were married.

And all the alley folks rejoiced,
Excepting Widow Hocking,
Who owned the empty little house—
She called the marriage "shocking!"

August, 1904.

Why He Was Sanguine

"Yes," said the great detective, "I have shadowed her for three weeks."

"And you say that during all that time she was on her good behavior?" asked the anxious husband.

"I swear it," said the detective.

"Then how am I going to secure a divorce?" the husband asked, and there was anguish in his tone.

"Don't worry," said the detective, "the evidence will soon be forthcoming."

"How do you know?" eagerly demanded the husband.

"I heard her say that she was going to break up house-keeping and move into a fashionable boarding house!"

—The Hawkshaw.

No harm in asking: Swedish massage and movements surprise most persons. Inquire of Lindstrom & Einarson, 406 Sutter Street.

SUMMER RESORTS

The following Resorts will send descriptive booklet when requested

GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM

A Sanitarium, cottage plan; not a hospital. Equipped for the scientific application of Water, Electricity, Massage, Tissue Oscillation, Electric Light, X-Ray, Dry, Hot Air and all minor treatments. Large grounds,  $5\frac{1}{4}$  acres, shade, etc. Separate treatment apartments for men and women. Fifteen minutes walk from centre of city; one block from car line. Beautiful scenery. Write for literature. GARDEN CITY SANITARIUM, San Jose, Cal.

Spend Your Vacation

A great many San Francisco people are planning to spend the entire summer at Hotel Del Monte. No other resort in California offers such a combination of attractions—sea bathing, golf, automobilism, bowling, tennis, fishing, and all out-door sports. Instead of going from place to place seeking comforts, the wise ones of society are planning already to put in several enjoyable weeks down at Del Monte by the sea. Address Geo. P. Snell, manager, Del Monte, California.

At Hotel Del Monte

Kenilworth Inn

Mill Valley

One of the most popular resorts in Mill Valley, situated at the foot of Mt. Tamalpais; only 50 minutes' ride from the city; rates reasonable.

MISSIS PALMER & HULETT.

Tahoe Tavern

On Lake Tahoe, the largest and most beautiful body of water in the world at this elevation, now open. The tavern will be conducted this season by Mr. F. W. Richardson, manager of California's famous mission hotel, The Glenwood, Riverside; a guarantee that it will be strictly first class. The table supplied with all delicacies; fishermen constantly employed to furnish lake trout. For rates address F. W. RICHARDSON

The Grove

Lake Tahoe

Half mile east of Tallac on Lake Shore. Rates $2 per day; $10 per week; meals 50c. Good saddle horses and the best of livery; boats free to all guests.

J. E. PARMETER, Prop., Tallac, Cal.

Hotel Bon Air

Go to Hotel Bon Air for your summer outing. Thirty-seven minutes from San Francisco. Bowling, tennis, boating, bathing and fishing. Escalante R. R. Station. MR. AND MRS. J. E. MANLOVE, Props., Ross P. O., Marin County.

The Tallac

Lake Tahoe, Cal.

Cafe European. Nurses, Maids and Children, American Plan. Prices now as low as any hotel on Lake. Service, accommodations, boating and livery superior to any. Address M. LAWRENCE & CO., Tallac, Cal.

Brockway

Lake Tahoe

Opens June 1st. Write FRANK B. ALVERSON, Mgr.

Brockway, Cal.

THE MART DOMESTIC and IMPORTED BEERS
WINES and LIQUORS, for Camping,
Picnics and Vacations, at
1348 MARKET STREET Phone South 1176 REDUCED PRICES

Techau Tavern

The most unique resort in San Francisco.

There is not a more artistically appointed cafe in the country.

It is a place wherein the guest may feast the eye while dining sumptuously and being regaled with exquisite music.

The Tavern is now under new and experienced management, and patrons are assured of the constant attendance of the chief of the establishment, and of prompt service at all times.

Special attention is paid to luncheon, dinner and after-theatre parties.

Music

[Communications addressed to this department should be received not later than Tuesday noon.]

New Ensemble Club

The Pianistic Club is the latest organization of amateurs. It holds its meetings at the residence of Mrs. H. McCarthy, and R. A. Lucchesi is the director. Ensemble music of a very high order is rendered. The club may possibly be heard publicly this winter, lending its work for some charitable purpose. The active members are Mrs. Lizzie Chamot, Miss Sadie Wafer, Miss Hattie Wilson, Miss Alice Dunn, Miss Mabel Vanderhoof, and W. N. McCarthy.

The Pasmores are about to move to 1430 McAllister street. They have lived for seventeen years in their present abode in Washington street, where five of their six children were born. The two elder daughters, Mary and Suzanne, have begun the profession of teaching the violin and piano, respectively. Miss Pasmore has been appointed professor of violin at the King Conservatory, San Jose, and at the Palo Alto Academy, Palo Alto.

M. Pechin, the basso of St. Brigid's church, passed away last week, very suddenly, from a hemorrhage of the stomach. M. Pechin was one of the best known bassos in San Francisco, where he had been for years a church choir singer. He sang just the day before his death in his accustomed place at St. Brigid's.

Howe's Lecture

"Composition, Composer, and Critic" was the theme of James Hamilton Howe's chatty lecture to the Howe Club at Byron Mauzy hall last week. The personal part of the discourse was particularly interesting, especially Mr. Howe's estimate of some of our local critics. He spoke in very complimentary terms of Oscar Weil's critical work. The lecturer created much amusement by reading some of Bosworth's published criticism upon his own "Song of War," rendered later in the evening by Mr. George R. Bird. The song proved a very spirited and effective one, despite Mr. Bosworth's disapproval of what he was pleased to call its "barber-shop chords." A number of Mr. Howe's vocal compositions were rendered by Mr. George R. Bird, Mrs. C. J. Blaisdell and Mr. Leland Stanford Roberts, Mr. Howe at the piano. The principal trouble with Mr. Howe's music is that it is too good to be popular, but popularity is synonymous with mediocrity. In the course of his talk, the lecturer mentioned the fact that the orchestral section of the Howe Club expects to perform Tschai-kowsky's "Symphonie Pathetique," an event which will be looked forward to with interest.

How Gounod Wrote "Faust"

An exchange says that Gounod composed the opera of "Faust" during one of his sojourns in Mediterranean Europe, where he frequently walked alone among the hills. In his own words: "The beauty of the night in such a climate and at that season is well-nigh unimaginable. The vault of heaven literally quivers with stars like an ocean with waves of light, so full does infinite space appear of twinkling, tremulous luminaries. During my fortnight's stay I often sat listening to the eloquent silence of these phosphorescent nights. I would perch myself on some steep rock, and stay for hours gazing out on the horizon, rolling a big stone down the precipitous slope from time to time, to hear it bound and bound till it struck the sea below and raised a ruffle of foam and spray. Now and again a solitary night-bird uttered its mournful note, and made me think of those weird precipices whose horror Weber has rendered with such marvelous power in that immortal incantation scene in 'Der Freischutz.' It was during one of these nocturnal rambles that the first idea for the Walpurgis Night in Goethe's 'Faust' struck me. I never parted with the score; I carried it about with me everywhere, and jotted down in stray notes any idea which I thought might be useful whenever I made an attempt to use the subject for an opera. This, for several reasons, I did not attempt to do until seventeen years afterwards."

—The Music Critic.

M. H. RICHARDSON, Opposite Phelan Building
Importer of Precious, Semi-Precious and Superior Imitation Stones
769 MARKET ST., SAN FRANCISCO

MRS. E. L. RYAN
DERMATOLOGIST
Weight Reduced
APARTMENT 500 THE IROQUOIS
524 ELLIS STREET
Phone Private Exchange 719
Wrinkles and all Facial Blemishes and Superfluous Hair removed. Manicuring, Hair Dressing, Scalp Treatment. Will teach others the Profession.

MME. GILLINGHAM

COMPLEXION SPECIALIST

Will guarantee to permanently remove every wrinkle no matter how deep crows feet, small pox pittings, freckles, bagginess of the eyes, restore lost contour, making you a new skin as clear and fresh as in youth. No surgery or electricity used. There are ladies at the Parlors who have one half of the face treated, showing the thoroughness of the treatment.

All Consultation, either by mail or person, free and confidential.

Parlors, 131 POWELL ST., Near Ellis

DR. E. H. RETSLOFF
2504 CLAY ST. Phone Geary 2259
WRINKLES, Crows Feet, Lines, Scars, Tan, Freckles, Yellow and Flabby Skin and all FACIAL BLEMISHES REMOVED by my new scientific Parisian method. No pain, no inconvenience, no red after effects. SUPERFLUOUS HAIR removed.
RETSLOFF CREAMS AND ASTRINGENTS
Invaluable to ladies of refinement.
Will teach others the Profession—Dr. Retsloff will form a class for teaching any part of her wonderful treatment to those who desire to make a profession of Facial and Skin Treatment. Call or write.

MRS. L. WARWICK
Formerly of the Waldorf.
ELECTROLYSIS, FACIAL TREATMENTS
Superfluous Hair, Warts and Moles Removed with ELECTRIC NEEDLE
Room 603 STARR KING BUILDING 121 GEARY STREET
Phone Private Exchange 219

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR and all other Facial Blemishes

are removed by MISS LOIS GRAY, Donohoe Building, Rooms 28 and 29, 1170 Market St., with the Electric Needle, without pain or scar. Permanency guaranteed. Hours 1 to 4 P. M. Phone Folsom 3783.

H. L. Davis J. W. Davis
W. D. Fennimore
As far as the eye can see —over our Prescription
Books—more than 100,000
SATISFIED customers in California are wearing
GLASSES made by us.
We can satisfy you, too.

BUCHANAN BROS.
609 Sacramento Street

Dealers in Feather Dusters, Brooms, Carpet Sweepers, all kinds of Brushes, Liquid and Paste Blacking.
San Francisco, Cal.

LOUIS CREPAUX

(MEMBER PARIS GRAND OPERA)

SCHOOL OF TONE PLACING (PALATAL SYSTEM)

Vocal Phonetics—Besides the
"Palatal Tone Placing System"

taught in the Louis Crepau School, another and most important feature is the teaching of the English phonetic sounds. The study of the five vowels is not all that is necessary to sing in a language, and particularly so in English. Very few English-speaking people are able to sing the phonetics of their language exempt from throatiness. Fundamentally, English phonetics cannot be emitted in singing as uttered in speech. From a vocal standpoint and through ten years of experience in teaching English-speaking singers, Mr. Crepau has made a vocal classification of all the English phonetic sounds. This classification enables English-speaking singers to master all the English phonetic sounds and renders them harmonious and easy to sing.

Apply at the School Mondays and Thursdays, from 2:00 to 2:30 p. m. Y. M. C. A. Building, Ellis and Mason Sts.

THE BURROWES COURSE OF MUSIC STUDY
FOR CHILDREN (KINDERGARTEN AND PRIMARY)

Studio, 2209 Broderick St., bet. Washington and Jackson.
Reception Hour, Tuesdays and Fridays, 1:30 to 2 P. M.

MRS. FRANCES B. WILLIAMS, Piano Teacher

Representative of Katharine Burrowes

Telephone
Geary 2472

Teachers taught the Burrowes System and outfits furnished.

LOUIS H. EATON

ORGANIST AND DIRECTOR OF THE CHOIR

TRINITY CHURCH

Teacher of Singing Piano and Organ

Special advantages offered singers in choir training
Studio and Residence 1676 Broadway

Between Van Ness Ave. and Franklin Street

H. B. PASMORE

TEACHER OF SINGING

WILL REMOVE TO

1430 GOLDEN GATE AVENUE*SEPTEMBER FIRST*1424 Washington Street*M. GERTRUDE JUDD

Teacher of Whistling

785 Geary St., S. F.*Phone Hyde 933*JOSEPH ROECKEL and MME. ELLEN COURSEN-ROECKEL

VOCAL INSTRUCTORS

Assisted by MARIO and MARIA ROECKEL in the Juvenile Classes
Church and Operatic Repertoire, a specialty

1060 Fulton St., bet. Steiner and Pierce

Conrad W. Fuhrer

TEACHER of Violin and Ensemble Playing. 1676 Page St.
Phone Fell 3373. Also care of Sherman, Clay & Co.

SIGNOR PAOLO LA VILLA

(Of Florence, Italy)

N. B.—Special Terms for Professionals.

Vocal Studio: THE ROOSEVELT, 546 Sutter St.
Phone James 1282

Dr. H. J. STEWART

TEACHER OF VOCAL MUSIC

Pianoforte, Organ, Harmony and Composition
Special course for singers desiring church appointments

Studio, 1105 Bush St.

MR. ANDREW BOGART

TEACHER OF SINGING

METHOD of the ELDER LAMPERTI

Home Studio: S. E. corner Buchanan and Page Sts.

PHONE PARK 202

MR. THEODOR

SALMON

Concert Pianist and Teacher. Pupil of Kullak, Reinecke, Jadassohn and Richter. Studio, 546 Sutter St. Phone James 1281. Residence, "The Nordhoff."

Von Meyerinck
School of Music

Telephone Park 223

841 FULTON STREET

Offers all the advantages of Eastern and European conservatories for a thorough musical education.

STAFF OF TEACHERS.

Voice Culture - - - MRS. ANNA VON MEYERINCK
Art Expression, Opera and Drama, MRS. MARY FAIRWEATHER
Piano Harmony and Composition MR. FRED ZECH, JR.
Violin and Viola MISS MARIE H. MILLS
MR. W. F. ZECH

Competent staff of assistant teachers. Special teachers for
Languages (German, French and Italian), Physical Culture,
Fencing, Elocution, and Stage Dancing. Prospectus upon application.

CHICKERING Best in the World
PIANOS Oldest in America

100,000 IN USE

BENJ. CURTAZ & SON, 16 O'FARRELL STREET

SOLE AGENTS

THE OAKLAND TRIBUNE

is delivered into more homes of the masses and classes of Oakland, and Alameda County than all other Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley dailies combined. Reason—it's the best newspaper.

W. E. DARGIE, Pres.*T. T. DARGIE, Secy.

Letters

Early Bohemia

Under the title "Early Bohemia," one of the old members of the Bohemian Club, who, for obvious reasons withholds his name, has collected the invitations issued for the High Jinks held between 1873 and 1880. The evident object of the issue is to give a peg on which to hang a scathing arraignment of the degeneration of the organization from the time when the line was drawn on the hither side of money to now, when money sans brains is no bar.

"Money is a good thing to have — indeed, absolutely necessary as an appendage; but money and wit and the kind of brains that go to make up a true Bohemian Club, do not go together.

"In the Beginning, rich men were absolutely barred, unless they had some of the elements of true Bohemians (could do something). A short time after the organization of the club, a very prominent rich man was blackballed simply because he had money. Could that happen today?

"Things have changed; now the simply rich become members because it is fashionable to say 'I am a member of the Bohemian Club,' and they imagine that some of the reputed brightness of the club will be reflected on them. The poor artist or literary man gets in, by hook or by crook, because he thinks he may be able to sell some of his brains to the merely rich. So both are satisfied in a way; but neither wholly.

"The rich were allowed to become members at first as a great compliment (and they considered it so) to help pay and support the club. Now they get in because they are rich.

"The standard of the Bohemian Club should be brains, not money, and thereby you will live longer in the land the Lord God giveth thee.

"You are letting in too many boys — not because they know anything, but because they are the sons of rich men, who themselves never aspired to membership. Let the young men in if they have brains; but draw the line at brains, not money."

Yet, withal, the Member is no pessimist. He does not think there are no bright minds and that all the wit and wisdom belongs to the good old times, but only that the proportion is not well kept up, and that the moneyed element sets a different standard, and with the increase in the membership the old-time good fellowship, the coziness, has disappeared. Perhaps, too, in a way, he is jealous of old memories, since he reminds the new wits that they cannot pilfer the sentiments and expressions of the dead and gone members and pass them off for new coin undetected. The little brochure, which is gotten out in the excellent style which marks all the work of the Paul Elder Company, is on sale for seventy-five cents, but that is a matter which should not have opportunity to concern the general public. The edition is limited to five hundred copies, and by the time the club members have done their duty in providing themselves with this memento and record of its doings there should be none left for outsiders.

A New Magazine

About the first of September a new literary magazine is to make its appearance. The plan of publication is original, since no bid will be made for a large subscription list. Only two thousand five hundred copies will be issued, and these are all to go to subscribers. There will be no single copies sold and no samples given away, but subscribers who are dissatisfied, if any there should be, will have the privilege of returning the copies and receiving their money back. This new venture is to be called The Rose Jar, and will be a successor to that ideal magazine, The Book-Lover, which passed out of existence with the June number. Mr. Warren Eldridge Price, formerly of San Francisco, who was the original owner and publisher of The Book-Lover, is the father of the new venture, which is to be, as was the original Book-Lover, a large quarto issued quarterly at two dollars a year. As a speculative venture The Rose Jar offers a better inducement than the high-priced editions de luxe which tempt the literary poseur, for the early numbers of the Book-Lover, issued at twenty-five cents each, commanded four times that price before the year was out and the first volume, comprising but four numbers, sells readily at from six to ten dollars — when it can be had at all.

The Louisiana Purchase centenary has furnished an incidental theme for so many novels that it is surprising to find neither books nor announcements of books in which the Lewis and Clark expedition figure, nor even the settlement of Oregon.

Corey's Cafe, 600 Mission. Mercantile Lunch 11 to 2. Cedar Brook Whiskey, formerly W. H. McBrayer—10 yrs. old.

MURINE EYE REMEDY

THOSE
LUSTROUS
EYES ARE MURINE
EYES

Sunlight Intensified by Reflection

from Ocean Beach and Desert Sand unrelieved by foliage. Winds and mineral laden poisonous dust, all bring eye-troubles in their wake, Granulated Eyelids, Red, Itching, Burning, Tired and Watery Eyes, Impaired Vision and Eye Pain. Prevention, Relief and Cure are found in MURINE EYE REMEDY, mild and harmless. Murine aids those wearing glasses, doesn't smart, but soothes and quickly cures. Is an Eye Tonic. Sold by Opticians and Druggists. Fifty Cents.

EXCURSION RATES ST. LOUIS

ROUND TRIP Excursion Tickets to St. Louis and Chicago on sale Sept. 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 8, 19, 20, 28, 29, and dates in other months later at the following rates:

TO ST. LOUIS . . . $67.50
TO CHICAGO, passing one way through St. Louis . . . $72.50

RETURN LIMIT three months. Stop overs allowed on both going and returning trip.

THESE RATES GOOD ON ANY TRAIN

Ask about the Through Tourist Cars direct to the Exposition.

613 MARKET STREET

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

Apparently there is no uprooting the idea that history—at least so far as the United States is concerned, began and ended on the Atlantic Coast, with an accidental dribble or so into the Mississippi Valley.

The Price of Youth

It was, of course, the girl who paid "The Price of Youth." Fan Tasker has done many things that do not meet the approval of the neighbors, and would be open to criticism anywhere. Sometimes she has acted out of defiance of criticism, sometimes out of pure innocence and the lack of guidance, and sometimes deliberately, but without the judgment and experience to forecast the end. Willis King, the lover, is just the average man. In his estimation of his own deserts he is quite certain that he deserves absolute perfection. He is not large-minded enough to see that the girl has been the victim of circumstances and he can make no allowances. As soon as a breath of suspicion is wafted towards him he begins to magnify and make the most of matters. It is probable that he has committed a thousand peccadilloes worse than Fan's worst, but for all that he must sit in judgment on her. Fan Tasker is not without her pride and it is her aloofness as much as her independence which keeps the village agog. Willis King did not possess a tithe of her moral courage and would not give her the benefit of a doubt, so it was the old story, of the lover marching off in apparent indignation, with his head held high, but in his coward heart rejoicing that he was released, and the girl going down into the depths. A sad story and a true one, but not discouraging, especially as there is a gleam of sunshine at the end. People who know the environment say that Margery Williams, the author, has given a perfect reproduction of village life and scenery in New Jersey. A wholesome story worth both the writing and the reading. Published by Macmillan.

Keeler's Elfin Songs

The latest addition to the roll of nonsense books for children is Charles Keeler's "Elfin Songs of Sunland," published at the Sign of the Live Oak in Berkeley. Mr. Keeler is favorably known by some of his achievements in verse; that his fame will be increased by the present volume is not so certain. This kind of child poetry is one of the literary fads of the day, and poets and poetasters alike tread in the footsteps of Stevenson and his "Child's Garden of Verse." It is a question whether children are really as much pleased by this sort of writing as their elders think they are or ought to be. After all, a child's standpoint is a very difficult one to discover and rare is the writer who does discover it. In the quest for complicity many a one achieves merely silliness. To quote a juvenile critic, "It makes me feel as if my head was full of mush." Some of the nonsense in Mr. Keeler's book is about as absurd as anything that has dared to appear between book-covers. I suppose such rigamaroles as "My Auntie," "Maggie Muldoon," "The Boobity Bumpkin," and "Poor Mr. Midas" make an appeal to very little folks who are fond of jingle and care nothing at all for sense. Even with this excuse for being it is doubtful if they will supersede time-honored "Mother Goose." Mr. Keeler has the gift of metre, and he can make up funny words, and in "Songs of the Wildwood" there are stray bits of real poetry. Occasionally the cloven hoof of the school-master appears. Could not Mr. Keeler spare us Saturn and the Milky Way, and the antlers of the leopard lily? These little scraps of learnedness jar oddly upon the will-o'-the-wisp spirit of the book.

A book competition of a new order was started at an Eastern summer resort. Instead of a list of best books the guests voted for the best hammock novel, which was defined to be the book which would make one forego all else in the way of enjoyment to remain in the hammock and read it. The choice as determined by a majority vote, fell upon "The Gordon Elopement."

In the query department of The Lamp for the current month there is a communication asking for enlightenment as to where, in ancient or modern literature, there could be anything found to throw light on the meaning of the expression "a Sabbath day's journey." Next thing, somebody advanced enough to read the monthly literary magazines will be inquiring as to where the story of Adam and Eve is to be unearthed from and who was the author.

—The Bookworm.

VALUABLE JEWELRY LOST

During the summer months much jewelry is lost traveling and at summer resorts. This can be avoided by leaving yours with the Baldwin Jewelry Co., 906 Market St., who make advances on diamonds and jewelry.

SCHOOLS and COLLEGES

HEALD'S

LEADING BUSINESS COLLEGE of the WEST

Over 24 Post St., San Francisco, Cal.

Established 40 years. Open entire year, day and night Write for circulars (free.)

St. Mary's College

OAKLAND, CAL.

Literary, Scientific, Commercial Courses.

Studies resumed August 1, 1904.

Send for Catalogue.

BROTHER VELLESIAN, President.

Santa Clara College

SANTA CLARA, CAL.

The next session will begin August 2, 1904. Send for full particulars to

(Rev.) R. E. KENNA, S. J., President.

Hoitt's

School for Boys; 14th year begins August 9th; larger and stronger faculty than ever; perfect sanitation; illustrated catalogue. W. J. MEREDITH, Vice-Principal. Menlo Park, Cal.

Irving Institute

Boarding and day school for young ladies and little girls. 2126 California St. Will reopen August 1, 1904. Accredited to the universities. REV. EDWARD B. CHURCH, A. M., Principal.

Miss Bolte's School

2174 Post St., prepares for universities and colleges. Music by graduate professor of Berlin and Leipzig conservatories. Conversational and grammatical French and German; English. Board, English, French, German, music, $30 month. Next term July 25. Steiner 656.

San Francisco Business College

Scott & Van Arsdale Building, 738 Mission St., between Third and Fourth. We are located in our new quarters. The finest schoolrooms in the West. Come and see them whether you want to go to school or not. Business men know where we are. We had eight calls for help this week.

Callaghan Marsh
Business College

is the most practical; recommended by expert court reporters. Send for catalogue.

1382 Market St., San Francisco.

The Melbourne Institute

For stuttering and stammering teaches a new scientific course for cure. It is successful. It has been established in this city for three years under teaching of Prof. F. G. Norcross, acknowledged mental expert, whose work has won the admiration of reputable physicians and other deep students of mentality. The services of the Melbourne may be enlisted with the utmost confidence. Address MELBOURNE INSTITUTE, Van Ness Ave. and Market St., San Francisco. Hours 1 to 5 P. M. Telephone Mint 2626.

THE LYCEUM

Jordan or any Stanford Bldg., San Francisco.

AN ACCREDITED PREPARATORY SCHOOL For the University, Law, and Medical College, Etc. This school is well known for its careful and thorough work; we prepare you well. References, President professor. L. H. GRAU Ph. D., Principal. Rooms, 333-346, 5th floor, Phelan Bldg., San Francisco.

CALIFORNIA
BUSINESS COLLEGE

The largest and finest quarters in the city; refined residence locality. Position for every graduate. Thorough, modern. 75 Page Catalogue on request.

R. L. DURHAM, President.

925 Golden Gate Avenue.

San Francisco

Kent Law School

THIRTEENTH YEAR

Day and Night. Always open. No Vacations. Books Free.

536 Parrott Building (Emporium). Phone Folsom 2031

Century Electric Corporation

SUPPLIES, CONSTRUCTION, MANUFACTURING AND REPAIRING. BUILDINGS WIRED

16 and 18 SECOND STREET

Telephone Bush 352

San Francisco

The modish woman's stationery is as much a part of her nowadays as her dainty wardrobe. Cooper & Co., 746 Market Street, are showing the newest modes in paper and envelopes, dies and seals.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. —.

ELLA VAN BENTHUSEN Plaintiff
 vs.
 THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN Defendant

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:

THOMAS C. VAN BENTHUSEN, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's alleged willful and utter neglect of said plaintiff for more than four years last past, also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 30th day of June, in the year of our Lord; one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk,
 By CHAS. C. MORRIS, Deputy Clerk.

N. F. FLOOD, Plaintiff's Attorney

1122 Market St., Rooms 1, 2, 3 and 4.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. —. No. 91429

ELISE KOEBSCH Plaintiff
 vs.
 CHARLES W. F. KOEBSCH Defendant

The People of the State of California, send Greeting to:

CHARLES W. F. KOEBSCH, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of plaintiff; also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 8th day of July in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk,
 By GEO. W. LEE, Deputy Clerk

McCLELLAN &amp; McCLELLAN, Plaintiff's Attorneys.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA, a Corporation.

Plaintiff,

vs.

WILLIAM HORSTMAYER and FREDERICK HORSTMAYER, copartners doing business under the firm name of William Horstmeyer & Co., Clara Horstmeyer, wife of William Horstmeyer, et al., Defendants.

No. 89,714—Dept. 10. SUPERIOR COURT.

Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure.

Under and by virtue of an Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure, issued out of the Superior Court, Department No. 10, of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, on the 8th day of August, 1904, in the above entitled action, wherein the CENTRAL TRUST COMPANY OF CALIFORNIA, a corporation, the above named plaintiff, obtained a Judgment and Decree of Foreclosure against WILLIAM HORSTMAYER, et al.; defendants, on the 25th day of July, 1904, which said Judgment and Decree was, on the 2nd day of August, 1904, recorded in Judgment Book 87 of said Court, at page 523, I am commanded to sell all that certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and bounded and described as follows:

Lot Number Thirty-nine (39) in Block "B" fronting on the Southerly line of Merritt Street, between Rose and Hattie Streets, as per map entitled Map of portion of Park Lane Tract, surveyed March, 1885, by T. W. Morgan, and filed in the office of the Recorder of the City and County of San Francisco, on April 22, 1885, being between Seventeenth and Eighteenth Streets, and a portion of the San Miguel Rancho.

PUBLIC NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that on Friday, the 2nd day of September, 1904, at 12 o'clock, Noon, of that day, in front of the New City Hall, Larkin Street wing, in the City and County of San Francisco, I will, in obedience to said Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure, sell the above described property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to raise sufficient money to satisfy said Judgment, with interest and costs, etc., to the highest and best bidder, for lawful money of the United States.

JOHN B. REILLY, Commissioner.

San Francisco, August 10, 1904.

E. B. YOUNG and F. A. DENICKE, No. 14 Sansome Street, San Francisco, Cal., Attorneys for Plaintiff.

VERUS GUARANTEED PILES TO CURE
 OR $50. FORFEITED. One application relieves. Cures while you work. Price $2. Send only 25¢ with your druggist's name and we will send a $2 package of Verus prepaid. Send us the balance when cured. VERUS REMEDY COMPANY, Dept. E, Los Angeles, Cal.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF SAN FRANCISCO, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Department No. 2. No. 91829.

KATE BAIRD, Plaintiff.
 vs.
 CHARLES W. BAIRD, Defendant.

The People of the State of California send Greeting to:

CHARLES W. BAIRD, Defendant.

YOU ARE HEREBY REQUIRED to appear in an action brought against you by the above named Plaintiff in the Superior Court, City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this Summons, if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a judgment and decree of this Court dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, upon the ground of defendant's willful desertion of plaintiff for the period of more than one year continuously, next immediately preceding the date of the commencement of this action, and also upon the ground of defendant's failure to provide for plaintiff the common necessities of life he having the ability so to do, for the period of more than one year continuously next preceding the date of the commencement of this action; also for general relief, as will more fully appear in the Complaint on file, to which special reference is hereby made.

All of which will more fully appear in the Complaint on file herein to which you are hereby referred.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said Complaint, as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

GIVEN under my hand and Seal of said Superior Court at the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, this 5th day of August in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and four.

JOHN J. GREIF, Clerk,
 By JAS. R. MCLEROY, Deputy Clerk.

LOUIS H. BROWNSTONE, Plaintiff's Attorney.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of JAMES NEILL, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Mary A. Daly, Administratrix, with the will annexed, of the estate of James Neill, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Mary A. Daly, Administratrix, with the will annexed, of the estate of James Neill, deceased, at Room 498 Parrott Building, No. 855 Market Street, San Francisco, California, the same being her place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

MARY A. DALY, Administratrix, with the will annexed,
 of the Estate of JAMES NEILL, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, August 6, 1904.

JOHN J. BARRETT, Attorney for Administratrix, with the will annexed.
 Parrott Building, 855 Market Street.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

Estate of ELLEN HOLLAND, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned Josephine Mockler, administratrix of the Estate of Ellen Holland, deceased, to the creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four (4) months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Josephine Mockler, Administratrix, at Room 498 Parrott Building, No. 855 Market Street, San Francisco, California, the same being her place for the transaction of the business of the said estate in the City and County of San Francisco, State of California.

JOSEPHINE MOCKLER,
 Administratrix of the Estate of Ellen Holland, Deceased.

Dated at San Francisco, August 13, 1904.

JOHN J. BARRETT, Attorney for Administratrix,
 Rooms 497-498 Parrott Building, San Francisco.

That St. Louis Trip

TAKE THE BUSINESS LINE, THE

UNION PACIFIC

saving 12 hours Rate only $67.50 round trip.
 Through first and second-class cars, diners and all comforts. Best road and equipment. Safest line.
 Drop a postal and I will call and explain everything.

S. F. Booth, Gen. Agent U. P. R. R.

1 Montgomery St., San Francisco, California

DR. CHARLES W. DECKER

DENTIST—Phelan Bldg., Rooms 6 &amp; 10, 48 806 Market St. Phone John 3841

HAIR GOODS

G. L E D E R E R
Wig Maker and Hairdresser. Scalp treatments, Shampooing, Manicuring, Hair dyeing, Switches, Ornaments, Toupees. Complete line of pure Hair Goods only. 123 Stockton St.

KIMONOS AND JAPANESE GOODS

K I M O N O S
Silk and Cotton; Custom made and made to order; of every description at special low price. Call and inspect our large and artistic line. The Orient, 633 Sutter St. near Taylor.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR REMOVED

B E A T R I C E S T. J O H N
Hair, Face and Scalp Specialist. 426 Sutter St. Phone Black 153. Superfluous Hair killed root and branch by absorption—guaranteed permanent, $1.00.

HAT RENOVATORY

P A N A M A H A T S
Bleached and Blocked. 423 Sutter Street. 424 1/2 Montgomery Street. Telephones Black 4616. Red 3212.

Residence 814 Grove St., S. F.
Telephone Page 81

HENRY P. TRICOU
Notary Public

206 Montgomery St.
Bet. Pine and Bush
Telephone Main 1580

VEUVE
CLICQUOT
PONSARDIN

The most delicious
Champagne
of the Age

Yellow Label, Dry
Gold Label, Brut

Cruse &
Fils Freres

Clarets and
Sauternes

Creme des Grands
Crus
(Creme of Cognac)

A. Vignier Co.

429 & 431 Battery
San Francisco

Visit
DR. JORDAN'S
Great
Museum of Anatomy

1051 Market St., bet. 6th and 7th
San Francisco, Cal.

The largest of its kind in the world.
Book "The Philosophy of Marriage" mailed free.
A Valuable Book for Men.

AFTER a morning's shopping nothing will recuperate you so much as one of those delicious Club Cocktails. They are the correct thing to offer your friends whenever they call. They are both a tonic and stimulant, and fill a distinct place of their own. Easily served and appreciated by ladies and gentlemen alike. Buy some Manhattan and Martini, and ask your friends which they prefer. Of all dealers. Specify CLUB COCKTAILS.

G. F. HEUBLEIN & BRO., = Sole Proprietors
HARTFORD NEW YORK LONDON

PACIFIC COAST AGENTS SPOHN-PATRICK COMPANY

San Francisco Seattle Denver Salt Lake City Los Angeles

Other People's Ideas

Pecuniary obligations can never sit easy upon a feeling mind, except they are conferred by those we know value us, and whom we value ourselves.—Scott.

From "The Price of Youth," by Margery Williams:

Oh, everyone has a conscience! It's part of one's personal furniture. To go about denying that one has a conscience is nearly as conventional and unmodern as to go about denying the existence of God—and I should imagine as unsatisfactory. You can't discard your conscience in practical, everyday life any more than you can discard your boots. But the normal conscience is never assertive. A sensitive conscience argues defect, like a sensitive digestion.—King.

It is a curious fact that the godly usually contrive to exist on the shakels of the ungodly. One shudders to think what would happen if the ungodly were ever to be wiped out. There would be a sudden and extensive begging of bread from door to door.—King.

"There's religion and there's common sense, and I guess the Lord likes both. He sends the thunderstorms along, but you can't expect Him to be watching every little place all the while to see where they're going to hit. There's lots of folks I know round here that's always ready to blame things off on the Lord that ain't nothing in the world but their own carelessness. There was Deacon White, used to live down here along the Oceanside road. He was always talking about trustin' the Lord, an' he'd trust this an' he'd trust that, and let things run anyhow, just because he was too shif'less to look after 'em; an' he left his hay out one year, just for nothing but because he was too lazy to get it in when other folks did, an' the Lord got tired and showed him what He thought about it. The Deacon was awful mad, too.—Mrs. Hewitt.

I find it is usually the most religious people who have the least hesitation in telling the Lord what they think of Him when things go wrong.—King.

Love's as much an element as the rest of them. There's earth, air, fire, water—and love. It has to be calculated for. What I've reasoned out is that it has not been calculated for enough. It's got to come to all of us—and it will either come and stay, and make the old earth bloom with flowers—or it will come and go, and leave it like a plain swept by fire. It's not a trivial thing that only boys and girls play with; it's better—and worse. It ought to be prepared for and treated well. It's not often treated well. People have got into the way of expecting trouble and tragedy to come out of it. We are always hearing of its unhappiness in books. Poets write about it that way.—Tom, in "In Connection With the De Willoughby Claim," by Mrs. Burnett.

Visit the
Hoffman Cafe

Wm. J. Sullivan, Proprietor

Lunch, Grill and Wine Rooms

Half a block below Palace and Grand Hotels, S. F.

Fine Goods a Specialty. Merchants' hot lunch from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. An extra spread served on all holidays. Merchants' lunch served in Ladies Cafe and Grill, from 11 a. m. to 2:30 p. m. Oysters, English Chops, Steaks and Delicacies a specialty.

Handsomest Cafe in America

Open all night. Private Dining Rooms for Ladies and Escorts

601 Market St. (S. W. Cor. 2nd and Market Sts.)

W. SCHEPPLER &amp; SON

Dealer in Watches, Diamonds, Etc. Repairing and Cleaning of Watches and Jewelry.

1071 Market Street, San Francisco, Cal.

SOHMER
PIANO
AGENCY

WARRANTED 10 YEARS
BYRON MAUZY

The CECILIAN—The Perfect Piano Player

PIANOS
308-312 Post St.
San Francisco.

POODLE DOG RESTAURANT, CORNER Eddy and Mason Streets, San Francisco—Private dining and banquet rooms. Telephone 429.
A. B. BLANCO & BRUN, Proprietors

PALACE HOTEL

San Francisco, California.

TOURISTS and TRAVELERS will, now, with difficulty recognize the famous Court into which for twenty-five years carriages have been driven. This space of over a quarter of an acre has recently, by the addition of very handsome furniture, rugs, chandeliers and tropical plants, been converted into a lounging room, the

FINEST
IN THE
WORLD

THE EMPIRE PARLOR—the Palm Room, furnished in Cerise, with Billiard and Pool tables for the ladies—the Louis XV Parlor—the Ladies' Writing Room, and numerous other modern improvements, together with unexcelled Cuisine and the most convenient location in the City—all add much to the ever-increasing popularity of this most famous Hotel.

Larkspur

Ideal suburban property, beautifully situated in Marin county on the N. S. R. R. Completely sheltered by Mount Tamalpais from ocean wind and fogs. Extensive water works, sewerage and electric light systems. Attractions abound—such as sea-bathing, boating, groves of redwood, madrone and laurel, picturesque walks and drives, sunshine and wildwood vistas. The wonderful equability of the climate cannot be surpassed; flowers bloom perennially. The journey from San Francisco is short, enjoyable and full of interest. You can have a charming country home at a moderate price, and on easy terms.

American Land and Trust Co., 708 Market St., Mutual Savings Bank Bldg.

Those who read much

are more frequently subject to eye trouble than others. There are, however, numerous modern occupations which bring on eye troubles that injure the brain and the physical system irreparably. Avoid danger by

Using GEORGE MAYERLE'S GLASSES

His Glasses insure health and a clear vision. Consultation Free. Open until 9 o'clock every evening. Geo. Mayerle's GERMAN EYEWATER makes weak eyes strong, sore eyes well, rests tired eyes. Price 50c. 62c by mail. Mail order or Wells-Fargo. Geo. Mayerle's Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers insure clean lenses without scratching.

Showing effect of George Mayerle's Antiseptic Eyeglass Wipers

GEORGE MAYERLE, German Expert Optician

1071 MARKET STREET

Two Doors from Seventh

CAFE ZINKAND

After the Theatre call at this Palace of Delights and revel in the luxuries of a spread fit for the gods, or drink of some of the best wine that ever chased the skeleton from the feast or painted land scares within the brain of man.—Hograve.

HOUSEHOLD NUMBER

TOWN TALK

VOL. XIII. No. 627.

SAN FRANCISCO, SEPTEMBER 3, 1904.

PRICE 10 CENTS.

Famous Palm Court and Grill
Palace Hotel San Francisco,

SUNSET

Coming Season's Fashions and Fabrics now Ready in all departments
BULLOCK & JONES COMPANY
Tailors, Shirt makers and Men's Furnishers
106, 108, 110 SUTTER STREET, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

"ONE OF THEM"

THIS JOURNAL IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY

TOWN TALK PUBLISHING CO.

THEODORE F. BONNET - - - Editor
 CHARLES S. SMITH - - - Manager

609 MISSION ST. FOURTH FLOOR Telephone BUSH 713

SUBSCRIPTION.—One Year, in advance, $3.00; six months, $1.75; three months, $1.00; one month, 40 cents; single copies, 10 cents. Foreign subscriptions (countries in postal union), $4.00 per year. Sample Copies and Advertising Rates sent on application. For Sale by all Newsdealers.

Entered at the Post Office as second-class matter.

RALPH A. GROVER, Manager of Advertising
 New York Representative, FREDERIC M. KRUGLER, Room 918,
 150 Nassau Street.

The trade is supplied by the San Francisco News Company, 342 Geary street; east of the Rocky Mountains by the American News Company, N. Y.

TOWN TALK is kept on file and is for sale at Brentano's, 37 Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, France; 31 Union Square, New York City; 1015 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D. C.; 200 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, and Willard's Hotel, Washington, D. C.

No attention is paid to anonymous communications, but the wishes of contributors as to the use of their names will be scrupulously regarded. We cannot undertake to preserve or return manuscripts.

TOWN TALK is mailed to subscribers every Thursday and should be received in this city and vicinity every Friday. Please notify us of tardy delivery.

The Triennial Conclave

San Francisco is once more in gala attire, and for the second time her hospitality is to be extended to the Knights Templar of the United States of America. The occasion which the city is about to celebrate is one of great importance not only to a prominent fraternal society, but to the city itself. It marks an era in the history of an order about which cluster qualities of a fraternal, social, historical and mythical character, and it serves to draw to the metropolis of the West representative men from every part of the Union. It is needless to predict that this community will sustain California's reputation for hospitality. Twenty-one years have passed since the last Triennial Conclave was held in this city. We have expanded somewhat since then. We have grown in all directions. Twenty-one years ago San Francisco was an infant among the cities of America. We had scarcely begun to assume a metropolitan air. The streets were cobbled, and Lotta's Fountain and Lincoln's statue were pointed to with pride as evidence of our appreciation of art. Architecturally the city presented a freakish aspect. The new City Hall had attained its majority but was not half finished. Mr. Claus Spreckels had not begun to dream of building sky-scrapers, Mr. Phelan's senatorial ambition was not even in bud, and manifestations of his civic spirit were nowhere to be seen. The Phelan building, however, was yielding large rents, and was looked upon as evidence of confidence in the future of San Francisco. That confidence has been vindicated. The promise of the infant burg of twenty-one years ago has been fulfilled. Some of the Knights who were with us in the long ago will be with us again, and they will note the metamorphosis, and return to their homes, and tell of the great progress that has been made on the shore of the Pacific. It behooves us to increase the glamour of it all by entering into the spirit of the occasion, and joining in the festival with the enthusiasm that should be evinced by people who have so much to be grateful for.

Shortridge On Ruef's Trail

Charles M. Shortridge is on the rampage. He is off the machine reservation, and the ghost dance is a tame affair in comparison with the terpsichorean stunt that he is now performing. For years Charley Shortridge has been pretty generally regarded as one of the mildest-mannered men that ever drew a tongue in political debate. Always ready to take program, he was the incarnation of candor and frankness, and made no hypocritical pretense to courageous independence of "organization" rule. But he was never a truckling henchman of a boss. Possessed of a fine sense of humor he took politics largely as a joke, and derived much pleasure from contemplation of the fantastic tricks of picturesque reformers and deluded idealists. He loves the game, and always plays it "above board." Like George Bernard Shaw he believes that to catch the attention of the public you must play the mountebank occasionally, but there is sincerity behind his most grotesque poses. In his time he has made many friends, for candor is magnetic. And when he was "turned down," or rather bludgeoned at Santa Cruz by Abe Ruef, he had many sympathizers. It was felt that he had been treated brutally; not because he was denied nomination, but on account of the manner in which the bitter pill was administered. With his usual candor he confessed when it was over that he was indignant. And now he is after the scalp of Abe Ruef, and the thrifty boss is likely to find himself a storm centre for some time. Charley Shortridge gave a fine test of his mettle when he ran for the State Senate as an independent against the rich and powerful Hayes influence of San Jose. He is a most persuasive talker and he has the courage of his convictions. He has announced his intention of rescuing the Republican party from the clutches of Abe Ruef. It is a big undertaking, for Abe is pretty well entrenched at present, but Shortridge has grit, industry and perseverance, and the psychological moment for the undoing of the boss who loves to banquet himself publicly and bend the necks of the big men of the party to his chariot wheel may not be far off.

Political Prophets

Because of the apathy in the Democracy of California the prophets of the Republican press are predicting that Roosevelt will be elected by an unprecedented majority. They are laboring under the delusion that the pulse of the nation is located somewhere in this State. The Republicans always claim big majorities but when the votes are counted a different story is told. All Presidential elections are closely contested. In 1864, when Lincoln was running for re-election, he was despondent about his prospects, so great was the popular enthusiasm over McClellan. The defeat of Horace Greeley in 1872 seemed a foregone conclusion, and yet he polled over one hundred thousand more votes than Horatio Seymour, the Democratic hero of the preceding campaign. Each of the succeeding five campaigns was sharply contested from beginning to end. In the last quarter of a century we have not had an election which was not of doubtful issue in the minds of the political managers of both parties. Even that of 1896, when Bryan polled over six and a half million of votes, the issue was doubtful. The interest in Presidential elections has been increasing and the "silent" vote is constantly growing. In the campaign of 1860 whose issues brought about the civil war, the poll for all the candidates, Lincoln, Douglas, Breckenridge and Bell, was less than a seventh of the population of the country, while in 1896 the poll was equal to one-fifth of the population. With such a large body of voters prognostications are surely not worth while.

Roosevelt in Repose

Since his nomination for the Presidency Mr. Roosevelt has been leading such a quiet life, so at variance with his accustomed routine, that his friends should begin to feel alarmed. Mr. Roosevelt's sudden inclination toward repose is abnormal. Physicians regard such revolutionary changes of temperament as symptomatic of mental aberration. Mr. Roosevelt is an exponent of the strenuous life. He abhors repose. He is always "on the go." His muscles demand constant vigorous exercise. He feels a perpetual incentive to activity. His nature rebels against conventional relaxation. His active mind craves excitement. Hunting, fishing, horseback riding, fencing, boxing—these are the pastimes which his restless spirit prompts him to indulge, and occasionally he must exhort, advise and command. Our President is no laggard; the dawdler he regards with contempt and he abominates the man of sedentary habits. And yet this tireless athlete, this virile enthusiast who for years has kept his skin aglow, has suddenly, in the full vigor of his manhood, quit all his accustomed activities and sought the repose of a quiet home. For over thirty days he has not threatened to lick a single South American Republic. Barring his perfunctory acceptance of the nomination he hasn't made a speech. He hasn't even mustered up energy enough to scold anybody or to interfere in a strike. Some of the best authorities say that he is taking the medicine that Dr. Root ordered. In their opinion Root advised him to get out of the lime-light and to act throughout the campaign with the dignity becoming his exalted position. Root is a shrewd politician, and he has noticed that the more active a statesman is the more opportunities he offers for criticism. President Roosevelt has been guyed a great deal during the past six months, and no doubt Dr. Root feared that the lampooning might prove effective. So he ordered repose, but what an awful strain it must be on our strenuous Teddy to hold himself in check!

Why Not Slice Her

Count Cassini, the Ambassador from the Czar, is in a great state of trepidation over the probability of the American plan to prevent a partition of China being defeated by the action of the Japanese at Chefoo. The count is of course deeply interested in the preservation of the integrity of China, but it is only since the beginning of the war in the Orient that he became a conservator of international agreements. He was not worrying about the integrity of China when Russia seized Manchuria, the act of perfidy by the way which led to the war. But why should any European be concerned about the danger of China's partition? All Europe hopes to have China sliced up some day, and the sooner the better for the Caucasian race. The Yellow Peril is not of the "bogie" variety, and if self-preservation is the first law of nations, there should be no sentimental indisposition to rendering the heathen innocuous. Perhaps in the not distant future a Peace Conference will be held at The Hague for the express purpose of insuring the peace of Europe by partitioning China. The thing could be done and the whole subject matter adjusted satisfactorily to all concerned with the exception, perhaps, of the Flowery Kingdom, whose demurrer could be overruled on the ground of Christianity, which nowadays covers a multitude of international sins.

Shocked in Mexico

A howl of horror has arisen from a tourist throat because, on a visit to a fiesta in a Mexican town, it was discovered that children in arms were encouraged to pick out the winning numbers in lotteries and raffles. "Tender infants trained to gamble!" It would be truly shocking were such the case, but the amount of gambling which a tiny child will learn through pointing its fat little finger in the direction of a number of which it comprehends nothing, will not be apt to compromise municipal or private morality to any considerable extent. Moreover, one need not journey all the way to Mexico to discover such depravity, nor even wander as far as the tenement districts, for it is a common practice all the world over, where decisions depend upon chance, to select a child to do the choosing. Habitual purchasers of lottery tickets and coupons frequently call upon strange children to select them or to suggest numbers which, it is fondly hoped, will be somehow influenced by the innocence of the medium. It would, perhaps, be much better for them, if the Mexican peasantry would abstain from lotteries in which they have at stake a few pesos, and conduct their holidays and festivities with a view to pleasing the tourist rather than themselves, but people who take or lose thousands of dollars on a deal in the stock market, or by betting on the rise or fall of wheat are hardly in a position to deliver lectures on the iniquity of gambling. Women who have to retire to sanitariums to recuperate from the effects of their devotion to bridge, and men whose sleep is cut short by trying to figure out winning combinations for the race tracks are not exactly competent to criticise the unmoral Mexican peasants. Gambling, in one form or another, whether out and out betting, or merely courting big business risks, is so much a part of our daily life, that there is no particular call to become excited over the Mexican mote while our own beam flourishes apace.

The Inconsiderate Sex

